Spent Three Months To Make Horse Film

Mountains and plains, mystery canyons and sunlit valleys—every variety of scenery to be found within a hundred miles of Moapa, Nev., were used by Fred Jackson in directing Hal Roach's new feature starring Rex, the king of wild horses. "Black Cyclone" hailed as a sensational novelty film, and will be shown at the Crystal theatre Friday and Saturday, October 30 and 31.

The company was on location in Nevada over three months staging the many thrills and heart throbs, for "Black Cyclone" tells the story of Rex's love for Lady, and the many adventures that befell them. Rex is first seen as a motherless colt, struggling for himself and learning the ways of the wild. When he reaches full growth he wags and wins lady, but though she would follow him to the end of her days, she is hard to keep, for the villainous Killer, a herd leader, victorious in every battle, steals her. But Rex, too, a mighty, magnificent horse, and the two ones when he defeats the Killer, the terror of the hills.

Had Wreck is Averted

Norfolk Daily News, Oct. 24: The presence of mind of A. B. Rockwell, a worker on a steel gang near Dale Siding, east of Fremont, averted what might have been a disastrous wreck of Train No. 3 on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad last night. Rockwell, walking along the railroad track, discovered a bad break in one of the rails. Realizing the danger to the fast passenger train which was approaching he ran down the track and flagged it. The engineer immediately attempted to stop but the momentum of the train carried the engine, tender and one baggage car over the break. The engine passed safely but the tender and baggage car were derailed.

If the train had been going at high speed it is almost certain that the passenger cars would have derailed, causing serious injury and probably loss of life.

The accident happened about fifteen miles east of Fremont. Train No. 3 which is scheduled to arrive in Norfolk at 8:35 was delayed about three hours while another engine, new rails and equipment to get the derailed cars back on the track were summoned from Omaha.

The break in the rail was described by passengers as a very bad one about eight feet of the steel being shattered. It is supposed to have been due to crystallization of the steel.

Potato Mashers Pale Before the Superior Pulling Power of the Pickle Washers

More in Triumph to Accept Rewards, Attended by Vanquished Opponents—Other School News

Every one admires the fellow who can smite when he's losing and who can control that smite when he wins; who can, like Lincoln, "hold on through blame, and falter not at praise."

When we have fought so hard and given every ounce of strength, have played a clean game, and yet the score turns against us, it's hard to sit back and smile. They will have a strong but over-confident team which has resulted in defeat many times.

The line-up in the Randolph game was as follows: L. E.—Benahof-Peterson. L. T.—Clifford. L. G.—Wilson-Benahof. C.—Keyser. R. G.—Trapp-Corzone and Hobenstein-Brothers.

The report cards were given out Monday morning. There were several Cs and as this is a danger signal the students should take warning and let next six weeks show a marked difference in the reports.

Pickle Washers Win
The contest between the Pickle Washers and the Potato Mashers closed Thursday afternoon. Thursday morning the Potato Mashers were ahead, though both sides held back money that morning. At noon both sides met to discuss the game. They were ready to purchase.

When planning was possible that the Pickle Washers had $125.50 and the Potato Mashers $156.25. This meant that the Potato Mashers would wear the blue bonnet to the matinee.

When school was let out, the Pickle Washers marched out first, received a piece of colored paper and a string, also a ticket for the matinee. Then the Potato Mashers marched out, to be crowned by the winners with a paper baby bonnet. Each loser led a winner for a partner. The students marched down 4th street to Main, turned south and proceeded to the Crystal to enjoy "A Son of His Father" by Harold Bell Wright. The losers paid for the matinee.

The Randolph-Wayne Football Game
Wayne displayed a strong and effective defense during the first quarter. Randolph's gains were almost entirely around end and through well directed forward passes. Wayne's offense was marked and their punting game worked well, Dennis punting on an average of 45 yards.

Wayne kept up their strong punting during the entire game, but from the second quarter on they slacked up on both defense and offense. Randolph scored one touchdown in the second quarter as a result of a thirty-five yard pass and two off-tackle plays. The try for point failed.

Wayne's constant driving resulted in two touchdowns, and a safety during the third period of play. A bad pass from center on their twenty-yard line caused Wayne to forfeit two points for the safety and the touchdowns were made easy by the grasping of opportune breaks by the Wayne team.

The last period was a battle to hold Randolph. Their line smashes often needed more than ten minutes to get forward passes succeeded in pushing over two more touchdowns and making the point of the try after goal. The game ended, Randolph 33 to Wayne 0.

Victory "Hed" from Wayne at the opening of the second quarter, but the local team displayed a strong and courageous battle to hold the opposing team. Not once did the Wayne high line lose spirit and many real football players were brought out in sorts of vanity will be possible after the report cards are handed out.

Ninth Grade Notes.

Citizenship is the state of being vested with the rights, privileges and duties of a citizen.

It is the matter of doing things that are right and being truthful and honest in your work, whatever it may be. We apply or should apply it in our daily school-work.

Junior News.
In the recent contest staged in the high school every one was asked to put down a quarter. If he lost, it was to be used to take some one on the opposite side to the show.

Sponsors Notes.
The Caesar classes have been enjoying prose the past week. Both sections of the geometry class have almost finished the preliminary course of their books.

The English classes have completed the study of "Launcelot and Elaine." The high school members think the sophomores have taken up astronomy if they are found gazing skyward.

The "vanity" of the second division ancient history was very prominent last Friday. We wonder if all other people in their needs? Do we always try to cooperate with the persons we are working for or with? No, we do not. We think only of our own wants and needs.

And how about responsibility? Can people "load us"? Or are we known in our community as one that can be trusted?

There are many who pride themselves on being good citizens, but can a person be a good citizen and be pessimistic, always gloomy, looking on the black side of things? No, he must have the optimistic spirit in him, be hopeful, take a cheerful outlook of things. This will help every one out.

We must have a certain degree of intelligence, but we cannot be really intelligent and hold any prejudices. Let us try to be open-minded, enough to receive and weigh carefully any advice or views that are heard; then store them up, so we can use them in the future.

Disappointed. Dr. A. L. Bixby: Five years ago we listened attentively to a long dissertation by a man who brought scriptural and mathematical "proof" for the postulate that millions now living will never die. He specified the time, as 1925, when the reign of the prince of darkness would end upon this earth and the new dispensation set in with jubilee and song. Behold, the year is almost ended, and we have not received that for which we have looked forward with more of hope than assurance. Some of our pessimistic friends are even maintaining that people are wickered than ever before.

Five years ago I was given the coaching. Five years ago I was told what would be. When is this dawn of redemption approaching? Say if you know, won't you tell it to me? What of the hopes that most of us cherish; Hopes that sustain through the desolate years? Who of the millions not destined to perish? Now trek along in this valley of tears?

Show me the man who will not come out loser. When nature knocks on his vital domain; Show me the face of a sanctified snooter. Sure, on this earth, for all time to remain! When earth's few saints possess hillside and level. Their indestructible bodies of clay. Whom in the duce will become of the devil. What of his calling and nowhere to Omaha?

School Notes

(Continued from Page Four.) and does nothing to aid the town or school, he is a poor citizen. This last week in ticket selling we encountered a great problem. People like they would like to help us if they could, but some of them could save that didn't. We encountered many people who said, "Don't ask me to buy a ticket. If your high school isn't going to win, I'm not going to come to the games."

That person is very destructive. He thinks only of the past of our high school instead of the future. Let's all do our best to make ourselves desirable citizens.

Submits a Song

Dr. A. L. Blythe, Ole Buck is offering a pipeful of plug-cut of the finest flavor to the poet who will write a catchy song to be warbled at the next meeting of the National Editorial association, which is to be held in California. He is not craving for to success in any form, but don't mind submitting a few lines pertinent to the subject suggested. How would this do?

Olebraska, O Nebraska! fairest on the western plains!

The greenest, gladdest section in creation (with its rains); No soil is more prolific of which any where can boast (Save, of course, where the Pacific muzzes up the western coast).

But the harvests in Nebraska are an annual surprise, And her crowded elevators are a feast for falling eyes. Every storehouse for the winter crowded full as it can jam; And her northwest winds are tempered to the fleeciest sheep and lamb.

"When the frost is on the pumpkin," and the Hubbard squash is ripe, (No uncanny western odors worse than Ole's brier pipe) The Nebraska shines so splendid—she is at her very best—She's the glory of the nation, and the beauty of the west.

Notice. No hunting or trapping will be allowed on my farm without my permission. John Schroeder. 62912p

Savings Deposits Largely Increased

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 24.—Savings deposits in 913 commercial and savings banks in Nebraska showed an increase of approximately $3,000,000 during the past year, a report by State Trade and Commerce Secretary Griggs on commercial and savings banks of the state, made public today by Gov. McMillen revealed.

Savings deposits on September 28, totaled $13,729,413 as compared to $11,113,230 on October 7, a year ago. Checking deposits in the 913 banks increased approximately $3,000,000 during the same period, while total deposits listed showed a gain of about $14,000,000.

Notwithstanding the heavy demands upon Nebraska banks during the past three months for money to finance the movement of farmers' crops and live stock to market, deposits have held up well and on September 28 were only $4,000,000 below the low total recorded June 30, the summary showed.

The September total deposits aggregated $23,849,558 compared with $23,759,169 in June, just before the seasonal shipment of agricultural products was under way. In 1925, the total stood at $26,632,564. A year ago there were 924 state banks operating on a basis as at the present time.

Loans have increased more than $1,000,000 since June and about $5,000,000 compared with October, 1925. The $1,000,000 fall in June and about $5,500,000 below the showing of a year ago. However, it is still 19.3 per cent of deposits—almost one-third more than the legal requirements.

The Changing Politics

Lincoln Journal: Senator R. B. Howell of Nebraska was a pleasant visitor in our little city last week. While here he was a frequent speaker at several interesting functions. At a luncheon at the chamber of commerce he discussed some problems of agriculture and sketched some recent scientific developments looking to the benefit of farming.

To an evening audience he gave an account of his recent circumnavigation of Africa. The results of a keen study of African economic and political conditions were depicted. The next day the senator studied livestock at the agricultural college, between times discussing with callers such economic problems as the possibility of doing for wheat what Great Britain has done for rubber and Brazil for iron. In one of his addresses the senator addressed a group of women voters who put him through a stiff examination on the subject of war and peace and the world court and the like.

This is not a familiar picture. In the good old times when a congressman came to town there was real business to attend to. He was met at the train by crowds of present or prospective businessmen and dealers in the public trough. The party machines were on hand, moreover, with reports from the local machinery in the different parts of the realm. There were solemn and secret conferences to plan political victories which were to land every deserving partisan directly or indirectly on the public payroll. In those days politics was politics and the game was played for blood.

Largely because of the direct pressure of the public through the machinery, partly because of the gradual encroachment of the merit system upon the spoils system and because of a decline in party spirit the political middleman is gone. A congressman is responsible directly to his constituents. He makes reports to them directly. They are no longer much moved by the old slogans and so he talks of the newer realities. A senator or representative goes about among his constituents, accordingly, as a sort of general representative of his firm, the United States; and if, like our recent senatorial guest, he has the requisite knowledge and personality, he may become on his own hook a good deal of a national utility.

Mother of Wright Character Dead. Hartington, Neb., Oct. 24.—Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Jacob Duman, an old resident of Cedar county, whose son, Laurel Duman, was chosen as one of the characters in Harold Bell Wright's story, "The Winning of Barbara Worth." Mrs. Duman, who was Miss Alice E. Johnson before her marriage, after going to California with her parents, settled in the Imperial Valley, where the scenes of Mr. Wright's story are laid, but lived at Marysville, Calif., at the time of her death. She was graduated from the Hartington high school about thirty years ago and taught school in Cedar county for some time.

It is rumored that the gas companies which originated the expression "keep the home fires burning."

Miss Dewitt Tells Benefits of Music

Miss Esther Dewitt, head of the physical education department at the Wayne State Teachers College, spoke to the members of the Wayne Woman's club Friday at the home of Mrs. Clyde Oman on "The Benefits of Musical Training to the Child." Miss Dewitt stated that the direct appeal of music to the inner life, its power to arouse, stimulate and qualify it, makes it one of the most significant as well as useful arts.

"Rhythm is not a product of culture alone but it is inherent in the emotional organization of life itself," Miss Dewitt asserted. The tendency to rhythmic expression is early accounted for in the history of the race in the drum, rattle and evolution of the dance. The same truth is shown in child history by the presence of a universal mother game, singing games and rhymes and rhythmical jinglings of nursery lore.

"Music is man's aspirations in terms of beauty, expressed in sounds," Miss Dewitt stated. When created by men of genius it goes deeply into the meanings of things, and reveals their significance. When one says that music in the home unifies the family it must also be explained that music unifies each person; for the love of beauty is an essential quality in the human being.

Rhythmic plays are more than art forms for they perform a great service in helping establish the physical coordination of the young child. A large part of the early Greek training for children, Miss Dewitt explained, consisted of music and physical activity, though most of their dancing was done to poetry rather than to music. They valued their music highly for its cultural benefit. Ptolemy said that he who mingles music with exercise in the fairest proportions may rightfully be called the true musician.

Music in the kindergarten gives an unusual opportunity to bring children into direct contact with the greatest interest is sustained and the natural joy in rhythm and sweet sound is satisfied. When fine quality music is presented a foundation may be laid which will influence his future taste and appreciation. The best of the world's musical literature is drawn upon, and the child's bright rhythmic effects are emphasized. The object is to present a musical whole as the composer conceived it.

The wide range of ideas capable of being interpreted through rhythmic form makes it a most interesting and helpful source," stated Miss Dewitt. As play all the constructive principles of physical education can be carried on, developing freedom, elasticity and poise. The ability to interpret selections through bodily movements greatly increases the appreciation.

In all branches of the study educators are now agreed, Miss Dewitt stated, that the material used must be interesting, must possess elements of permanent value, must appeal to the minds and interests of the children and that the methods of presentation must apply to the stage of mental development of the group. Three well-defined stages in the physical and mental growth of children have been delineated, according to Miss Dewitt, and these are the following: Sensory period, beginning with infancy and continuing to the third grade; associative period, extending through the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades; and the adolescent period, beginning in the seventh grade and continuing into the high school. The sensory period is marked by extremely rapid physical growth, accompanied by a lack of the finer muscular and mental coordinations. The child here deals with objects and concrete experiences. Suggestions, fancy, imagination, keen observation and imitation play a large part in life. Impressions and experiences are being gathered which later become foundation stones of the educational structure. It is obvious, then, Miss Dewitt stated, that the child's sense experiences with music must be based upon real music, real songs, not scales or technical exercises. The music should be beautiful, not too long to appeal to the interests and imagination.

The associative period is distinguished by comparatively slow physical growth—finer coordinations of the body and mind are now accomplished with greater ease. There is greater endurance, strong vitality and excellent resistance to mental fatigue. Memory is quick, sure and lasting. There is susceptibility to drill and discipline. The child is at this time organizing his experiences into usable groups. At this period the child should have formal drill until automatic control is acquired. This is the time for study and the child is eager for hard work. The continual use of music for folk dances will at this period be a means for securing voluntary attention.

The adolescent period is again characterized by rapid physical growth, stated the speaker. This period marks the maturing of the child and is marked by changes in mental life as radical as those in physical development. The emotions dominate. Strong social, moral and religious convictions are pronounced. The child becomes conscious of himself. Team work finds its expression in part of group. In these years the mold of character, development of high ideals and the forming of good taste and artistic discrimination are important. Music of sheer beauty of melody and appealing harmonies must be used. Encouragement rather than criticism is needed. The study of great composers is good and the viewpoints are broadened.

In the schools the attempt, Miss Dewitt stated, is to develop the desire to sing. Children should be taught how to sing, how to express their feelings through music.

Debauching Boys.

Any person caught doing it knows how extreme his offense is and he or she should be given the top limit by any judge into whose hands the case falls. ### RESULTS THAT LAST.

Proven by Wayne People.
Thousands of kidney sufferers have tried remedy after remedy with only temporary benefit. That's mighty discouraging! But a kidney remedy has earned a reputation for lasting results and there's plenty of proof right here in Wayne.

Read the experience of one who used Doan's Pills years ago and now makes her endorsement even stronger.

Mrs. Jake Welbaum, 414 W. Second St., Wayne, says: "There was a lameness and soreness across my back and my kidneys acted too often. After using the first box of Doan's Pills from the Wayne Drug Co., I was benefited. I kept on with Doan's and they soon had my kidneys in a healthy condition and also strengthened my back."

The above statement was given May 27, 1920, and on July 17, 1925, Mrs. Welbaum said: "I haven't had to use Doan's Pills since they cured me."

Is There Extra Value in Gasoline?

If THERE IS, certainly you want to know it—certainly you wish to use the gasoline which actually proves that it gives you more for your money. More power, more speed, quicker response.

We know we have such a gasoline. But we appreciate that you want to know it for yourself. And you should.

So we have evolved a simple easy way for you to test Skelly Gasoline against ordinary gasoline built to conform to the accepted New Navy specifications. (Skelly is positively not New Navy gasoline—it exceeds New Navy specifications on every point.)

The Skelly Triple Trial
Here is the simple, fair test we suggest:

- 1—Fill up the tank for the first time with Skelly Gasoline. Note the new life, new power in your motor. But do not judge fully yet, for there is dilution of Skelly with the gasoline you had been using.
- 2—When the tank is low, fill up again. A bit quicker response than before, but still there is some dilution.
- 3—Fill up for the third time. Practically no dilution. Skelly Gasoline is there with all its power, all its flying speed, all its instant response. Now compare!
- 4—After you have completed the trial, remember that you paid no more for Skelly than for ordinary gasoline. Skelly Gasoline has earned the reputation of "the big buy in gasoline."

CULTURE

Members of the faculty of the Wayne State Teachers College have been pleading with questions from students...

One member of the faculty explained that culture made one self-sustaining, enabled him to function socially in group activities and maintained self-control and tolerance...

To be able to support oneself in reasonable comfort, without habits of idleness, is certain. It is not necessary to do so, but it is necessary to employ himself in a strenuous struggle to make ends meet...

Genius culture is not a thin veneer of pleasing manifestations and behind which sinister motives or evil designs lie...

In material pursuits, cultured people do not engage in spiteful fights with one another. In society they do not quarrel with one another...

INSPIRATION

We reproduce on this page some elucidations on the subject of editorial writing, and we find there is no need of argument. As suggested by Editor Stone of the Harrington Herald, a full stomach, physical comfort and not cold feet are the best results...

REMARKABLE TRIUMPH

The Omaha World-Herald issued a newspaper of 118 pages last Sunday to signify properly the fortieth anniversary of its founding.

Mr. Hitchcock changed everything, and possessed on his belief in the future of the World-Herald. He plunged as far into debt as he could go.

The value of publicity is building any worth of public relations through the medium of the regional conference of the American Library association in Sioux City, The Kansas State Library in Topeka.

The report that a woman dislocated a vertebra on account of a quick movement of the body should not be taken as an excuse for restraining movements.

ANENT EDITORIAL WRITING

In regard to editorial writing about which all publishers really agree, what has some comments and analyses aroused by speculation as to how far inspiration works in producing the human soul to work-will effect.

The passing of Ernest Bernscheim, approaching his eighty-second year, deserves special mention because he was an extraordinary man.

One Buck, secretary of the Nebraska Press association, who sent out a call for a catchy state song to be sung during the next journeyings of the operators of the Wayne Herald.

After a fall of snow, men employed by the city to clear the streets are busy without delay in clearing them. It is understood the graveled road cannot be cleared of snow on account of the operation of the gravel, but efforts may be advantageously directed to removing snow from other highways leading to Wayne.

"PASSING THE BUCK"

Isn't it amazing how often the other fellow is to blame? Any error, accident, unfavorable circumstance or situation is chargeable to the fellow who does it, doesn't it? Kick because he doesn't know.

Designated it as "education" week. Rightly directed, education is a wonderful faculty. Its influence generally tends to breadth of vision and high idealism.

Now that the nations are getting together in a peace pact, we would like to see them get together in restraint on the Turks who are reported to have practiced unprovoked hostilities on defenseless people.

"These few thoughts on the psychology of writing are tentative and conjecturing; but we believe there is a great deal of investigation here that is worthy of cultivation and we commend it to the consideration of Editors Edgemoor and Huse and other thoughtful persons."

On last Thursday B. M. Kneeland brought to this office portions of a human skeleton which he found that day on a sand bar near the river. The skeleton was almost entirely imbedded in the sand, only a small part of the skull showing. Mr. Kneeland had seen this bar dead when he was very young but he was unable to dig out any of the bones, but secured the skull and a few other pieces. The skull shows that in life it was a nicely formed head, the teeth are small and regular and Dr. Hassler is of opinion that the remains are those of a woman probably 20 to 25 years of age. He also thinks it is two or three feet below the surface and is not how far she floated none can tell. She was doubtless drowned, and was but another victim of the merciless Missouri.

Proclamation.

The education of the children is perhaps the most important task which people are called upon to perform. However, generally the function may be delegated to local districts, the state must in a large degree accept the responsibility for that part of the training of the youth which must be done outside the home.

The State of Nebraska employs nearly 15,000 teachers in its public schools. Because of the fact that nearly 600 of these teachers are away from the work every year, it is necessary, if the state is to render their best service, that they come early to know the seriousness of their responsibility and at the beginning feel the deep obligation which they owe to the state and its children.

With this situation before us, and knowing that the best way to help the people that their children shall have the highest type of teaching possible, it is fitting that the State of Nebraska should cooperate in these conventions to impress upon the teachers the great responsibility which is theirs.

In view of the approaching Education Conference to be held at different points in the State on November 4, 5, 6 and 7, it seems opportune at this time to urge not only teachers, but parents and members of school boards to give special thought to the schools on these days. Teachers should not only be permitted, but earnestly urged to attend and seriously reflect upon the public discussion of important questions which will occupy the attention of these conventions.

To this end, I, Adam McMullen, Governor of Nebraska, hereby designate the week of November 1-7 inclusive, Nebraska Education Week, and urge the co-operation of our school boards, to the end that teachers engaged in these conventions and return to their desks with an increased enthusiasm, a more serious purpose, and a higher resolve that the children under their influence will grow to be the best citizens in the history of our notable state.

Given under my hand and seal this 9th day of October, 1925.

Begin Here Today.
S. D. Drey, Eugene baronet, be- lieved to be the orderer of his cousin, James Glenister, consents to a moving picture company's setting fire to an oil on his estate, and film- ing the spectacle.
Norman Slater and his sweetheart, Kathleen Glenister, are Dudo's pri- soners in the building. But Alf, a friend of Slater, is one of the pic- ture group, and he meets Hinkley, Dudley's butler, who tells him of Du- dory's plot.

Now Go On With the Story.
With a key for the cottage he crossed the clearing and reconnoit- ered the bank of the stream. At first he was at a loss how to reach the mill without arousing the noise, but he soon discovered the stepping stones above the weir and so gained his goal.

To his surprise the outer door of the mill house stood open.
Like a wraith the ex-fireman slip- pened from the fulfil moonlight into the millinery, with the noise of the stone steps when his feet brushed against a pile of loose straw. Another step, and his foot struck metal. Stop! There, he was informed, by his sense of touch that he had kicked a petrol can. There had always been a sense of hope in his mind that the baronet's threatened fire had been an empty bluff, but these combustibles told him that he was up against the thing.

His impulse was to gather the beady things up and stamp-out the peat by tossing them into the mill-race. But the peat was so soot- formed that the execution of it was averted by the sound of voices on the upper floor. "The words were insignificant, but he was sure he had undoubtedly that of a woman. Sudden- ly she ceased in a—hisde—of laughter like a silver bell, a door was thrown shut—her footsteps began to descend the stairs.

The man with the keys was coming down, and Alf was gone, but he had never in the course of his life wanted anything before.

With the tread of a cat he stepped back and out on to the bank of the mill-race and waited, jealously expectant.
A brief five minutes on a stone mill- wheel he was busied with.
The Erg hastened back to the bank, shouted to the camera man to start and retraced his steps along the miniature causeway in the best Wim- perley style—a hero every inch of him. But as he flung himself down to have the heroine up he saw something had gone wrong. "Miss Blair" instead of turning an utra- paged gate on her rescuer, was start- ing at the bank which he had just left.

Following the direction of her frightened eyes, he broke into blas- phemy as he saw the man who had walked into the electric beam. Though for a few minutes yet he was not to know it, they were the Right Honorable and Honorable Colonel and Inspector Wragg, of Scotland Yard.

A piercing scream from the woman on the wheel below drew his attention from the interlopers.
"The wheel has moved!" "Miss Blair!" "Oh, my God! I'm being crushed to death." "Mr. Wommersley wrung his hands in despair, but a tall man with great eyes shooed the crowd aside, and he indignously aside, nearly hurting him into the turbulent water that had forced a passage past the broken wheel.
"Out of the way, you monkey," cried John Grimes in his thunderous bass. "I'll get her out."
CHAPTER XXV
The Fight in the Dark.

The end of his second day of cap- tivity found Norman Slater mentally and physically nearly at the end of his tether.
A hundred times Norman cursed his enemy for delaying Alf Grimsd's start for twenty-four hours after the commencement of his own search for Kathleen.

Norman realized that she was "for it" as the boys used to say in the trenches. But what of the brave girl upstairs? That was what really troubled him. Would she have the grit to recognize that since she could not save his life she had better save her own by feigning acquiescence to his enemy's atrocious terms so that she could repudiate them afterwards.
Very soon he heard the steps com- ing down, and a great creak, seized him. For the purposeful tread on the stairs told of a rebuff in the room above and of an imperative craving for revenge.

"The mill is going to be destroyed by fire. But before the flames catch I'll shall call again with a hunting crop and repay with interest the dressing down you gave me in Cadogan Gardens," Dudley Glenister said that morning threatened.
And now he was about to do it. The key, kept in the lock and a lamp gleamed in the doorway. The baronet entered clutching his whip, and whirling it round his head he made it crack like a pistol-shot.
"Now I'll make you sweat my back, and when you wake down sweat- ing I'll roast you to a turn, he sneered."

The last word had hardly passed his lips when from the open doorway a dark form launched itself into the air with the spring of a leopard. It landed fair and square on Glenister's shoulders, bore him to the ground and by smashing the electric torch plun- ged the old grain-room into darkness. Norman was almost stricken by the rebound from despair to hope. This must be Alf, and Alf at his very best.
The first notes of his faithful serv- ant confirmed the glad surmise.
"Cheer-up, Captain!" panted Alf. "I've got you. And he got you." "Ah, you swine!"

He never quite knew how Alf set him free so quickly. The cunning soldier had to improvise tools from bits of scrap iron lying around, but he surmounted all difficulties and raised his master with the tenderness of a mother for an injured infant.

Notice of Probate of Will.
The State of Nebraska, Wayne County, ss.
At a county court, held at the county court room, in and for said county of Wayne, on the 29th day of October, 1926.
Present, J. M. Cherry, county judge.

In the matter of the estate of Mary Ellenburg, deceased.
On reading and filing the petition of Joe M. Ellenburg, praying that he be appointed administrator of the above-entitled estate, and purporting to be a resident of said county, three suc- cessive weeks prior to said day of hearing, to-wit:

"I have just finished a picture actor, he inadequately explained." "I'm sorry, Miss, but I've had to job the captain out of trouble down below or I'd have been on hand sooner." A few words from Norman shed a little more light on the situation. "I am being perfectly horrid!" Kathleen declared. "I've known for the last hour, since Hinkley came, that it would be all right. He said he was going for help, and when all the hullabaloo began, I thought he had arrived and I wondered why no- body came for me. You must forgive me. My nerves are all rattled. You said he was going down to whip you and set the mill on fire."
"Thanks to my trusty Alf here, Dudley is knocked out and an easy prey for Hinkley's policeman when he shows up," said Norman. "Our immediate scheme is to evacuate this lathhouse mill and join those merry wanderers outside in 'snare-ump-five seconds.'"

of a mother for an injured infant. "Able to walk, sir, if you lean me," he asked.
Norman expressed his ability to move without assistance and explained that the letting out of Kathleen had not taken from him his flau- gher. It roused and the search began again. The key was found on the floor ten feet from the deflated camp and he saw the fireman's hand when Alf took the flying leap onto his back. Norman was the first to see it and pick it up. "This is zero, my lad. Over the top and up- stairs."
"Lead on," said Norman. "You're in command, my mate."
Master and servant left the room, and as soon as they began to mount the stairs the prone figure rose and on to his side. Inch by inch and with

Fortune Awarded on Patents After Twenty-Year Fight in the Courts

THIS is the story of a man who has given the best years of his life in a fight for his right and who having won his right, and who hardly knows what to do with it. Twenty years ago George Carlson was a "desert rat" prospector. A spring-acting device was born of his experiences in the mines and took it to Washington to get protection of government patents. Several years later he discovered mining companies using his patents and demanded payment of royalties. He was turned down. Then he went to court and for 20 years he has suffered one reverse after another. Now the Supreme Court of the United States has awarded him his right. In his fight against the American Smelting Company for infringement of his patent. When this final victory was won, getting to and his long battle, he found himself confined in bed in a San Francisco hospital ward. A man worth millions being cared for in a university city hospital—and a poor man.

What can I do with twenty million dollars? he asks. "I am nearly 40 years old now and not very bright. I have never had a business, quite place when I get out of here and build a stock and joint money around alone with my own little experiments. Maybe, before I die, I can invent something else which the world will think worth while." Of course, the man is beset with suggestions. "You must be a lot of money, in the world, for most of these people want me to have their farms and stores," Carlson says. "And relatives, he didn't know he had any, but since the court award he has heard from several hundred.
