IMAGINARY ILLS.

When we were young and susceptible to suggestions, we expected to have some disease that any one else had. We could easily figure out that we had the symptoms. We would get over fear of disease from ghosts to gallstones. Some mothers make it hard for their children to grow up because of an irritating and pestering anxiety over their health. No content to observe certain common-sense rules of precaution, they hamper their force diet and wearing apparel to their own extent. They make themselves and their offspring miserable unnecessarily, by excessive living, if not thwarting nature in its regular course.

This paper is represented for general advertising by The Nebraska Press Association.

According to press reports, a total of eighty-nine suffered death in automobile accidents in the middle west during the first nine months of the year. In order to insure greater safety and fewer fatalities, it may be necessary to require drivers to take an examination and give bonds.

The price of gasoline has been reduced in the middle west, due, it is said, to increased production and improved refining processes. Instead of the gasoline supply decreasing with growing consumption, as had been predicted by crepe hangers, it seems to be increasing. New fields are being opened and new and better methods are being employed to handle the product.

Chicago authorities are almost in despair over the increasing number of crimes charged to morons in that city, according to press reports. Pick out morons, as one would pick out lemons from a basket, and ship them to a remote island, and keep them there until they develop qualities of decency and respect. Judging from Chicago reports, it would seem a big island to furnish quarters for all who ought to go there.

The first stretch of graveling in Wayne county, extending eleven miles south in the direction of Winona, will be completed this week. New Wayne should not rest on its ears until the highways to Winona, Carroll, Wakefield and Laurel are gravelled. With these roads gravelled, travel to this popular county seat would not be interrupted by storms of rain or snow. Speaking of snow which does not seem very imminent at this time, we have been informed early in advance, that highway-commissioners prepare their minds and have ample equipment to clear the highways of every layer of snow that falls during the coming winter.

Rains of last week put new life into growing corn in this county and stimulated it towards healthy maturity. Timely moisture prevented the shortage that had been feared. The crop will not be the biggest ever raised, but it will be one of the best. Around Wynot in Cedar county we were informed that no rains had fallen since June, and that farmers have been compelled to cut their corn in stalks for feed. It is surprising and unusual to find territory near the Missouri river deficient in rainfall. This year moisture has fallen in spots, and most of the state has been included in favored spots at one time or another. But a few sections, like northern Cedar, were unfortunately overlooked almost entirely in the distribution of rain.

Vacations will soon be over, with all travelers back in accustomed niches. Probably the best part of a vacation is the satisfaction felt in arriving home and being restored to usual habits. What one is used to suits him best. A man's wife may not know how to boil water, but if one has learned to like her culinary compounds, he would relish them in preference to some prize-winning variety to which he was not accustomed. His bed may be as hard as adamant, but if he is used to it he imagines it is soft and he likes it. There is no place like home even if it is as humble as a frontiersman's dugout. People who go away on vacations, whether to the city or to the lakeside, have a heightened opinion of home when they get back. And the relief felt on returning is likely compensation enough.

WEEK-END TOUR. We journeyed into Iowa last Thursday and returned Sunday, and incidentally we found that no one in the block where we do business missed us or knew we were gone. This is as it should be. One ought to leave no disturbing vacancy or be so offensive at home that his absence will be noticed.

Travel has been speeded up a great deal since the children of Israel spent forty years going from Egypt to the land of Canaan. If the roads were as smooth as they are in Iowa we could cover the distance in less than a day. Sixty years ago people traveled with ox teams, and later they dragged along in lumber wagons drawn by horses. As time went on, some people became prosperous enough to own buggies. Thirty years ago the horseless carriage became a doubtful experiment. Note what has happened since. Countless automobiles are scurrying over good roads in every state. At the pace we are going, what will be the condition of travel thirty years hence? We will be flying through the air. We will start out at 5 in the morning and be in New York City in time for dinner. We motored from Wayne to Fort Dodge, 139 miles, in somewhat over five hours. There we visited relatives we had never seen, and after seeing us, we suspect they were well satisfied that they had not seen us sooner.

Iowa highways are almost uniformly good. Crops around Fort Dodge were the best we had seen anywhere. More moisture had fallen there than elsewhere, and it does not seem that growing corn could be better. Some old towns get into a rut through too much self-satisfaction, and an absence of leaders who have capital and are not afraid to invest it. Fort Dodge is an old timer, but all through its life, it has had enough enterprising citizens to keep alive a spirit of progress. Its progressive towns are pointed out a few rich men who are respected as responsible for a lot of substantial improvements. This was true at Fort Dodge, and later we found it true at Des Moines.

At Fort Dodge the fair buildings, golf course, swimming pool and amusement park are on contiguous grounds. The arrangement is convenient and comparatively economical.

The swimming pool cost $35,000. We would be satisfied to have one just like it for Wayne. We also saw a fifty-room hotel that would suit our needs very well. Des Moines is ninety-three miles south, and we journeyed there in less than three hours over excellent highways.

Des Moines was getting ready for the state fair which opened this week. The city is rich in prosperous industries and fine homes, and if one were doing well there, he ought to be contented.

We visited Herbert Lessman's larder factory at Des Moines and found it well prepared and well fortified to turn out finished products. The business is steadily growing on a solid foundation, and its future would seem very encouraging. We paid a brief visit to Mr. Lessman and family in their home, and found them most pleasantly situated in one of the best sections of the city. Mr. Lessman bought an unimproved acre at Fort Dodge, and later we found it in most attractive style.

The return trip of 275 miles occupied a trifle over seven hours of running time. Iowa has a big corn crop, wonderful roads and many progressive cities.

GARNISHED WITH GARLIC
An onion has just as much right in the world as a potato or cabbage, but the way it acts one would think it had a feeling of superiority. Cut into halves, an onion is beautiful, wonderfully intensified if one clamps a cloth napkin on his nose. No artist's brush can do full justice to its rich tints. But it can be quietly and radiantly entrancing hues and at the same time do more violence than any vegetable we know of. It does not wait to be attacked. It makes no loud outcry. One small strip of onion is more demonstrative than a whole load of turnips. Brush an onion over a plate of meat and you charge it with insurmountable pungency. To justify the heading over this little paragraph, we would say eating at hotels recently we found meats invariably smothered and abused by onions. It is the season's style from which there is no appeal.

Joe Ringland of Omaha, Mrs. R. E. K. Mellor and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson and family of Wisnide.

Picnic at Hale Home.

About fifty friends from Norfolk, Wayne and Randolph were guests Sunday at a picnic dinner and supper at the S. J. Hale home near Wayne. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Lageschulte and family, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Bolander and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Hawaldt and children and Mr. and Mrs. John Carmichael and family, all of Randolph; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Baker and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Robinson and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lewis and family, of Wayne; and Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Tisge and son and Mrs. Len Menzer of Norfolk.

With Mrs. Chas. Johnson.

The women of the St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Aid society met last Thursday with Mrs. Charles J. Johnson and Mrs. Jens Jensen at the former's home. Guests were Mrs. Collier Boyes and Mrs. Clara Anderson, the last named of Rockford, Ill. Plans for the bazaar and food sale to be held Dec. 12 were made. The women will also have a food sale next Saturday, August 29. The rest of the afternoon was spent socially and luncheon was served by the hostesses. In two weeks Mrs. Henry Korff and Mrs.

Harvey Haas entertain at the former's home.

Mrs. Orr is hostess. Mrs. C. A. Orr invited twelve young women to her home Friday afternoon for a social time complimentary to Miss Vesta Taylor of Sioux City, guest in Wayne over the weekend. Bridge was enjoyed as pastime and Miss Dorothy Ellis received a hand-painted bowl as prize for highest score. Miss Taylor was presented a guest prize, brick cream, cakes, coffee, nuts and nuts were served. Centerpieces for the small tables being bouquets of California poppies.

A Page family reunion was held Sunday at the Mrs. J. M. Barrett home here. Those present were: Mrs. J. M. ### Early Days In Two Counties

From the Wayne Herald of Oct. 5, 1905:

N. E. Eells of Auburn, Neb., came to visit his son, Dr. Eells.

Mrs. H. B. Jones returned Saturday from a visit in Minneapolis.

Miss Hattie Weber plans to go to Boston to study music this year.

The new Lutheran church on Center street is to be dedicated Oct. 9.

A son was born Oct. 3, 1905, to Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Durig of Wayne.

W. E. Howard of Clarkson, Wash., former resident of Wayne, has been visiting.

E. Cunningham went to Gilman, Ia., to attend the funeral of a friend, Dr. W. J. Ward.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Morris of Carroll, are expected home soon from a summer's visit in Wales.

John F. Ward bought a residence lot from Dr. Wightman and plans to build a new modern residence.

Martin P. Jensen and Miss Ethel Oates are to be married Oct. 8, 1905, by Rev. C. J. Ringer.

Charles Hanner and family of Carson, Iowa, visited at the E. A. Surber home here. The women are sisters.

H. F. Wilson and John T. Bressler have gone to Washington, D. C., to attend the national bankers' convention.

A company is being formed in Wayne for the making of mineral water from medicated mud. P. P. Fankhauser is in charge of the company.

S. Relyea suffered injuries when a steer that broke loose from a group being driven to Chicago, ran through the street and threw him into the air and then knocked him to the ground.

S. J. Bruner, former resident of Wayne county, was killed Sept.-17, 1905, when he was struck by a passenger train in Savannah, Ill. He was on his way to Chicago with a shipment of cattle from Charles Mix county, S. D.

A district Rebekah meeting was held in Wayne and officers elected were as follows: President, Miss Fannie DeBow of Coleridge; vice president, Mrs. Schmittheis of Wayne; secretary, Mrs. Ritchey of Coleridge; treasurer, Mrs. Aller of Wakefield; marshal, Mrs. Root of Randolph; warden, Mrs. Whitney of Hartington.

Officers: Mrs. Whitman of Wakefield, chaplain, Mrs. Vincent of Wayne; inside guard, Mrs. Simmerman of Carroll; and outside guard, Mrs. George Stringer of Wayne.

From Ponca Journal August 18, 1901:

Southern Illinois is suffering terribly from drought. The Clinton Herald says that the whole country from Vandalia to Cairo is one unbroken stretch of parched ground and dried up fields. "No rain has fallen during the past two months and to add to the ruin of crops, the chinch bugs have appeared in countless hosts.

Corn is small and withered, melons are brown, cattle suffer for want of food and drink, and even the apples and peaches are drying up in the orchards without half reaching fruition. It is a sad story of blight which can hardly be contemplated, in view of the suffering and aspiration, without arousing universal sympathy for the inhabitants of the afflicted region."

The Dixon county political pot was quiet four weeks ago. Its surface was undisturbed by the names of candidates and all was calm and serene. A week later it began to warm up a little and you could see a slight motion of its contents. By the slow process of evolution, after another three weeks there was a gentle shimmer. The next week a bubble or two would rise to the surface, where it would burst and display some newly-born, squirming political hope and aspiration. Now the pot fairly boils. It is to be feared—that the continually increasing heat will create a general explosion unless means are soon taken to skim out a portion of the candidates. Wherefore we take the opportunity of advising both parties to organize their nominating conventions and fish out the candidates to be voted for.

An official account of the murder of Spotted Tail was received at Yankton, D. T., August 9, by General Cook, agent of the Spotted Tail Indians, from Acting Agent Lelar. It runs as follows: About noon of the 5th inst., Spotted Tail reported at the agent's office to receive instructions regarding his contemplated trip to Washington, he having been selected as one of the representatives of the Sioux nation at the coming conference at the national capital. He was urged to start at once, as a letter from the Indian agency directed him to report to Agent Andrus no later than the 8th inst. As the delegation from Pine Ridge agency was expected to reach Rosebud agency on the evening of the 6th, Spotted Tail decided to wait until the next morning and go with the Red Cloud delegates to the Yankton agency. This arrangement having been arranged, Spotted Tail decided to have a talk with his people that afternoon and to receive an expression of their views on the subjects to come before the conference. Bidding Lelar good bye, saying that he would call at the office in the evening to receive any further instructions which might in the meantime occur to that gentleman, Spotted Tail left for the Indian village to confer with his people. An interview was held and they had a big talk and a feast and the council broke up. Spotted Tail then mounted his horse and started homeward. The Indians were scattering in different directions, with the noted chief somewhat in advance of the other, he being the first out of the lodge. After leaving the lodge, Crow Dog was seen approaching Spotted Tail. He had his wife with him. He got out of a wagon and was stooping down, when he suddenly raised up and shot Spotted Tail through the left breast. The chief fell from his horse, but rose to his feet and made three or four steps toward Crow Dog, endeavoring to draw his pistol. He then reeled and fell back dead. Crow Dog jumped in the wagon and drove off at full speed toward his camp some nine miles distant. The acting agent at once issued orders for the arrest of Crow Dog under the paragraph in the treaty of 1868, which renders him amenable to the white man's laws. In compliance with these orders the Indian police accompanied the arrest of Crow Dog and he was sent to Fort Niobrara to await his trial for murder.

A Poet's Town.

Lincoln State Journal: A stranger who had come far to receive inspiration at the Missouri birthplace of Mark Twain made inquiry of a native concerning the great author. The native had never heard of Mark Twain. Neither did he know Tom Sawyer or Huckleberry Finn. Did he know Pudgehead Wilson? Sure he did,—this must have been about 1910. He was led for him last year.

Such is this ancient tale he no longer exists, could not produce a first rate poet or appreciation of the education who paid their deference there all across: that the building of these all witness that the building of a sound spiritual superstructure upon these old material foundations is making headway. A people that listen to sentiment as well as in selfishness to their soil. Over from Omaha came Judge Vinohader to say that we must live more than we do at the poet's level of thought and feeling or we shall rot down in the land we have reclaimed; that man cannot live by cattle and corn alone.

The crowd at Wayne, the monument

It is particularly worth noting that the governor plowed his way through mud and other obstacles to be there; that the chancellor of the university was glad to greet the occasion; that the president of the state federation of women's clubs went all the way from Broken Bow to preside. This has a look of promise.

These have been rather hard boiled times. Our pioneer struggles have had as much poetry as they had in them, perhaps, but we haven't had, thus far, a fair amount of time to weigh the many side of it. Some have been saying indeed that these plains, with their matter-of-fact spread of unmy-

Where Favorite Fashions Meet Moderate Prices

Brown's Store Leads the Field in Dresses, Coats and Millinery

This year we're defending our reputation for having largest assortments, by offering a greater variety of new fall apparel than ever before. And the best part of it all is that prices are pleasingly lower than you'd expect to find on garments of equal style and quality. And remember, too, that you are always welcome to inspect our large stocks and to try on as many things as you like without feeling obligated to buy. Really, it's a pleasure to show you the many pretty things in store for our patrons, and we invite you to make this store your headquarters while in Norfolk. "Meet the folks at Brown's."

New Fur-Trimmed Coats $19.75

Style, service and good-looks are the outstanding characteristics of these new coats for fall and winter. Warm, durable weaves, topped with generous collars of luxurious fur; and the price is within the reach of every purse. The best values are to be had by making selections early. Later on it will be impossible to obtain the same quality materials and workmanship in garments made during the rush of the season's business. Plan to see these garments on your next trip to Norfolk.

STYLISH NEW DRESSES OF SILK OR WOOLEN WEAVES $19.75

—And not just a feeble little lot to show you, either! Scores of them in fact, embracing the smartest and cleverest ideas in styling and designing the new season offers. Soft, lustrous crepe satins in pansy purple, cocoa, rust, brown and black, and lovely, serviceable woolen textures such as charmeuse and striped crepes—especially suited to the needs of the college miss or high school girl. You'll love them, we know, especially at this little price of... $19.75

Hundreds of Hats, $2.95 to $5.00

Think of being able to choose a hat from two or three hundred models, at prices of five dollars or less! As a matter of fact, we specialize in stylish hats at $2.95, $3.95 and $5.00, and although we have some a little more expensive, you may be assured of a perfectly satisfactory choice if the price you want to pay is five dollars or less.

From Other Editors

Hartington Herald: However, the hot weather does not prevent the girls from wearing fall hats and furs.

Albion Weekly News: This from the Kivans Magazine: A kite rises against the wind, not with it. Opposition is often a blessing, not a curse.

York Republican: The attempt to make the rodeo our national pastime, like the Spanish bull fight, will not succeed. It may have a temporary popularity but it is cruel and brutalizing. Already the humane societies are demanding better treatment of animals used in the exhibitions and the demands in this regard will be so strict that the rodeo is sure to lose both "kick" and "thrill." The American people may have a taste for red blooded sports, but the category does not include sports that inflict needless cruelties on animals.

Wahoo Wasp: We have just about decided to apply for a patent "Side-Swiper" to be operated by foot power on our automobile. In a recent drive into Omaha we met several large high-powered cars which passed us at high speed and their wheels were over on our side of the white line. Guess they call them "Road Hogs" as they ride the center of the road. This said "Side-Swiper" will be an arm that will stick out, just graze the offending R. H. We are undecided as to what to put on the end, a whitewash brush, an iron claw or a piece of limburger.

Geneva Signal: It can be done and there are at least two of us who think it ought to be done. Editor Allen of the York Republican, throwing caution to the winds, thumps his knuckles on his desk and goes on in the following: "One of our exchanges, commenting on a public appearance of a young vocalist, said: 'To her musical talent, Miss Rumsey adds the art of distinct articulation.' There is apparently one old fashioned editor who thinks the purpose of a song is to carry a message. May his tribe increase and stick!"

York Republican: Western cities, like Los Angeles, have banned horses on the business streets, but that, it seems, is a piece of business extravagance. In New York the use of horses to draw trucks is increasing because it has been learned that it costs six cents a minute to operate a motor truck there and only two cents a minute to operate a horse-drawn truck. And besides the initial cost of the motor equipment is higher and its life much shorter. Out in the open spaces the motor trucks will continue to do the work the horses used to do, but in the crowded city streets where speed cannot be an element. Old Dobbin and his pals have obtained a new lease of life by doing a good job for less money.

Poet Writes Letter to Friends Who Meet

Dr. John G. Neihardt of Branson, Mo., poet laureate of Nebraska, wrote the following letter Aug. 17 to be read at the program last week dedicating a monument to his achievements: "It was an ancient custom among the Omaha Indians that when a boy had reached the age of twelve, or thereabouts, he should be sent into the solitude of a high hill, there to fast and wait for the dream that should mould his life for good or ill. And when the dream had come to him, he would tell it only to a holy man of his tribe, receiving a new name in keeping with the vision he had seen, for it was deemed that by the man or woman, for lacking that, the first is but a futile pang. "Wayne was my hill of vision. "Now when I was asked to be present with you on the 19th of August, I tried to visualize the scene with myself in it; and that was very hard to do. For, truly, there are two of me, one of which does not greatly matter in the larger world that must have brought you here to do what you are doing; and had I decided to be with you, it is the lesser one who must have come.

"I believe that your purpose is not to honor a certain little man, but to honor the vision of the 11 a. m. train from Emerson with a banding and a dusty grin of satisfaction. That one would certainly be something of an impostor; and that is why you do not see him there. You have come, first of all, to remember something precious that is in yourselves and all men in varying degrees—your sense of necessary human values other than those of bread and meat and money.

And second, you have come to record your faith in the product of the dream of one of your boys who has worked for those values as he could. "It was in Wayne, thirty-three years ago this fall, that the particular John Neihardt, whom you honor in your kindness, was born. That John Neihardt is to be found in his work. If at any time, in anything that bears my name, you have felt more keenly than usual how human life, for all the hurt and pity of it, is shot through and through with a justifying glory, then you have met, Bank

Pioneers' Big Celebration

The Norfolk boosters arrived in Wayne last Thursday with copies of "The Covered Wagon," the official publication of the Pioneers' day celebration, which will be held in Norfolk, August 28, 29 and 30, inclusive. The celebration is held under the auspices of the Norfolk post of the American Legion and provides unusual features in the way of historic pageants, depicting the arrival of pioneers in North Nebraska, sixty years ago. Pioneers from twenty counties have written the Norfolk Legion that they will be present at the celebration. Along with the pageant is the annual frontiers' day roundup, in which 100 cowboys and cow girls will compete for prizes. The celebration will be held on a natural amphitheater, the site of the original settlement near Norfolk. Boxing matches, dances, street parades, and presentation of famous men of the West are added features. Jim Dahlman, cowboy mayor of Omaha; "Diamond Dick," an old character of the early days, and "Pawnee Bill, of Oklahoma, will be present in person. The speaker here invited everyone to go to Norfolk for the celebration, promising a real entertainment. It is suggested that picnic dinners be brought, as the grounds are ideal for picnic parties.

Brown's Store Leads the Field in Dresses, Coats and Millinery

This year we're defending our reputation for having largest assortments, by offering a greater variety of new fall apparel than ever before. And the best part of it all is that prices are pleasingly lower than you'd expect to find on garments of equal style and quality. And remember, too, that you are always welcome to inspect our large stocks and to try on as many things as you like without feeling obligated to buy. Really, it's a pleasure to show you the many pretty things in store for our patrons, and we invite you to make this store your headquarters while in Norfolk. "Meet the folks at Brown's."

New Fur-Trimmed Coats $19.75

Style, service and good-looks are the outstanding characteristics of these new coats for fall and winter. Warm, durable weaves topped with generous collars of luxurious fur; and the price is within the reach of every purse. The best values are to be had by making selections early. Later on it will be impossible to obtain the same quality materials and workmanship in garments made during the rush of the season's business. —Plan to see these garments on your next trip to Norfolk.

STYLISH NEW DRESSES OF SILK OR WOOLEN WEAVES $19.75

—And not just a feeble little lot to show you; either!—Scores of them in fact, embracing the smartest and cleverest ideas in styling and designing the new season offers. Soft, lustrous crepe satins in pansy purple, cocoa, rust, brown and black, and lovely, serviceable woolen textures such as charmeen and striped crepes—especially suited to the needs of the college miss or high school girl. You'll love them, we know, especially at this little price of $19.75

Hundreds of Hats, $2.95 to $5.00

Think of being able to choose a hat from two or three hundred models, at prices of five dollars or less! As a matter of fact, we specialize in stylish hats at $2.95, $3.95 and $5.00, and although we have some a little more expensive, you may be assured of a perfectly satisfactory choice if the price you want to pay is five dollars or less.

We Guarantee Satisfaction or Your Money Back.

From Other Editors

Hartington Herald: However, the hot weather does not prevent the girls from wearing fall hats and furs.

Albion Weekly News: This from the Kiwanis Magazine: A kite rises against the wind, not with it. Opposition is often a blessing, not a curse.

York Republican: The attempt to make the rodeo our national pastime, like the Spanish bull fight, will not succeed. It may have a temporary popularity but it is cruel and brutalizing. Already the humane societies are demanding better treatment of animals used in the exhibitions and the demands in this regard will be so strict that the rodeo is sure to lose both "kick" and "thrill." The American people may have a taste for red blooded sports, but the category does not include sports that inflict needless cruelties on animals.

Wahoo Wasp: We have just about decided to apply for a patent. "Side-Swiper" to be operated by foot power on our automobile. In a recent drive into Omaha we met several large high-powered cars which passed us at high speed and their wheels were over on our side of the white line. Guess they call them "Road Hogs" as they ride the center of the road. This said "Side-Swiper" will be an arm that will stick out, just graze the offending "H." We are undecided as to what to put on the end, a whitewash brush, an iron claw or a piece of limburger.

Geneva Signal: It can be done and there are at least two of us who think it ought to be done. Editor Allan of the York Republican, throwing caution to the winds, thumps his knuckles on his desk and goes on record in the following: "One of our exchanges, commenting on a public appearance of a young vocalist, said: 'To her musical talent, Miss Himesey adds the art of distinct articulation.' There is apparently one old fashioned editor who thinks the purpose of a song is to carry a message. May his tribe increase and stick!"

York Republican: Western cities, like Los Angeles, have harnessed horses on the business streets, but that, it seems, is a piece of business antiquity. In New York the use of horses to draw trucks is increasing because it has been learned that it costs six cents a minute to operate a motor truck there and only two cents a minute to operate a horse-drawn truck. And besides the initial cost of the motor equipment is higher and its life much shorter. But in the open spaces the motor trucks will continue to do the work the horses used to do, but in the crowded city streets where speed cannot be an element, Old Dobbin and his pals have obtained a new lease of life by doing a good job for less money.

Poet Writes Letter to Friends Who Meet

Dr. John G. Neihardt of Branson, Mo., poet laureate of Nebraska, wrote the following letter Aug. 17 to be read at the program last week dedicating a monument to his achievements:

"It was an ancient custom among the Omaha Indians that when a boy had reached the age of twelve, or thereabouts, he should be sent into the solitude of a high hill, there to fast and wait for the dream that should mould his life for good or ill. And when the dream had come to him, he would tell it only to a holy man of his tribe, receiving a new name in keeping with the vision he had seen, for it was deemed that by the vision he was born again. It was a beautiful and a wise custom; and surely it is the second birth that is the more memorable in the life of any man or woman, for lacking that, the first is but a futile pang.

"Wayne was my bill of vision. "Now when I was asked to be present with you on the 19th of August, I tried to visualize the scene with myself in it; and that was very hard to do. For, truly, there are two of me, one of which does not greatly matter in the larger mood that must have brought you here to do what you are doing; and had I decided to be with you, it is the lesser one who must have come.

"I believe that your purpose is not to honor a certain little man who might arrive on the 11 a. m. train from Emerson with a handbag and a dusty grin of satisfaction. That one would certainly be something of an impostor; and that is why you do not see him there. You have come, first of all, to remember something precious that is in yourselves and all men in varying degrees—your sense of duty, your sense of honor, your sense of necessary human values other than those of bread and meat and money. And second, you have come to record your faith in the product of the dream of one of your boys who has worked for those values as he could.

"It was in Wayne, thirty-three years ago this fall, that the particular John Neihardt whom you have known in your kindness, was born. That John Neihardt is to be found in his work. If at any time, in anything that bears my name, you have felt more keenly than usual how human life, for all the hurt and pity of it, is shot through and through with a justifying glory; then you have met, Dan-

Business.
Sioux City Journal: With summer on the wane next cooler weather on approaching, general business conditions become more promising. The same steadiness of improvement that marked business progress early in the winter with increased activity is seen now. The momentum of recovery, together with an acceleration that comes from renewed confidence on the part of the public, is carrying the economic situation to a higher plane with the passing of every week.

Bank clearings, building operations and railroad freight traffic this year have all set new records. These three unprecedented activities reveal, perhaps more than anything else, just what has been going on in the business world the last seven months. Bank clearings have been larger than ever, showing that commercial exchanges have been conducted on a broader scale, that more money has been used in the operation of general business, that there is no shortage of fineness to carry the work of reconstruction and expansion still farther indefinitely. It was believed that the building figures of 1923-24 might not be surpassed in this country for many decades. This year there have been more buildings constructed in the period elapsed than in any other similar length of time. Beyond doubt, that may be taken as a barometer of both public confidence and industrial growth. It means that the people are continuing to build because they feel assured of the safety of their investments and that industry is expanding according to justified plans.

Taking the railroad freight traffic for the first seven months of the year and comparing it to that of 1924, it is found that the car loadings in every instance but one have increased. Throughout the winter, spring and summer gains were made, some of them running into hundreds of thousands of cars in a single month. February was the only month in 1925 that fell short of the same month of the year before. The first two weeks of August surpassed the same periods of last year by approximately 200,000 cars.

The agricultural situation could be better, but it is not bad. In fact the shortage of the wheat crop and the failure of the corn to promise bumper returns need not be taken as discouraging. Wheat yields are far below those of last year, but it is likely that the production will command a total in money paid for the grain equal to that collected last fall when a fine crop was harvested. Corn is better than it was last year although not as good as was promised six weeks ago. Drouth is responsible for a reduced yield for the acreage planted, in sure to increase the prices of live stock before cooler weather has advanced far. By spring feeders ought to command good to fancy prices.

The stock and bond markets are unusually active. This is due no doubt to the activity in the mercantile field and to the inclination of the general public to make investments after a long period of inactivity. Outsiders are dealing in the eastern market on a larger scale than for many years. On the whole, business promises more now than at any time since the war and deflation.

Store will be closed August 31 and September 1 and 2 to invoice. S. R. Theobald & Co. a2711

Begin Here Today.

Sir Dudley Glenister, suspected of the murder of James Wragge, a certain to obtain his trial next, has a friend in Dr. Willoghby Melville, who recognizes James Wragge, Scotland Yard detective, assigned to the case, as one of his former patients, while Kathleen Glenister, sister of the dead man, in a search for a clue to the murder, calls upon Mrs. Simon Trickey.

Now Go On With the Story.

The matter of Dr. Willoghby Melville's case, but with less animation, as if she had accomplished her purpose in concentrating the visitor's attention on herself. But still the husband of this minor star of the film firmament came not, and Kathleen reverted to her old fear that the master of the house had been drinking. The vainglorious boasts of the gamekeeper's daughter suddenly occurred to her. The same idea had occurred to her.

"Whatever is Simon up to?" she exclaimed. She quitted the room, every moment studied as though in front of the camera, and Kathleen anxiously awaited developments. The discovery that Sir Grim's daughter was the wife of the man who had offered his allegiance against Sir Dudley rather disconcerted the value of that. Kathleen studiously cultivated her depth and began to wonder if she was the victim of a conspiracy.

She wished that she had brought Wragge with her, or even that John-derhead Norman would have been a better companion in that meretricious house than none at all. A loud and clear from across the passage, a scream rang out and away in the back of the house an electric bell whirred as the footstep sounded in the hall, the bell ceased ringing and a confused clatter of man's voices arose in the opposite room.

A minute later the muffled and high-pitched maid-servant stood in the doorway, white as a sheet. "Please, miss," she faltered, "the misses say will you kindly go down. The master's dead."

"Dead?" Kathleen repeated blankly. "Seize or something of that. And misses say will you kindly stop you up at Dorset House, the end of the street and leave word for him to stop round. He's been attending the master for some time. There was nothing for it but to comply—and Kathleen passed out by her waiting taxi, catching a glimpse of the famous "Mad Blah" bending over a fumbled heap of humanity in the dining room. Mr. Simon Trickey seemed to have started to meet his friend from a side door, but the hall court round chair. His head lay on the table.

Kathleen gave the desired message at the house of the local practitioners and drove back to Cadogan Gardens. As she was paying the driver of the taxi an inspiration came to her. "Did you see," she added, adding a generous tip, "notice a gentleman come out of the house at Brighton, was there?" "No miss," was the prompt reply. "Only a lady. Stylish party, and seemed in a bit of a hurry."

CHAPTER XIII. The Purple Aigrette. On entering the house, after ascertaining that Lady Maraballs was out reading as usual, Kathleen went up to Inspector Wragge at Scotland Yard. Within half an hour he was with her, listening to her story of what had happened during her call in the Lifeboat Road.

"A bad business," was his comment. "Mr. Trickey has been very indiscreet." "But don't you see, Mr. Wragge, that his death on the eve of further revelations is very suspicious," Kathleen said, hardly conscious of her own transportation at official stolidity. "Trickey's death comes just right for Sir Dudley, and I should not be surprised if he had contrived it."

"We mustn't be the question, Miss Glenister, but I shall certainly have to see that the man who was reported the inspector. "The fact of Mrs. Trickey being a Beechwood girl is a complication which will either aid or lessen my difficulties."

"I am glad that you see it in that light," said Kathleen dryly. "You are convinced that Mrs. Trickey associated with a man, whereas you saw a woman leaving the house?" inquired the inspector.

"I did not say that a woman left the house," Kathleen rejoined. "I said I heard the wail of a silk skirt in the passage and saw the tip of a purple aigrette, springing from the front door. The taxi-driver described the wearer as 'a stylish party in a bit of a hurry.' But it might have been a man disguised as a woman."

Wragge expressed his thanks and took his departure, alleging the need for haste in seeing the local doctor before the death certificate was given.

He found Doctor Wilson to be a sandy-haired young Scotchman, new to the district, but with a fund of native shrewdness which Wragge was quick to appreciate.

"I see," he said. "Your interest in Mr. Trickey's death is that he would have been an important witness in a case you are working on. Suspicion of foul play? Well, I think you can discharge your mind of anything of the sort. In fact I have already signed the death certificate as indicating cardiac affection. The symptoms of the body point to that, and I have been treating Mr. Trickey for heart trouble ever since I came here."

The inspector nodded. "But had luck then, doctor, and that's all there is to it," he said. "We are up against too many coincidences at the Yard to discharge in them."

"His appearance was a fairly truthful mirror of his habits, inspector," replied the young doctor. "Well, Doctor Wilson," Wragge said, "I am very much obliged to you for saving me a wild-goose chase. As you know, your certificate will be no request, and consequently no interference by the police."

Drawn by an irresistible impulse, Wragge Lipscomb Road in the direction of Number 16. He knew that the blinds would be drawn at the house of mourning, but there was the chance that one of the inmates might be peeping.

Sure enough the blinds were all down, but as he walked quickly past he observed the steps of a young man was any sound audible from within. He went on toward the end of the street, and was nearing the corner when a cab swung into the Lipscomb Road and flashed by him. Looking back, he saw it stop at Number 16.

A foot got out, out of the driver and vanished so quickly into the house as to leave no sign of having been there.

WRAGGE NOTICED THAT HER SMART HAT WAS ADORNED WITH A PURPLE AIGRETTE.

house as to suggest that someone had been waiting to admit her. Not so quickly, however, that Wragge had time to notice that her smart hat was adorned with a purple aigrette.

From her having dismissed her cab he argued that she was going to retrace her steps. He dared not risk recognition by hanging about himself so he repaired to a public house in the main thoroughfare and abandoned his quarters for a moment. While waiting he kept observation on Number 16 from the end of the street, and when his cabriolette arrived he was able to assure him that the lady he had to shadow was still inside.

"Find out where she lives, Peter, and report to me at the Yard directly you have located her," was his instruction. "Name and address are all I want from you. I will deal with the matter then."

The young detective, whose spurs were yet to win, promised results. He was as good as his word. About half past six he had turned up in Wragge's room at Scotland Yard with the information that the lady of the purple aigrette lived in a flat in Yeppon's Mansions, Grosvenor Gate, and that her name was Mrs. Connelly.

"Fine," Wragge commended his junior. "Goodnight, Peter." But the young detective lingered a moment. "I hope I did right, sir, in bringing this along," he said nervously, laying a box on the desk. "She dropped it as she entered the block of flats. I reckoned that it could be returned to her anonymously through the post if you had to use for."

Wragge took up the volume and his eyes snapped like stars. He laid it down on the desk. "Be-said quietly. 'Chink yourself up another twenty points, my son.'"

Inspector Wragge quickly confirmed the value of the book which fortune had placed in his hands. His first glance had told him that it might have a bearing on the case. It was a description of the life of the late Simon Trickey scrawled on the cardboard cover. Further examination showed that it covered the period of Trickey's mission to America disclosed by him to Kathleen Glenister and repeated by her to Wragge himself.

A still closer scrutiny showed that six months afterwards, but in the same year, Trickey had paid a second visit to the Montana mining camp, also at the instance of his employer, Dudley Glenister. It was this second journey to the west that nearly drew the inspector's eyes out of his head as he perused it.

The perusal did not take long. Mr. Simon Trickey had no literary style, confining his entries to mere scraps of information, but pieced together he gave a lurid record of what he had been up to in Lone Wolf City on behalf of the great hat-having firm.

Pen Pointers

A lot of people are willing to try anything once—too often.

Farmers find that it's just as much trouble feeding the relatives as it is the chickens.

At last "eight hours of work, eight hours of play and eight hours of sleep" sounds interesting.

If there weren't any middle of the sidewalk, where would women stand when they want to gossip?

The careless pedestrian and the careless autist naturally think the same thing of each other. And they're both right.

Attaching the hose to the bathtub would make that Saturday night a fair much easier to put over on the side.

Any resolution that's worth making six months from now is worth making today.

NOTICE TO LAND OWNERS

Attention of all land owners is called to the Statute requiring land owners to mow or otherwise to destroy all weeds to the middle of all public roads running along their land, before the 15th day of August, each year. In case any land owner neglects or refuses to perform such duty said weeds will be mowed or destroyed by the road authority and the cost thereof charged and assessed against the land and collected the same as other taxes. All land owners are accordingly requested to at once mow or destroy any weeds along the highway bordering their land, if they have not already done so within the past thirty days.
