Reason and Instinct.

Hartington Herald: We have very exalted opinions in regard to the alleged superiority of reason over instinct, but one is almost led to believe at times that instinct is superior. It is true that instinct is not particularly serene or progressive, but it has reached the heights, sounded the depths nor brought forth marvelous inventions; but, on the other hand, instinct is safe and has never led its followers into danger or disaster. Animals which are guided by instinct never do any very brilliant things, but, on the other hand, they never do any very foolish things, while the animals, however, who are endowed with a so-called God-given reason, may pull off some wonderful stunts but also make a lot of foolish mistakes. It is a reason-endowed man who gets drunk, beats his wife, deserts his children, oppresses his fellow men, lands in jail, leads a generally hectic life and dies worrying about his future state, while the instinct-driven animal plods along in the safe and well worn paths of its ancestors, content if it has enough to eat and a warm place to sleep and, at the end of its unsparring but none the less useful life, lies down to sleep untroubled by any apprehensions concerning the future. Of course, no reason-endowed man would want to exchange places with the so-called lower animals which possess only instinct; but it must be admitted in all candor that the latter have considerable in their favor. They may not go as high nor achieve as much, but on the other hand, they do not fall as low nor suffer such disappointments, degradation and disaster. Perhaps, if we could combine the two, uniting the higher reaches and wider possibilities of the rational life with the sure, steady, plodding gait of instinct, we might achieve a more perfect type than either, preserving all the ideals and aspirations of which reason is capable and eliminating many of the follies and pitfalls which have in the past marred its upward march.

on those two was torn and cut and the bones were crushed. Miss Mierhenry is still in the hospital. Before the week is over it can be ascertained whether or not she will lose the fingers.

Concentration.

Hartington Herald: Psychological speaking, there is nothing inimicable to achievement than excitement for the simple reason that an agitated mind can never function properly, and the psychological fact is attested again and again in daily experience. Concentration is what produces results and, as soon as a wave of excitement scatters the nerve forces, production or achievement vanes. "So fight it, not as one that beateeth the air," said the Apostle Paul and because Paul had concentration in a large degree, he was able to accomplish large things. The American people admire Coolidge because of his quiet, effective way of doing things and Coolidge has concentration. So has everyone else who gets results and perhaps there is no one mental trait which needs to be cultivated more in this hectic, talkative, jazz-crazy age. Plan carefully, concentrate closely and results are bound to follow.

Hoskins Girl Injured.

Norfolk News, Dec. 17.—Dalah Mierhenry, 17-year-old girl who lives on a farm near Hoskins, suffered severe laceration of three fingers on her right hand Tuesday afternoon in a run accident in operation on her father's place.

The girl was assisting in feeding the corn to the machine when her hand was caught. She was brought to a Norfolk hospital for examination. The attending physician stated that, although no amputation of the fingers has been made, it is doubtful that the forefinger and middle finger can be saved. Flesh

CHRISTMAS.

The greatest holiday of the year—the one that means most to Christians—is the day which we meet with our row with its exchange of gifts and greetings, and with its generous charities. The spirit of the occasion emphasizes the best in human nature, whose birth is commemorated. Good will and good cheer are inspired by the example that has come down through the centuries.

Christmas should make people generous in feeling as well in material presents. It should lead them to be kind and helpful. One cannot realize highest enjoyment by snug aloofness over large material possessions. We must be interested in spreading happiness among others.

Christmas is an opportune time to clear up misunderstandings. It is a good time to resolve to do unto others as we would have them do unto us. It is a good time to resolve to stand firm and speak the truth, always avoiding unnecessary injury to those with whom we differ.

Every recurring Christmas season should stimulate helpful fellowship and advance the cause of real Christianity.

A WESTERN TOWN.

A gentleman from Klamath Falls, Oregon, was here this week, and he told us the things we wanted to know about the development of this town since we left it twenty years ago. He informed us that Klamath Falls now has a population of 1,000. The town was founded in 1853, and was one of the early settlements of the west. It is now a busy and thriving town.

But live eastern blood crowded into the town, organized and advertised, and the result has been a multiplicity of modern improvements and a modern city of 10,000, making sharp contrast with the crudely built huts that housed the early events in its history.

GREATER WAYNE CLUB.

In sponsoring the Christmas festival, the Greater Wayne club deserves much credit. It was generally assisting many of the churches and schools and other worthy organizations. In the plans, doubtless some errors in judgment were made. It took but little effort. Before another year rolls around heads should set to work to figure out new attractions appropriate to Christmas, and profit by the experience of the past, results should be more gratifying.

point that is favorably situated and that is surrounded by substantial resources.

Cold and snow which make operation of automobiles impractical, effect an important saving in two respects—over gasoline and over tire wear.

Sixty-three car loads of winter-hats were packed in crates and shipped to southern California where they will be converted into choice vairs to satisfy hunger that is not caused by the cold.

Society leaders in London have a new fall—having dolls and bringing them around when they make fashionable calls or attend afternoon parties.

Merchants are not the only ones who profit by the suggestions offered in talks by a business expert in Wayne last week. Lawyers, doctors, preachers, bankers, editors, and others are being strengthened by the same.

The fact that some men are anxious for work, but cannot get it, does not seem to deter some others who have profitable employment.

John J. Mitchell, rich Chicago banker, says wealth has its ills in the world.

Rev. E. J. Flanagan, head of Father Flanagan's boys, has issued complaint that boys are often adopted to perform certain work, and are turned back to institutions for the homeless when the work is finished.

According to careful estimate, more people thronged the business district of Wayne last Saturday afternoon than on any previous occasion.

The estimate that eighty cents of every dollar spent by the national government is due to war strengthens the demand for settlement of disputes in a rational and less costly manner.

Children magnify the good points in their parents. The normal child is strong for father and mother. It would therefore seem important for parents to maintain a reputation for integrity that is not to be shaken.

Religion.

Dr. A. L. Bixby: Don't get the notion that religion is a confession of faith in denominational creeds, or that it consists in the observance of certain stipulated formalisms and churchly conventions.

Violating Blue Law Charged At Pender

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 21.—The Nebraska supreme court today refused to grant immediate hearing in a habeas corpus suit brought by William Murray, Pender clothing merchant, who is in jail charged with violating the Pender "blue laws" by keeping his store open on Sunday.
 R. G. Fuhman, attorney for Murray, was told that he could file the suit as an original proceeding to await its turn on a list of hundreds of other cases ahead.
 The court advised the lawyer to seek recourse in the district court of Thurston county and if relief were not obtained there the case could be brought on in the usual way.
 Chairman, presenting his argument at a special sitting of the court said he was not assailing any of the so-called "blue laws" of Nebraska, but questioning the validity of the Pender ordinance under which the prosecution was brought against his client.

Fodder Is Valuable

Harrington, Neb., Dec. 19.—According to the experience of farmers in Cedar county, corn cut up and put in a silo is more valuable, especially when the corn crop is short, than when it is shocked in the field for dry fodder. This is in agreement with the result of tests made by the state agricultural farms and experiment stations which show that the farmers lose 40 percent of the value of his corn crop for feeding purposes, if he does not put it in a silo.
 At a number of different farms in Cedar county recently, dry corn fodder in the shock sold for $11 an acre. Later at a sale on the Charles Lefelman farm, corn ensilage sold for $6 a ton. The hill land from which Mr. Lefelman cut the corn made four tons of ensilage from an acre, which would be a yield of $32 an acre as compared with $11 and acre when left in the shock. The silo method then yields almost twice as much profit or $21 an acre more.

Smithsonian Experts Engaged in Squabble About the Weather

THIS complaint, that no one ever is doing anything about the weather is being answered today.
 Two learned and august agencies under the government right now are engaged—in a perfectly nice and dignified way—in an old-fashioned squabble about the weather.
 The Smithsonian Institute says that by observing variations in solar radiation, which means the amount of heat traveling earthward from the sun, it is possible to predict the weather far in advance. The Weather Bureau, in origin a child of the Smithsonian, doubts if there is any variation whatever in the sun's intensity. Furthermore, it declares there is no known method of predicting the weather accurately more than 36 hours ahead.
Forecasting Sure
 Charles F. Marvin, chief of the weather bureau, cites the established record of his system, based upon numerous reports from stations all over the country. When winds are high and low pressure are defined by such reports, forecasting can be rather sure because storms are known to travel definite routes. The bureau is more than 99 percent accurate in time, and in temperature and more than 80 percent as to sunshiny or storm.
 Dr. C. Abbot, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institute, enthusiastically favors the "solar radiation theory." The institute already has solar radiation observatories on Table Mountain in the southern California desert and another on Mount Montezuma in Ohio. Dr. Abbot left early in November to select a site for a third. It will be either in Morocco, Belutschistan or southwest Africa.
 The Argentine weather bureau already uses the variations in solar radiation as the basis for its forecasts, obtaining its data from the Chile station.
Correct Method
 Advocates of long distance forecasting agree that the weather bureau has the correct method of predicting tomorrow's weather, but they claim it doesn't go far enough. They assert that the sun is one of the well-known class of variable stars, brighter, or dimmer, than others. As much as 8 percent more heat may come from the sun at maximum strength than at minimum. These powerful differences, they say, so affect the atmosphere

The above photograph shows L. B. Adrich, Smithsonian Institute, with a pyrheliometer, an instrument used in measuring the intensity of the sun's rays. Inset is Dr. C. G. Abbot, assistant secretary of the Institute.

"The Coast of Folly" At Crystal Theatre

Gloria Swanson lived twenty years during a time when she had the picture, to be shown at the Crystal theatre Friday and Saturday.
It sounds unreasonable to state it just that way, but here is how she did it!

The story, "The Coast of Folly," starts with the desertion of her husband, Nadine's father, and she is first portrayed as Nadine Galloway. Twenty years later, Nadine's daughter, Joyce, is shown as the heroine in the picture. She is the pet of the younger set at Palm Beach. Miss Swanson is Joyce.

And then Nadine comes back into the story as the Countess de Tauron, the wife of a French nobleman, whom she wed some years after deserting her first husband. And, of course, Miss Swanson with the aid of a make-up box and gorgeous clothes, is the Countess.

In one respect, Miss Swanson plays a triple role in the story. If Nadine and the Countess are classed as one characterization, however, and Joyce as another, it might be termed a dual role.
Allan Dwan directed the production from an adaptation of Coingsby Dawson's novel by Forrest Ham-

End the Worry of Christmas Shopping

Nothing you could discover in a month of Christmas shopping would be quite as acceptable to the whole family as a Better Buick.
If you wait until spring to buy it, you will lose the satisfaction of having it during the holidays. This is the time when it will bring the most pleasure to those you love—and to you.
Pick out their car today. Make it possible to have their Better Buick at the curb on Christmas morning, waiting to wish them a Merrier Christmas, and the happiest of New Years.

Forty years as a National Bank! That is the life of the First National Bank of Wayne. Its history is that of a safe and progressive banking institution. Its fever of strength has been reared on a foundation of sound business judgment. Its policy of mutual helpfulness is firmly rooted in popular confidence. After forty years of healthy growth, it reviews the past with satisfaction and looks to the future with assurance.

As we approach another year, we are ready to take a new hold, and feel confident that 1926 will not prove disappointing. Earnest cooperation will be given to realization of the universal wish for improved and stable times.

Suggesting a happy Christmas thought, what would be more gratifying to your particular loved one—whether it be father, mother, brother or sister—than to be presented with a savings bank book showing the start to independence? You could rest assured that it would be accepted as a token of your utmost esteem.

"No, No, Nanette."
Everybody who follows the events of the theatrical world has heard of "No, No, Nanette" which comes to the Westport Theatre, Sioux City, for two nights, Monday and Tuesday, December 28 and 29, with Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield, those clever musical-comedy entertainers. Drawing the multitudes everywhere it has been seen and still performs in this neighborhood in New York, London and Melbourne, Australia. There has been much trumpeting about the coming of H. H. France's sensational musical comedy, "The Merry Widow," which is being played liberally around the world by companies in New York, London, Paris, Sydney, Australia, and San Francisco.
The book is by Otto Harbach and Frank Mandel, the lyrics are by Otto Harbach and Irving Caesar, and the music by Vincent Youmans. "No, No, Nanette" is more than a musical comedy, or perhaps it is better to say it is the musical comedy, plus. The music of the piece has long captured the country. The "I Want to Be Happy" song is based on the desires of the rich Jimmy Smith to make his struggling young ladies happy with champagne, diamonds, when his over-fraught wife indulges in savings accounts. The complications which occur provide most of the hilarities.
A fine company all the way through will present "No, No, Nanette." Best casted and Cleo Mayfield the others are Mildred Brown, Carrie Glenn, Cyril Ring, Melba Louise Orr, Frank Gallagher, Mary H. Adams, Cathina Stewart and Frances Richards.
As a tremendous demand for seats is assured, prospective patrons are urged to make application as soon as possible to avoid disappointment. Arrangements have been made for a special mail order service and in making application for tickets by mail, patrons should enclose check or money order including tax and self addressed and stamped envelope for safe return of tickets.
The curtain will rise at 8:15 promptly. d241ad

Cattle in Sand Hills.
Lincoln Journal: Additional cattle can be wintered in the sand hills. Outlook of cattlemen brighter and confidence of moderate optimism prevails. Condition of ranges and pastures improved over last month, according to information received by the state and federal division of agricultural statistics from range reporters. Cattle in good health and condition. Hay and feed sufficient.
Cattlemen have been benefited by the better prices of range cattle the past season and are in a better position to show independence than at any time in the past five years. Many, however, are still in financial difficulties. Some retooling is reported and there is a demand for the stuff.
The hay feed and range supply is sufficient generally with a surplus in some counties. A slight shortage is reported in a few localities. The surplus in some counties may be accounted for by the fact that cattle were sold more during the past season because of need of money. Considerable hay was left over from last year, which is a benefit at present as the past season's production was low.
The cattle are going into the winter in good shape and are in good health and condition. Mange has broken out in some herds, but has been brought under control by dipping. Losses of cattle thus far have been light.
The condition of cattle is reported as 95 per cent as compared to 92 per cent last year and the condition of range and pastures is 69 per cent compared to 88 per cent a year ago. With severe weather in October it might be expected that the condition of cattle and ranges would be lower than a year ago when mild weather prevailed till December 1. The reporters however are almost unanimous in opinion, and it is evident that conditions in general among cattlemen are more satisfactory than a year ago.

GET AT THE CAUSE!
Many Wayne Folks Are Showing How to Avoid Needless Suffering
There's nothing more annoying than the weakness or inability to properly control the kidney secretions. Night and day alike, the sufferer is tormented and what with the burning and scalding, the abundant backache, headache and dizziness, life is indeed a burden. Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys—have brought peace and comfort to many Wayne people. Profit by this Wayne resident's experience: H. G. Hostetter, painter, 111 Lincoln St., says: "The funes of the turpentine put my kidneys out of fix and they acted too freely. I had to get up during the night to pass the secretions which scalded and this interfered with my rest. Mornings found me tired and out of sorts. There was a dull ache in the small of my back and also had sharp pains through my kidneys. It was no easy matter to keep going. After using Doan's Pills, I was in fine shape again." d241a
