Monday and Tuesday were beautiful days overhead. Underfoot it was not so fine. Water abundant and mud was deep.

Immense flocks of ducks and geese passed over this week, going north to the lake of the Ojibwas and Kinnekinnicks.

The mail from Sioux City did not get here on Saturday, owing to the condition of the river and the demoralized railroad bridge, which forbade crossing at Sioux City on that day.

Northeast Nebraska's Oldest Odd Fellow

H. C. Fields mentioned in the following which appeared in Saturday's Sioux City Journal, is the father of Mrs. A. V. Teed of Wayne.

Mr. H. C. Fields, now 81 years of age, H. C. Fields, of Ponca, is the oldest Odd Fellow in northeastern Nebraska, having been a member of the I. O. O. F. since 1868, when he received his first initiatory degrees in Iowa county, Ia. The year following, Mr. Fields moved to Nebraska where he homesteaded 40 and a half miles west of Newcastle.

The mode of travel in those days was largely by team. Mr. Fields says that he drove his team from Iowa county to Sioux City, where he crossed on the ferry. When he broke the prairie land on his place he used from two to four yoke of oxen.

As a pioneer, Mr. Fields had vivid experience during the grasshopper scourge. The insects flew out of the north like a great cloud, and when they lit, they rained all growing crops. They remained four days and flew south with the wind. They ruined his wheat crop just when he was ready to harvest it. Although it was the harvest by the thousands they would be crushed, forming a slippery mass that made the machinery useless.

Mr. Fields also can tell of the hardships of the severe winter of 1880-81. In 1886 he moved to Ponca, where he engaged in the livery business for more than 18 years. He will be 82 in July but he drives his own car anywhere he wants to go. Nevertheless, he says that he likes horses better than cars and in the summer he goes horseback riding.

Mr. Fields still in hale and hearty and his wife, who has four children, have resided in or near Ponca for the past 40 years.

Accepting a Pittance.

Albion News.—The county commissioners of Wayne county, voted this year to publish the board proceedings, treasurer's statements and other legal notices in four papers of the county, paying each paper one fourth the legal rate. The Wayne Herald which is no longer subservient to any interest, other than of its publisher and the public, has declined to accept the new rate. The Herald points out that legal rate is none too high as it is and that to ask the papers to accept one-fourth that rate is—well, just a little bit too much. In our opinion there is only one thing for a board of county commissioners to do, and that is the fair thing with all concerned. It is all well and good that they should endeavor to protect the tax payers of the county but it isn't right that they should do it at the expense of the papers, nor of anyone else. Again, the board is not more to blame than the papers that will accept such a rate. The newspaper that grabs at every pittance offered cheats not only itself but its clientele as well.

WAYNE

Town of Carroll Forty Years Old

Site Is Platted in 1886 When Railroad Builds Branch from Wayne to Randolph.

The railroad from Wayne to Randolph was completed in 1886 and it was in the fall of this year that the town of Carroll was platted. The site of the town, which is now about a quarter section, was then laid out in lots. The area covered then though was just half of the amount now used and included the blocks near the railroad. The site was plain then with no trees or houses. The railroad company located and named the town.

Gus Wendt who went there for the railroad company in November, 1886, and who named his farm there from Emerson in March, 1887, was the first resident of Carroll. He built his residence on the first farm and was foreman for the company. Farms near Carroll were some of them settled. J. R. Manning was the first resident of Carroll. He built his residence on the first farm and was foreman for the company. Farms near Carroll were some of them settled. J. R. Manning was the first resident of Carroll. He built his residence on the first farm and was foreman for the company.

Frank Berry built a small store in April, 1887, in Carroll on the corner of one block south of the station, the site formerly occupied by the Citizens State bank. For a time he had the stock of goods in the store alone and the family lived in rooms in the same building. Until the store started the early settlers had to drive to Wayne for their supplies. Old Woods and Henry Wolf later bought an interest in the Berry store and the three men then had charge of it. It was then that Mr. Berry built his house and from that time on the settlers came more rapidly and the town grew. A store was soon built near the corner of the railroad and located and Charles Anderson started a drug store.

The school building which is now numbered one and one-half miles east of Carroll, was built on the corner at the west edge of Carroll. When the railroad went through this had to be moved and it was then taken to its present site. J. J. Gildersleeve taught in the school in 1886 and '87. The first school in Carroll was a one-room frame building on the corner now occupied by the Mrs. C. E. Jones residence. Miss Charlotte White taught the first term which was in 1887 and '88. She cared for the children Jan. 12, 1888, when the severe blizzard swept the country. Other rooms were added to the school building as the need arose.

When the railroad was first built one mixed train ran each day from Wayne to Randolph, going down the branch to Wayne in the morning and back at night. John Coyle who was living in Wayne, was first station agent in Carroll. He went to Carroll each evening to take care of the work of the railroad and returned to Wayne in the morning train. The Carroll cemetery was laid out on the present location when the infant child of Frank Berry died. The second boy buried in the plot was a child of Mr. Taylor. In 1888 and '89 a severe epidemic of whooping cough visited Carroll and a number of deaths occurred during this time. The first church in Carroll was the Baptist. This was a frame structure on the site of the present church. Rev. Mr. Schwartz was pastor. The Methodists held services in the school building. Rev. Mr. High being the resident pastor. Soon after the railroad was built the Peavey elevator company built

New York City As Seen By Nebraskans

W. O. Jones, editor of the Lincoln Journal, sizes up New York City which he recently visited, in the following interesting contribution to his newspaper: At Home, January 28.—When the average westerner comes back from the big towns he usually wants to raise a hymn of praise over his deliverance. I always want to preach on the wastefulness of the large cities, the lack of coherence in their social machinery and the poisons they are pouring into the veins of the nation. The best thing I saw in New York was the evidence presented on the streets that the city must soon choke unless something is done very soon about the heavy growth of fat from impeding further on its vital organs. The greatest blessing that could ever visit the United States would be the introduction of a general system of reducing the size and weight of all large cities.

One of these days business will find that it can't operate profitably in cities where rents and expenses are the highest in the world and where people are so thick on the streets that they can't move any faster than molasses in January. The thing is fast reaching the stalling point. You open a faucet in a New York hotel and instantly a flood of hot or cold water gushes forth. You take a telephone receiver off the hook and the response of the "hook" with a spurt comes like a flash. They spend millions and hundreds of millions to speed up all kinds of service, but when it comes to moving people and goods about the pavement the whole thing goes down.

You don't count the stories in a big town as you do rubbering around now. Can't see the top on a foggy and dirty day. Besides if you stay to count a taxi will sneak around the corner and mow you down. All along the coast from Boston to Washington the winter weather is sloppy, variable and generally treacherous. A Nebraskan can't learn to like it in less than a century.

You can judge of the relative importance of New York by the attention visitors pay to it after they reach home. Most of their conversation harks back to the metropolis. There is no doubt that its growth is fostering by this feeling that it is the biggest city there is and that it is fast becoming the center of the world. Go properly introduced to the city that changes of almost any important institution in New York and he will reveal an almost childish pride in it showing you over the place. They all have an enormous pride in their bigness, the perfection and the cost of their buildings and this pride, this feeling that they are at the very center of things keeps them in the city in spite of crowding, cruelty and cost. One pays a big price for being a citizen of this no mean city.

In all the large cities they have costly store rooms and signs and displays advertising Florida real estate. The "automat" has become a feature of the eating scene in the eastern cities, especially in New York. Instead of going to the cafeteria as they have in the west the popular eaters are adopting the "automat." Most of them have cafeteria style. Across the top or three of the walls are the small glass enclosed receptacles containing the food. These are opened by inserting the designated number of nickels in the slot. All foods except hot meats, soups and vegetables are sold in this way. The cold and hot drinks also. Regular prices in the best restaurants are higher by far than the western scale. The one-arm cafeteria and moderate priced restaurants are about on the western scale. The automat seems to be growing in popularity because of moderate prices and convenience.

In order to make the street congestion unanimous they are bringing the buses from the country into the down town districts of all the cities. Even in New York you see vehicles as big as a cottage lunge thru the mess of traffic with signs showing that they come from the country or Paterson or some other town within a range of fifty or a hundred miles.

Hear, then a feeble and futile conclusion on the distant future of the big city. It ought to decentralize, and probably will. Unless the New York overhead is lowered and something done to clear the streets, trade is bound to go where it can move more freely. As an exhibition Manhattan has them all beaten to a whisper. As a market it is all embracing, but as the country settles down to brass tacks something must be done for business and industry, or they will flee to places where the landlords do not take so large a bite out of every apple that passes over their counters.

W. O. J.
W. H. Nedy went to Valentine Friday on business.

The Printed Word—The printed word is a powerful thing. The newspaper writer quickly discovers that fact. He knows that the words of the preacher and teacher, powerful though they may be, are written on the sands of human memory, and pass away. But the printed word is written on a white page in black letters and abides through generations. How important then it is that those commissioned to write shall write carefully and soberly and say nothing that shall needlessly harm or wound. If editors of newspapers could be sure they wrote nothing fair or in prejudice how much happier would be their retrospect in the days to come when the past looms the largest.

Do Motorists Appreciate extra value?

Yes, and here is the proof: Men and women everywhere in the Middle West have been making the Skelly Triple Trial. And they have been following up the test by becoming regular users of Skelly Gasoline.

Now thousands of motorists demand fullest possible value for every gasoline cent. Skelly Gasoline, long known to oil men as the Big Boy in gasoline, is winning, gaining, convincing more motorists every day.

1. Fill up the tank the first time with Skelly Gasoline. Quality you can judge fully yet, but don't judge on Skelly with the gasoline you were using.
2. When the tank is low, fill it up again. Still don't judge on quality.
3. Fill up for the third time. You have practically no difference. Skelly enables you to drive with all its safety power, all its economy, and all its response. Now compare.

Three times in a row fill up with Skelly Gasoline. Then stop on the throttle!

Will Present Play

"The Empty House," a three-act comedy, will be presented Thursday, Feb. 11, by members of the junior class and four other students of the Winside high school in the auditorium.

The plot of the play is developed around the sight of unaccounted lights in an empty house, the story of a mysterious disappearance, the suggestion of a younger sister to weave a romance about every day characters. All these give Tom Ferguson, a would-be playwright, the nucleus of a plot. The young playwright is about to outline his story to his family when things begin to Tuesday and happen fast. They are swiftly drawn into a net of exciting complication.

The characters are as follows: Nora, who first notices the lights, Hyacinth Halpin; Larry Ferguson, typical young American, Dwight Pinion; Fredericka Ferguson, with an identity, Violet, Mrs. Barbara Ferguson, to whom it happened, Lucille Brunton Ferguson, a would-be playwright, Walter Gerker; Retta Reeves, the mysterious visitor, Mrs. E. J. Tenhaugh; Ralph Overton, a young journalist; Ralph Hilder; Peggy Palmer, of wifely ways, Natalie Erckel; Arthur, the boy who always appeared, Ralph Moss; Florine, with no curiosity whatever, LaVerne Krause; Ned, a chauffeur, George Miller; Edith Allice, who always succeeded, Annabel Hillier; Constance, who lived with families, Elsie Eckert; Judge Lennox, the family lawyer; Kenneth Ramsay.

The play is being sponsored by Miss Edith Huss. John Fleer is assisting in the stage decorations. Special music is being planned.

California Letter

The following is part of a letter received from Henry Brune, formerly of Winside, now of Beach, California, written to Henry Wacker: "Well, Henry, this is a great country, always nice weather. Haven't had nearly this much sun and heat here. It doesn't seem like winter to me; haven't worn my overcoat this year. It will possibly stay in the winter for a year. Gardens and flowers are just wonderful, even right now. Building here never stops. They build all the time, winter and summer. The oil field work is all O. K. if you can get on the inside, but there are thousands of men for those jobs. Jack Liveringhouse and I built two motor houses for Associated Oil Co. The houses were 14 by 28, 8 feet high, gable roof and cupola. We built one in 12 hours, and we did it. I am laid up right now. I started to work in a rig building the week and I worked a couple of days and broke or cracked a bone in my arm, so I will have to lay off for two or three weeks. Mr. Brune tells also in this letter of the large trucks and the trucking business done here. Each truck has a trailer that holds almost as much as the truck, but they are so wonderful that a load is easy to take almost any distance.

Will Explode Cave

Bloomfield, Neb., Feb. 1.—Existence of a large cave in northwestern Knox county, not far from Verdell, is causing considerable talk and excitement over the county and several plans are on foot to make exploration of the cavern. It is said that a number of people have made short trips into the cave, one man having perceived a distance of some thirty or forty rods and reports that weird and wonderful sights are to be seen. These include stalactites, stalagmites and cone-shaped formations formed by the dripping of carbonate of lime from the roof of the cave.

There is an old story or legend to the effect that the cave was the rendezvous of a large band of horse and cattle thieves who made raids on distant farms and ranches and when pursued hid in the Missouri bluffs and took refuge in this cavern, riding their horses into it and then being safe from attack. The mouth of the cave is now partially closed by the sliding of rocks and earth and by a dense growth of underbrush.

Miss A. Lewis left Sunday afternoon for Chicago to spend a few days transacting business.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Craven went to Omaha Tuesday to attend the state hardware convention.

The One who forgot

By RUBY M. AYRES

Begin Here Today.

Peter Lyster, veteran of many battles in the World War, is saved from death when a shell bursts in the British front lines. He recovers quickly from his injuries, but the shock has inspired in them his mind. He has lost his memory. Peter has forgotten his engagement to Nan Marraby, in London, just before the departure for France. Nan is heartbroken because Peter failed to remember even when brought face to face with the girl who has been scolding his ring over her heart, even since the day of their last tryst. Nan has been living with Jean Endicott, in a small London apartment. But since Jean's husband is returning on leave, and a wire from home has informed Nan that her stepmother has died suddenly, Nan has decided to go back and care for her three young step-brothers. Through Peter's step-mother has become acquainted with Lieut. John Armet, captain is arranging to take Peter to the home of his sister, situated just a few miles from Nan's home town. Nan is now about a small, homeward-bound.

Now Go On With the Story.

The train only stopped once on the journey—day into Hertfordshire. Nan went to the window then and looked out. She had said that she hated the country, but it was not really true—nobody could hate the country, especially in the spring. The guard blew his whistle—the train had begun to move slowly away from the door of Nan's carriage—was flung open and a man precipitated himself in.

He tumbled inelegantly on to the seat and looked across at Nan with smiling eyes.

"I'm sorry—I've nearly missed it. He stopped, and a little frown crossed his brows. "It was your fault, but surely you know Miss Marraby?" The blood flew to Nan's face.

"I am, but—"

"My name is Sefton," he said.

"Mr. Lyster and I are no longer engaged," said Nan.

"You remember me—I met you with Peter Lyster the last night he was in England."

A wave of crimson rushed over Nan's face; with distressed eyes she stared at the man.

"Of course—I remember you," she said, incoherently. "I—I—remember you perfectly." She gave him her hand, her mind seemed to be working at lightning speed. Had he seen Peter since his return from France? If so, had he heard anything? "I've had how one meets people again," she hardly knew what she was saying. "I suppose you don't live down this way—my home was Leavenworth; I am just going there now."

"I don't really live here," he answered, "but, as a matter of fact, I've just returned from the front for the spring and summer months. I was always rather keen on the country."

"I hope we shall see a great deal of one another," he added.

Nan flushed.

"I don't expect I shall go out very much," she said, constrainedly. "This afternoon—my stepmother has died very suddenly, and—and there are three little boys."

"Are you going to stay at home permanently?" he asked. "I gather from what you say that you have not been living at home."

She rather resented his tone.

"I really don't know," she answered, and looked out of the window at the flying country.

"And—Lyster?" the man opposite to her asked.

"I hope you have good news of him?"

Nan turned her head slowly; the question had been asked in an innocence; apparently Sefton knew nothing of what had happened.

"Mr. Lyster is in London," she said.

"Indeed." His rather subtle smile brought the color to her face.

"Perhaps I shall be meeting some of them then," he said, easily. Lyster will be coming down, of course."

"I don't think so," Nan forced herself to smile.

Her mind leapt ahead into the future, and she knew what must occur sooner or later what had happened.

She forced herself to go on: "Perhaps I had better tell you that Mr. Lyster and I are no longer engaged," she said. Her voice was quite steady, but Sefton was shrewd enough to guess that it held underlying emotion.

He raised his brows. "Is that so—I must sympathize—with Lyster," he added courteously.

"You mean you don't think it is your trouble," Nan answered. "We just discovered that we had—made a mistake." The last words were a rush.

"I hope it never you meet him, Mr. Sefton, that you will not mention my name at all."

He leaned forward and touched her hand with his own.

"I think it is a most sensible view to take," he said. "If all women were like you, Miss Marraby—"

Sefton was looking at her with undisguised admiration. He was delighted to find that he was to have this girl for a near neighbor.

"You take three small step-brothers?" he said.

"Yes."

"Perhaps you will allow me to take them out in my car sometimes," he suggested. "I have a great deal of time on my hands and I am very fond of children."

Nan did not believe it, but she thanked him and said that it was a kind suggestion.

"What you have just told me of yourself and Lyster," the man opposite her was saying casually. "It reminds me of a case which I heard about last night. The man was a friend of mine too, strangely enough, and he rushed into marriage just before going to France. Quite a nice little girl he married. He'd only known her a few days—quite of those war weddings, you know. I believe she was genuinely fond of him, but he—he strangled his shoulders."

"You mean the sort of man to be taken by any pretty face . . . Anyway, his wife found out the other day—quite by chance—that he had come some on leave and never let her know. She went to see him, of course, and the fellow had the audacity to pretend that he didn't know her."

Nan's cheeks flamed. She forced herself to composure.

"And you are comparing myself and Mr. Lyster to—this melodramatic pair?" she asked lightly.

"Not in the least, I assure you," he answered. "It was the mere fact of my having broken your engagement that recalled the incident to my mind."

Nan kept her eyes fixed on his face.

"And—and the girl you spoke of just now?" she asked.

He shrugged his shoulders. "Poor little thing—one cannot but feel sorry for her, but for the man, though he is a friend of mine, it seemed rather a low-down game to play."

"You mean?" she asked, with an effort.

"I mean, to pretend that he had lost his memory and did not know her . . ."

Nan caught her breath. "Lost his memory?" she asked.

"That is what he pretended, and of course"—Sefton laughed callously—"I need not say that there was another woman in the case all the time."

Nan felt as if her body had grown suddenly cold. She leaned back in the corner with a feeling of dreadful weakness.

"Another woman! But—but, oh, how could he?"

Sefton smiled at her with a faint smile. "I have learned never to be surprised at anything that happens nowadays," he said, cynically. "Let us talk with a man. I think we must be near Little Gadsden now. How are you going to get out to Leavenworth?"

"There will be a trap of some sort," Nan answered. "And if I don't shall leave my bag at the station, and walk."

"My car will meet me," he told her. "I shall be delighted to drive you out if I may."

Nan wanted to refuse, but she thought it would seem absurd. "It's very kind of you," she said.

The train ran on and Sefton opened the door. A liveried man came forward to meet him and took his suit-case. Sefton indicated Nan's modest bag on the rack.

"I am going over to Leavenworth first," he said. He and Nan walked out of the station together.

As they bowled along the lanes in Sefton's car she caught little glimpses of yellow prairies in the woods, and now and then the faint, elusive scent of wood violets.

"I need not tell you that there was another woman in the case all the time," he said, laughing at her. There was something parallel between her own story and the one of which he had spoken. That other man had just pretended to have lost his memory, whilst Peter—she closed her eyes for a moment, and thought of Peter Lyster's worn face as she had seen it only that morning; the tired look in his eyes, the absent-minded indifferent way in which he had seemed to regard everything, and she knew it was impossible to doubt him.

"If you will ask your man just to put me down here," Nan said, "I can walk the rest of the way; the house is quite close now."

Sefton spoke to the driver, and the car was stopped.

Nan got out; she grabbed her small suit-case hurriedly. She did not want this man to go up to the house with her; she held out her hand. "Goodbye, and thank you so much . . ."

"Not goodbye," he answered, quickly. "I hope this is only the first of many such meetings. She did not know what to answer. "And, Miss Marraby, if ever you want a friend, I hope you will remember me."

Nan's color deepened. "You are very kind, but—but I'm a very independent person. I don't think it's at all likely—thank you, all the same."

But he would not take the rebuff, he only smiled, as if he hoped you will remember me."

He stood looking after Nan as she ran down the lane that led up to the house.

Automobile Owners Attention! SEC. 8,369 of the statutes of Nebraska as passed by the last legislature says that in all counties having less than 80,000 population, automobile registrations become delinquent on the first day of February, and all county treasurers were so advised by the state department and instructed to charge a penalty of $1.00 on all motor vehicles registered after that date.

Not liking to see a lot of car owners caught unawares, advertisements were placed in two issues of all papers in the county. Saturday evening, January 30, a telegram was received at the treasurer's office from the state department stating that penalties on delinquent registrations could not be collected owing to some deficiency in the wording of the bill as it now appears upon the state books. Automobile Owners Attention!

SEC. 8,369 of the statutes of Nebraska as passed by the last legislature says that in all counties having less than 80,000 population, automobile registrations become delinquent on the first day of February, and all county treasurers were so advised by the state department and instructed to charge a penalty of $1.00 on all motor vehicles registered after that date.

Not liking to see a lot of car owners caught unawares, advertisements were placed in two issues of all papers in the county.

Saturday evening, January 30, a telegram was received at the treasurer's office from the state department stating that penalties on delinquent registrations could not be collected owing to some deficiency in the wording of the bill as it now appears upon the state books.

Will M. Maupin of the Omaha Bee staff, claims without fear of dispute that he was equal to any weather prognosticator when he had his national reputation. When he takes up for dissection affairs to entertain an approaching storm, his teeth would settle closer and cause a little excitement that is not a war of words. The originals were discarded for the artificial variety, he admits that he has lost his occult power as a weather-seer.

Editor Stone of the Harrington Herald analyzes carefully and writes concisely, and when he takes up for dissection the folly of a journalistic ballroom, he makes plain what he has to say in a few words. It is a matter of telling force. He is slow to anger, but when aroused and his Scotch Presbyterianism gets started, he hits hard with the force of his resources of ability at his command.

Boys of the calf club of Wayne county are up to the standard of those in any section according to a report from the state normal at Ashland. The intelligence test revealed that half the freshmen could not name the first book in the Bible and one-third misspelled the name President Coolidge.

Sioux City Journal: With the first month of the new year gone, there has been nothing to indicate that the business outlook for 1926 is bright. The forecast needs to be modified. January a midwinter month, was part of a winter season, yet it was not a month in which the normal climate of activity was observed. In many respects, it was an improvement over the same month in other years.

GROUNDHOG DAY.

We are more inclined to believe that in some other years because it could not see its shadow February 2 if it had remained out all day, and we have this additional hope to pin to in anticipating an early spring. An authority on the groundhog says it is woodchuck, and that with the approach of cold weather in the fall, it goes into a state of lethargy, hibernating until March or April. Whether it revives and is sent forth on February 2 or not, if it comes out during any midwinter, it did its year, and if the condition of the weather on any February 2 is an augury of future weather, it is so this year.

In some others, as was to be expected, it was not quite so good, but on the whole, very satisfactory. A barometer that no doubt will be pleasing to many business men, especially those engaged in the smaller enterprises, was the decrease in the number of failures throughout the year. The decline in liabilities was almost one-fourth. Fewer business failures were reported in 1925 than in 1924. The number of failures increased 3 per cent. This is an improvement of value. It is noted that after both inflation and deflation have come and had some business failures were numerous. Too much speculation during inflation and too much conservatism during deflation have come and had some business failures were numerous.

Export business this year is expected to reach a new high record. Last year was good, with a most gratifying trade balance shown in favor of the United States. The favorable balance this year may not be so impressive, but the volume of business to be transacted probably will be as great. The reason for that, of course, is that European industrial countries are slowly getting back on their feet, and as they do, they will be more aggressive and making efforts to show trade balances of their own, or at least decreases in those held against them.

The agricultural interests at this time are determined that a way out of the dilemma must and shall be found. If one believes that a way out can be found, then one also will believe that nothing less is soon to be realized. Surely enough interest, intelligence and energy are being brought to bear on the subject for it to be both understood and adjusted.

Legislation at the present time is encouraging to general business conditions. The tax reduction bill does seem to be in any danger of being held up. It is expected to pass through as scheduled in time for the change in rates to be effective before the income tax returns and first payments are to be sent in March 15. No legislation aimed at industry is contemplated. Capital, as a result, is not nervous and excited by going ahead with industrial plans such as are needed to meet the demands of trade expected. Indeed, 1926 ought to be a good year for business, taking the whole country into consideration.

Aftermath of War. Dr. A. L. Bixby: Even good people of our Massachusetts has the crime of a problem to deal with, the same as other states and other countries the world over. Doctors have agreed that it is a mighty difficult thing to do, but that it is without first ascertaining the cause. An uncountable epidemic of influenza followed in the wake of the late war, but the doctors are not sure of the boneysards of the world in spite of all they could do. Tinkering at effects didn't remove the cause. So with this crime wave. It is an epidemic of lawlessness that seems to be an aftermath of the brute psychology engendered by man's surrender to the creator and chaos of war.

Harding on the intention of criticizing officers of the law or the courts, in the performance of their duties. The intention of the law is to protect themselves outside of the courts, which was in the local juvenile court. Here was a young girl who was brought into court on no specific charge, against whom no specific complaint was lodged, but who was committed to an industrial school while the other girl in the case was paroled and the two young fellows in whose company the girls were went free. Now, as we say, we do not intend to criticize the officers of the law or the courts. They no doubt acted according to their best judgment in the light of the facts as they saw them.

school, altogether blameless in a case of this kind and are we not all in a degree responsible? This girl was no different from many others of her own age—young and foolish, of course, but not worse, and she is in an institution today largely on account of the indifference of people who might have helped her. And what about the young fellows who were with these girls and scores of others like them who entice girls of tender age to go joy riding late at night in automobiles in other directions? Why should not the law take cognizance of them as well as of the girls, and if the girls are hailed in court on account of their actions, why not the boys, who are doubtless the worst offenders?

Lincoln Journal: Will H. Hays, at the head of the motion picture industry, makes protest that the producers, managers, actors and actresses are turning more and more to arbitration for the settlement of the disputes with the industry arising from the far flung film business. During the year 1925 borders of arbitration settled 5,450 cases involving a total of $2,821,295. Only seventeen of these disputes were later carried into the courts. Best of all, 99 per cent of the total number of settlements and of the way in thirty days after the cases were filed.

Even this is not the whole story. The wastefulness of legal battle has now become so thoroughly understood by the picture people that during the same year 4,269 additional cases were settled before going to the arbitration boards. This means a total of 11,887 cases involving $2,541,440 settled in a single year at a small cost in money and time.

In nearly all of the states the bar associations are finding it difficult to organize to improve the administration of justice and wipe out the notorious evils that exist in connection with the practice of law. There are in every state and in every community lawyers who thrive on the nervous acts that exist in connection with the practice of law. These figures from the office of Mr. Hays offer a warning to such men that the irregularities in their profession must be cleared away or the public will look upon going to law as an underpaid expedient as to be undertaken only as a final resort.

is in his own line. Burbank is at odds with most of the rest of the world in his reasoning about religion. His own wonderful work with plants and flowers should have brought to him a vision of a Greater One than he, who not only controls the vegetation of the earth, but also the works of man. Burbank is more to be pitied than censured. To have worked with God's creations, and yet to have missed His presence, to have sought for Him with God, and yet not to know it—this is one of the sad things that man cannot explain. It is as if Mr. Burbank had painted a beautiful picture done with the skill of a master, yet had missed its beauty because of unseeing eyes. The Christian world has no thought for such a man as Mr. Burbank—that his labor will not go unrewarded in the eyes of Him who will some day lift the mist that obscures the vision of those whose faith is bound by the things of earth.

Market Report
Furnished by Steele, Siman & Co., Sioux City Stock Yards.

Feb. 3.—Owing to somewhat larger receipts of cattle over the country this week the packers managed at lower prices around 25 cents on Monday and thereafter held the market at the decline. The middle of the week found the deal somewhat unsettled, with the eastern dressed trade showing the effects of too much beef eating which is merely another way of saying that the consuming public is temporarily fed-up on actively cheap beef for the time being.

The discounts as quoted, amounting to 25 cents, are in effect on both steer and female classes. Only the highly attractive kinds were able to avoid pressure.

Stock and feeder cattle appear to be holding the same lofty position on paper as in the past, but those trading in the yards are questioning material declines when quality is considered. In the majority of the cases sellers figure the market for this steers of all weights will figure 25 to 40 cents lower for the week, except on superior kinds. This is practically the first indication this season that the country considers current prices too high in comparison to what fat cattle are earning. Only the relatively cheap basis for corn has kept the deal going in full stride, for on all reports the shortage of rough feed is very noticeable in all quarters.

Hogs have hit the $13 line and governing conditions surrounding the trade indicate that the peak has not yet been reached, although packers are really alarmed at their inability to prevent a further rise in the market. Demands are now going for the fresh pork despite relative highness. Huldigs are not heavy for this time of the year and more than that the incoming receipts are showing up even shorter than was expected.

The first two days of this week very low outlet for lamb and products is considered, so no sane advice can be handed out as to which way to jump, except that a long profit is almost certain for all who will completely finish their hogs.

Feeding pigs are still holding around the $13 line and touched tops this week at $13.50. From each price it is easy to see that most farmers consider the hog gamble this year really no gamble at all, but a safe bet.

Fat lambs are having a hard struggle in the middle west at this time because the California people have declared a boycott against high priced lambs with the result that shipments from Idaho and Utah that were originally intended for the western coast trade are now being forced east. This movement has been in addition to the annual seasonal Colorado flood.

Fat lambs are taping around $14.25 at midweek, with fancy western feeders to $14.40. Fat handy-weight ewes figure to $8.75. Due to scarcity aged grades may be expected to hold up, or work gradually higher over the season.

Members of This Year's Debating Team For the Wayne High School Are Selected

Typewriting Department Getting Ready for Contest with Other School News.

Debate Tryout Held.
The Wayne high school held its annual debating tryout Wednesday, January 27. The question, "Resolved: That Cabinet Members Should Be Elected to the Floor of Congress," is uniform in the Nebraska debating league. The affirmative side of the question was supported by Genevieve Wright, Annabelle Davis and Warren Townsend. Those supporting the negative were Esther Mae Ingham, Louise Dickhaugh and Maxine Wright. Mrs. Lutzen, Rev. F. K. Allen and James Britton judged the debate. Their decision placed Warren Townsend, Maurice Wright, Genevieve Wright and Esther Mae Ingham as debating representatives of the Wayne high school.

The 1926 debating schedule is as follows:
Tonea at Wayne, February 22
Casper, Cheyenne and Lincoln at Lyons at Wayne, March 8
Hartington at Wayne, March 15
Tekamah at Tekamah, March 22

Speech at Assembly.
Rev. Penton C. Jones was the assembly speaker at the high school last Tuesday afternoon. "Citizenship," was the subject of his address. He skillfully outlined how strict adherence to law is a fundamental principle involved in good citizenship. He then illustrated his points made the talk interesting and instructive.

Office Notes.
Nebraska school boards and executives will hold a conference at Grand Island, February 9 and 10. The Wayne high school board has been invited to join this federation and send representatives to the meeting to be held at Grand Island.

Efforts of intelligence and achievement tests have been given to the grade pupils this week as supplementary to those which have been given previously.

Favorable comment has been given to our high school department by Superintendent Mr. Hook. He highly commended the work of the Journalism class take over the editing of these columns. He also states that he hopes our paper will learn to be more interesting and instructive.

Commercial Department.
The typewriting department, which has been occupied the last week in the laboring of the typewriter, is getting settled in its new quarters, will settle down to real "training" next week, Miss Ruth Anderson reports. The pupils are busy practicing for the district typewriting contest to be held in Albion March 27. At the present time, Bernard E. Wright holds the top position, averaging about forty words per minute. There are several other students who rank high.

Helen Thompson took the teachers' examination in bookkeeping last Saturday.

Members of the typewriting class who can write twenty-five words in one minute with only ten errors, will receive special certificates. These certificates are the first of a series which are to be issued. As soon as the typewriters get a higher speed, they will receive special certificates. The class will continue throughout the semester.

loyalty and spirit of its student body. By this type of loyalty we mean the loyalty that will impel the student to keep in mind the honor and prestige of his high school and to guide his conduct accordingly. This conduct must play a large part in the life of a student who determines to make his high school the best one in the state.

We feel that the manners and conduct of a student should be impressed upon his mind from the very beginning, because such influence is carried throughout life. Conduct may ultimately determine his success or failure in the business world. A general good student should be polite and courteous at all times. He should respect the wishes and desires of his teachers and make their work as pleasant as possible. He should regard his conduct in places where he is not in his own home as if he should do the right thing for his school without being told, but because he wants to do the right thing.

If each student were to put these simple rules of conduct into effect, the welfare and success of the school would be attributed to his successful conduct.

Senior Notes.
The senior class held a meeting last Friday for the purpose of selecting cases and poems for commencement. Samples were examined and the selection made. The order has been placed with the Paul

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Morris, pioneers of west of Carroll who celebrate their fifty-third wedding anniversary. These in the past have been Newton F. Craddock H. John, Lot and Celya. In front are: Ivor, Llewellyn, Mrs. John R. Morris and Bonner Morris.

Wiley company at Omaha.
Midyear entries to the senior class are Una Schrupf, Freda Sund, Elsie Thies, Margaretson, Lucille Noakes, Stephen Rollo, Cyrus Jones, Genevieve Dunbar, Elsie Mae Carhart, Richardson, Helen Thompson, Edna Jeffrey, Nurse, Alice Shields.

Juniors Display Talent.
"Alice Sit-By-the-Fire," the junior play, written by Miss Ruth Anderson, will be given at the community house Friday, February 5. The play is written by James Barrie.

The sophomore class had charge of the assembly program last Thursday. The program was of a musical nature and consisted of songs, a synopsis of the opera "Lucia" by Donizetti, "Two Selections," the sextette, and the mad song were played by the orchestra. The orchestra was composed of: Crystal Dragon, Piano; Braden Carhart, saxophone; Robert Carpenter, trombone; William Carpenter, clarinet; Henry Reynolds, drums. Walter Reeg will play several selections on the accordion.

The success of any high school depends, in a large measure, upon the fishermen: Mildred Bonavitz, Margaret Paul, Ardy Gillespie, Kathryn Kemp, Dorothy Ross, Myrtle Wallace, Robert Carpenter, Fred Ladders, Lois Weaver, David Young, Howard Roberts and Gaylord Griffith. Loren Scripture of the freshman class has moved away.

The president of this class says: "While we excel in numbers, we major in excellency, and take as our motto, 'Excellence'." The botany class had laboratory work Thursday. The class worked with Spirogyra plant algae. The students made a laboratory study of the Green algae using the Spirogyra as a representative sample.

The algebra pupils under the instruction of Miss Bacon are learning the rules governing algebraic addition, subtraction and multiplication. They are also very much interested in keeping individual graphs of their daily grades.

Miss Vlasnik's algebra classes are deeply involved in factoring. The Latin grade is working hard at work. Miss Schlaack is optimistic for the language student, saying, "Latin is easy, French is easier and Spanish is easiest."

Eighth Grade.
The eighth grade is settled in its new room. Thirty-four are enrolled in the eighth grade this semester. Sixth and seventh grades. Intelligence tests were given in the seventh and sixth grades last Thursday.

Every one was present in the sixth grade Thursday. Fourth Grade. Dean Simpson has been absent because of measles and Marguerite Olson because of whooping cough.

Third Grade.
The third grade is working out pantomime plays in language class. The students are taking Studenbaker drills in arithmetic. Four of the pupils have completed their work. One pupil is working on drill No. 3. Before a pupil can pass a drill he must be able to work one hundred problems in the given minutes.

First Grade.
The first grade is studying Ekkon this month. In this connection the sand table has been converted into a table for studying Ekkon. Stephen is absent because of chicken pox. At Thanksgiving time, the first grade sent money to the orthopedic hospital in Lincoln, Neb., to buy candy for the little children's Thanksgiving dinner. Last week a letter of thanks was received from one of the children's hospital.

Athletic Notes.
The Wayne high school scored two victories out of three games last Saturday night at the State Normal gymnasium. The Wayne first stringers went down to defeat at the hands of Wakefield. The second stringers won 17 to 14 score, while Wayne second team trounced Wakefield's second team 18 to 2, and the Wayne girls won 28 to 12 score. The first team's defeat was the fifth consecutive defeat for the fighting Wayne quintet, and proved discouraging, although it was balanced by the other two victories.

The girls' game was fast and the score was decisive. The Wayne girls exhibited splendid team work. The work of the two centers was especially fast and was the prime factor in the team work. The Wayne girls were not match for Wakefield. At the end of the half the score was 16 to 4 and at the end of the second half it was 28 to 12 score. Although the visiting team battled gamely, they were no match for Wayne from the start. Both the offense and defense were effective for Wayne, while Wakefield failed to show play in any of their quarters. and victory was not decided until the last minute of play. At the end of the first half Wayne held the lead with an eight to two score. Wayne scored three goals in the first few minutes of the game and held Wakefield in the dark until late in the game. However, the local boys did not falter. The last quarter was a matter of a few points and both teams experienced a lead up until the last minute when the Wakefield captain, unassisted, dribbled down the floor and scored twice in quick succession. This provided a three-point lead which could not be overcome in the remaining seconds of the contest. Wayne's team work slightly excelled but Wakefield's tossers had a "keener" eye for the hoop. Jones was Wayne's high point man with six points, and Dennis and Schmidt scored four points each. The game was exceedingly interesting throughout, but a great many fouls were called on both teams. Guy Best closely refereed the game.

The basketball game was a close one. The lineup for the game was as follows: Dennis, center; Jones and Schmidt, forwards; and Keyser and Perry, guards.

The Wayne quintet plays two consecutive games this week, one Friday at Pilger and the other Saturday at Wayne with the Carroll football team. Pilger defeated Wayne a month ago on the Wayne floor by a one-point margin. This is Wayne's chance for a comeback and conditions look favorable. Carroll has been winning from some strong teams this year, so the local boys will have their hands full on both events. Wayne has a disappointing start for classification in the Northeast Normal basketball tournament to be held at the Wayne State College, Feb. 25-26-27. However, it is not felt to change the rating of defendants for the local boys played only half their schedule.

Wakefield News
The negative of the question, Harry Larson, Mildred Driskell, Etta Strange, Donald Kinney, Irvin Peterson and Frank Howell are on the team and they will probably stage a local debut on Feb. 22.

The high school band has been reorganized and is now an orchestra. The basketball team goes to Emerson Friday of this week to meet the boys and girls of the high school.

nia friends and others for the kindly sympathy and beautiful floral tributes at the time of the funeral of the late VonSeggern family. The beautiful floral work with five bronze spikes, the gift of twenty-three neighbors, was especially impressive.

Hail to the Master!

LINCOLN'S greatness lay in this—he was master of himself!

When the country rocked with war, when thousands cursed his name—did he flinch, did he fail? NO! He remained cool and quiet—though weighted down with the sorrows of a nation, yet master of himself.

After war's desolation had passed and the greatness of the President had been fully revealed to all, even after death—Was He Master?

YES!

Lincoln today still rules over the hearts of the American People!
