Wayne Kiwanis Club Represented at District Convention by Rev. C. L. Stager.

Message Is Read

Supt. T. S. Hook Takes Part and Rev. Fenion C. Jones Reads Paper on Work of Group.

Rev. Coy L. Stager, who represented the Wayne Kiwanis club at the meeting of the trustees, club presidents and secretaries of the Nebraska and Iowa districts, in Lincoln last Friday, gave an account of his trip to the local members Monday. Dr. C. T. Ingham, district trustee, Prof. O. R. Bowen, president, and P. A. Theobald, secretary, were unable to attend the Lincoln meeting. Forty-eight of the fifty clubs of the two states were represented. The purpose of the meeting was that the board, which is the governing body, might plan duties for each club's work.

"We build" is the motto of the group which includes men from all professions and lines of business. Truth and integrity in business, more friendly feeling between different classes of business men and more friendly relations between people of the community are the ideals toward which the club strives. J. C. Hollman of North Platte, lieutenant governor of the club, stressed the importance of using forces of the group in all movements for bettering communities.

The plan this year is to feature the underprivileged child. This is the twelfth anniversary of the Kiwanis organization and Supt. T. S. Hook read the president's message here Monday. In the United States and Canada over 1,000 clubs have been organized in the past twelve years. The next convention will be in Memphis, Tenn. To maintain standing, each club must send a representative to these international conventions at least once in two years, so Wayne should send one to Memphis. The next district meeting will be in Kearney.

Former Member of Staff Writes

Mrs. R. S. Ingham, Nees Miss Marguerite Forbes, Tella of Experiences at Herald.

Mrs. Ralph S. Ingham of Chicago, formerly Miss Marguerite Forbes of Wayne, writes January 16 to the Wayne Herald as follows:

"I can think of no place I would rather be Saturday afternoon of this week than in Wayne at the formal opening of the new Wayne Herald plant. When I was shown through the spic-and-span building while in Wayne during the holidays, I couldn't help but feel that I was on the Herald payroll about ten years too soon.

"I remembered a bit too vividly, perhaps, those winter mornings when Mr. Huse and I used to read proof almost on top of the old stove so that we got the effect of having our heads in torrid regions and our feet in the frigid one. I wonder, then, if I could in the present time do up a steam-heated office with every corner comfortable even on sub-zero mornings.

"And having enough room! In my day every time we wanted room to lay out a double-page spread we had to clear off the front counter, pile the exchanges on the floor, stack completed job printing on a chair, carry the paste-pot gingerly to a safe resting place to keep out of the way of the hundreds and one varieties of printed material that just naturally flooded into a newspaper office. If my original enthusiasm hadn't faded away by the time the deck was cleared, it would have further sinking spells as we tried to concentrate during heated arguments often resulting when someone dropped in to chat with the editor.

"But as I try to imagine the pure joy of writing copy and working out 'dummies' on a shiny, new desk instead of a battered old counter and with all those spirited conversations going on behind closed doors in the inner 'sanctum' which the new building provides for the editor's callers, I somehow am glad that I belonged to the old regime. I honestly believe that half the fascination of 'cubbing' on the Herald lay in the fact that I had a chance to listen in on these discussions that embraced everything from religion to the best way of storing seed.

"It was during those years, 1916-1917, I believe, that the Herald was experiencing its first pronounced growing pains. Instead of seeing only Wayne, the editor's kind eyes glimpsed Wakefield, Winside and Carroll on the horizon. He argued that each of these towns was entitled to a special department in the Herald and that someone on the staff should visit each town every week to gather the news. At that time the staff comprised only the editor and myself and, accordingly, it was planned that I become the journeying reporter.

"But covering Winside, Carroll and Wakefield before the advent of a car on the Herald staff was something else again. Especially since we needed at least half the copy for the first runs Tuesday and Wednesday. I used to go to Carroll Monday morning, gather news frantically by phone and by foot and write it up on the train riding back to Wayne right after lunch. Then I'd turn over the finished copy to Mr. Huse, who met the train, and myself go on to Wakefield in the afternoon. Tuesday morning I'd repeat the process with Winside, my objective and in the afternoon when I got back to the office I had such a jumble of notes on weddings, new babies, accidents, church news and the social affairs of the three towns that I marvelled this day I didn't get them more mixed up than I did.

"But there were many amusing incidents that enlivened these tours, which became more or less hectic when trains were late or my regular scouts had no tips for me. For instance, on one of my first visits to Carroll the town was agog over an accident. I heard about it on my first call, but news was scarce and I had learned that it didn't do to tell a 'scout' that I already had a story for fear of antagonizing him or dulling his ardor for gathering news the next week. As a result I had to listen to eleven different versions of that accident from eleven different people and the eleventh was still relating the gruesome details as I (Continued on Page Twelve)

Injured While Shelling Corn

Chris Wiese Near Winside, Loses Part of Foot as Result of Accident.

Flywheel Is Broken

Fragments of Machine Strike Farmer in Three Places on Left Limb Monday.

Chris Wiese living three miles west and three miles south of Winside, was seriously injured Monday afternoon while shelling corn. The flywheel broke and the pieces struck Mr. Wiese on the left leg. The knee cap was crushed and both bones between the knee and ankle were broken. The foot was so badly injured that amputation to the heel was found necessary. Dr. C. R. Mallong and Dr. K. Tonseth of Norfolk, and Dr. V. L. Siman of Winside were called.

Mr. Wiese and his brother were using a hand shelling machine with power furnished by a motor car. The power given by the automobile was too great, causing the flywheel to break. Fragments of the wheel struck Mr. Wiese in three places. One piece fell on his left foot and crushed the member badly. Another piece struck his limb and fractured both bones. A third section of the wheel hit his knee cap, crushing it.

The injured man was carried to the farm house by his brother. The shock and wounds were so severe that he could not be removed to a hospital. Doctors were called and the foot was amputated to the heel.

EVOLUTION CASE IN TENNESSEE IS UPHELD BY COURT

The supreme court of Tennessee has upheld the constitutionality of the law in that state that man "descended from a lower order of animal." The decision followed an appeal by John Thomas Scopes, teacher, who was convicted of violating the law. While upholding the statute, the court recommended that the case against Scopes be dropped. One member of the court dissented, holding the law should be hoisted over the transom on the ground that evolution could not be proved or disproved. It is likely the animals of lower order in Tennessee and elsewhere not only disagree with the court, but feel, on close inspection of some bipeds, that traces of proof are more apparent and conclusive than some casual or superficial inquirers would suppose. If our antecedents swung by their tails in the jungles of Borneo, the relationship is too remote to excite investigation or to stir tender emotions.

"MASTER FARMER" LIST DISAPPOINTS CALIFORNIA MAN

A man interested in Wayne county, but living in Pasadena, Calif., wants to know why there is not even one so called "master farmer" listed in the group selected at Lincoln from over the state. It is a fact that Wayne county has many "master farmers," but they would have to be inspected and understood to be classified. We doubt if any Wayne county farmers were introduced for consideration. If they had been, we believe we would have been among the winners. We could name many Wayne county farmers whose modern homes and equipment and cash resources loudly testify to their efficiency and success.

Evangelist Here After Long Tour

Gypsy Smith Who Stops in Wayne After Tree-Year Trip Around World, to Speak.

Plan For Service

Ministers Arrange to Accommodate About 1,000 at the State Normal Auditorium.

Further plans are being arranged for the service to be conducted here Sunday evening, January 30, at the State Normal Auditorium with the Gypsy Smith evangelistic party in charge. The ministerial association is sponsoring arrangements.

Rev. L. F. Townsend, secretary, wired Rev. Mr. Smith, asking if it were possible to plan more than one service for his party. The reply received Sunday stated that the evangelist must rest his throat a few days while on his way from Vancouver, Georgia, and so it would be impossible to speak more than once, though the party will spend the week-end here in the E. B. Young home. The three-year tour around the world, made by the party, has just been completed and the recent services in Australia taxed Rev. Mr. Smith's throat considerably.

The service opens at 7:30 Sunday evening, January 30. Chairs to be placed on the stage and in every other available place in the auditorium will increase the seating capacity of the room to at least 1,000. Nearby towns have sent inquiries in regard to the service as many delegations plan to attend.

Ensign Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Young, conducts the music. The piano which Mr. Young has played on his world tour, will be used here. The college choir will assist in the singing.

Rev. Bruce Wylie Writes from West

Windside Pastor Describes Experiences on Trip to Southern California

Rev. J. Bruce Wylie who, with his family, left recently from Windside for California writes as follows:

"We hardly knew where New Mexico stopped and Arizona began but for the sign that told us we were crossing into Arizona. The same desert plain with brush, cactus and sand stretched before us.

After miles of this we came into a fertile little valley, irrigated from the Gila river. Soon we arrived in Safford and stopped with Supt. Hansen, former Windside superintendent. After stopping to inquire the way to Mr. Hansen's home a lady called saying, 'I am from Wayne county and this is the first car with a Nebraska Wayne county number I have seen in the two years I have been here.' We stopped and found this was Mrs. Jennie Davis of Wayne, who taught in Windside. Mrs. Davis is principal of the elementary school in Safford. She is well and happy and wishes to be remembered to friends in Wayne and Windside.

"The Hansen family is located in a comfortable little bungalow at the corner of the school grounds. 'George,' as we familiarly call Mr. Hansen, is superintendent of schools with many teachers and about 800 pupils under his supervision. There are three buildings and ample playground here. The flowers are in bloom and the lawns green. This seemed strange to us as we left home when eight inches of snow were on the ground. Mrs. Hansen, with her usual pleasant mannerisms, assisted by a Mexican maid, soon made us feel at home. The two daughters and George, Jr., helped to make us feel comfortable.

"Mr. Hansen took me and the boys to Rotary club luncheon with him. The men we met are all boosters for Arizona, especially for Safford. We found Safford attractive too.

"In the afternoon we drove to Globe. About 4 o'clock we saw in the distance ahead of us what we thought were small, round haystacks with canvas over them. We found they were Indian wigwags. Here was a real Indian village and school but very few houses. The Indians prefer to live in their original style. Some of our group objected to making camp so we drove into Globe, a bustling little city nestled in the mountains, and supported by copper mines and tourists. The next morning when we awoke it was raining. After some inquiry we started on a side trip over the Apache trail to the Roosevelt dam. After driving about forty miles of real mountainous roads we reached a great lake in a basin of the mountains. The water held back by the well known Roosevelt dam which is across a deep, narrow canyon. The dam is a wonderful piece of engineering. With the highway bridge on top this is the most scenic part of our journey. We would wind around and around the mountains and canyons with narrow roads hugging the sides of the cliffs. After leaving the dam we had to detour along the edge of a mountain stream for several miles, then drive up a creek bed which ordinarily is dry. Because of the rain which came in a slow drizzle, there were about three inches of water in the bed. The water and sand were so mixed that it made going rather difficult. We got stuck as did the 'honeymoon' car but after much pushing we got out.

"Some distance on we were stopped by a highway patrolman who told us we might just as well make camp as there was a cave-in of landslide a few miles ahead. He was going for powder to blow up the rock so it could be removed. After dinner we went to the cave-in. A big rock had been loosened at the top of the mountain and tore its top to highway, bringing tons of dirt and rock with it. By the time the man returned with the powder a dozen cars were waiting to pass. After two shots we all began to help roll the rocks off of the way and in a few hours were able to get between the big rock and the cliff.

"After some thirty miles more of mountain highway we came to what used to be a sandy desert waste. With irrigation this section is transformed into a fertile plain with fruits, vegetables and alfalfa growing. At Mesa we stopped to see the new Mormon temple, said to be very much like the one in Salt Lake City, only not quite so large. The temple is closed to visitors after 5 o'clock so we did not get to go through. We reached Phoenix in the evening and found a tourist cottage with gas, lights and water so we spent a comfortable night there.

"We found the best route by way of Yuma and San Diego, a distance of 540 miles, and being anxious to reach my daughter, Faye's home for Christmas and having only two days to go, we hurried on. When we reached Gila (pronounced Healy) we saw the famous Gillispie dam. A big truck was pulling a Ford out of the water below the dam and a big sign warned against crossing without getting information. After learning about the dam we drove into the water in the 'cement apron' just below the dam with the water pouring over the dam to our left, causing a spray which covered the car like rain. For almost a half mile the water ran over the running board of the car. I was so busy thinking of getting everyone over safely that there was no time for anything else. The rest of the trip to Yuma was on a graveled road through desert country with gasoline stations at intervals of a few miles. At Yuma we crossed the silvery Colorado river into the state of many wonders, California, which we will describe at a later date."

Son of Pioneer Visits in Wayne

Stuart Johnson of Washington, Comes to See Early Day Friends Here Past Week

Stuart Johnson of Lake Chelan, Wash., who was here last week until Friday visiting Grant S. Mears and other friends, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson, pioneers of Wayne county. Charles Johnson was in the general mercantile and business here with James Brittain and Mr. Hardenburg, having the first store in Wayne. The store was opened in LaPorte in the early days and was moved to Wayne in about 1880, before the railroad was built.

In Wayne the first store was in a frame building on the corner now occupied by the State Bank of Wayne.

Mr. Johnson was later the only one of the three remaining in the store on the Smith west into partnership with him and later Mr. Smith bought the store. The Harringtons later bought the store.

Mr. Johnson built one of the first houses in Wayne. This was part of the house a block west of the First National bank, now owned by G. W. Box.

When the Johnson family came to Wayne this site was covered with grass. No streets were marked. The small frame buildings sat on the site. The ground on which the Wayne business district was located, rose toward the creek on the south. The grade was taken down soon after streets were laid out, and a bridge was built early over the creek.

William Mettlen, now of Omaha, was the first clerk in the first Wayne store. Mr. Mears used to help often times in the store also. Mr. Mettlen later went into the mail service and Frank Mettlen was clerk.

Mr. Johnson served as county clerk in the eighties.

In the early days Charles Johnson, A. T. Chapin and Henry Meyer often went hunting on the prairies near here. They found deer and many prairie chickens.

Stuart Johnson, who was here visiting, was one of the first school students in Wayne. Mr. Mears and members of the Tracy family were also in the school. The school was held in a small building on Main street and Mrs. Weatherby was the teacher. No desks were provided and all equipment was meager. The school was later held in the Lutheran church building in the east part of town and Rev. Mr. Schmeurer's son taught. The attendance grew so that larger quarters were needed and the school was moved to the first Presbyterian church. When this was outgrown part of the students were taught in a room on Main street. Judge and Mrs. A. A. Welch, the latter then Miss Anna Davies and Miss Susie Davies were among the earliest instructors.

Former Winside Boy Passes Away

Mrs. Bert Hornby received a message Saturday from Rushville telling of the death of Russell Henderson, son of Mrs. Emma Henderson. Russell came, with his parents, from Iowa, to Winside when he was 3 years old. He grew to manhood here, graduating from the local high school in the class of 1919. The following year the family moved to Norfolk. Shortly after this Russell's health failed and tubercular trouble was feared. He was taken to a sanitarium in Arizona and later to New Mexico. On December 12, 1926, he was taken to Rushville to the home of his sister, Mrs. Robert Olds, at whose home he died on Saturday, January 15. His father died just a year ago on January 17. The message told of no funeral arrangements, but he will undoubtedly be buried beside his father in the Rushville cemetery. Mrs. Henderson was 23 years old. Just beginning the business of young manhood should have been strong, he was compelled to go leaving to mourn his death, his mother, Mrs. Emma Henderson, one sister, Mrs. Robert Olds, of Rushville, and one brother, Clarence Henderson of Chicago.

Righting a Wrong.
York Republican: The members of the house of representatives showed good judgment by quickly passing the measure that reduces the postage on transient second-class matter to one cent for each two ounces. By transient second-class matter is meant newspapers that are mailed by the original subscriber or purchaser to another person. The rate was raised on this class to two cents for each two ounces, with the result that instead of increasing revenues that department the mailings fell off and there was a decided loss in revenues. Besides the people were deprived through an exorbitant rate of an essential convenience and vehicle of information. Now if the senate will pass the measure as speedily a ridiculous wrong will be righted.

Writes of Visit in the Southwest. L. M. Owen Describes Experiences in Pasadena and Los Angeles, California.

L. M. Owen, who with Mrs. Owen, is spending the winter in California with LeRoy Owen, writes January 10, from Pasadena as follows:

"Pasadena and Los Angeles have grown to such an extent that they are now practically one. Therefore, we feel that we are living not only in Pasadena but Los Angeles as well.

"Los Angeles and its suburbs cover approximately fifty square miles, with a population as of July 1, 1926, of 2,147,788. Reports this morning show that Los Angeles is the fifth city in size in the United States. It is estimated that Pasadena has a population of 100,000. During the Christmas week, it is estimated that Los Angeles did a business amounting to two hundred and one million dollars, which indicates that the population which they now have is an unusually active one.

"Southern California with its 3,500 miles of paved roads has brought to Los Angeles nearly 600,000 automobiles. We have not visited all of the one hundred public parks in the nearby vicinity, the largest of which is Griffith park, containing 3,751 acres.

"Ample provision has been made for education with a provision of 1,400 public schools with 13,076 teachers and a total enrollment of approximately 500,000 pupils. At the present time in Los Angeles and Pasadena there are 924 hotels, and accommodations in apartment buildings for 315,000 people. Nearby there are at the present time under construction seventeen new houses which indicates that there is considerable faith in the future of southern California.

"This has been our first winter without snow but even so, we enjoyed the southern California Christmas. The mountains which we see at all times are covered with snow and yet we can pick roses and oranges in our front yard. During Christmas week in Pasadena, a mile of evergreen trees was decorated and was one of the most beautiful sights we have seen thus far.

"On New Year's day the annual rose tournament was held. This centenary was held in Pasadena. Nearly 200 automobiles and floats were decorated with roses and fresh cut flowers. The parade was witnessed by approximately 800,000 people and lasted nearly two hours.

"As yet we have not been to the Aimee McPherson, but will arrive to do so unless she takes a long 'stated vacation after the final decision of her case. At this time it appears that the entire matter will be thrown out of the courts and she will be free once more.

"Oranges are ripening at the present time and picking will be going on in full force shortly. Trees are just beginning to bloom for the next year's crop. During the past few months growers here had plenty of rain and considerable snow in the mountains which will insure plenty of water for next year's crop. It has been necessary to do some smudging to prevent frost, but no fruit in this vicinity has been seriously damaged. We have just visited the largest vineyard in the world where thousands of acres of grapevines have been trimmed, leaving only the stumps ready for bearing next season. Besides the fruit, we have had fresh vegetables at all times. Cauliflower is grown in twenty-acre patches and other vegetables are produced in truck loads which are consolidated in carload lots for shipment east.

unusual cold which you have had since my leaving Wayne. I am sure that you would enjoy this wonderful climate and after spending a part of the winter here, we can readily see why it has been such a winter resort.

"My congratulations to Mr. Hendrickson for his stand in regard to the raising of county and state officers' salaries. This attitude will go far in preventing increased taxes, which is a serious matter at this time, especially in farming communities.

Mrs. Owen joins me in wishing you a very prosperous year."

MEMBER NEBRASKA PRESS ASSOCIATION 1926

This paper is represented for general advertising by the Nebraska Press Association.

The weather has been a trifle hard-fisted this week, but it is a wonderful body builder and nerve tonic.

An individual who specializes in picking flaws, must make himself quite as unhappy as his unwilling auditors.

Some people seem just naturally suspicious of governing authority. We believe we should give public officials from the president down credit for good faith unless the contrary is conclusively proven.

Some one has introduced a bill in the legislature to abolish state and county political conventions and leave the business of running elections entirely to the machinery of the primary. While a convention does not do much, it costs nothing and it tends to preserve party organization, and enliven party interest.

The 17-year-old Canada lad who won the $25,000 offered by Wrigley for swimming the twenty-two mile channel between Catalina and the California coast, needed the money, according to reports, and since he needed it, we are glad he won it if he will make good use of it and not allow it to influence him to waste the balance of his life. It may be an inspiration and help, or it may become a barrier to usefulness. We hope the young lad will be sensible.

Last week J. H. Walsh had a column in his valuable Auburn Republican complaining that the county printing had been bestowed on a higher bidder and that the board did not deal fairly. We would suggest to the Republican that it gather sustaining simoleons from other sources. When the county was young and little business of any kind was available to the rural publisher, county printing was supremely important. Now the same steam, formerly employed in winning county printing contracts, will reap much larger rewards if directed into other channels.

The opposition of a state senator to the appointment of David F. Meeker for secretary of the department of finance on the ground of a long-standing antagonism to Meeker's father is about the weakest evidence of public service that could be dragged into the political arena. The basis is so shallow and inexcusable that one is led to suspect that the originator thereof is largely responsible for any differences which may exist between him and the elder Meeker. Manifestly, the young man should be made to suffer the butt of some grievance for which he was not in the least to blame.

An organized effort is to be made to have the Bigley ravine, just north of Ponca converted into a state park. It seems that the site will have to be donated, and then the state will pledge its improvement and upkeep. We judge the Bigley ravine is not worth much for anything but a park, and the funds to buy it would be forthcoming. Animals that could scale its bluffs and at the same time gnaw out a living are either extinct or have moved to the Rockies or Cascades. But the ravine of...

What is sin? We can only guess. By popular opinion what was considered a sin yesterday is not considered a sin today. Often what was approved yesterday is disapproved today. Many old-time strictures on Sabbath observance have been removed, and now the day is then devoted to play and work that used to be regarded as wrong and dishonoring. In the long ago people could get soured in violent liquor without seriously disturbing their social status. We remember when it was deemed sinful by church people generally to take part in a theatrical entertainment or to attend one. Now any one with talent and perform without that advantage without compunction and without offending religious circles. There was when newspaper articles permitted careless, personal attacks, usually without justification and always destructive. Now such a policy would be considered unethical and sinful. Refusing to take advantage of the weak and oppressed and giving courage and aid to faltering footsteps are no longer sins. Sin may be a calling away from spiritual standards and closing the soul to contemplation of spiritual truths. What is sin today may not be sin tomorrow, but what ever lifts one above the mire of gross materiality certainly negates the forces of sin.

for as many scenic attractions as can be found in Nebraska, and if the state is to have any more parks, the legislature would undoubtedly act within bounds of reason to select the site proposed in northern Dixon county.

Any business requires a lot of time, effort and thought. One then expects to establish himself and then expect customers to flock to him as though he were possessed of a powerful magic. One cannot fling open the doors and then leave the winning of success to less interested employes. One cannot safely invest capital, hire helpers and then go off and leave his business in the belief that it will go along on a triumph. One must be on the job. He must lead in the management of affairs, and he must pay the price in long hours and hard work if necessary. When he becomes old and feeble, he may wisely slacken his pace, and circumstances will permit him to do so by that time if he has previously attended well to his knitting. The one who expects much of an investment of little or no effort is reasonably certain to experience hard sledding with many rocks in his course.

An exchange says we cannot reduce taxes without reducing appropriations. And we cannot reduce appropriations without curtailing expenses and putting the brakes on the treasury to multiply costs. People cannot have public or private improvements without paying for them. Whether in the matter of good roads or home conveniences, people cannot enjoy them without meeting the increased cost. One cannot increase comforts and luxuries with one hand and reduce the resulting cost with the other. People would not be satisfied with conditions that provided a thirty or forty per cent. They would not relish having over a dilapidated cook stove while the north wind sifted snow through the cracks in the tar paper on the walls. They would shudder at thought of reading by aid of candles or waiting a week for the mail. They would shrink from impassable roads, no rural free delivery, no automobiles, no telephones, no radios. All parts of the world are knitting together by modern methods of communication and conveyance. But all advantages of the present increase the cost of living and stimulate the need for increased earnings.

A Big Problem. Hartington Herald: One of the greatest sociological problems of the present day is the mating of the unfit. It is a well known fact that the physically and morally unfit are constantly mating and propagating their kind and this gives rise to a condition which perplexes social workers to deal with. The condition is aggravated by the fact, also well known, that the most unfit often have the largest offspring and so the species is perpetuated with ever increasing deterioration. It is doubtful that society has the right or would be able to step in and attempt to regulate the size of families, but it is very evident that there is a problem here and that it will eventually have to be dealt with. The greatest care is taken in the breeding of animals in order to produce better stock, a high premium being placed on the "pure bred" individuals, and there would seem to be a much greater necessity to devise a method of improving the human species. As long as the unfit are allowed to go on mating and propagating, society will have to deal with an unlimited number of paupers, imbeciles and criminals, and the time seems ripe for a serious study of the problem. It is the duty of society to care for those who are unable to care for themselves, but the condition will never be remedied until the underlying cause is recognized and corrected.

YOUTH IN THE PEN. In his Nebraska Merchant and Trade Review, James Guy and George B. McKelvie call attention to reports from the state penitentiary and state reformatory in regard to increased numbers, increased youth and changed types among their inmates. In the penitentiary between thirty-five and forty percent of the prisoners are under 25 years of age, and in the reformatory eighty per cent are below that age. There are three times as many inmates of the two institutions as there were eight years ago. An officer said roughnecks used to predominate among prisoners. Now among them are found many who have had liberal educational advantages. They are the ones who want to get by with their own work or responsibility. They have cultivated extravagant tastes with no inclination to apply themselves to productive and useful tasks, and thus unsatisfied demands for money lead to crime. An ambition to do something worth while is an antidote for evil ways. It provides an income while modifying financial needs. Organizations of boys and girl scouts and campfire girls are pointed out as powerful influences in behalf of correct habits and stalwart character. If observed, the oath taken by any of these groups is a guarantee of good citizenship.

Former Member Of Staff Writes

(Continued from Page One.) Wayne to catch the train back to town. "On another occasion at the Wayne station I got a news item from a lady, who lived in Carroll, but I couldn't remember her name. Finally I said, 'How is it you spell your name?'"

"All during those strenuous days of covering the Herald's outlying news posts, writing the home locals and working up a social column for Wayne, I always knew that Mr. Huse was working about three times as hard as I was. And he was always optimistic. I was interested to see that other former members of the staff mentioned these qualities in articles in last week's paper. I marveled, as the others did, that he stuck so closely and so cheerfully to his job, which at times was both hard and thankless.

"What we didn't see then or at least only faintly was that he had a vision and that vision has been the driving power all these years. He was not satisfied in 1916 with the Herald of 1916. I know that and I doubt if he was satisfied in 1926 with the Herald of 1926. In 1916 he conceived the idea of making it a paper covering the entire territory of which Wayne is the logical center. This he has achieved in a great measure since that time. "The vision of 1926 is partially realized in the new Herald and the new staff. But this forward step will bring new dreams and these dreams one by one will find expression in the issues of the Herald. "I'm glad that after these many years Mr. Huse by shifting some of the responsibility to his most capable daughter and to others, has more time to concentrate on the editor's job. Ten years ago Thursday morning I found him with a pocket full of notes for editorial and scarcely time for whipping two or three into shape before the zero hour. Now each week brings a well-rounded string of editorials as well as bits of philosophy and humor scattered through the paper in 'boxes.' Many of these are real gems, both in literary style and in thought. I'm hoping that with more time and more privacy in the inner 'sanctum' Mr. Huse can even more effectively voice his creed of tolerance, good will and kindness. "An afterthought: Now that the familiar confusion of the old office is no more, I know I voice the sentiment of all Herald workers of other days in pleading with Mr. Huse always to cling to the old pen pal for a paste pot and always to brew the paste himself so that when we come back to Wayne this much of the flavor of the old days will be left for us.—M. F. I.
