Road Construction In Cedar County

Forney, Neb., March 27.—Work on the Meridian and Sunshine highways between here and Yankton, S. D. one of the most important projects in northern Nebraska, will begin as soon as the frost is out of the ground to permit grading, as the big highway grading outfit of Contractor J. H. Edwards, of Omaha, has pitched camp near the Meridian highway bridge. The outfit consists of 60 head of mules, scrapers, dump wagons, bank wagons and dirt elevators, besides a large force of men.

Contractor Edwards' outfit will begin work at the Meridian highway bridge and grade the highway to the junction of the Sunshine trail and the Meridian highway, a stretch of road considered to be one of the worst in the state in bad weather. Then the outfit will move to the bluff and put a new road over the hills, which will be graded out last fall and which will eliminate dangerous places. A contract for the remaining six miles of grading, recently awarded to Peterson, Shirley and Gumbler, of Omaha, probably will be sublet to the Edwards' outfit, as this will save the expense of shipping a new outfit for the work.

 When this work is completed, Nebraska and South Dakota will be connected with good graded routes which will extend for miles into the states in many directions. Further improvement on this project is planned next year by grading the highway, although many of the hills, which will be cut down in the grading, contain gravel which will put the road in good shape each year.

Scenario Plot Is Located in Oregon

Last fall the Universal Picture Corporation invited members of the Press Association to write ten-scene stories for entry in a contest which closed December 1. The reason which prompted the corporation was the fact that the National Press association holds its annual meeting at Los Angeles during the coming summer and it was desired that the association members in finishing plans for the accepted story. The Herald editor who has received it back with the announcement that only three publishers over the United States had contributed to the contest, and it was declared off. The Herald will present its story herewith, explaining that the sketch was bolted into its pages as a result of its permission to the corporation. Any one acquainted with Klamath County, Oregon, will note that mountains, forests and lakes are correctly treated, even to open spaces for the landing of airplanes, which are shown. The plot leaves a great deal for the imagination of the reader:

Episode One.—Klamath Indian Reservation, Oregon, abounds in choicest yellow and sugar pine timber. The United States government declares its intention to open 50,000 acres of timber lands to the public for filing under the timber and stone act. Daily Bugle, a Los Angeles newspaper, gets the word under by headlines. A trail of mysterious strangers sell over reservations in airplane and perch camp in the lake park. Chief Scarface Charley and plan to attack stragglers, appointing day and night patrol. On account of hazardous conditions, respectively, Major Appleby and Major Hunter, Klamath, mysterious plane lands in open space near little town of Fort Klamath, five miles from Klamath Falls. Chief Scarface Charley, upon investigation, decides to have a year, intending to slay trespasser and burn plane.

Episode Two.—Bill Smith, engineer of mysterious trio, makes overtures to posse. Gifts of beads quiet hostilities. Gaining confidence of the Indians, Smith resorts to Chief Scarface Charley that the government was going to give timber to white people and that he should protect their rights, revolving. On night the chief decides to take up arms against the government and white settlers. In beautiful valley of Klamath, get-attending-school at Klamath agency, notifies the agent, Major Appleby, of impending trouble. Indians threaten to attack. Major Appleby gathers menacingly and await the chief's word to open fire.

Episode Three.—Captain Cook and 100 men were soon ready to go to the rescue. Two automobiles were quickly loaded, and on their way. Captain Cook accepted a ride with Chief Scarface Charley. Mary Hunter, comely Bugle reporter and daughter of the proprietor, goes to the agency on a motorcycle to get news. Chief Scarface Charley's handsome face and quiet dignity of the captain. Mysterious trio are seen examining timber and making notations on plates. At the agency, Major Appleby was trying to dissuade the Indians. While pleading with Chief Scarface Charley, an impetuous tribesman sets fire to the agency school building. Massacre seems imminent. Soldiers are racing to the rescue.

Episode Four.—Captain Cook and his men arrive to find the flaming school building ready to topple in. Major Appleby and other whites of the agency have already retreated in warehouse. Indians flee on timely appearance of soldiers. Indians recognize presence with suspicion. Wauneta explains to agent what she heard about the mysterious trio. Word of trouble brings army plane from San Francisco. Captain Cook and Mary Hunter board plane to locate mysterious trio and surely Indian movements. Suspicious activities are noted in the outlaw camp, and the latter's plane is sent into the air to drive off the government machine. Sketch concludes by following a thousand feet above ground.

Value Of College Education Shown

In a sketch about the life of Edwin E. Collins, formerly of Wakefield and now a resident at Wayne, the Herald editorialist states that success to be obtained by combining education with a determination to make good. Excerpts from the story are as follows: "Does it pay to have a college education? That is a question that is frequently discussed in this practical, utilitarian age and on which opinion is considerably divided. Experts have figured out just how much a college education is worth to a boy or girl and some are skeptical as to its value as an asset in the business world. Without entering into this phase of the discussion at all, one may say that the value of a college education depends entirely on the individual. To secure a high wage, generally, it is a detriment; but to others, of incalculable value, being combined with character, industry and ambition, any of the latter class may have an excellent example in the subject of this sketch, Edwin E. Collins of the Huntington National Bank. "Mr. Collins is a good type of a college bred man who has succeeded in business. He has a liberal education, and has used this education, not only as a stepping stone to financial success, but his success, in many ways, is a larger measure of service to the community in which he lives. In his case, the conclusion may be safely drawn that a college education pays.

Episode Seven.—As a friend of the whites, Wauneta is treated roughly. She is taken to the same camp where Mary White, mysterious trio, take night trips over agency. Approach party, Captain Cook sends army plane after Mary as means of safety. While Wauneta searches through nearby timber in the hope of information that would aid Captain Cook and the government, skulking Indians creep up and throw a blanket over her head and quickly carry her off.

Episode Eight.—Returning to the agency, the army airplane reports the capture of Mary and the unfortunate fate of Wauneta. Captain Cook joins fifty men while Wauneta searches for timber. Prospective settlers, find plot and detail of plans laid by the mysterious trio. Plan to acquire Wauneta Charley by getting irresponsible transcripts to file was revealed. The next day findings were to be made at the United States land office at Lakeview. Outlaws hear the buzzing of motors down the mountain. Wauneta, who has been given freedom of movement, disappears. Frightened, the outlaws, finding their airplane dead, with Wauneta in the plane, flee the camp. Incense Crater lake and boarding a boat, hastily row to Wizard island in whose crater they seek safety.

Episode Nine.—Soldiers maintain stand guard on the rim of the lake to keep the outlaws worried up. During the night, Wauneta, stone away from captives and is rescued by army plane which had followed the troops from the agency. Captain Cook accompanies Wauneta in plane to agency where, despite best of care, she dies from exposure and injuries. In war array, the Indians, led by Chief Scarface Charley, assemble to battle with the troops at the agency.

Episode Ten.—Captain Cook persuades Chief Scarface Charley to give up the chase. The chief is convinced that the Indians had been misled, and in his motion the trouble is amicably settled, and the soldiers are ordered to return to their orderly posts. Lawful seekers for timber make successful. Timber outlaws are forced to remain in crater. Hunter is busy getting stories for the Bugle about the Indian uprising, though she is restrained from further risking her life. Soldiers on rim of Crater lake are startled by an eruption from Crater in Wizard island. Mysterious trio perish. Returning to Klamath Falls, Captain Cook gives Mary Hunter a history of the settlement and of hostilities and of the upheaval that blows out the designing outlaws and disfigures Wizard island. Captain and Mary develop mutual affection which matures into a happy marriage covenant.

Alfred Oshun died in Wauneta last week at the age of 70 years.

An Inexpensive System

Journalist: An Indiana congressman told the world last Thursday that there is going to be a farm relief act in this session of congress. They had dealt out this ultimatum: These reformers from the south-belt might as well recognize the facts, and realize that the tariff must be lowered before they can compete in industry. A reduction in the tariff, forcing a reduction in prices of supplies farmers must buy, would have some effect on the price of the farmer's product. It would increase the farmer's income. The buying power, though, it would not help him any because in the same degree as an increase in the money income. If a farmer's crop fails only hope lies in a substantial reduction in the tariff which he pays, his hope is not in the country we are not much for. The farmer will fight long and hard to win a covered profit for ourselves. We will do our best to help the farmer; there is no heart in it. Mark Sullivan asserted the other day that the farmer country could never be talked to a constant of sugar factories. He said that sugar increases the price of sugar by about 100%—a pound. That increases the price of sugar by 100% or more. It is the farmer's organization, strongly enough to force the farmers to divide with them. The number of live farmers, however, is small. Fifty farmers lose by the sugar tariff to one that profits by it. Yet Sullivan is right saying that the interests of those who are best growers is better to one tariff reduction. The many farmers will not attack this situation of few farmers. A duty or two to C. W. Chambers of Table Rock, a farmer, well-indicated of the way living costs are pyramided nowadays. But he opposed the idea of making sugar out of corn, which is not now helped in price by tariffs, lest that injure the best growers to whom prosper the corn farmers contribute with every purchase of sugar. No, you can't fix one American putting up against other people's special advantages. We are boosters, not knockers. "That fact is justification for the methods pursued by the corn belt representatives at Washington. They ask, not to have other people's prices lowered by tariff reduction, but to have their own prices raised by corresponding devices. There is a trace of absurdity in this. Stills all round, the American public is nobody. The no-stills method would save the better and costs of the stills. But that is simply not the way we do things. Whatever may be said of their theory, the corn belt people are moving by the practicable way. Special privileges for all is easier than special privileges for none.

In 1902, Mr. Collins came to Hartington on the invitation of the late Levi Kimball of Wakefield, a friend of the family, and assumed the position of assistant cashier of the Huntington National Bank. At that time, the officers of the bank were: Levi Kimball, president; W. M. Beardsley, vice-president; F. M. Kimball, cashier; and E. E. Collins, assistant cashier. In 1914, the president of the bank, Levi Kimball, died and his son, F. M. Kimball, succeeded to the presidency and Mr. Collins became cashier, which position he has held ever since.

The Oldest Established Paper in Wayne County

Entered at the postoffice at Wayne, Nebraska, as Second Class Mail Matter under the act of October 3, 1879. Known office of publication, Wayne, Nebraska.

This paper is published for the proprietors by E. W. Hulse.

It is a morbid state of mind that must bear one or more ugly things about one's face every day in order to feel satisfied.

A man cannot altogether conceal hypocrisy, and there is no use in trying. The effort at concealment, would, properly directed, cure the mind and enable one to show off well enough without pretending.

Last January when we declined to accept pay for country publishing this year, we suggested that our share of the money could be used to buy beads for the beneficiaries. Since we have not heard from the Hottentots and do not know their latest dress vogue or their wishes in the matter, we suggest that they buy beads for their own use to be used for road building in this county.

The announcement from Omaha high school principals that their basketball teams will not be permitted to take part hereafter in state tournaments on account of alleged misconduct on the part of some of their students while in Lincoln leads the Herald to predict that the principals and principals were exceptions rather than the rule, and that the many are made to suffer for the sins of the few.

President Coolidge is reported well satisfied with conditions over the country, being assured by information agents that business and industry are healthy and prosperous. But the president advises against wild fluctuations on the part of people and unnecessary expenditures on the part of the government. His policy of economy results in reduced taxes and the fact that the "batter" will be people is pleased.

For several days the atmosphere around Wayne has been electric and necessarily farm plowing has been put off. But this section has escaped storms of snow and sleet that have prevailed generally over the middle west. Kansas reports a nine-inch snowfall, and Missouri and Illinois report the same amount for the season since 1920. Heavy blankets of snow elsewhere doubtless explain why "cold" weather stubbornly persists here.

Before a meeting of farmers at Dunk, Iowa, recently, the wife of a farmer read a paper in which she said: "The people of Iowa are actually paying a bonus for the privilege of traveling on dirt roads. She presented figures to show that depreciation on cars and extra consumption of gas and oil due to dirt roads would save 6,000 miles in 10 years. She thinks dirt roads, frequently converted into stretches of mud, are sources of big waste.

To accommodate people around Carroll and southwest of that place who desire a hard surfaced highway to the county seat, it has been

LOOKING BACKWARD.
Besides being thankful that we live in a wonderful country of surpassing opportunities, we should be thankful that we live in this progressive period of our history, in which the sciences, discoveries and inventions rather than in the remote age of primitive propensities that floated on the waves of the past. It was in development by the swishing of the waves. As we understand the theory of evolution, that is the world life in the world started. It was millions of years ago when protoplasm that were not wrecked into separate entities, slowly formed into separate entities. Easter hats and other springtime fineries were not needed then. There were no wigs or care how long it did not grow over to become an editor. When we look back and contemplate the raw order and great periods of our distant past, we can see that a relationship existed, with little to think about or think with, not knowing whether one was to be cut short at a table for, after years, take shape and substance as a statesman or poet or legislator, we have reason for profound gratification. We may not respect the memory of the first protoplasm in their struggle to survive on the surface of oceanic waters. It is due respect for the theory of evolution is correct. We would set apart a week for the purpose if there were one to spare.

suggested that the county build one, following the favored line west of Seventh street, Wayne. Only one east and west state highway is possible, and as it is located southwest of here to run through Winfield and Hottentots, it would seem feasible for the county to rake together needed funds and let an eye look develop a highway that will serve other parts of the county. With two east and west highways, one built by the county and the other by state and federal aid, the county seat would be made easily accessible to a great number of Wayne county farmers.

Two years ago the Wayne Woman's club sponsored a movement to improve the city's yards and alleys, and much active interest was aroused. The already neatly kept places were made to look even better. Yards were judged two or three times during the season. The friendly contest proved a spur to effort in beautifying the town. Some movement in that direction might well be undertaken by the women again this year. Keeping yards and alleys free from unsightly rubbish contributes to health as well as good looks.

Easter Sunday, observing the resurrection of Christ, will be here next Sunday, and it will be the occasion for extraordinary religious services. Churches are active with plans for the day. Sermons and songs touching the resurrection will emphasize the Christ ideal. Beautiful flowers will harmonize with the Easter spirit. The day's observance is calculated to stimulate Christianity, and to lead people to thoughts of spiritual rather than material things. It should inspire on the part of church people as well as others more tolerance, charity and good will.

The West Point Republican makes out its competitor to be a sort of seat of life, according to that paper, Frank Furey, brother of J. P. O'Furey of the Hartington News, came over from Iowa and lighted in West Point before he bought the Evening County Democrat. In transient, merit gave a rival storm, part of Frank's name blew off, and when he settled down on the west side of Furey, O'Furey, As inferred from the Republican's remarks, Frank butted in and tried to take over active management of the paper. The result, however, imposed upon a preliminary referendum, has been resented. The Republican's virtual charge, that Frank is egotistical and presumptuous, is hard to understand in view of his Hartington brother's bashful and unassuming habits and manner.

The charge suggests such violence to family tendencies that we are thrust into a maze of astonishment and doubt.

A report of the recent road meeting here, appearing in the Sioux City Journal last Thursday, and in the Wayne date line, but evidently written by some one outside of Wayne, pointed out the fact that the county favored another highway than the one designated. Whatever may be individual opinions in regard to the most feasible route for an east and west highway or whatever may be the opinions that have developed in view of the need of having right-of-way for other reasons, it is a fact that the Greater Wayne club endorsed the present highway project when it was under consideration last year. Regardless of the differing opinions of members, to charge the club as a

LAWYERS.

A lawyer has told us that he would not attempt to treat an accused person as a criminal deserving punishment if he knew he were guilty. In taking the case of one of whose guilt he is sure, he would do what would be to protect his rights and see that he did not suffer injustice or unreasonable punishment. He mentioned that an automobile speeder came to him upon a time for defense, explaining that he had driven eighteen miles an hour in town. The speeder was advised that he had violated the city ordinance which restricts motorists to twelve miles an hour, and that he should enter a plea of guilty and pay his fine. On reflection, after leaving the lawyer, the speeder brushed up his memory and found out that he had driven only twelve miles an hour which he offered as testimony and by which he escaped penalty. Lawyers are often misjudged. A conspicuous few with rather scanty supply of scruples, sometimes cause prejudice against the many who have a fine regard for law and justice, and who are valuable traits in a flanking civilization and safeguarding the social order.

body with activities in conflict with its original position would seem gratuitous and unnecessary. Whether the club erred in its judgment a year ago or not, the matter is how it stood. Manifestly, the hope of the club is to have either state or county highways to serve the convenience of people in every direction from the county seat.

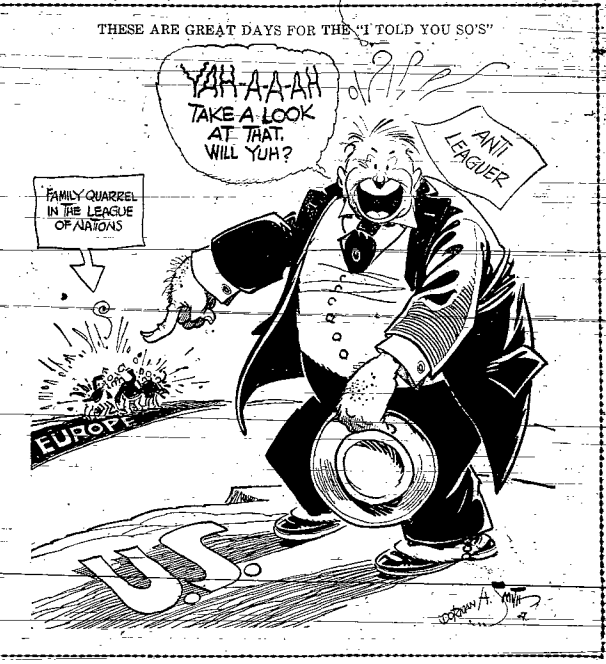

In the employment of rouge as a masquerade by old or young people, as mentioned by the Herald and elucidated by the Sioux City Tribune, we would add that we are not so favorable for elderly people to use rouge as we are anxious for young people not to use it. The committee of the Tribune will agree with the committee of the Herald that those who least need it are the ones whose youthful faces, fleetly tinted and sanctified by their tears, have many years, and are comparatively free from cares that in time inevitably somewhat impair the fairest countenance.

Acting As Arbitrator.

Sioux City Tribune: Even when an editor settles into a theme which appears safely non-controversial, these days, he occasionally draws fire. The range of opinion and interest is quite as wide outside of the editorial sanctuaries as within them. It's a good symptom, manifestly, and one which the better newspapers everywhere have embraced.

In this particular case the argument, if such it may be called, is based upon a short editorial in the Wayne (Neb.) Herald. The editor set forth, in a temperate and constructive manner, that young folks do a poor job of it when they try to improve on the handiwork of nature. There is some excuse, he said, for mature people trying to obliterate the markings of time. The article said in part:

"As to rouge, we would confine its use to elderly people and the aged, and use it very moderately, only enough to save the surface from abouting its imperfections. As to young people, they do not need it, and they only offend nature when they use it."

It's quite all right with this newspaper, either way, but the natural inclination to let things slide, along with the disturbance of the Herald who forwarded the article for attention and discussion. This Winfield friend, as the subject of the article insists that it is a funny alternative which is pictured by the Wayne editor. All other phases of the case aside, it may be stated in passing that she has appealed to the right tribunal for measured judgment.

In spite of a fraternal impulse to stand with the Wayne editor, the ends of justice demand that he be held guilty of getting into deep water, of trying to introduce sinister influences into the few remaining elements of individual privilege. Editorial opinions of that kind may seem relatively harmless, but in their nature they are dangerous. The charge reflected from a good life are more attractive than any designs which could be wrought by human hands. Let us, at all hazards, preserve the useful facial indexes of mature life.

Why It's Free.

Sioux Falls Argus-Leader: One reason why they call it "free-verse" may be because it isn't worth anything.

Denise Girls Were Drunk. Lincoln, Nebr., March 30—Charges that seven girls from Omaha high schools were intoxicated in the Lincoln hotel during the recent state high school basketball tournament, were denied today by Karl Heumann, manager of the hotel.

The charges were made in an Omaha newspaper last night. The story stated that the incident was revealed when one of the girls came into the lobby of the hotel and was escorted back to the room occupied by the girls by a hotel detective.

"If the girls staged a party similar to the one described, it was without the knowledge of any of the hotel management," Heumann said.

Heumann expressed surprise at the charges of rowdiness and immorality made against the tournament by Omaha high school principals, who have announced withdrawal of their schools from future tournaments.

"I was under the impression both from observation and hearsay that the 1925 meet was the cleanest and best conducted ever held," Heumann said.

A pull of other hotel managers of Lincoln today brought similar commendation of the last tournament. Police also denied they had received reports of liquor drinking during the tournament.

As Arbor Day, April 22, came on Sunday the boys were allowed on Monday with appropriate exercises at the Bressler park. It was thought the park would look best if the trees were planted in an order of their size and this plan was carried out. All grades of the public school marched to the park and took part in the program, singing songs and watching the planting of trees. E. B. Lindberg gave an address. Each grade had one tree which belonged to the group and this was named on some historical character. Some grades put bottles containing names of pupils beneath the trees. J. P. Gaertner drew a sketch of the park as it will look in years to come.

From Ponca Journal, March 28, 1882.

Prairie fires raged through the county on Friday and Saturday in all directions, blowing in every direction, with the exception of the west, the fires, excepting fences, stacks of hay, and along the river in the timber. At North Bend there was considerable hay burned and some fences, and many houses and barns had narrow escapes. All over the county the people were alike in the breathing danger, and were vigilant in their efforts to subdue the flames. Mr. Landon, who lives between Ponca and Torrta, tells us that in his neighborhood the fires did some damage, the principal losses being Gen. Materson's fences.

On Saturday afternoon soaring fires made raids on the fair grounds, conning it was reported, from the direction of the farmers of J. Wilber and Mrs. Western. The fires ran over the fair grounds, burning the dry grass, but an alarm-hauling being given to the citizens of the town were seen to have kept the fences and buildings from being wiped out. So that, aside from the loss of timber and the burning of the fair grounds was nothing.

In the valley and on the hills, across the creek and south of town, numerous fires were seen. As a general thing the efforts of the residents saved them from severe loss.

An "Indiana-Amelia" pig was lost about 50 tons seemed to be a quantity of feed. We also learn that the judge had considerable timber burned near the river including a large number of fence posts.

In the timber along the river the fire raged like a furnace. The timber on both sides of the river for long distance up and down, seemed to be burning. It ran through several hundred acres for John Stough and A. S. Porter, burning the young trees and doing much damage.

From the north a wall of fire advanced on the town and came near burning Messrs. Kryger and Gibson's houses.

It was an exciting time, and for a while the city seemed to be surrounded by fire. Thanks to the energy of everybody, the fires were, especially outside of the timber, kept under subjection, except in one instance. The particulars of loss sustained in other parts of the county we have not heard. Doubtless some damage was done, but it is to be hoped that the efforts of the citizens to keep it back from their buildings have been successful.

Utilizing Labor On Farm To Advantage

Lincoln, Neb., March 27.—The largest item of cost entering into crop production in Nebraska is labor and the farmer's annual income may be materially increased by proper distribution of his labor throughout the year. Prof. H. C. Filley, head of the rural economics department of the University of Nebraska college of agriculture, declared here today.

"Because of the cost of labor, the best method of increasing farm income is to increase the efficiency of the year," Prof. Filley declared. "Records received in Nebraska, and in many other states indicate that the labor income on the typical farm, that is the net return after labor, is usually in almost direct proportion to the number of days of productive labor which the farmer performs during the year. The farmer who has the best income apparently plans their work so as to distribute it as much as possible throughout the year.

"Every farmer who has a good farm realizes that an employer hires a number of men and keeps them at work only a part of the time in inefficient service. Our records indicate that the same rule applies whether the man is working for himself or hiring some one else.

"Crop production occupies only a part of the year. Other profitable labor or employment must be found for the rest of the months. The care of livestock probably is utilized as a winter occupation more than any one thing in Nebraska. The feeding of cattle or hogs or the care of dairy cows all contribute their part to providing remunerative labor for the winter months. In recent years the care of poultry has occupied an increasing amount of time."

No man, Prof. Filley said, can expect to receive a large income conducting a small business. One method of increasing farm business is to increase the farm acreage.

"It is a matter of course," he found, "it is impossible for all farmers in Nebraska to increase their acreage." The best method is to produce things requiring considerable labor instead of selling hay and grain. The poultry industry when properly carried on provides not only a market for feed but is a profitable utilization of labor."

McCormick-Deering Triple-Power Tractors

The power take-off, which is considered the greatest single tractor improvement made in over ten years, is the original feature on McCormick-Deering tractors. It consists of a shaft attached to the rear end of the transmission and driven by power transmitted direct from the engine. It is enclosed to protect it from dust and dirt. It can be used at the same time as the belt pulley, if desired. The power take-off operates in very much the same way as a propeller shaft, and drives the mechanism of the pulled machines, such as tractor binders, rice binders, corn pickers, etc. It enables these machines to do more work and do it more satisfactorily under very adverse conditions than could be done by a tractor in low or in second gear. It can be run when the tractor is standing still. This is an advantage in clearing the pulled machine in case it should become clogged. It would prove a real advantage to you in selecting a tractor to be sure that it can be equipped with a real power take-off. Because power farmers are finding more and more uses for power take-off.

McCormick-Deering P & O Little Wonder Plov

The No. 2 Little Wonder combines every feature essential to good plowing with a mechanical design which puts plenty of strength where it is needed yet produces a plow that is very light in draft and as light in weight as it is possible to build a good plow. It is a plow—it is no dead weight. The hitch is flexible when the plow is at work—vital to good work.

McCormick-Deering Corn Planters

Great Accuracy, combined with a wide range of adaptability to the requirements of plants of corn, beans and other crops under varying conditions. McCormick-Deering planters and drills, the aim has been not to find something radically different and untried, but to give the American corn grower a simpler, more practical combination of the principles which particular farmers have found good. The result is a line of planters and drills which meet all the planting requirements of the most important sections where corn is grown. As is always the case, greater dependability and increased accuracy follow simplification of design.

Dempster

Dempster Windmills

Let us show you these windmills and their perfect working parts.

ROLLER BEARINGS, SELF-OILING

In making selection of a windmill a person should carefully consider what kind of service and durability he might expect. All old-type mills required one to climb the tower to oil it. Hence, it was usually neglected, resulting in a hard-running, short-lived mill. The Dempster Mill Mfg. Co., in keeping with the age of improvements and inventions have gone farther than anyone else and are giving you a mill with Timken Roller Bearings, Running in Fluid Oil. And to prevent any possibility of leakage, we use a thick felt washer around the main shaft and as a still further precaution we have a method of sealing the Timken bearing with hard oil. This in no way detracts from the proper lubrication of the bearing, but acts as a sheath to prevent the loss of the fluid oil. This insures Easy Running and Long Life. Also one that is easily and quickly repaired. In the use of these bearings we were able to make the mill more compact, reducing the weight but with more strength.

No Wear on the Shaft.—All the wear is on the bearings. No replacement of the shaft will ever be necessary from wear.

Trust Bearings Not Needed. These bearings being cone shaped take care of all end pressure, an automatic take-up provides for any wear in the bearings.

MACHINE CUT EQUALIZING GEARS

The large gears are machine cut, as are all gears in the very finest machinery. This makes the gears run more smoothly and increases their life very materially. The gears are separate, each carrying its share of the load, it is difficult to get double gears to a shaft and equalize the load between them. With the arrangement on this mill it is impossible to throw an extra load on one gear. Each one has to do its equal share, which tends to reduce wear and prevent strain and breakage. The position of the pitmans in an almost perpendicular lift on the crossheads reduces the friction and wear. The small pinions which carry the greatest strain are made of steel.

Athletics, Longevity of Cetera. Omaha World-Herald. Some interesting statistics of the class of 1927 of Princeton university have been collected as a feature of the centennial of the class.

Naturally the relationship between athletics and longevity is brought out in these statistics. They show that of the twenty members of the class who were members of one of the athletic teams are now living, or an average of 50 per cent, whereas but 21 per cent of their non-athletic classmates survive. Why then, three cheering cheers for football. There's a practical demonstration of its value for a long life.

But softly, softly. Here is another statistic that is quite as interesting. Of the ten men standing high in the class who were athletic survivors, while of the ten who were at the foot of the class but two survive. Indisputable proof apparent that scholarship is quite as fruitful of longevity as athletics.

But if scholarship is shown to rival athletics as an incentive to long life, athletics appear nearly as good a stimulant to success as scholarship. Of the six scholars still living, three, or 50 per cent are in "Who's Who." Of the ten athletes living four, or 40 per cent, are in the same publication.

If some college class could just contrive to combine athletic prowess and scholarship in the same group of men what a galaxy of grand old men it might be able to point to 50 or 75 years later.

Crusade Against Illiteracy. Sioux City Journal. A crusade has been launched against illiteracy with the hope that no person may be found by census takers of 1930 who cannot read and write. The crusaders have hitched their wagon to a star, although the movement is highly commendable.

Minneapolis Journal. No wonder they look that way. Pennine-American is reported to have spent last year $300,000,000 on beauty shops.

Long and Short Haul Rates. Nebraska Farmer. The intermountain states near the west coast are vigorous in their advocacy of the Gooding Long and Short Haul Bill. This proposed law would compel the railroads to give interior points the advantage of the same rates on short hauls that they make to coast points in competition with water rates. As it is now, interior points on the west coast find it cheaper to take advantage of the rate to the coast and pay the additional "rate" than to register the short haul rates, or if they desire, they can use water rates for the long haul and rail for the short haul. Their theory is that if the railroads were compelled to make a uniform rate regardless of the length of the haul, the interior would get the advantage of lower rates.

The theory is faulty in this, that the railroads would increase transcontinental rates if for their own reason than out of sheer necessity, for the volume of transcontinental traffic is undoubtedly very much less than it is for the interior. There is a division of business between rail and water where both systems can render service, but the railroads gat all where water transportation is not available. Assuming that the railroads would raise their rates instead of lowering them, this section of the country would stand to get decidedly the worst of the bargain. Under present conditions the railroads—moving cars westward to take care of the movement of grain and livestock, the major percentage of which goes east. This enables them to give a lower transcontinental rate and meet water competition, thus lowering the overall cost of moving cars that otherwise would be empty. Should they be obliged to make a higher rate, the transcontinental business that they now handle would go by water, and the less on handling empty cars westward would be enough greater that they would have to recover it in the eastward movement of farm products.

The question is rather too involved for the average layman to solve or understand, but it is not difficult to realize that the encroachments of water, trucks and automobiles do not promise early relief from existing freight and passenger rates. We do not think this should stay practical movements for the development of the most economical and efficient methods of handling the transportation of the country. Neither do we think the railroads should be so embarrassed by the competition of governmentally aided agencies that they cannot handle the necessary freight traffic economically.

Milady Will Wear Them on Easter -

A hat like this, a dress like this, a suit like this and a coat like this—and lo, Milady is all ready for the zephyrs of re-springing!

The hat, says Dame Fashion, must be trig and trim as a sun captain's fr. castle, built to weather any gale, snug-fitting to the pate, tilted over one eye, part straw, part felt or fabric, this hat is of fine black straw with black satin and eye-colored buckle.

The suit, trimly tailored as a man's, is of hairline hosiery blue with Sally Mitten designer. Uses the fluff girls to make it even more snugly mantling. With the suit Milady doesn't actually need the equally trim street coat, although she would enjoy it with her summer dresses. If a coat doesn't have a cape attached this spring, it must have the swag-girlish cape effect as does this one from Anna Weber. Plaid, mixtures, checks, fashion the year's coats.

As for the dress, it's print, and enough's said. Print leads all other fabrics this year. It's palins for morning, afternoon and night. This one is of black with blue and olive pattern.

Business.

Sioux City Journal: Secretary of the Treasury Mellon was in error in making his estimate of revenue receipts, but is delighted that such was the case. Tax records now promise to go to a new record and the head of the department attributes this to the renewed confidence on the part of business generally. Business, he explained, anticipated the action of congress in cutting down the burden of taxation and made, in consequence, broader plans in expectation of having less taxes to pay. The result, he insists, is found in an increased number of taxable resources, with a present beneficial effect on revenue.

Income tax receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30 next will exceed those of the fiscal year ending June 30 last, although the rates of 1924 law were higher. From last July 1 to March 1 the total receipts were $1,650,677,254 and for the same period in the previous fiscal year they were $1,430,040,538. Mr. Mellon predicts that the March quarterly receipts will exceed $420,000,000. On that basis, he figures, receipts for the current fiscal year will approach, or exceed $1,791,000,000 as compared with the total of $1,760,900,000 from the same sources in 1925.

All this, of course, is expected to mean a change in the treasury department's figure as to the surplus that would be enjoyed this year and on which congress intended the revenue measure which reduced federal taxes nearly $400,000,000. It is recalled that the department put the figure at $330,000,000 and that house passed a bill reducing taxes in the amount of $327,000,000. The senate increased the reductions more to $450,000,000, and a compromise was effected with the total in the reduction being close to $390,000,000.

It begins to appear, after all, that the senate may have been even closer to the figure to which it would have been said to reduce the federal income. Naturally the treasury department cannot say definitely whether the total receipts will be as large as is now expected, but Mr. Mellon is cautious by nature and habit and the aggregate probably will be as large as he predicts.

It goes without saying that business has been encouraged by the government policy on taxation and has invested heavily in taxable property as a result. Expansion has come in place of the announcement that new billions had been invested in tax free securities. Capital does not mind paying taxes at reduced rates but in larger volume if it is given an opportunity to develop income from actual investments that produce new wealth.

Mr. Mellon's inference that business was encouraged by promises of reduced taxation no doubt is correct in a measure. It should not be forgotten, however, that there was yet another encouragement to business found in governmental administration. Business probably has been as greatly encouraged by the liberal policy of noninterference with industry generally as by promises of tax reduction. More business in government and less government in business—this policy has been giving both the Harding and Coolidge administrations, has gone far to influence American industrial growth that only could come through expansion bred of confidence.

Egg Production Increases.

Lincoln, Neb., March 27.—Present conditions indicate that production of eggs will be somewhat larger and prices lower during 1926, F. K. Reed, assistant state and federal crop statistician, said in a report issued today. The poultry crop, the report said, will probably be as large if not larger than in 1925 due to a larger number of chickens on farms. This will favorably affect the latter part of the year rather than save the hens for egg production.

Egg production in Nebraska increased from 61,768,000 dozen in 1924 to 62,625,000 dozen in 1925. This increase was brought out by an increase in the average number of layers on farms together with an increase in the number of eggs a hen. The number of laying hens on farms the first of this year was slightly larger than January, 1925, and due to favorable weather egg production during January and February of this year has been well above that of a year ago. This increase during the first months together with a greater quantity of storage eggs being put on the market accounts for the present decline in egg prices.

The student who tells is the one who can smile when everything goes wrong.

Why is it necessary to have a "Blue Tuesday" or a "Blue Wednesday" or any other day? It takes much less effort to be discouraged—to look on the bright side of life than to be a pessimist and to have a friendly, cheerful attitude toward things than to be disagreeable, glum and discontented.
