schedule of prices for renting the Community hall. For churches and societies a flat rate of $10 will be charged and for dances and entertainments from which money is made the rate will be $15.

Newspapers Have Big Part in Pictures

Although Glorvia Swanson is the star of "A Society Scandal," her Paramount picture, at Crystal Sept. 8 and 19, and Red La Rue and Ricardo Cortez have principal supporting roles, a most important factor in the story is the daily newspaper.

The newspaper is used in the picture to show the power of public opinion on the lives of the characters about which the story moves. Marjorie Colbert, a high bred society woman (played by Miss Swanson) is plunged into disaster by the ruthless tactics of Daniel Farr, an attorney, who prosecutes a divorce case against her and her shame is flaunted before the world in the newspapers. Later Marjorie uses the same newspapers to get her revenge upon Farr and then again goes to the newspapers to try to undo the havoc she has brought into her own life as well as that of the young attorney.

Headlines of several of the metropolitan dailies are used frequently in the picture, and other scenes show the city room of one of the great New York papers, also the presses relentlessly grinding out the newspaper that sometimes make and at other times wreck characters overnight.

A Mammoth Sale of Winter Coats

Starts Monday, Sept. 21

Ends 9 o'clock Saturday night, Sept. 26

We are Heavily Overstocked and Must Move Hundreds of Coats within the Next Few Days.

The weather man has been rather severe on us this season, sending us scorching weather during the latter part of August and the early part of September when we should have been selling new fall coats. As a result we are heavily stocked, and in order to reduce our number of coats to normal we must sell at least three hundred of them by next Saturday.

That's a lot of coats to move in so short a time, we know, but in order to accomplish it we are making sweeping reductions on ALL our new winter coats next week. In doing so, we are placing before the women of this community, at the very beginning of the season, the most unusual opportunities for saving ever attempted in Norfolk.

You can't afford to miss this mammoth sale of coats in which savings of from $4.00 to $35.00 can be made. In fact, many a woman will save the price of a new dress on her purchase of a coat here next week.

A Small Payment Will Hold Any Coat For Later Delivery

In order that you may take advantage of this big sale, even if you are not just ready for a coat, you may select the garment you like, make a small payment on it and have it put away for delivery later on. This insures you of a most desirable selection while assortments are large. We store your garment entirely free of charge.

GROWING OLD TOO FAST?

Many Wayne Folks Feel Older and Slower Than They Should.

Are you weak, tired, all worn-out? Do you feel years older than other folks of your age? Then look to your kidneys! The kidneys are the blood filters and if they weaken, the effect is quickly felt. You get constant backache, headaches, dizziness and urinary troubles. You feel lame, stiff and achy—allayed out. Don't wait! Don't buy any stimulants directed to the kidneys. Read what this Wayne resident says.

Robt. H. Jones, county surveyor, corner W Third & Blaine Sts says: "Occasionally my back became sore and lame and sharp catches darted across the small of my back. My kidneys acted irregularly and I showed they were responsible for the complaint. Doan's Pills have never failed to give speedy relief. From my experience, I know Doan's is a worth-while kidney medicine."

I know Doan's is a worth-while kidney medicine."

Essential Preventive.

Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: All murders have an abnormal mental state. A way should be devised for testing minds on the way to maturity, and if found with strong homicidal leanings, the punishment applied before the crimes are consummated. This is the only way to protect innocent victims, as we have been admonished is society's bounden duty.

Our duty then we must abide; We first must take his measure, Then "crack" the cruel homicide— Our duty and our pleasure. Forstalling thus his bloody act, Should give a saint great satisfaction.

If what we call society— Awaits the crucial crisis, To kill the man who has this me, What pleasure have I in it? The very thought my prophetic; Has been, I'm strong for prophax.

Annual Picnic— The Leslie Farmers' Union will hold its annual picnic Sunday, September 20, in Julius Krusen's grove. Everybody is invited to attend. Free coffee and lemonade will be served.

Mother's vacation is scheduled to start just as soon as school opens.

Early Days In Two Counties

From Ponca Journal, Sept. 18, 1925.

The yellow fever still continues unabated at Memphis. From 15 to 30 new cases are reported every day. The democratic judicial convention met yesterday at Norfolk. Of the different candidates before the convention, Mr. Crawford of West Point has already been the successful one. Doc Middleton, the late leader of the frontier banditti still continues to reside in jail at Cheyenne. He appears to be tired, and if convicted of which there is said to be much doubt, owing to various complications, he will get a long term in the penitentiary. His wounds will prevent him from mounting a horse again.

It is reported that in Sioux City a Yankee large quantities of counterfeit silver coin are in circulation. The Sioux City Journal says that the denomination is ten, twenty and fifty cent pieces, and that the imitation is a poor one when noticed particularly. On this side of the river, the money is being used in fact, with much of any other.

From the Wayne Herald for Oct. 26, 1909.

E. R. Lundberg is building a new residence.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Taylor went to Omaha to live.

Mrs. John Jaskawick of Winside, died Oct. 21, 1905.

Mrs. E. Dalzey left for Chicago and mother is ill.

Kelo brothers' livery barn at Wisner, was destroyed by fire.

J. A. Schreiber is building an addition to his store in Hoskins.

Mrs. George Damon came from Council Bluffs to visit friends.

The First National bank has been issuing new hoisting plant.

Mrs. S. Davies is excavating for two new brick residences he is building.

Rev. G. M. Lodge returned from a visit of several months in California.

O. A. King went to Newell, Iowa, to visit. Mrs. King had gone there before.

Dr. Cosner, Dr. Bells and Dr. Heckert attended a dental meeting in Norfolk.

Mrs. J. T. Bresler and youngest daughter returned from a visit in Dakota City.

L. C. Northrup of Valentine, came to visit her sister, Mrs. J. E. Marshall.

Henry Clausen bought a quarter section of land from Fred Thompson for $62.50 per acre.

Pete Spaulson sold his farm in Dixon county to Ole Dahlgren for $2500.

Harry Fisher is excavating for a new residence north of the Dr. W. C. Wighnam place.

Wheat and corn crops in the United States are largest in the history of the country.

P. H. Kohl has bought the M. D. Deane building and C. A. Berry plans to open a store in it.

J. H. Beckenhauer of Laurel, has bought a mercantile stock at Wakefield and is moving there.

Mr. and Mrs. Rohrke of Hoskins, moved to Meadow Grove where the former will be in a bank.

Miss Etta Beckenhauer who is employed in an insurance office in Sioux City, came to visit relatives.

Henry Armstrong who has moved from St. Joe, Mo., to Sioux City, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Armstrong here.

Rev. W. W. Theobald who was here visiting relatives, has gone to Madison, Wis., to be advertising agent for a mining company.

E. B. Young, Sunday school missionary, arrived home from Minneapolis where he attended a convention of missionaries.

Miss Ethel Groves who spent several months in Wayne, has gone to Stanford, Calif. Her father who is finishing a new building here, will go west later.

Word has been received here of the death of E. C. Dearborn at Lima, Florida, October 16, 1905. Mr. Dearborn was a teacher in Wayne about twenty years ago.

Marriage licenses were issued by Judge Hunter Oct. 28, 1905, to Wm.

Godden of Missouri Valley and Miss Nora Logan of Wayne, Edward Herrington of Lincoln and Miss Cora Miller of Wausa, and Eric Stamm and Miss Anna Ambrose of Hoskins.

Errors.

Hartington Herald: The editor of the Wayne Herald suffered great distress of mind recently because, in one issue of his excellent paper, a few misdirections and errors" escaped his vigilant eye, and also, because considerable reading and some advertising matter had to be omitted on account of the crowded condition of the forms. We don't know about the omissions, but we do not think very many errors got by—probably were undetected by anybody but the editor. But this is the penalty that every conscientious editor must pay—mental distress because when his paper is off the press, it is not quite up to his ideal. An editor, of course, whose ideal is not exactly exacting, is not greatly troubled in this way, but the one who tries to maintain a high standard suffers keenly at times. His vigilance and anxiety are increasing from the time he begins to plan an issue until the last copy is off the press.

Business. Sioux City Journal. The only fear expressed with regard to the business situation is that of over production in industry. Trade itself is in a healthy condition, both domestic and foreign.

Over production in industry is the only bad feature of the business situation, in the opinion of the foremost observers. Industry has been expanding rapidly for the last year. In some lines the expansion has not been justified by the outside world, because of a surfeit of management, which has been continued apparently as though the demand was constantly increasing at an increasing rate.

Fortunately, this fault is confined to few industries. Warnings sounded now ought to be helpful in discouraging mistakes in the future which would have the same disastrous effect in the end as inflation. Sound, healthy business cannot exist when more goods than the market can dispose of readily on the market.

There may be a psychological explanation of this error toward over production which follows naturally from the newness since the war—have had the tendency to expand because of the perceptible improvement in all business. Instead of being content to stay even with demand, they have feverishly reacted in the wrong direction and have expanded, evidently in the belief that outside world increase still more rapidly, in which case they would be occupying a most advantageous position. That is a good guessing—what follows happens to justify expansion. It is not so good if products pile up more rapidly than orders are received. It is a better policy to make haste slowly in the old proverb has it, and some industrialists could employ that bit of philosophy to great advantage.

None of which is to be taken as suggesting that business practices are changing or have changed. Indeed, every week shows new gains. Department store trade throughout the country has been 5 per cent better this summer than it was last.

The railroads have reported the largest gross receipts of any corresponding period since the war, and have handled more goods than in any summer season in their history. The buying power of the people is stronger, and, what is more important, they are using it. Besides, they are building and furnishing homes as they enjoy the possession of gainful occupations or thriving businesses. There is no less to be seen in any field. Both domestic and foreign trade demands continue stronger than for years. Yet there is no reasonable ground for the existence of a boom spirit. The over eager industrialists who have gone too far too quickly are the only ones who have misinterpreted the actual conditions.

Live stock, together with other products of the soil, are commanding more pleasing figures in market quotations. Beef, for example, has been entering the markets rapidly of late and has been selling at prices higher than have been known in the last forty years. That is significant of the profits made in agriculture. Live stock a few months ago, especially cattle, held little promise of showing recovery—now the situation is different and stock men are commencing to see their way out along with the farmers.

President's Popularity. Lincoln Journal. The popularity of the president continues without abatement. The radicals fume over it, the politicians rave in secret, and still Coolidge remains the most trusted and respected of American presidents.

The most plausible explanation is that by character and temperament he exactly fits the period of financial and social consciousness that has followed the up-grabs of the last quarter of a century.

Firestone will ALWAYS give Most Miles per Dollar

No matter where crude rubber prices may go—Firestone advantages in securing raw material, in manufacturing and distribution are always active to make good the pledge of Most Miles per Dollar.

Racing drivers—hill-climbing and endurance record holders—taxicab, motor truck and bus operators—and hundreds of thousands of car owners—are daily emphasizing the unheard-of mileage and service delivered by Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords.

Gum-Dipping is one of the biggest factors in tire performance and long mileage, making Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords the most economical tires ever offered motorists.

The cord from the fabric mills is first delivered to a separate plant where it is treated in a solution of gum, which insulates every fiber of every cord. This protects against internal friction and heat, giving the sidewalls greater flexibility and additional strength.

Prove Firestone's many superiorities for yourself. If you have never had the safety, comfort and economy of these serviceable, long-mileage tires—go to the nearest Firestone Dealer—for Firestone only builds Gum-Dipped Cords.

Begin Here Today.

Sir Dudley, laboring under the suspicion of murder, of his cousin James Glenister, is overjoyed when he is informed by Mrs. Simon Trickey that her husband had died suddenly, but the boy was short-lived for Mrs. Trickey told him of a diary her husband left which contained some information about the late James Glenister. However, Mrs. Coningsby, sister of Simon Trickey, had stolen the diary to protect her lover, Sir Dudley, and had by mechanical means put it in the hands of James Waggs, a detective.

Now Go On With the Story.

Then he went on to tell the story of Simon Trickey and how Trickey's widow demanded the continuance of the annuity. "She swears that someone has stolen the diary, but that she remembers enough of it to make things hot for me if I don't do something," Sir Dudley insisted. "I told her that I would do my best, but she hadn't a leg to stand on, but I don't like it, Ivy."

Mrs. Coningsby rose from the sofa, took the diary from a silver box on the table, lighted it and resumed her seat.

"Mrs. Trickey can't do you any harm," said Sir Dudley. "Mrs. Trickey?" exclaimed Sir Dudley. "I never mentioned the name. How do you come by it?" "Sit down and don't be indignant," Mrs. Coningsby adjured him. "Mrs. Trickey is my sister-in-law. You see, Sir Dudley, Mrs. Waggs is my brother."

"Good God! You never told me," Sir Dudley said. "It was bad work enough to start socially as Ivy Beau desert of the church without labeling myself as his sister. I knew all about that diary and that it would blow you sky-high if it ever came to light. I also knew where Simon kept it."

"Then it was you who pinched the thing?" "So fast," Mrs. Coningsby checked him. "You may as well have it all while we are about it. The diary wasn't your greatest danger to begin with. From a silver box, it could have been repeated over a word of it. The diary would only become a direct menace to you when it became the sole means of identifying myself as his sister. I knew all about that diary and that it would blow you sky-high if it ever came to light. I also knew where Simon kept it."

"I am afraid I don't," rejoined her heater. "I wish I were a pretty dense then." Mrs. Coningsby laughed merrily. "First I had to kill my brother and then steal the diary. I did both. How is that for a woman's service to the man she loves?"

Sir Dudley Glenister leaned back in his chair, took out his handkerchief and mopped his brow. "Where is the diary?" he asked hoarsely. "Mrs. Coningsby put down the stub of a cigar and took a step toward the elbow and very deliberately lit another. "None beyond recall," she replied. "I burned it."

"Come, Dudley! Ain't you going to bring me a word of praise for what I've done?" "The diary rose heavily from his chair and glanced at the door. "Thanks are cheap," he replied gloomily.

CHAPTER XVIII

The Value of the Plane
This is the note that reached Kathleen Glenister one bright morning: "If Miss K. Glenister desires evidence to convict her brother's murderer, let her come along on Thursday next, 3 p. m., to the Bull Hotel, Beaconsfield. In the coffee room will be a gentleman who will inform her how to proceed. Miss Glenister advised her to conceal this appointment from everyone—but Captain Norman Slater, in whose favor an exact copy may be made, she attempted to invoke the assistance of the police will have especially disagreeable consequences. I suggest Miss Glenister has in view."

"The informant will make himself known by greeting Miss Glenister as an acquaintance, though probably she will not recognize him. He will wear in his button-hole a pink and white carnation with a sprig of maidenhair fern."

Norman Slater carefully read and re-read the letter and headed it back to his pocket. "Seems promising," he said a little doubtfully. "I don't like your having to go alone, though. Why this far out of the city?"

"I can understand that," Kathleen laughed bitterly. "The writer must be aware that a hopeless duffer like me is the only person who is conducting the case officially."

"Well," said Norman in parting, "you will phone or wire me the result of your interview at the Three Pips Club. I shall be there all afternoon."

He was, he lunched there and incidentally the butler told that he expected to be punched up and would be found in the smoking room when he was wanted. "The clock came without any call for him and Norman began to be seriously alarmed."

Tommy Silverton's "come here" sent him off to the billiard room for a game of snooker he yielded because he thought it might deepen the suspicion that was laying such a roll hand on his heart. But in twenty minutes he flung his cue aside and bleeding headache, wandered out into the hall again. As he entered it a hurrying page ran into him.

"Sorry, sir," said the boy. "I was coming to fetch you. You're wanted on the telephone."

Norman plunged into the booth and seized the receiver.

"Oh, for God's sake, yes?" came the agonized reply. "He's got me, Norman. Follow to 'The Bull' and pick up the diary, but don't call in the police. I am to be killed on one of the first signs of pursuit. I—oh, you cruel brute!"

"The entrance died away in a strangled sob and over the wire came the sound of a short, sharp struggle. Then all was still. Norman called again, but the silence was as that of the grave."

Now that he was up against it Norman felt strangely braced. "The Laskers' clock before him, and that was better than loafing about in a state of impatient funk. Leaving the club he went round to his rooms and summoned his own car."

"I want you to go out and hire me a motorcycle, Alf," said Norman. "See that it's in good order and as quick as you can get it."

While his man was gone he changed into suitable clothes, and reviewed

OVER THE WIRE CAME THE SOUND OF A SHORT, SHARP STRUGGLE

ed the nightmare he had just gone through. He completed his toilet for the road by slipping an automatic pistol into the side pocket of his Norfolk jacket.

Gristled was back with a reliable motorcycle as soon as he had finished dressing, and the trusty fellow brought news as well.

"A bike sidwined me to the garage and back, sir," he reported. "Now come down to the street and tip me off if that shadow is still lurking about Norman. He may have returned."

"But there was no sign of the sleuth when Norman, under the motor-cycle and went roaring up the quiet West End thoroughfare."

Gerrard's Cross, with its modern colony of smart villas, was next left behind, and in turn the gates of Bulstrode and of Hall Farm were flung to the year by the mile-devouring Diesel engine. Six sixty minutes from Jersey Street Norman ran into the broad High Street of Beaconsfield and stopped at his goal.

The place was one of the old-fashioned country grounds which the advent of railways fell upon every day to awaken after a long interval into new life.

Norman was a half-closed door labeled "Coffee Room." The white-draped tables were all unoccupied.

"Waiter," Norman called sharply. "An old man now with a stern and distant corner and shambled forward, rubbing his blue-veined hands deprecatingly."

"Sorry, sir," he wheezed. "I was having a bit of a nap. You wish for dinner, or just a chop or something?"

"No I don't," Norman replied. "I want to inquire about a lady who was to meet a gentleman here at two o'clock today. You probably know her—Miss Glenister, who used to live at Beaconsfield."

The waiter shook his head. "I haven't been here long," he explained. "There were a lot of motor-folk in for luncheon here. I think have much time to notice. I think I remember a young lady, though she had no truck with anybody, so far as I know. She sat at that table by the window and had a plate of cold chicken and a glass of sherry. She finished—and yes, now I mind she once went out to the front door and came back again."

"There seemed to have been a hitch in the program, but the last words contained the germ of an idea."

"Did she stay long after she went out and come back?" Norman asked.

"Not more than five minutes, sir. She paid her bill, tipped me handsome and went off. I happened to be looking out of the window and returned to the right when she left the hotel."

"That is the way to the railway station?" (To Be Continued.)

Of the Common Peck.

Hartington Herald: Disclaiming familiarity enough with Neilhart's poems to express an opinion as to their merit, Editor Hulse of the Wayne County News does express the conviction that no poet is more strongly entrenched in the hearts of Nebraska people than the greatly beloved "Bixby" of the Nebraska State Journal. Which is undoubtedly a fact of the common people and his verses have a wide appeal.

Why pay war prices?

Thousands are Profiting by the Big Buy in Gasoline!

Are you eager to learn of a gasoline which positively is superior to ordinary gasoline, yet retails at the same price?

Thousands of motorists, men and women who appreciate our efforts to supply extra value now use Skelly Gasoline. Every day new users, new friends, are won. Many who have tested it critically, both in the laboratory and on the road, say Skelly Gasoline is good enough to sell at a premium. Yet it doesn't.

Probably you do not wish to test Skelly Gasoline in a laboratory, but you can in your car. The Skelly Triple Trial has been evolved so that you may make a simple, fair test of Skelly Gasoline.

Three times in a row fill up the tank with Skelly Gasoline. Then compare

The Skelly Triple Trial

1. Fill up the tank the first time with Skelly Gasoline. Carefully you will notice a difference in the way the engine runs with the gasoline you are using.
2. When the tank is low, fill up again. Still there is a noticeable difference.
3. Fill up for the third time. You now have gasoline no different from the first. Skelly gasoline is there with all the mileage power, all the flying speed, all its instant response. Now compare.
