

Organization Of New Brass Band

Twenty-five Men Attend Preliminary Meeting and Indicate Desire to Become Members.

Director Is Hired

F. C. Reed, Well Known Band Leader, to Have Charge—Another Meeting to be Held Tonight.

A preliminary meeting of many boys interested in the organization of a brass band was held in the city hall last Friday evening and another meeting was held Tuesday evening. Twenty-five were present and indicated their active interest in the proposed organization which will be the property of the Greater Wayne club and to be under the management of the American Legion.

F. C. Reed, by the known band leader of Woodfield, has been employed to direct development of the organization, and he says he expects to have a meeting in the city hall this evening to be in shape to help in the coming pre-Christmas festivities. At a meeting in the city hall tonight the organization will be perfected and extended. All men and boys inclined to become members are urged to be present.

A mutual group is to be known as the "Wayne Municipal Band" and the following statement has been made by F. C. Reed, its manager:

"The Wayne Municipal Band, financially by the Greater Wayne club, and managed by the American Legion, to be a live institution for the purpose of promoting in every way possible everything beneficial to the community. The organization has been given careful consideration by the business organization and the Legion and it is believed worthy of a permanent support."

"The band will be sponsored by the American Legion, and confidence in its ability and earnestness is amply supported by its success in developing its drum and bugle corps. At first thought, one might think organizing a band is a simple matter, but it is not so great and results are not as easy as it seems. In this band, there are those who are anxious to learn, and they have the incentive to make good and build a reputation for themselves. Discipline and insures happy associations. A band stimulates pride of citizenship, is a source of enjoyment, and encourages and solidifying community spirit."

The Legion post is responsible to the Greater Wayne club for organizing and maintaining the band. The post has been granted complete authority to provide the equipment and constitution of the American Legion. Membership is open to all who are interested and who wish to take an active part in the band, and of a service to the band. Do not hesitate to inquire about the band. The director will be more than willing to assist in every possible way. Also information will be cheerfully given by any member of the Legion committee: Dr. Wm. H. Kravitz, Paul Minton and J. M. Brinen. Necessary equipment: An instrument, book of music, and music stand free to all those who wish to join the band and help make it a success."

HOME LIFE.

Home conditions are powerfully influential in hindering or helping one in his chosen occupation. A man is expected to go forth in the morning with enough energy, power and wisdom to win adequate revenue for household needs. He must be able to get through his worries or anxieties, his strength and spirit are brought down to a pitifully low ebb. He is handicapped in the things he must do well to gain the support his family deserves. Fickleness, fear, and the habit of depressing fear which militates against a man's best efforts, and thus if a woman's work is hampered and her household duties are not possible success, she should exercise due care in avoiding risk to herself and children. If husband and wife are in the habit of nagging each other, hatefully finding fault or breathing unwarranted suspicion, they are affected detrimentally in one's work which is expected to yield sufficient return. A woman can't send a man off to a properly constructive frame of mind if she calls him a half-baked housewife every time he comes to himself that she bit close to the truth. A woman can't do so well in maintaining a healthy household if she is in the habit of being a harpy and if her husband is childish and ugly. Home and occupation are interdependent, and husband and wife must make a harmonious adjustment to gain largest success and greatest content.

Pres. U. S. Conn. of Wayne State Teachers College Speaks at Monday Luncheon.

Reason for Crime

Parents Must Take an Interest in Children if Lawlessness is to be Reduced.

Pres. U. S. Conn. of the Wayne State Teachers College, in speaking to Kiwanians at their monthly luncheon on Monday, stressed the value of special days or weeks set aside for the purpose of making good citizenship. He said that the average citizen Character and ideals are, Pres. Conn. asserted, a result of systematic training and growth rather than a result of the citizen's own efforts.

Tells Students About Army Life

Carl A. Madson Explains Educational Advantages of Serving in the Late War.

Carl A. Madson of Wayne, World War veteran, gave the high school students a treat Tuesday afternoon by speaking to them about the advantages of serving in the late war. He was speaking in Educational week and it was fitting that Mr. Madson address the subject of military service. He stated that the service had given him a valuable opportunity to study human nature. Mr. Madson noted a great difference between the civilian and the soldier, he stated, "There they show what they really are, persons who do not expect the highest standards before entering service, many thought would make good soldiers but this proved not to be the case. Those who assessed the most manhood and who were judged by many as not being good fighters, proved the best soldiers at the front."

Mr. Madson noted that the soldiers, Mr. Madson noted, was that most of all the Americans could read and write. In the Eighty-ninth division, he was composed of middle western men, Mr. Madson stated that he had only found two who could not write and had had to help them. He said that the percentage of those who could write from other countries was small.

All nationalities were mingled in the division in which Mr. Madson served and he stated that all showed up in the division in this country. The Americans were quick to think and quick to act and, Mr. Madson asserted, this was largely due to their being educated to think. Intensive training received after reaching Europe was valuable educationally also, stated Mr. Madson. They were trained, learning to walk blindfolded to a definite point, using a gas mask and many other bits of knowledge gained, were most valuable and are still useful to the men.

Young Man in Jail To Await Hearing

Unable to give bond of $1,000, Fernin Madson, charged with assaulting an officer, is held in the county jail awaiting a preliminary hearing. It is reported that Fernin got on the wrong side of the law through Sheriff Archie Stephens. The sheriff says Miller met him with violent threats, and as he was violent for such an unexpected opportunity, he retired, but to return later, armed and accompanied by Marshal William Stewart. Accordingly, Miller was arrested and was escorted off to jail.

M. B. Lynch Passes Away at Iowa Home

M. B. Lynch, father of Arthur Lynch and Neil Lynch of near Carroll, passed away at the family home in Neola, Neb., at 10:30 a. m. Monday. He was born in Wisconsin, May 5, 1854, and was therefore in his seventy-first year when he died. He was married to Mrs. Neola. Two sons and seven daughters survive, besides one sister and twenty-nine grandchildren. Mr. Lynch had many friends who will remember him with esteem.

Blaze Caused By Engine Explosion

Fire which was caused by explosion of a gas engine, burning the cob house and wash house at the William Thies farm five and one-half miles southwest of Wayne Monday night, was caused by an engine being used for washing when it exploded. Some of the clothes were destroyed also. Neighbors assisting in the fire, and the Thies family extinguished it before more damage was done.

Parents Must Take an Interest in Children if Lawlessness is to be Reduced.

Pres. U. S. Conn. of the Wayne State Teachers College, in speaking to Kiwanians at their monthly luncheon on Monday, stressed the value of special days or weeks set aside for the purpose of making good citizenship. He said that the average citizen Character and ideals are, Pres. Conn. asserted, a result of systematic training and growth rather than a result of the citizen's own efforts.

Every school boy, knows, stated Pres. Conn. that the constitution under which the present government provides for a legislative body, a judicial department and an executive department is related to one another in such a way that upon the one or the other two. It was not ignorance, he said, which inspired a group of politicians to propose the amendment to the constitution of the supreme court should be subject to the veto by congress. Had this issue prevailed, and the amendment had been possible for congress to confiscate property and income in spite of any adverse decision of the supreme court, it would be a disaster.

Neither is it ignorance of law, Pres. Conn. asserted, that is responsible for crime. There are several contributing factors, among which may be mentioned are: a weak judiciary as stated in books. A statistician has estimated that in all the states and municipalities of this country there are 1,000,000 violations of the law. Many of these are conflicting, some are foolish and quite a percentage are entirely unnecessary.

Market Report

Furnished by Steele, Sims & Co., Sioux City Stock Yards.

Nov. 18.—Uncleas rests the head between the ears of a general public. Farmers in general, the big packers credit for being able to control the hog market, at least to a certain extent, but they themselves do not seem to be sure of their ability.

Right now they are displaying a decided amount of uncertainty, anxiety and doubt in connection with a new campaign. The reason is traceable to lighter receipts than had been anticipated over the country and in that connection it might be added that receipts were expected to be short.

The delivery of hogs to the 11 leading markets last week ran 203,000 head, as compared with 182,000 in the corresponding week in 1924. The first two days of this week witnessed the pouring of 252,700 porkers into the 11 leading markets, compared with the corresponding days in 1924. Obviously the deal is shaping up to be a trifle over 5,000 head for the first two days of the week.

Top butchers on the river markets are dinging with the $11.50 line and sows are worth well over $10.00. Moreover the river market prices are relatively too high as compared to the basis current at Chicago. Again receipts are the factor that will determine whether the uprightness can last.

Marked strength characterized the fat cattle market over the first half of the week. Supplies over the country were slightly less than the same days last week, which kept the market active at the advance. Wednesday shows the outlet for fat steers, yearlings, and butcher cows and heifers to be 15-20-25 cents higher, as compared to the close of last week. Increased number of stock has not tended to retard operations, as the annual seasonable change from a western to native cattle delivery takes place.

While in larger proportion the short grades included—no pipe kinds ran mostly to fail to good kinds that add from $8.50 to $9.75, with just a scattering of sales on up to $10.00 and over.

Along with men's short felt stetsons, receivers received more short fed butchers this week. They proved to be of fair to good merit and sold at an advance from $9.00 to $9.00. Butchers sold from $4.00 to $6.00, which spread covers from common to good quality.

Canners and cutters sold firm for the westerns in a $2.75 to $3.75 spread and the same proved true of bulls. Hologmas sold from $4.00 to $4.50 and heavy beef bulls from $4.65 to $5.25. Weasels touched the usual daily top of $15.00.

Desirable stocker and feeder cattle are becoming increasingly scarce and the price is mounting in sympathy. Gains of 25 cents were registered on all fair to good kinds the first half of the week. Ordinary kinds were only steady, while low grades and nondescript fatsoy lots proved dull and in many cases unsaleable.

Fancy fadsoy would still bring a fancy price, but the best offered here this week proved to be a five-cent spring of good 650 pounders at $7.75 to $4.00 to $4.50. Lighter grades sold from $6.50 to $7.25, with ordinary kinds from $5.50 up and plain kinds as low as $2.00, although only a portion of the common light range clearups cleared from $4 up.

Feeding cows and heifers sold steady. Best thin heifers were of a class to earn $5.85 going out of first hands. However, feathery choice quality kinds would easily beat $6.00. Pairs of good thin steers sold from $5.50 to $6.50. A strong deal can therefore be seen.

Monday brought a steady trade on lambs, but Tuesday witnessed mild additions to the cost. Midweek tops were still at $15.40 for best lambs, a cross that was also shared by top feeding lambs. Handwrought killing ewes earned $8.00 and yearling ewes $11.00, when sold for breeders. Supplies over the country ran slightly under those of last week, the decrease being a trifle over 5,000 head for the first two days of the week.

Thor Is Acquitted Of Murder Charge

Jury at Stanton Upholds Plea of Insanity as Defense for Killing Lars Jensen.

Stanton, Neb., Nov. 18.—The jury in the case of Peter Thor, charged with the murder of Lars Jensen on September 11, returned a verdict at 9:30 o'clock tonight finding the defendant not guilty on the grounds of insanity.

Mr. and Mrs. Thor were in the courtroom when the jury filed in and returned their verdict.

The trial lasted three days in Judge Clinton Chase's district court and has attracted the attention from the entire county where the principals are well known.

The defense had endeavored to show that Thor was emotionally insane when he killed Jensen, and the common law was frequently brought into the case, which had many sensational developments.

Twenty-two witnesses including Thor and his wife testified. According to Thor's testimony he found Jensen and his wife in a compromising situation when he returned unexpectedly August 19, and his story was substantiated by his wife.

According to further evidence, Thor met Jensen near Pilger, Neb., in the road, and asked him if he still thought he (Thor) should divorce his wife and deed all property to her, so she could marry Jensen. Thor said when Jensen affirmed this, the shooting occurred. Mrs. Thor, who was of the way to Denmark at the time of the murder, returned and has supported her husband throughout the trial.

Stanton, Neb., Nov. 14.—Direct examination of Peter Thor, slayer of Lars Jensen, was continued this morning when the district court reconvened. It is expected that the cross examination of the defendant will be finished this morning and the case will go to the jury late this afternoon.

Following the selection of the jurors yesterday morning examination of the state and defense witnesses, whom there are ten of the former and eleven of the latter, started.

Thor took the stand in his own defense during the afternoon. In direct examination he told a story of seeing his wife in a compromising position with Jensen on August 19, 1925. Thor stated that he suspected his wife of having improper relations with Jensen.

Thor's story was that on the night of August 19, he started to attend a Masonic meeting at Wisner and upon arriving in Pilger decided to return to his home to see what was taking place.

Looked Through Window. When he arrived at the home he saw Jensen and his wife. Thor said he was broken up over the matter and later talked things over with his wife.

The conversation between the two was relative to the children. Mrs. Thor claiming that she couldn't give up the four youngsters. Thor said that he told his wife he couldn't stay at the home.

On two different occasions prior to Sept. 11, he asked of the murder. Thor said he saw Jensen. During one conversation between Thor and Jensen, the former asked the murdered man if he was planning on going to Europe. Thor said Jensen's answer was "That's my business."

Saw He-Suspected Colleague. Thor had asked Jensen that question because he (Thor) suspected Jensen of planning to follow his wife to Denmark.

Thor was accused to the foreign country the day of the shooting.

It was brought out in the testimony of Thor and other witnesses that before the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Thor, Jensen and the woman were sweethearts and that six months before the wedding Mrs. Peterson was keeping company with the murdered man.

Evidence was introduced by the defense to show that Jensen had threatened to kill William Peterson, Mrs. Thor's brother-in-law, because he (Jensen) believed Peterson was responsible for Mrs. Thor's not marrying Jensen.

Mrs. Thor told her sister, Mrs. William Peterson, about illicit relations with Lars Jensen, according to the testimony introduced.

Mr. Thor is substantiating all of her husband's statements. Call it Emotional Insanity. Davis and Wenke, Thor's lawyers, are attempting to prove that the defendant was a victim of emotional insanity on the day of the shooting, his condition being caused by worry over the relations between his wife and Jensen.

Mrs. Chris Knudsen, wife of an employee of Thor, testified that on the morning of Sept. 11, Thor acted queerly and would not eat or drink anything when he was offered food and coffee.

William Peterson, Thor's brother-in-law, stated that the defendant acted eccentric that morning and often "boiled" and didn't seem to know what he was doing.

Eye Witness on Stand. Walter Tidrick, farmer living near Pilger, was the only eye-witness to the slaying. He testified that he was about his farmyard on the morning of Sept. 11 and that the shooting occurred between 11 and 11:30 o'clock.

Tidrick's story was that he was about his sixty-five rods away from the spot where Jensen was slain. Tidrick said that he saw one man in a wagon who later proved to be Jensen, and a man (Thor) in a car.

The witness said that he heard one shot, and then Jensen got out of the wagon and started to run, while Thor went around the wagon on the south side. Then the team ran away and was later caught by Tidrick.

Tidrick said that he heard only three shots, and after catching the team, went to the place where the shooting occurred, but Thor had driven away.

Tells of Finding Jensen. Tidrick stated that he found Jensen lying on his left side with his head on his left arm. According to the witness Ed. Wichman, a farmer, arrived shortly after the shooting, and a man whom he (Tidrick) thought to be a Norfolk insurance man, drove by in a car.

On cross-examination Tidrick was asked by Attorney Davis: "Do you know whether or not the man on the wagon got down before the first shot was fired?" "I do not know," was the witness' reply.

Witnesses for the state are: Walter Gabler, Winside undertaker; Walter Tidrick, only eye-witness; Dr. John D. Reed, Pilger, who examined Jensen's body; Dr. S. G. Allen, Stanton; Ed. Wichman, Pilger; farmer; Henry Sharp, Stanton marshal, to whom Thor gave himself up; John C. Mize, Stanton; Sheriff Ely Best of Stanton county; Chris Knudsen, hired man of Thor's; Otto Mickelson, another hired man.

Witnesses for the defense are: Mrs. William Peterson, sister of Mrs. Thor; William Peterson, Pilger farmer; Mrs. Chris Knudsen, Henry Sharp, Andrew Peterson, H. D. Miller, G. Pugh, Robert Pillar, Dr. L. Collins; the last four named are character witnesses. Mrs. Peter Thor and Peter Thor.

The state proved that Jensen met his death at the hands of Peter Thor on Sept. 11, by the number of witnesses who testified as to knowing Jensen and his body.

Dr. Reed swore that he examined the dead man's body, and that there were seven bullet holes in the same; three in the chest, two in the thigh, one in the back and one in a leg.

Mr. Gaebler, the undertaker, stated that he knew Jensen and that he prepared the body for burial.

Members of the jury are: Arthur Vogel, Otto Brummond, Henry Harsch, Ernest Wichman, John Swanson, Robert Pohlman, John Correll, Reinhold Freiberg, Paul Volz, Con J. Roberts, Herman Geppert and Walter Martz. All except Martz, who is a layman, are Stanton county farmers.

Card of Thanks. We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many kind friends who extended sympathy and aid and gave beautiful flowers at the time of the death of our beloved son and brother, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bruckman and Children.

As to Stout Physique

York Republican: One of our exchanges points out that Eugene Sandow, the strong man, died at 58. An English strong man, Breitbart, of Prussia, died the same age from blood poisoning. Frank Camp, author of the "daily noon," succumbed at an early age. These incidents are cited as proving the fact that health and longevity are not resident in iron muscles, steel nerves and highly developed physiques. The correct age is not the most useful. It is still true, as when the sage uttered it, that "the battle is not always to the strong." It takes a proper balance of physical, mental and spiritual parts to make a man—strong and who forgets to improve his mind, as his body develops, is making reason for his lack of true happiness and his early funeral.

Winner-In-State Husking Contest

Ashland, Neb., Nov. 13.—Roland Meyers, Fremont, is the corn husking champion of Nebraska by right of his victory over nine other championship contenders at the annual corn husking contest near here yesterday afternoon.

Meyers husked 1,788.7 pounds of corn in one hour and twenty minutes; Joe Sudik, Wahoo, won second and Virgil Archer, Oakland, last year's champion, was third. The contest was held at the Leo Yockum farm, three and one-half miles southwest of here. The corn was in ideal condition and averaged about fifty-five bushels per acre. The contest to be held in Illinois next week for the world's championship.

State's Corn Yield.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 13.—The average yield of the 1925 corn crop in Nebraska is 25.5 bushels per acre and the average yield of the potato crop is seventy-five bushels per acre, the federal and state department of agricultural statistics reported in a preliminary summary issued today. The yield of the corn crop is slightly above expectations, A. E. Anderson, head of the department, said, and its quality is also surpassing expectations. It is estimated that 4 percent of the 1924 corn crop is a good hand. The condition of winter wheat is very good, the moisture supply having been ample to date in most counties. The prevalence of the Hessian fly in the state delayed considerable wheat seeding, especially in eastern Nebraska. The preliminary estimate of yield of the corn crop surpasses last year's yield, which was 24.2 bushels. The five-year average is 27.1 bushels. The corn crop varied this year, ranging from failure to bumper yields. Western Nebraska yielded approximately the average, while the average was surpassed in southeastern Nebraska and a below average crop was reported from the northeastern part.

Football Attitude.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The American public which worships winners and calls the losers losers, is wrong in its attitude, believes Dr. Ernest H. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth university. He is here for the Dartmouth-Chicago game tomorrow. "I think the public's attitude, particularly toward the players, is decidedly unfair," he says. "So long as a team is winning it is body of heroes, touted to the skies. But let it lose a game or two, and a few little mistakes, and it is promptly branded as yellow, a gang of cowards and ignoramuses.

"And there you strike the fault of our American attitude towards sports—to the detriment of sports. We cannot give credit to the man who has fought a splendid, clean battle and lost—credit because he made such a fight."

"It is a bad thing for football and a bad thing for the players. I have seen men driven out of college over the matter of dropping a punt."

Why Red Crown is a WINTER GASOLINE

Winter weather puts your motor to the test and much depends on your gasoline and oil. That shifts the responsibility to us—our gasoline must be good and make good.

Ever since automobiles first came to Nebraska, Red Crown has met the test; and it is there to meet it, not only in the cities and towns where delivery is safe and easy, but far out in the villages and rural districts where the haul is long and hard.

No other oil company renders or attempts to render such broad and consistent service to Nebraska motorists, and we respectfully claim it as an added merit for Red Crown.

So get the good Red Crown habit and stick to it. Always when you need Gasoline turn in at the Red Crown sign. You will receive obliging service and full measure of absolutely uniform and dependable gasoline—balanced to give a quick start to your motor and utmost mileage to your car.

Sir Dudley Glenister believed to be the murderer of James Glenister, in order to obtain his title and estate, is held unrepentant in a fire where he is sentenced to burn to death.

Norman Slater, sweetheart of Kathleen Glenister, while—

James Wragge, Scotland Yard detective, has fastened the crime upon Stephen Colne, former cabinet minister.

Now Go On With The Story

"My friend," he panted, "I want you all to bear witness if I die that I died in the hope of saving life."

Then, before anyone could say him, he darted into the fiery chasm that was raging in the mill.

Half a minute later, Inspector Wragge arrived hot on the trail of the fugitive, to find himself the center of much incoherence. Kathleen, Norman, and Alf knew him for what he was and from their eagerly proffered information he managed to gather the main threads into his capable hands.

The entire case, however, he had just arrested for the murder of George Glenister preferred death by fire to death by a hempen rope.

Wragge turned to the group around him on the bank of the mill race. Fabian Wommersley and his crowd were starting like a pack of fools in the background, except the captain man, who as the most intelligent of the lot, had gone for the doctor. John Grimes was stooping over the intricate form of Sir Dudley. Kathleen and Alf were standing at the doctor's elbow, gazing into the inferno into which Mr. Colne had disappeared.

"Hi, you, Grimes," said the inspector shortly. "I want a magistrate to take some of the doctor's depositions. Where is the nearest?"

The keeper replied that the doctor, who had already been sent for, was a magistrate. "There was no other who could be more quickly got at."

"Good," said Wragge, and he walked over and took a closer view of the unconscious baronet. His knowledge of first aid told him that Sir Dudley had been severely manhandled as well as badly burned. Kathleen had allowed and tapped the inspector on the shoulder.

"Don't lose sight of him," she pleaded. "He has tried to murder Sir Dudley Slater and myself, which is clear proof that he killed my brother. You see that I was right all along, don't you?"

"I gleam of human sympathy, tinged with unvoiced humor, flashed in Wragge's cold eyes.

"That will be all right, miss," he said soothingly. "The poor beggar can't run away. It will be time enough to sort out the sheep from the goats in this business when we have all calmed down a bit. We shall have to compare notes, though I am sure that yours and the captain's have been the best—trying to come out of all."

Norman objected to the tone of the remarks the doctor took Wragge by the arm and together they left the cottage.

"SIT DOWN, INSPECTOR. AND HAVE SOME PUFFS," SHE SAID GAILY.

whenever the sounder, Wragge? To be candid, I have mistrusted your handling of this case from the first. You have never really treated him as George Glenister's murderer."

"You want a little, sir," Wragge strove against the rising storm. "Miss Glenister's very natural desire for justice will be fully met, I pledge my word. Have a little forbearance. You must see how I am pressed."

Whether the young people saw it or not is a moot point never to be decided. For at that moment the arrival of Hinkley, accompanied by village constable and half a dozen farm laborers, caused a diversion. The old butler's joy at finding his beloved former mistress safe and sound was unbounded and his concern at Sir Dudley's plight, as involving the honor of the family, was no less sincere. His chief efforts had hardly been exchanged when the advent of the doctor relieved Wragge of his principal anxiety. Sir Dudley having been placed on a hurdle and dispatched to the Grange in charge of Hinkley, the detective took the doctor aside.

"Here is another patient for you in the keeper's cottage, sir, but you are also needed in your magisterial capacity to take her depositions if you think it necessary," said Wragge, introducing himself.

"What's the beam—the skeleton finger case?" asked the general practitioner.

Wragge nodded and turned to ascertain the intentions of the baronet's recent victims. Kathleen, hairless and disheveled, was actual to the occasion.

"Hinkley will give us beds at the Grange," she replied. "And Captain Slater's room, to which we owe our lives, will come, too. I want you, Inspector Wragge, that you will not get rid of me till my cousin is dead or in custody—hours or that of some more willing officer."

Wragge saluted with profound respect.

"I shall come up to the Grange with the doctor the moment we have finished here, miss," he said. "We have to see an accident case at the keeper's house, but we shall not be long."

Mr. Fabian Wommersley had marauded this company's way already, leading them across the dam to pick up their apparatus and make their way back to the cars. The director of the Amphibious in after his fond and sad delight in boring boat companions at his favorite haunts with the story of what he had missed by not keeping the cinema man at work after "little Mandie's" smash-up on the mill wheel.

Leaving the ill-omened mill to burn to the ground, the doctor, Slater and Grimes walked across the clearing to the cottage. They were met on the threshold by the grimacing, shivering like a frightened ape.

"We were all wrong, John," she mouthed. "It wasn't George as ruined her, nor Sir Dudley as killed George. She told me all about it."

They brushed the evil old woman aside and entered the room where the rest of the pictures, as she was fond of calling herself, still reclined upon the horsehair couch. But she had recovered from her first collapse. "Cheer-up, dad?" she cried on recognizing her father. "Cheer-up, Doctor! You remember me as a kiddo, don't you doctor? You never thought you were vacinating my cinema star when you pricked my poor little arm, did you?"

The doctor made his examination and rose from it smiling. "No need for any depositions here," he said. "There are no bones broken. Nothing but a few bruises on the severe marks which will go off in a day or two with proper attention."

After giving instructions to the parents the doctor took Wragge by the arm and together they left the cottage.

"Poor Selly Grimes," said Doctor Wheatley as they struck out for the Grange. "She seems to have got herself mixed up in a queer coil which I do not profess to understand."

"Were stung against that sinning, perhaps," Wragge half admitted. "She was here tonight with that film gang by choice and she had nothing to do with Sir Dudley Glenister's attempt to kill his cousin and her lover by setting fire to the mill."

Doctor Wheatley whistled. "I suppose that means," he said "that Glenister murdered Miss Kathleen's brother—that the rumors about him were true? I never liked the fellow, in common with most of his neighbors."

"The case is a bit more complex than that. It wasn't the present baronet who killed George Glenister, and I very much doubt if the name of George Glenister's murderer will ever be given to the world. I promise you, however, that you shall know it without any harm to me. I expect Wragge added with a chuckle, "that I shall have to enlighten Miss Kathleen Glenister before she goes to bed if I do not have my ears boxed, and there is no reason why I should not be present. You medical gentlemen can always be trusted to keep a secret."

On reaching the Grange they were received by Hinkley with the news that Sir Dudley had been carried up to his bedroom and that he had regained consciousness. The doctor at once went up to him, and Wragge was shown into the dining room where Kathleen and Norman were partaking of a belated meal. Alf Grinstead was also sent at the
