COL. HOUSE, THE GREAT

According to his correspondence and comments running serially from day to day, E. M. House is the most necessary and most influential individual in the world during both World Administrations...

What the omission of one letter will do to a word was shown in an editorial in last week's Herald. It changed the word "intentionally" to "intentionally" and it certainly played havoc with the sentence and sense...

Speaking at a conference held in Chicago recently to discuss farm home improvement, one speaker said: "Upon the farm home rests not only the future of the farm woman, but of America itself. We need scientific homes."

The J. E. Faber family held a reunion at Laurel before Mrs. H. H. Young and children left for their new home in Tripoli, Wis. Mrs. and Mr. J. E. Faber and daughter, Wynne, were there for the gathering.

From Ponca Journal, April 9, 1925:

Thunder and lightning by night and northward lewed-flocks of geese by day indicate that summer is at hand.

Last Sunday was Easter Sunday, and was appropriately observed in the churches in this place.

Sunday was a warm spring day, and resembled the days in Florida in the middle of February.

On account of the heavy wind of Tuesday, a large upward bounder was had to tie up near Ionia and stay there all day.

The county seat of Cedar County has finally moved to Hartington. The county records, books, safes, etc. were moved to that place from St. Helena, last week.

Wearing Old Shoes Not Always Economical

Nine women out of ten believe themselves thrifty and economical when they insist on their old, run-down, misshapen shoes, "round the nose" where few notice what they have on, and many ladies inevitably trim the shoe and spoil the appearance of any shoe. The tenth housekeeper perhaps realizes that when she wears comfortable, well-fitted shoes with broad, low heels and roomy toes, at her work, she can get through the day without a backache or tired feet, that she can stand down, misshapen shoes, "round the nose" where few notice what they have on, and many ladies inevitably trim the shoe and spoil the appearance of any shoe.

It all happened because of their devotion to duty and neglect of personal contact with an ungrateful constituency. And they desire in the interest of fair play, and that this utterly useless expense serves no purpose but to multiply government overhead and gratify the vanity of politicians, whose prancing steeds, have been cast out from under them, and who are too slow to catch up and get anywhere against Senator Norris' success in his noble effort to amend the constitution, starting congressional sessions the first of the year, and setting back inauguration day by a couple of months, he will deserve abundant commendation while he lives and a commodious niche in the hall of fame when the storm is over.

McCormick-Deering Day

Saturday, February 27

Even the early McCormick-Deering 10-20 and 15-30 tractors selected by farmers are still in use, delivering power at a profitable rate. This is a record to be proud of, but it is only a repetition of the performance of other International Harvester tractors.

It indicates the true conditions that are becoming more and more known by the tractor owners that McCormick-Deering tractors are designed along the right lines based on long experience, made of the right kind of materials, and with the exacting care in manufacture that puts years and years of active-service life into them.

Come to our store on Saturday, February 27, and learn more about

The McCormick Deering Tractor, The 10-Foot Power Grain Binder,

And other new and improved farm machines. The wonderful McCormick-Deering lines of farm machinery showing latest improvements, will be on display. The popular McCormick-Deering machines will help materially in solving your farm problems. Come and stay all day with us. Demonstrations and instructions by factory experts who will be here all day and furnish information gladly on McCormick-Deering lines.

Second Grade.
Mrs. Randall visited the second grade Monday. Mrs. D. A. Jones and Mrs. Paul Miller visited the second grade Wednesday. The second grade pupils are preparing a booklet of Washington proverbs and other. The pupils completed their Lincoln booklets this week.

Third Grade.
Miss Jones was absent one day this week. The pupils completed the first of its many contests. This contest is the making of Washington spelling booklets. The pupil having the best spelling booklets received a prize on Washington's birthday, Feb. 22.

Fifth Grade.
The fifth A class will entertain the fifth B class during opening exercises this week. In this grade there is a peculiar contest called the "Senators and Pirates." The contest deals with the four fundamentals in arithmetic. But of the pupils contest is the one-completing the problem first and correctly gets a mark for his work. Ten to fifteen minutes are spent on this work every morning. The contest closed at the end of the six weeks and another contest is being held in the neighborhood.

Sixth Grade.
Slides will be shown next week for the parents. The contest material over the two sections just completed, "Regions of Florida and the Cotton Belt" and "The Valley of the Pacific Coast." Each pupil selects and tells about it in his or her own way.

Frank Johnson had a birthday February 15. On this day pupils learned how to figure their ages from the date when they were born.

Mr. Robinson, practice teacher, was absent this week. He is a member of the basketball squad and he left on the basketball tour.

It is a pleasure to see these days to see the school yard dotted with groups of small boys and some larger ones intently playing marbles. This game of the boys always seems to synchronize with the first peep of the ground hog from his long hibernation and the return of the first hardy and adventurous robin.

Business.
Sioux City Journal: The compelling thing in connection with any review or forecast of American business conditions continues to be a question of the agricultural products that the farmers are still facing. For while local conditions may be somewhat improved in various middle west states—and no doubt they are—what is more greatly desired is a general adjustment of two essential factors in farm production: control of production and maintenance of satisfactory prices.

The interest in agricultural relief and recovery, which, after all, are one and the same thing, is not and cannot be confined to a section. Most of the farming is done in the middle west, but in addition to the attention the agricultural problem has attracted in the communities most seriously affected, it has recently concerned a recognition by various other industries that they cannot succeed by any of themselves. Wall Street, New England textile communities, Pennsylvania and Ohio steel and iron centers and Michigan and Indiana auto car factories all may not feel greatly interested in what happens to the farmer, yet they are deeply concerned because his situation affects materially their own business affairs.

The concern a separate industry would feel might be subconscious, which is to say that a depression in the agricultural sections could affect it without apparent thought given to the cause. The head of a manufacturing concern, which produces goods of a type demanded by both rural and city residents, possibly is occupied wholly with the problems of his business in connection with prices of raw materials, wages paid, freight rates, collection of sales, overhead and other things that go into his production. He might not stop to think of an untoward situation in which some of his most important customers had been placed. Yet that untoward situation is going to affect him and his business as surely as the raw supply and demand destined to regulate his production and sales.

This same concern is felt everywhere. In no case it is subconscious. Professional men, reading in cities, shop workers, merchants, manufacturers, bankers, jobbers and all the people that go to make up the population of a community are affected in some way or other when a large part of the population fails to obtain a fair return on its investment and labor. There has been a large measure of prosperity for the last two years, and it is not as good and are expected to be still better. The only objection to the economic situation has been the fact that the prosperity has not been shared by all elements of the national life. What has been needed all along is a leveling process.

The outlook for agriculture now is better than it has been. In addition to a better situation that has resulted from an economic adjustment based on the law of supply and demand, there is likely to be relief provided through legislation. The farmers are demanding it and they have been encouraged to believe it will come during the present session of congress. If the farm problems are solved before the next harvest, there will be nothing to prevent the next two years' crop from being enthusiastically predicting.

Relief of Unfortunates.
Allen, Neb., Feb. 21.—More than $200 has been gathered by friends and neighbors for the Ed Steele family, which is in needy circumstances due to sickness, accident, food and of clothing for the children have been given.

Mrs. Steele has been in poor health, and unable to do her work following an operation which she underwent about a year ago. At present she is confined to her sick bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Steele have five children ranging in age from 3 to 9 years. A year ago one of the boys was operated on for appendicitis and four years ago the youngest girl, then 2 years old, was stricken with infantile paralysis, which left her unable to walk. She has since been in Lincoln for treatment and is now attending school with the aid of crutches.

Fred Body of Dead Man.
Menominee, Neb., Feb. 21.—Several services were held here for Frank Schmidt, 29, who was found dead under an automobile on the state highway north of Hartington by Dr. B. Hartington. It is thought that Mr. Schmidt, who weighed 240 pounds, had a heart disease, probably died when the car overturned as no bones of the body were broken, although it was wedged tightly under the car. Two unknown men, driving north in an automobile, returned to Hartington and notified the authorities of the wreck.

Lincoln Journal-Congressman Edgar Howard was struck, as a friend of William J. Bryan, to come back at Colonel House. Colonel House has dropped many pleasant things about Mr. Bryan as he knew him in the Wilson campaign. To House, Bryan seemed generous and usually self-respecting and by Mrs. always loyal to his chief. But for Bryan's part in practical matters, House always contempt. He goes away with the dimension of size, the impression that Bryan as secretary of state was an amiable figure, thoughtless at home and distrustful abroad. Congressman Edgar strikes back at the amiable and in the congressmen's memoirs. Mr. House is certainly recommending himself highly. His readers must wonder once in awhile how the president could possibly have smiled through without his busy friend. At this point the column is a fair mark for the Nebraska congressman's irony.

Pilger Man Dies.
Pilger, Nebr., Feb. 19.—Rollins Jeffries, well known Pilger druggist, died at 9:30 Wednesday morning in the St. Joseph hospital in Omaha.
Mr. Jeffries suffered a nervous breakdown two weeks ago and he never rallied. He was 31 years of age.
He was well known in this part of Nebraska in his business dealings and social affairs.
He leaves his widow and daughter, Kathleen; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Jeffries; and one sister, Mrs. Hubert Leach.
Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Pilger.
Age of Bigness.
York Republican: It is the age of bigness. People seem to be carried away with the dimension of size, the biggest buildings, the biggest churches, the biggest undertakings, the biggest organizations of men and bring claim our attention. The great achievements in science in the present age have given a great perspective. We see only the big things. Let us make sure however that we do not make the mistake of believing the biggest is always the best. The truly great things of the world are the simple things of ordinary life. Song and laughter and soft words contribute more to human happiness than sky-scrapers and cathedral spires. Just being kind is a currency of universal value that no great trust or huge financial organization has a first claim on a monopoly upon.

Nebraska Air!
(Dr. A. L. Bixby.)
Even here, boys, even here, Skies are not forever clear; It's not summer all the year. In the winter, now and then, Frosty weather, and again "Fair and warmer" do you ken? But three-quarters of the year this Nebraska atmosphere, Is perfection, mighty near. And the man who daily bumps

Right along, nor has the dump, Never really bumps the bumps.

Goes about with flying feet In the field or on the street; Takes the bitter with the sweet
He is always in good form, Be it cold or be it warm, And he smiles in shine or storm.
