THE GREATEST SALE OF THE YEAR

One Week of Such Good Bargains Deserves Another

The public responded to our invitation most liberally, and it was a down-right pleasure to us to serve such good natured, good humored crowds as we have had during this opening week of

Change of Management Sale

The old saying that, "When good goods are sold cheap the public soon knows." We tried to put our best foot forward for the opening week, but find our other one is coming forward with a stride that will eclipse and put our first week's efforts in the shade—miles and miles behind.

In order to keep up the momentum we are overhauling our prices and merchandise, cutting again and reducing higher priced lines to keep our bargain stocks and counters complete. If for any reason you did not or could not come this week, plan to be here this coming week, beginning Saturday, August 8.

If the hairs of one's head are numbered and catalogued, as we were taught to believe, what a great saving in bookkeeping and clerical work follows when a man's hair drops from his cranial dome and is laid to rest. We would regard every bald head an achievement in the economy of celestial accounting.

People who are opposed to capital punishment, are not according to the law of nature. They are not in sympathy with criminals. They are not weakly sentimental. They think taking human life is wrong because they do not understand the sanction of the law. And they are not convinced that hanging or electrocution lessens homicidal outrages or improves the social status.

An Iowa man offered the unique service of preaching his own funeral sermon. He prepared it in advance and had it transferred to a phonograph which reproduced it at the service. He was not in sympathy with mourners and others who he thought about things. But we would rather make a man preach his own funeral sermon than hear a man preach a sermon which is not his own. It is a good thing that a man should be able to do his own funeral. It is a good thing that a man should be able to do his own funeral. It is a good thing that a man should be able to do his own funeral.

Economy belongs to the other fellow. We really don't care a piece of money for the other fellow's earnings like a drunken sailor or not, but we feel just interested enough to whisper among the neighbors that he is foolish in spending a fall. We may also be extravagant, with impending destruction, but we don't notice it yet. If the time we have is being wasted, we are not in the other fellow were devoted to constructive endeavor, we would be more sensible. Let us try it.

The fact that Scopes was not hanged or burned to the stake in the orthodox atmosphere of Dayton, Tennessee, is being pointed out as proof of evolution. In the early days, Massachusetts burned so-called witches, and did it according to law. If a woman acted or talked in a peculiar way or entertained notions that seemed strange, she was likely to be dragged into court charged with witchcraft. It is a pity that with being a menace to society, and she was tried, condemned and executed. Any way, we are making progress.

Up to this writing, the weather has treated the Wayne vicinity kindly. Nurses take turns moistening his lips or rubbing a piece of ice over his feverish brow, but they are careful to give him water to help satisfy his thirst. The weather gets out its sprinkler and spreads a thin vapory veil just often enough to keep the fire from getting too hot, but not often enough or great enough to sink into the parched and yearning vitals. People think the weather gets with which the cop has been arrested will save it, but it has been having too close a shave to make one feel just right.

A cut of ten per cent in wages paid to the American Woolen Company's 25,000 employees, as a result of a strike, is announced, and complaint is made that textile workers are compelled to suffer while wages levels in other industries are fully maintained. Manufacturers are said to charge their difficulties which make wage reductions necessary, to frequent style changes, but one newspaper says that the price of clothing, caused by the tariff, is responsible. Reduced demand seems to prompt economy. While curtailing wages, it would seem to be consistent to revise downward prices for finished products. Then people would buy more clothes, and by increasing the volume of profits would not be likely to suffer.

People who are not city brokers, prefer the comparatively small communities of the country. A man who is used to country people and country ways, feels out of place in a metropolitan center, where everybody is suspicious and watchful of everybody else. In rural settlements one knows his neighbors well enough to call them by their first names and to go to them for sympathy or aid if necessary. He may trust or may not trust his neighbor according to the facts which are apparent. He may trust one sees just people with few acquaintances and still fewer known friends. The city has its glamor, but it does not have the sincere heart-

ECONOMY IN ADVERTISING.

Important evidence of economy and effectiveness in advertising has been reflected in the Wayne Herald, now in progress. We were asked to prescribe the course to follow to avoid duplications, waste of postage and other unnecessary expense. A thousand bills were sufficient to cover distant territory not sufficiently served by the Herald. Several thousand bills have been uselessly distributed in addition to advertising in the Herald. An important saving was made by the Wayne Herald in printing and postage. Advertising in the Herald goes directly and quickly into the hands of ready readers. Crowds that read the Wayne Herald give proof of its effectiveness. Bills have a powerful inclination to find permanent rest in wastebaskets, and they usually go there without any urging.

With all their human weaknesses, people do very well. Get next to the soul of a person and you are likely to find the best more good qualities and fewer poor ones than you had expected. With some rare exceptions, people treat their families and neighbors with highest consideration. Those who are unfeeling and brutal are conspicuous exceptions, whereas the great majority each holding their duty faithfully and faithfully, pass unnoticed. People generally observe the laws of the land and the conventions of society; and each bears in his soul more real gold than worthless pyrites.

SOME WAYNE NEEDS.

We are wholly convinced that Wayne and Wayne county are nowhere surpassed in productive energy, business stability and quality of living. We are confident that those who are unfeeling and brutal are conspicuous exceptions, whereas the great majority each holding their duty faithfully and faithfully, pass unnoticed. People generally observe the laws of the land and the conventions of society; and each bears in his soul more real gold than worthless pyrites.

We need a hotel building that is modern and adequate to public demands. We have suspicion that an ambition to erect a grand structure and grand ground for Omaha has delayed getting one amply sufficient to satisfy Wayne's present and future requirements.

In the fast developing tourist travel, a suitable tourist park should be provided, and the accommodations ought to be of good extent in a reasonable fee for use. People prefer to pay for privileges, as we understand, with assurance of being treated.

Wayne should have a good swimming pool five years ago. If it is too late now for one this year, we should be looking in making due provision for one early next spring.

A brass band, as proposed by the American Legion, another enterprise that should be encouraged and supported as an important business and social tonic. A band will furnish the first step, and we need first from time to time to excite interest and stimulate civic pride.

We don't care whether these things are done by public funds or by private capital, by foreign companies, municipal bodies, local organizations or progressive individuals. We need them, and we need them here in Wayne as a superior town. In making do as we can, we should not hesitate or lag down because we cannot equal Chicago or New York. A half loaf is better than no bread. Improvements that will do no better than none. We need these things to bolster up satisfaction in an excellent community.

Market Report

Furnished by Swanson, Gilmore & Walsh, Sioux City Stock Yards.

August 5.—Evidently grass butchers cows and heifers reached a bed rock basis for the season on Monday August 4th, but after the opening day prices gradually worked higher, notwithstanding the fact that the movement over the country continued to run heavier, as compared to the liquidation of the previous week. The first two days of the period brought approximately 150,000 cattle to the 11 leading markets of the country, about 20,500 more than put in an appearance the previous week. Monday and Tuesday.

As was indicated in the lead paragraph the liquidation ran excessively to grass cattle. A mere trickle of good corn fed stuff is now coming to market, and this has caused the price to reflect added strength almost daily. Tuesday of this week brought in some 147,700 tons, but averaged 1.118 pounds. More than that 1.115 would be as very possible, as the full season's strength does not appear to have been fully developed.

Taken all the way through all corn fed steers worth from $12.00 up are strong to 25 cents higher for the week, with slippery, or corn and grass feeds, suitable from $8.00 to $11.50, about a steady sale. Good big grass steers, too, have held up, but the inferior kinds, particularly those too lean for the feeder buyers, again have weakened.

On Monday of this week grass butchers dropped back enough to make the loss for the last ten days right around $1.00. As they decline packers considered the grass fat cows and heifers well worth the money and the remaining activity soon turned to strength.

Aside from a healthy outlet for big feeders, the market for stocker cattle was generally slow and weak at new declines. In ten days the price values are off right at $1.00. The time was never better to lay in some material, as many farmers realize, but with the grass burnt up in the northwest they have no place except the feed yard in which to carry the purchases. Accordingly country demands are very slack, and the common kinds are naturally taking the brunt of the ill treatment.

Big feeders continued to buy this week, while green yearlings earned $7.50. Trash was frequently sold down to $4 and under, while the bulk of fair to good steers, managed from $9.00 to $6.75.

A nervous tension seems to be permeating the live pork trade. The delivery over the country was lighter than usual the first half of this week, but packers counter-acted that bullish influence by waiting until nearly noon on each day before starting operations. Even so, the killers had to grant spotted strength, and tops on the river are once again rearing the $14.00 line. As conditions need loom, the situation was never better for a price bloom, but all packers seem to be leary of the public buying power, which has already shown signs of not being able to go much further.

Packing slows according to quality are still selling $1.00 under butcher prices, which continued to indicate that packers are trying to secure the class of live pork best fitted for the pocket book of the general retail buyer.

Out in Portland, Ore., social welfare societies aid the mother of little Jessie Pearl King, 6, are fighting over the child.

Welfare people say the mother is too poor to give the child the proper training.

The mother answers that poverty has nothing to do with mother love. So the fate of Jessie Pearl King is up to the Oregon Supreme Court which has been called upon to decide who shall have the child.

A "Whale of a Difference" in Vinegars

Don't be fooled by price on vinegars. Loop-holes in the law enable many to "get by" on inferior qualities. 45-grain, made from first pressing, no pumppies. You can "bank" on your pickles keeping when you use

Apple Cider Vinegar, 50c gallon

Records show many Wayne county homes will not be infested by the "new wheat bug." Our stock of Old Wheat Flour will insure you against this worry.

All wheat must go through the "sweat" at some time and often it occurs in the dough.

If your cook doesn't have a 6-weeks supply, you'll be doing her a great favor to contract enough now, and you will later be thankful you did.

VICTOR Flour is now the leading and fastest seller in Wayne county. From a small unknown brand to the most popular is a record that many would appreciate. And the reasons for this success are:

1. Made from WASHED wheat. Women too well know the health value of Clean Food.
2. Made from HARD SPRING WHEAT, tested, high in protein, and has greater loaf content than "soft wheat."

To insure that small buyers will be immune from flour troubles, we offer Victor flour at

For Fall and Winter

Garments that have been worn this summer and those that are to be used soon for fall and winter wear should be cleaned now. They will last much longer and look better if properly cleaned.

Bring your silk dresses to us and at a very small cost to you they will look like new. The life of the garments will be longer.

When Better Automobiles Are Built, Buick Will Build Them

No. 20

Question: Would the breaking of a Buick rear spring prevent driving the car?

Answer: No. All Buicks drive through a torque tube and not the springs. The axle would be held in line, the brakes would function and the car could be driven home under its own power.

BACK GIVEN OUT?

Then Follow the Advice of This Wayne Resident. Are you dragging along day after day with a dull, nagging backache? Do you feel tired, lame and achy? Suffer sharp, torturing pains at every sudden move? Then look to your kidneys! Colds, strains and overwork weaken the kidneys and bring twinges! Don't risk serious kidney disease! Use Don's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Read what this Wayne resident says: "My kidneys were in a weak condition, and they didn't act right. I had dizzy spells and a lumpiness in my back and my kidneys. Reading how Don's Pills had helped other people, I decided to give them a trial. A few boxes, purchased at the Wayne Drug Co., cured the trouble. Don's Pills are reliable and effective in their work. I don't have to use them now. Get at all dealers. Thirty of Wayne's business men have organized a fair association which this year will hold an exhibit of livestock and products of the county. It is planned that all profits each year will be put into permanent improvements on the grounds.

Charles E. Erdleben, pioneer, died at his home in Plum Creek precinct Sept. 14, 1906, at the age of 63 years. Mr. Erdleben suffered a kick from a horse and the shock caused his death. Mrs. Erdleben died in 1891. Five sons and two daughters survive.

From Ponca Journal, Sept. 25, 1914:

About a thousand people were on the fair grounds on Wednesday listening to the address of Senator Van Wyck.

Owing to the severe rain on Tuesday, the commencement of the fair was postponed one day, so that the fair days were Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

As we go to press we hear that two young girls, the daughters of E. H. Jones and Mr. Waterman were run over by the fair ground. We did not hear how badly they were hurt. The fence course needs to be fenced, as such accidents are liable to occur frequently.

Yesterday forenoon on the race course a horse attached to a sulky and driven by Mr. Harper, got unmanageable and ran away. He dumped Mr. Harper and then ran around the track twice, then he broke for town where he arrived with a broken sulky and in a demoralized condition.

The train from Sioux City met with an accident Monday evening. When at Brady's crossing this side of Jackson, the boiler of the engine gave out and could not be fired and a man had to be sent back to Jackson to telegraph to Covington for another engine. The train finally got here about half-past ten that night.

CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Methodist Episcopal Church
(Rev. John Grant Snick, Pastor)
Sunday school at 10 a. m.; Carl E. Wright, superintendent.
Epworth League at 7 p. m., Miss Susie Souders, leader.
There will be no preaching services next Sunday, but we expect to resume morning preaching services on August 16.

Mr. Wright is taking up the work of superintendent of the Sunday school, as successor to Prof. Jacobson, in fine style. We are sure the Sunday school will prosper under his care. So many of our folks, both pupils and teachers, will be gone during the month of August that a special responsibility rests on us to help him in every way.

The Epworth League plans to "carry on" during the month of August—something it has not done for several years past. Each League helping will make the venture a success. The Norfolk district Epworth League institute will be held at Leo's lake, southwest of Stanton, August 10 to 16. The pastor has programs if any of our people are interested and will be glad to give information concerning the institute.

Presbyterian Church
There will be no services at this church during August.

No Advice Needed.

Ohio State Journal: Among other reasons why we don't believe President Coolidge needs any advice on practical politics from us practical men are the facts that he was photographed leading shingles on a wheelbarrow in Plymouth, Vt., the other day and that he hasn't been photographed in a bathing suit at Swampscott, Mass.

Death Follows Blood Transfusion.
Royal, Neb., Aug. 1.—Mrs. Fred Tiedt of Orchard, died at the Lutheran hospital in Norfolk after a transfusion of blood which had been given her preparatory to an operation.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Surber and daughter, Miss Aulda, and Mrs. E. E. Gales drove to Washington Springs, S. D., Sunday where Mr. Surber looked after land interests. They planned to return to Wayne today.

Business

Sioux City Journal—Official reports of business conditions rarely, if ever, are found to be extravagant. Government agents always are careful. Experts in the agricultural department are much more likely to underestimate than to overestimate crop yields and farm prices. Federal reserve banks, in their reviews of general business conditions, always proceed with caution in arriving at their conclusions. With this understood, it is important to note that the department of agriculture and the Federal reserve bank of Minneapolis have gone farther in publishing optimistic reports of the outlook than have any other observers. It has been claimed all along by the press throughout the country that business was continuing to improve. Various well known economists have taken the same view from time to time. Apparently, since the official figures are supposed to be more accurate than those of any other authority, the truth today is that business actually is in a better condition than has been generally known.

The department of agriculture says unreservedly that the national outlook for agriculture at this time is bright. It sees a chance for recovery for all branches of the live stock industry, which, as everyone has understood, has been the slowest agricultural line in the process of reconstruction. Beef cattle are bringing higher prices than obtained last year, lambs are higher and hogs are commanding figures twice what they sold for this time last season. Hogs are believed to be approaching the peak of high prices, with the possibility of a larger production next year and a consequent reduction in quotations.

The purchasing power of farm products is put by the department of agriculture at 90 compared with a five-year prewar level taken as 100. The index carefully worked out by the department's most trusted economists reveals this surprising fact. It means that the farmer's dollar is now worth 90 cents as compared to the five-year prewar period. That is not discouraging. Everybody's dollar was supposed to be worth about 65 cents a few years ago.

The federal reserve report in the northwest district shows an improvement in business along many lines. Building is booming again in spite of the rush of last year and the year before. In 15 of the leading cities in the district building is greater than it was in 1924. That means, of course, the presence of capital with which to build and the existence also of business plans that justify the enterprise. Vast amounts of money would not be put into building construction unless a way was seen to return profits on the investment. The construction of industrial, business and residence properties has been described as "building madness," but it is nothing of the kind. Rather it is a reasonable progress based upon well understood economic principles. The business is to be had, or expanded, only if it is undertaken on such a large scale.

The public's holding of securities is increasing according to the report of the federal reserve bank. Purchases of stocks and bonds are greater than ever. The people are investigating, confident that the times will improve constantly until the new normal finally is reached. Wholesale trade proves the return of the people's buying power. It is possible to say at this time that not once since the war has there been such a bright outlook for general business throughout the country.

Beef Cattle Stronger. Lincoln, Neb., July 31.—Beef cattle are in a stronger position than a year ago and with prospects favorable for a scarcity of fed steers this fall, higher prices are anticipated. This was the prediction made by the United States bureau of agricultural economics in a report on the beef cattle outlook made public here today.

A large supply of corn at reasonable prices and a material reduction in which the supply of hogs also are in prospect, the report said, which should result in active demand for feeder cattle.

"While there has been some liquidation and consequent reduction of cattle in some areas," the report said, "it is not believed that the total market supply of grass cattle this fall will be materially less than the number marketed in 1924. Heavy marketings from important western cattle producing regions during the past three years have been offset some what by favorable weather and feed conditions. Calf receipts have been large and losses small.

A short corn crop and high corn prices brought about in 1924 a material reduction in the stocker and feeder movement into the corn belt food lots during the past 12 months. Finishers generally have followed a policy of marketing fed stock early with the result that market receipts during the remainder of the year are expected to be decidedly less than usual and prices should continue upward especially for the better grades.

"The proportion of different weights fluctuates considerably and as there is a limited demand for heavyweights, they are not likely to command a premium for any great period of time."

Some Facts About Coal. Nebraska Farmer: The threatened strike in the anthracite coal industry does not mean a great deal directly to this section of the country, but it means next to everything to industry and the public in the industrial regions of the East. Indirectly, we are interested in the subject for we are large users of bituminous coal as well as consumers, and any practice that prevails in one branch of the trade may reflect a condition or a possibility in another branch.

The federal trade commission recently made public a report declaring that a complete restoration of competition in the anthracite industry not only was practicable but preferable to price regulation. It was pointed out that the premium prices of 1923 were the result of an anticipated shortage and a panic demand due largely to a general ignorance of the real conditions. When the facts were made known at that time by a public commission, premium prices and speculation by wholesalers began to decline.

The commission found that 70 per cent of the $8,000,000 tons of anthracite produced annually was mined by eight large companies, which are, or recently have been, openly or closely affiliated with the railroads tapping the coal fields. The report says that the railroad companies followed a policy of announcing prices periodically while the independent companies took the highest prices obtainable at the time of marketing their product.

By limiting production and an account of the settlement made when a strike was threatened in 1923, wholesale distributors have been enabled to exact very large gross profits.

The bituminous operators and miners are not so well organized. Apparently, there is keen competition between the operators in the union and non-union fields. And in these fields non-union miners are kept steadily at work while union miners have a great deal to trouble them on account of unemployment. If the time should come that these two branches of the bituminous trade get together, we may expect a condition at once comparable with the troublesome situation that now exists in anthracite.

The Federal Trade Commission seems to have put its finger on a service to which the public is entitled, when it says that, "The greatest obstacle to an intelligent action in the frequently recurring emergencies in the coal trade is the lack of adequate current information." From time to time, efforts have been made by the Federal Government and some of the state to supply this information. It is probable that more is known by the public about the coal industry than ever before, but there is yet room for an extensive dissemination of such information. If this is forthcoming, operators and miners alike will be reluctant to engage in practices that are detrimental to the public welfare.

As we have pointed out, it becomes necessary at times to invoke the strong arm of the state to suppress unpragmatic in industry and the strength of the state is increased manifold when it has the support of an enlightened, unprejudiced public opinion.

For A Leader.

Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: Mark Sullivan has discovered that the democratic party is for the moment without leadership. Not a dominating personality in all the land who can grab the reins and know which one to pull or when to say "whoa!" In a democratic government, where the people rule, it might seem superfluous to have a driver or leader to tell the masses where to head in, but it seems to be the only way to save confusion and waste. In politics it will never do to let nature take its course. The mob is emotional and impulsive. It can't be trusted. It can't trust itself. Hence the necessity for the leader in politics who can formulate a program, construct a platform, and become himself the personification of a popular desire.

Begin Here Today.

Sir Dudley Glenister, suspected of the murder of his cousin, James Glenister, has a strange caller in the person of Simon Trickey, whose blooded face glimmers in one big red blob at the end of his nose. Trickey's plan to blackmail Sir Dudley is interrupted by the arrival of Dr. Willoughby Melville, and James Wragge.

Now Go On With The Story.

From under half-closed lids Doctor Melville watched for a breath of this request, apparently so ill-timed, on his host.

Sir Dudley walked quickly to his writing table and filled in a "bearer" check for five guineas.

"There you are, sir," he said, handing it to the black-coated canvasser. "I don't mind paying a gentleman who asks pretty—but I'll be hanged if I shell out to a blackguard who tries to bluff me."

Inspector Wragge presently as he strolled down the drive after pocketing the check and thanking the donor. "I wonder whether a man who deserves to be hanged would refer to the operation so lightly. I also wonder who the red-nosed blackmailer is—possibly I shall have the pleasure of traveling back to town in the same train with him."

And as he made his way to the station he further reflected on the good fortune in having met at the lodge gates the West-End specialist who had treated him for "stomach."

Meanwhile Doctor Melville was taking leave of his host in spite of hating requests that he should remain. "Out of the question," he said to his family. "My patients have first call on me. Besides I can't be of any use to you here, now that the most interesting case you are planning is to keep quiet and let the rumors die down, unless there is something vital that you are concealing from me."

Sir Dudley dropped his eyes before the probing gaze.

"No," he said. "No, I haven't concealed anything from you, Melville. It was my own cousin George."

Melville shrugged his shoulders and went away to pack his bag. His brows were drawn together in a puzzled frown.

"You may not have killed your cousin George," he muttered, "but you have done something my friend, that's pretty rotten. And if I am any judge of physiognomy you contemplate doing something else that won't bear inspection. It would be interesting to know what view Wragge takes. I must look the eminent detective up in my case-book when I get home."

CHAPTER VIII

The evil which the nerve specialist believed Sir Dudley to be plotting was not long in coming to maturity. On the day after Trickey's departure, Melville's departure from Beechwood Grange he went to London and put up at the Millennium Hotel in Piccadilly. On the same afternoon he had a taxi called and gave the driver the address of Lady Merralles in Colagon Gardens.

Kathleen and her dog warder-guan, after being practically turned out of the Grange, had ostensibly resumed their normal existence.

All Kathleen's old suspicions of her cousin Dudley had been revived by the weird incident in the Beechwood covers. "The trouble was that she did not know to whom to turn for aid. That local wisecracker, Sergeant Mitchell of the county police had agreed with the verdict of the jury that she was ignorant that Scotland Yard was interested.

She had not forgotten Mr. Stephen Colner's offer to Sir Dudley of his office influence in that direction, but the offer had not been made to her and she was reluctant to approach the cabinet minister. There remained only her lover, Norman Slater."

And then, about the time that Sir Dudley was leaving his hotel to call at Cadogan Gardens, a disreputable stranger was ushered in who revived her drooping hopes.

A discrete and elderly parlormaid formed him that her ladyship was not at home. Yes, Miss Glenister was in, but for the moment she was engaged with another person.

Struck by the woman's tone, the baronet inquired if the person was anyone he was likely to know.

"So hardly, I should say, except perhaps in the way of business," was the demure reply. "He looks like a dog fancier. I don't expect he will be long, if you will come in and wait."

Sir Dudley accepted the invitation and was shown into a cloak-and-hat room, whence he had a view of the hall. He had not been there two minutes when he heard steps descending the stairs. A moment later the parlormaid crossed his line of vision, conducting Mr. Simon Trickey, red-bulbed nose, loud-checked suit and all complete, to the front door.

The baronet started up to intercept his former clerk, checked the impulse and waited till the maid appeared to take him up-stairs to the drawing-room. When he was announced Kathleen—was folding and placing in her purse a slip of paper. She completed the operation carefully before she deigned to notice her latest visitor.

"Well," she said, looking up at last, "this is an unexpected honor—after being turned out of the Grange so recently."

Evidently this was to be a duel sans merci on either side.

"I had to ask my guests to leave because most of them were conspiring against me," rejoined Sir Dudley. "You and that puppy Slater worse than any. But I am here to open the doors of Beechwood Grange to you again. A generous offer, since I now find that you are intriguing with Simon Trickey."

"That is kind of you," snapped Kathleen. "But I am not at all sure that I want to have the doors of the Grange opened to me. I shouldn't feel very safe there."

Glenister took a step forward, his huge bulk towering over the slim girl who confronted him, cool and unshaken.

"Let me make it clear to you," he replied. "I want you to come back to the Grange as my wife. You will be sorry if you don't, I want you because our marriage would be the best answer to the suspicions you have done your best to foster—the suspicion that I murdered your brother."

"Well, didn't you?" said Kathleen dryly.

"I will take my oath I didn't."

"If you didn't do it with your own hands you caused his death."

This new allegation seemed for the fraction of a second to disconcert the accused.

"I will take my oath that I never saw George Glenister, alive or dead after he went to America."

"And I don't believe you on oath or anyhow," retorted Kathleen. "I am as firmly convinced that you are responsible for my brother's death as if he had died at Beechwood as if I had seen you kill him—As to marrying you, the proposition would have been almost as absurd if all this had not happened."

The baronet had recovered.

"Then let us come to grips," he broke out. "Here is my ultimatum. If you don't marry me I will make your name socially damned up and down the land. Captain Slater was sent to come out of your room late at night."

"You beast!" her fresh young voice found vent at last. "The true story of this night would do you far more harm than me. You know very well what Captain Slater and I set out to discover, and how we were thwarted because you hid us from following. In a day or two I shall be able to tell the world—and incidentally the police—a good deal more about you, Mr. Norman, you are just in time."

The last sentence was addressed to Captain Slater, who had entered the drawing-room. The young soldier took in the situation at a glance. Here was all the material for a most lovely row.

"What am I in time for? What's the racket?" he inquired quietly and with a measuring eye on the baronet.

In a few crisp words Kathleen told him how her cousin had made her an offer of marriage and described in Dudley's own language the alternative he had threatened.

Norman listened till the unpleasant recital had ceased, and then there commenced such a scene as Lady Merralles' decorous drawing-room had never been set for in all its hundred years. Norman's rush was that of a maddened bull and would have been his own undoing had Glenister been an adept in the art of self-defense. Quickly recognizing that he might be courting disaster, Norman checked his exultations and introduced a little science into his method. Two or three sledgehammer blows did the bigger man's job, but they fell on empty air and thence onward the fracas became a brutal assault.

Up and down the room Sir Dudley stumpled over furniture and crashing into low-hung pictures, with his heels against her in pursuit and administering punishment to the hands and feet of his antagonist. His blows gave way to labored breathing and finally he crumpled up and lay sprawling over the end of a couch.

"That's your swine!" said the victor. "That'll teach you."

Before the lesson to be learned by Sir Dudley could be defined the door was opened and a man stepped in rather hurriedly. He wore side-whiskers and a mustache, and dressed in a suit of drab reach-me-downs. He bore no resemblance to the clean shaven cleric who had called at Beechwood Grange on behalf of the Mission to Blackfoot Indians, and his voice was like the crack of a whip.

Which Oil is Best?

Judging oil values is easier than you may think. Simply ask for specifications—the actual facts—of different oils. Compare these figures.

Specifications tell you in advance what service you may expect from your oil—tell you if it really lubricates during the first start-up miles—tell if it will protect and save bearings and cylinder walls at intense engine heat.

And lubrication engineers have discovered that there is no other way to know than to depend upon guaranteed specifications.

We believe that those who love their engines deserve to have the facts so that they may judge what oil is best. To aid them, every can and barrel of Tagolene has a tag carrying the guaranteed specifications of this product. The U. S. Government depends on specifications. So should you.
