RIOT OF NERVES

Every growing season people's nerves go on a rampage over crop conditions. This year with a prospect of a bumper crop, the tension has been pitched higher than usual. Farmers and townspeople alike lift or lower their spirits according to the better or the elements as affecting corn and other crops. This year the rainfall has favored the localist, the farmer, and the normal farmer report an almost normal condition of their corn. Others look for only a half crop, and many in the favored localities, do not seem to expect that much. But the rains early this week which have been general, have greatly stimulated the prospect. One farmer said he believed the corn would average a larger crop this year than last. He said rain in one field would vary in growth and quality. It is agreed that plenty of moisture from now on will be a great help. The corn decides reviving pastures and increasing hay production. It is believed the shortened corn crop generally throughout the middle west will be a stimulus to higher prices. But the period for fluctuating nerves will soon be over, and the farmers here and there will be greater than had been expected. Doubts they will find that the harvest will be a considerable measure unwarranted.

"DYNAMOMETER"

"Dynamometer" which is to be employed in pulling contests at the county fair last fall has been put over on us as a new word, as some may have suspected, but it has a very comfortable status in standard dictionaries for a long time, and it really means something worthwhile. It is defined as an apparatus for measuring force, and it is dedicated to such a worthy purpose that we are sorry it has not come into more popular use. Every one engaged in useful endeavor ought to have a "dynamometer" to measure the force that is being developed in order to see if results are commensurate therewith. We are going to order a car load to distribute among our readers.

Wayne Farmer Takes Own Life

Deceased Leaves Note Explaining That No One Is Responsible For His Act.

Herman Damme died at Farm Southeast of Here Monday From Self-Inflicted Shot.

Herman Damme who lived alone on a farm three miles south and one-half mile east of Wayne, died Monday morning from a wound inflicted from a self-inflicted shot through the head. When the report of the gun was heard, Carl Damme, brother of deceased who lives with his parents about the fourth of a mile from the Herman Damme home, was the first to go to the scene. The body of Mr. Damme was lying outside the door of his home. A twelve-gauge single barrel shotgun was in his hand and he was holding a rifle with which he had pulled the trigger.

Fred S. Perry, county attorney, and William Beckenauer, undertaker, were called immediately. They reached the premises about 9:45 and found that nothing had been disturbed. "Lying on the floor in the home they found a note, written by Mr. Damme, saying that no one was to blame for his death. The note stated that extreme grief had been very kind to deceased. In the message Mr. Damme expressed regret for the fact that he had not known what he did not know what had come over him.

No inquest was held as a suicide was the cause of the death. "The Blind Goddess" At Crystal Theatre

Justice, as it is dispensed in the criminal courts, comes in for a sound spanking, and the reliability of circumstantial evidence receives a knockout blow in Victor Fleming's thrilling romance-drama, "The Blind Goddess," which appears at the Crystal theatre on Friday and Saturday of this week.

This picture version of Arthur Train's exciting novel of the same name is a strong dramatic vehicle with a murder-mystery for its plot basis and with kaleidoscopic New York for its colorful locale. The romance of young love, the pathos of self-sacrificing mother-love, the sinister side of politics, the smart social atmosphere of Fifth Avenue, the blundering efforts of the law, symbolized by "the blind goddess," all these are elements in the story that grips the interest, stirs the emotions and serves to provide an hour of rare entertainment.

Victor Fleming has not only made a workmanlike job of the direction but he has provided a cast whose individual performances and collective acting emphasize and intensify the emotional-power and dramatic sweep of the story.

Jack Hill, as the young lawyer who dares to sacrifice the girl he loves to remain true to his ideal of duty, plays in his usually capable fashion. Esther Holman, the personification of feminine loveliness, gives an excellent account of herself in a role that makes heavy demands on her histrionic ability. Ernest Torrence proves he can handle comedy and drama with equal deftness; and Louise Dresser adds to her laurels with her compelling portrayal of the pitiful mother.

This dynamometer is mounted on a truck and will be driven from one fair to the next by an engineer sent with the machine by the university.

E. B. Lewis of Weldona, Colo., has been engaged to handle the first machine going out. W. H. Forsyth, formerly in the employ of the Horse Association of America, will also go out by engineers of the Iowa state college and supervise the hitching of the teams, the pulling contests and pass upon the fitness of the horses and the harness. The work of both of these men will be educational.

They will discuss with the farmers and teamsters horses, harness, collar fitting, ways to train horses to pull, etc.

These men have been working with the dynamometer at the agricultural college during the past week, testing it with the college teams.

The dynamometer will be one of the attractions of the Wayne county fair.

Dynamometer For Pulling Contests

Lincoln Journal—Nebraska's first horse pulling contest will be "pulled off" at the Adams county fair at Hastings this coming week.

Thirteen more similar contests will be held at county fairs and the state fair this fall. Each of them will be a test of horses and harnessing.

The University of Nebraska has purchased two Collins dynamometers and will send them to the fairs. They hope to encourage the breeding of good horse, good training, proper harnessing, and to determine the type of horse that will pull with both strength and endurance.

Every good farmer in Nebraska either owns or has sometimes owned a team that would get right down and stretch, and every Nebraska farmer loves to see a pulling match between teams, the University horse-puller says. Interest in these contests and the state fair contests were rising since the contests were held several months ago.

County fair visitors have come to the fairs for years to see the "hoss race," but this year they can see something more of contest of strength and endurance.

The machine to which the teams will be hitched in the contest is designed to give the team the same load while they are pulling that they must exert to start the load. A system of weights, pulleys and brakes worked out by engineers of the Iowa state college makes this possible. When a team is hitched to the ordinary wagon or truck they must exert several times as much power to start the load as it takes to keep it moving. In the contest the team must pull the dynamometer 27 1/2 feet without stopping.

This dynamometer is mounted on a truck and will be driven from one fair to the next by an engineer sent with the machine by the university.

E. B. Lewis of Weldona, Colo., has been engaged to handle the first machine going out. W. H. Forsyth, formerly in the employ of the Horse Association of America, will also go out by engineers of the Iowa state college and supervise the hitching of the teams, the pulling contests and pass upon the fitness of the horses and the harness. A clever idea!

Three of the new Aluminex utensils—each of them necessary in every kitchen.

(1) Sauce-pot. (2) Collander. (3) Mixing Bowl.

But now see what happens when you start using them in combination.

Your sauce-pot with its dome-shaped cover and heat-proof knob is an excellent self-heating double roaster.

Used with the collander it becomes a steamer to which meat or food can be boiled while several vegetables can be at the same time steamed. If desired this can be done in a heat-controlled oven.

Used with the mixing bowl, it gives you a wonderful double-boiler of unusually large water capacity—just the thing for rice and other slow-cooking cereals.

The beautiful new cover can also be used as a separate dish, handy as a peeling tray or for other things.

These convenient combination uses are possible only with

If one who is engaged in building operations, considered all the free advice that is offered, he would travel in a circle and get nowhere. He would slip in the air most of the time, struggling for a footing. In addition he would go crazy.

We have been offered for publication a series of lessons in auction bridge. We think our people are well up on a bridge—except without special instruction. If they could play bridge better, they might, through such excess, do useful things worse.

A man who has put in every summer studying agricultural conditions and viewing with alarm, comes forward at this time with the encouraging opinion that late rains will work wonders in reinstating corn and other crops. When a man who sifts the evidence with infinite care, usually

AS A TRADE CENTER.
 We are pleased to note that Wayne's business district is growing in popularity. Its trade territory has been largely extended. People are coming here from longer distances, due mainly to a combination of improved roads and increasingly attractive mercantile stocks. Once in the habit, people like to come to Wayne. People are friendly here, and customers, whether they buy little or much, are treated cordially. Thus, they come back, and they mark Wayne down as their home town. Incidentally, the Herald has a part in trade development by its growing means to spread the messages of local dealers among people in all sections of the surrounding country.

regarding the prospect with might, issue a reassuring note, we feel distinctly better.
 Wisner is putting on a home-talent show this week, and reports indicate that it has been a big success in both attractions and attendance. The cost is light, and the net returns go into the treasury of a local organization sponsoring the undertaking. Most towns, like Wisner, have plenty of good talent which may be used in a chaufaquas program.

The war over religion in Mexico reminds one of ancient times when state and church battled for supremacy. In the old days people fought harder and endured more in the name of religion than anything else. The United States whose government was founded on a rock of religious liberty, state and church have been kept separate and there has been little serious trouble.

John V. Pearson, lawyer at Ponca for many years, died recently in Spokane following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Pearson grew up on a Nebraska farm, was graduated from a law school and opened an office in Ponca. A number of years ago he moved to Spokane. He built his large law practice on merit, and his sterling integrity won and held an army of warm friends. He stood high as a lawyer and high as a citizen.

We would advise American sight-seers to stay away from Paris. Any one from the United States seems now to draw attack from the inflammable French. A report states that a party of American tourists could not get through a garage, and that a French mob, believing the Americans had waded over to see the building burn and glid over the sea, turned loose a storm of insults, aggravated with a shower of rocks. People should erase Paris from their itineraries.

Editor Stone of the Hartington Herald says he spent one night recently dreaming about Custer's last stand. He saw the battle from start to finish. He saw Custer and his soldiers meet the surprise attack from a mob of wild redskins. One thing worked into the dream—that probably did not happen, was a little game of ball engaged in by two excited bears who playfully flung a human skull back and forth across the fighting area. We wonder what will happen to Stone's nocturnal imaginings. We also wonder what he had been eating.

If it is a fact, as related by the Hartington Herald, that an insect had built its cocoon in a Belden man's ear, it was doubtless due to the drouth and to the need of conserving the water supply ordinarily appropriated for washing cars. If an ear is just dragged around, without any evidence of care, the natural presumption would be that it was not being used and that it was subject to squatter's rights. Not knowing the full facts, we would hesitate to take sides either with the trespassing insect or with the man who now claims to have had a prior ownership or title to the ear.

MELLOWED BY AGE.
 Most people as they grow older gradually lose their pugnacity and vindictiveness. Usually a young man likes to defend his ground even if it is an imaginary one. As years multiply, he comes more acutely to sense the rights of others; and he is more careful to avoid injury to another's feelings or interference with another's privileges. As age advances, one is more anxious to build a record that has been helpful, rather than hurtful. One wants to free himself from bile, hatefulness, spite and thorns. He does not want to be known as one who is grudging and inconsiderate. He wants a reputation for charity and kindness. He wants the approval of just and high-minded people. He wants the approval of his own conscience to which he is permanently and inseparably hitched.

The will of the late William Warlock, millionaire manufacturer of Sioux City, makes liberal provision for his trusted employes as well as for his relatives. He opens the way for his employes to own and carry on the business in which he had cashed and developed. It is a wonderfully thoughtful document, seeking a distribution of wealth which the testator believed would help society most. He gave his immediate relatives ample bequests, but not such an abundance as would exceed need or break the bounds of prudence, but for associates and helpers he included provision that would give them a mandate and encourage them in constructive business operations.

We notice a comparatively young man is mentioned as having sold out in order to secure his "much needed rest." Notwithstanding that he may have reaped more than necessary before he sold out, the phrase is employed to ease him into retirement. In social standing "a much needed rest" travels with "He has gone to his rest," or "to his reward," which implies plenty of rest and such creative sports as he may desire. When whipped into place by kindly newspaper reporters, they back-nerved phrases limp like a horse with a nail in its foot. But it is almost tragic to use "a much needed rest" in connection with one who is already rested or whose chief life work is to rest.

Five ballots were submitted to voters at Tuesday's primary, and each of two, the progressive and LaFollette independent, had only two candidates. The two candidates were sure of being nominated, and just as sure of being defeated in the general election next November. The cost of printing ballots to permit two candidates to run is very considerable, though it may be defended on the ground of perpetuating a political vehicle for possible future service. The prohibition ballot which was in the field two years ago with a few candidates, was eliminated this year on account of no candidates.

The letter of Georges Clemenceau, wartime premier of France, and each of two to President Coolidge and dealing with settlement of debts growing out of the world war, is evidently calculated to satisfy at some time in the future the French people as to influence the American government. It should be understood that the proposed settlement, subject to the ratification of both governments, called for repayment of only a small part of the debt. Clemenceau who helped make the obligation with promise to pay, but who would now repudiate all of it, explains how France fought and suffered while America delayed in getting into the war. America did not start the war, but exercised every peaceful means to end it after it had been started. Finally, forced to enter the conflict, it placed all its resources of man and money at the command of the cause. It fortified France at a crucial time, and gave its men and its millions without expecting the least material reward. It was not America's war, but it was won by American resources. The loud acclaim with which France welcomed American men and money sent to the rescue, should have had sufficient foundation to bolster up a willingness to satisfy at some time in the future the stipulated fraction of the original loans received with pledges of repayment.

Have Interesting Trip For Editors

National Association Visits San Gabriel Valley, Long Beach and Orange Empire.

Associations of the state societies of southern California planned a picnic July 13 in Sycamore Grove park near Los Angeles for the National Editorial Association delegates who were in association the first of July. E. H. Hines, formerly of the National Editorial Association of the Nebraska group. As it was the day before the Fourth and as many had gone to the mountains or other spots, the number present was not as large as at most such picnics.

Visit San Gabriel Valley. San Gabriel Valley motor tour was scheduled for Monday. July 13. Through Bolvedere Gardens, a city of 25,000 which has been built on the public site of the old mission. Here we went to Pico. Here we saw the home of Pio Pico, last Spanish governor of California. After leaving San Gabriel, we passed the mountains, we passed through groves of oranges, lemons, avocados and grapefruits, where also are many oil wells. At Hillgrove the party was taken through a citrus packing plant. Lemons were being washed in large vats, run through brushes for cleaning and drying, and wrapped and packed in boxes.

The group then went to Puente, the center of the world's largest walnut packing house. Here there are 8,000 acres of the smooth-bark walnut near trees. THE FRUIT resembles the smooth white grapes here. The nuts look like large, green marbles hanging on the trees at this time of year. The great mature trees are just in time for the Christmas trade.

Worlds Only Lion Farm. In the heart of this productive valley is the world's only lion farm, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Gay. Ninety percent of the motion pictures using lions are made with animals from this farm. The lions are kept in cages where animals aged from 10 days to 7 years old. The grounds are arranged to suit the native surroundings of the animals, the trees and plants being those grown in jungles. Mr. and Mrs. Gay have trained most of the animals and they gave an exhibition. One horse a day is fed to the eighty-six lions.

Claremont, home of Pomona college, was reached at noon. The city is at the foot of a snow-capped mountain. On one of the high points of the mountains is a "Red" made by students of Pomona college by cutting trees away and leaving rock.

Visit to Long Beach. As many Wayne people live in Long Beach, the trip there was one of most interest. After going through the large industrial district of Los Angeles, the group went to Wilmington and Long Beach. At the latter place, after attending the program of diving, etc., at the wharf, we visited Long Beach. The program at the limited time allowed, and we saw Mrs. Henry Ley, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Ley and children, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Wightman, Miss Suzanne Wightman, Miss Laura Lyons, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Brown and their daughter and two-week old granddaughter.

The afternoon in Long Beach included a ride to Signal Hill, the residence section of the city which has been added to an old field within the past few years. The hill was an ideal location for homes. Now oil derricks cover the place.

Through Orange Empire. The editors was the one to the Fontana farms, Riverside and San Bernardino. A two-hour ride on the fast branch of electric trains took us to the Fontana farms which are owned by a large company and sold to individuals in small tracts, usually five acres or a farm. An acre costs about $1,200 and the amount is paid to the company in small payments. Oranges, grapes, grape fruit and vegetables are raised by some. More, however, raise chickens for egg production. Often the raising of fruit is carried on with chickens. The acre has from 1,000 to 2,000 chickens on one acre and White Leghorns are the variety predominating. For returns from raising eggs are more than in raising chickens for meat. It may be interesting to note in California rabbits are served at many banquets in place of chickens. It is difficult to tell the difference between a half rabbit and half of a spring chicken when cooked. Water on the farms costs about $3.50 a year and the farmers take turns in using it. Chickens cost 16c each and feed costs about $100 a month. It is figured that on each chicken the owner clears $12.25 a year. The largest hog ranch in the world is at Fontana farms and is committed-owned. Pigs are raised. Train loads of garbage from Los Angeles are taken to the farm. Ten cars of feed are used each day and a derrick lifts it from the cars to the pens. The cement troughs at the pens are washed, a steam hose sterilizing the place each day. There are 45,000 hogs in the yards.

Riverside and Mission Inn. From the farms the group went to Riverside, riding up Mt. Rubidoux where services are held each Easter morning at sunrise. On top of the mountain is a large cross. Rock of the peak is the monument of the cut into steps to make it easier for the thousands of people who attend the services.

Behind Mr. Rubidoux, the outstanding place of interest in Riverside is Mission Inn. This inn is the life work of Frank Miller. The genius of his sister and a dream inspired the building of this world-famous place. Spanish architecture predominates. The building contains many rooms which are filled with the finest-most exquisite pieces of furniture, pictures and other art work. In the chapel are a pipe organ, large outwaded armchairs and everything that adds beauty. In another room is a golden altar which Mr. Miller bought from a wealthy Spanish family in Mexico. It stands in an open court while Spanish musicians entertain from the balcony. The mission bells ring often. To enter the inn one feels far removed from jazz and carried back to the best of art which has been accumulated by years of travel and study. Street lights in Riverside resemble the mission in bells, three bell-shaped shades being placed on a cross. Ross Hammond of Fremont, now at Riverside, told us that the Mission Inn has made a harmony of feeling and brought an appreciation of beauty to the people of the city.

The N. E. A. party went from Riverside to San Bernardino, the home of the national orange show. Here we drove through the mammoth arch-roofed pavilion which each winter is packed with fruit.—Dorothy Hise Nyberg.

When a Man's Seventy. Quaha World-Herald: Whatever relationship there may be between the family and the mental man, whether the product of his intellect may be due to molecular action or a gift from God, it is quite apparent that mental growth, maturity and decay do not parallel the same process physically.—A man is at his physical best in the first half of his life. He is probably seldom ever better at a later age than on the day of his majority. He may acquire more skill through practice and the co-ordination of his physical powers, but it is doubtful if his nerves, his muscles, his vital organs are ever better than at that time. By the time he has reached 30 the athlete has generally begun somewhat to slow-down. By 35 he is frequently "drooping." The man who at 40 still remains active in his athletic pursuits or other strenuous sports is a marvel.

But while he is slowing down physically he is growing mentally. It is hard to say at just what period the stage of greatest intellectual vigor is reached. Because so many of the leaders in business, politics, religion, the professions are to be found between the ages of 40 and 50 are inclined to view these thirty years as the period of his intellectual prime. But Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner of Chicago, who is himself just at the beginning of the period, says a man is at his mental best at 70. Contrary to being on the shelf at 70, his intellect is at its best.

There seems to be no good reason to doubt the soundness of Dr. Bundesen's observation. In spite of the fact that the United States army retires its officers at 64 and many industries pension off old employees, including capable executives, at a similar early age, it seems to be an age of exceptional mental capacity. We have often thought that a lot of good brains were going to waste as a result of arbitrary retirement systems.

One needs go no further than the recent seventieth birthday dinner for George Bernard Shaw for an illustration of Dr. Bundesen's point. If that terrific mental engine which has produced the Shavian contributions to the world of ideas is not working as smoothly, as swiftly and as efficiently as it ever worked then the fact is not apparent to an observing world. Elbert H. Gary at 70 directs the vast affairs of the United States Steel company. Edison at 79 still carries on patiently and persistently in his laboratory. The list could be extended indefinitely.

In the United States senate the names that first occur to one as marking the leadership in that body are mostly all those of men who have reached the so-called retirement age. Curtis, Underwood, Norris, Walsh, Smoot, and Reed are all of the age past 61, when the army is through with a man.—Senator Warren, chairman of the finance committee, is 72. Sherman, minority leader, is 72. Cummings died at 76 and La Follette who was the same vigorous scrapper to the end of his death as when first routed the bosses of Wisconsin passed away at 70.

It is physical rather than mental capacity that gives the impression so often that 70 or thereabouts is a good time to quit. And here is where Dr. Bundesen comes in with his advice again. He says a man ought to safeguard his health during his young and vigorous years as to carry him through to the days of his great intellectual strength.

Knocking on the logic town with the customary crepe banging is not restricted to small towns and cities, according to a receipt editorial in the Omaha Bee. The Bee says:

"In 'Sunny Side Up' recently appeared the following short but very comprehensive statement. It is worthy of repetition and careful study by every citizen of Omaha."

"Ordinarily we find our vocabulary and the very best we can do, is to say, 'You!'"

"At the reunion and barbecue on Thursday, the third day of the county fair, there was served up a monstrous, great, big, fat ox. The largest and fattest ox that can be secured will be taken up to the fair grounds, and here, after having been appropriately knocked in the head, skinned and otherwise duly and truly prepared for cremation, he will be planted on the glowing fire of a wood, and roasted whole. After he has been cooked, and it will take a day and night to do it, he will be carved and distributed to the people. It will be a grand dinner. The only one who can properly find fault with this program will be you. Still, he will have the consolation of knowing that he died in a good cause."

A Hot Day Causes Many More Telephone Calls

A very hot day will often cause as many as one-fourth more telephone calls. On such days, more people stay indoors and use the telephone.

Rainy days and very cold days also mean that more telephone calls will be made.

Snow storms, likewise, add to the problem of providing service by tying up transportation and causing people to transact their business by telephone. And frequently sleep stert comes down poles and wires, shutting off service.

Uniformly satisfactory telephone service is our constant aim, but occasionally conditions arise which are temporarily beyond all human control. At such a time we especially appreciate the patience of our patrons, until the situation can be met.

"BELL SYSTEM"
NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY
Our Policy, Our System, Our Standard Service, and All Directed toward Better Service came forth from college with a fine intellectual equipment for the work he is doing, but he knows nothing of the dreth and tedious experience of those who have-but little, and are surrounded by human cultures ready to reach out, looking at him with indifference, only glimpses certain outward symptoms of unhappiness in eyes that are red from weeping, and faces that are ashen and he sometimes thinks to take courage and be comfortable. "We haven't much, they surely have a much to worry about. The beauties of the pale moon, the stars that flick the fassament, the stross, the flowers, the birds, the paved highways, and the streamlets that trickle toward the ocean. And he looks at all and all these, they may have an interest in a heavenly kind, after skidding through this with a harp, a crown and an asbestos snow book.

Exceeding Speed Limit.
Fairbury News.—In a span of virtue Buffalo county put petroleum on the highways and began arresting every auto driver who exceeded the speed limit. They had a glorious time for a while, but they were soon brought up standing by the Lincoln and Omaha auto clubs who indignantly they would proceed to "oust" tourists around the county if they did not desist. Theoretically every person should respect the law, but in actual practice every one knows that no person can drive an automobile on the highways a day without breaking the law dozens of times, and it seems rather a poor policy to place officers on the highways to arrest drivers from other states who are unfamiliar with the laws, and who are driving in a manner that has never before elicited censure. When we get out

"Constructive criticism" is always worn while, but there are too many critics who fall utterly to offer something better than the thing criticized. "The government" is neither worse nor better than its citizenship deserves. A city's prosperity can be no greater than the sum total of the energy its people put into creating that prosperity.

"Instead of blaming the other fellow, why not take a little time out to indulge in introspection, asking yourself if you are doing your part; if you are carrying your share of the load; if you are not contributing to things that is the matter with Omaha."

"There is not much the matter with Omaha. Its chief drawback is the number of citizens who spend more time asking, 'What's the matter with this blasted blank town?' than they do in trying to discover what is really retarding its progress and hindering its prosperity, and then joining with those who are striving to push things along."

"What's the matter with this blasted-blank town?—If you—continue asking that question, to the exclusion of all other efforts, the probable correct answer is 'You'!"

Hope.
Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: A Minneapolis preacher with a very boyish face recently gave a discourse on "Hopelessness," and the utter folly of getting in the dumps about anything. This young preacher was born an eager happy optimist, having the comforts of life supplied by the lavish hands of generous progenitors. The doors swing wide open for him to step across into the atmosphere of a cordial and helpful social environment, and he was spurred to high effort in obtaining an education by both precept and example.

laws-weeded out, so that it is possible to obey all of them, we may then consistently demand a rigid adherence to them. The writer once drove over a stretch of paving in one of the southern states that was patrolled by motorcycle cops who had orders to arrest every driver who exceeded 20 miles an hour. We escaped arrest because a resident of that vicinity gave us a friendly up before we reached the motorcade. But there was no day passed that some unsuspecting honest tourist was not hauled into court and required to contribute to the support of that state, for tourists who are making trips of any length rarely ever drive slower than 30 miles an hour. Unfortunately when some cities or communities start to enforce their traffic rules, they make the tourist who is unfamiliar with them the goat. If this has been the policy in Buffalo county no one can blame the auto associations of the state for retaliating.

Home Bakeries Can Supply You

You are interested in home institutions which are an indirect benefit to you. If they can serve you just as well and as cheaply as outside concerns, it would seem only good judgment to give them your patronage. The two bakeries in Wayne have constant and satisfied customers among the most critical and exacting people. Why should not more families use their products rather than send their money to outside institutions which in no way contribute to the activities or growth of the community?

Try home-made bread and see if it is not as good as any you have ever eaten. Then, in view of no reason for any other course, consider the importance of supporting bakeries that are a part of the community and are lending every possible aid to local development and prosperity.

When you want bread, insist on having the home-made product.

Business. Sioux City Journal: It often has been suggested by Americans whose patriotism has been tried by the conduct of foreign governments and peoples that this country did not need anything from abroad, although they do not go far to say that such relationships should not be encouraged. What they meant was that, if it came right down to a test, America could stand on its own feet. ...

The contention that America could live well shut off from the rest of the world, however, is not wholly in error. Two statements made within the last week tend to support the argument. In the last fiscal year, which ended June 30 last, the United States had a trade balance surplus of over $286,000,000 as against one of $1,000,000,000 the year before. The highest percentage of exports was 75 per cent. But the car loadings in this country for the week ending July 4 reached a total of 1,085,450, the highest ever reported for the year. While America's trade with Europe was declining, domestic demands increased to such an extent that in midsummer shipment of goods was heavier than for any other season. ...

It becomes apparent with these figures that the American domestic trade is of the utmost importance representing as it does such an enormous volume and showing such wonderful opportunities for improvement and expansion. It is not a little thing for a week in the latter part of July, the hottest season of the year, to show heavier shipments of miscellaneous goods than during the winter, the spring and early summer. Assuredly foreign trade is valuable. It represents hundreds of millions of dollars in goods exchanged, and it means, too, that the full industrial capacity of the nation can never be reached nor the economic ambitions realized without buying and selling abroad. The point to be made is that the values attached to domestic trade and always will, however important a place in America's economic plan foreign commerce occupies. A business development of considerable interest in northeastern Iowa, northeastern Nebraska and southeastern North Dakota has been the result of improvement in the corn crop due to rains practically everywhere in Sioux City's trade territory. At this time the livestock raisers of the region will be fair to go in most sections, and while it will not approach bumper figures, it will be far from a failure. There is encouragement in the outlook now. Corn has been heavily

Smart New Rumble Seat For Sport Roadster

Rumble seats are justly popular. They add a smart, rakish touch to roadster lines, and increase the carrying capacity by two passengers.

That Dodge Brothers Sport Roadster now provides this convenience, will be welcome news to thousands.

Like the main seat, it is deeply upholstered in gray Spanish genuine leather, and the seat back is high and well-pitched, providing unusual comfort.

When closed, the rear compartment is absolutely waterproof, even in rainiest weather.

Ample space is provided behind the main seat for golf clubs, suit cases, tennis rackets and similar luggage.

Brilliant pheasant green lacquer body and hood, strikingly in contrast with the tan top, black fenders and full special equipment, complete a general color scheme of exceptional dash and charm.
