OLE BUCK WRITES.
Ole Buck, secretary and field manager of the Nebraska Press association, writes from Lincoln under date of January 29:
Mr. E. W. Huse, Wayne Nebraska, Dear Gene: I've just finished looking over a copy of the last issue of your paper with mingled feelings of pride and envy. Pride because you are now able to get out a paper which so completely expresses your ability, and so splendidly represents the advance that is being made in Nebraska newspaperdom. Envy because I have no opportunity to do something of the sort myself.
The Herald has always been a good paper. You will make much improvement in its contents and policies, only such changes as further experience may dictate. But physically the improvement is great. It is now a more seemly vehicle for the expression of your policies and personality. It becomes, also, a far greater asset to the town, the surrounding territory, and the state in general.
A son certainly congratulate you on your new building, the new additions to your equipment, and general improvements all around. Ole.

place. Mr. Mellick plans to build a new residence.

Interesting Bits of Wayne County History
Prairie fires were among the most hazardous dangers of the early days. Grass in the summer and fall, set fire by accident, spread for miles and the blaze gained fury as it went. The most treacherous fire in Wayne county came from the southwest on October 13, 1878. Men and women were busy with the harvest of grain. The little settlement was threatened and backfires were of little help. All fought courageously but the blaze burned to death Mrs. W. E. Durin and daughter, Anna, who were trying to flee to safety.

Gloria In "Stage Struck" At Crystal
"Stage Struck," the Allan Dwan production for Paramount which comes to the Crystal next Friday and Saturday, is a broad comedy with Gloria Swanson as a waitress in a small factory town on the Ohio river. She is smitten with Lawrence Gray, a pancake artist in the lunch room, who is fond of actresses.
To make a more favorable impression on the young fellow, Gloria is taking a correspondence school course in stage acting and is given a chance to show what she can do when one of the famous floating theatres which ply their way over the broad waters of the Ohio arrives in town.
The scenes that follow, in which Gloria clowns all over the sets in a sort of get-ups, are said to be far up and beyond anything fans saw in "Manhandling," "The Humming Bird," "Zaza" or, for that matter any of the star's previous pictures.
"Stage Struck" was written especially for Miss Swanson by Frank R. Adams.

Gaebler & Neely have recently completed interior changes in their store by adding a three-sided balcony used for the display of furniture.

The long mirrors in the north part of the balcony add to the beauty of the display.

The new arrangement also gives a larger show room for the undertaker's department, together with a small reception room which is neatly fitted.

By adding the balcony it gives more floor space to display hardware below.

The new arrangement adds greatly to the appearance as well as to the convenience of the building.

Mrs. Ella J. Pile Tells of School

Describes Early Experiences in Establishing the Normal College in Wayne.

Mrs. Ella J. Pile who has gone from New York state to Pasadena, Calif. for a visit, writes on request the following in regard to the early history of the Wayne college:

"In 1890 we were living in Fremont, Nebraska. Mr. Pile (the late James Pile) was teaching in the Fremont Normal. Having resigned his position there and being obliged to give three months' notice, he planned to go to Bozeman, Mont., when Willis Howard hired him to come and teach in the summer school of 1891.

"While in Wayne a number of representative citizens got together and planned for the Wayne Normal school. At the close of the summer term, Mr. Pile returned to Fremont and sold the family home to Dan Stephens, then Dodge county superintendent-elect.

"Previous to locating in Wayne Mr. Pile had rented a store building on Main street in which he opened his school on November 11, 1891. The front part of the building was divided into three rooms, as there were three teachers. Mr. Hawkins and Miss Arna Byrne were the others besides Mr. Pile.

"During the summer of 1891 the school term was held in the high school building and the store which was our school building was used as a boarding hall. In the meantime we had moved into the house now occupied by J. E. Hufford.

"The tuition and board together amounted to $31.50 at that time for a term of ten weeks. It took many efforts to make it possible but by eliminating much expense and working like 'galley slaves' we made it possible to aid many boys and girls to prepare themselves better than they could have done had we not located in Wayne.

"There were many discouraging problems, but I often think those days of real labor made both of us broader, and I hope better."

Hartington Editor On His Trip Here

Editor F. D. Stone Writes of Experience in Attending Herald's Formal Opening.

Editor F. D. Stone of the Hartington Herald, makes the following observations in connection with his trip to Wayne to attend the Herald's formal opening. "Taking the bus Saturday morning to attend the formal opening of the Wayne Herald, which has recently erected a new and up to date building and installed a new press and other equipment. It is cold and dark as one comes down town in the early morning hours—for the bus leaves at 6:30—and few people are stirring in the city. Lights, however, gleam cheerfully from the hotel windows, the hotel being the place where the bus gathers its passengers, and there is activity within. Outgoing patrons are eating breakfast in the warm dining room and others who are leaving the city that morning are gathered there. The latter include an orchestra which has been playing at a dance in a neighboring town and which appears to be sadly in need of sleep.

"Finally, the big bus rolls up to the door of the hotel and outgoing passengers climb aboard. This is one of the coldest mornings of the winter—several degrees below zero—and it is cold inside as well as out. One notes the passengers. There are the members of the orchestra, already alluded to, who fall almost instantly asleep; there are two boys who are going to Sioux City to take a music lesson and who on the trip is a lark and there are the driver and the reporter. These constitute the passengers and there is room to spare. The bus rolls away over the level highway, gathering speed as it goes, and soon it is out in the country, with only an occasional light in some lonely farm house twinkling in the inky darkness.

We reach Coleridge while it is still dark and, after a short stop here, journey on toward Laurel where the bus arrives just as the rising sun is tinting the horizon with streaks of red. Considerable activity on the streets of this town, people moving about, and after another short stop, the last lap of the trip—from Laurel to Wayne—is begun. Here we encounter the only bad stretch of road, about four miles of it, but, having passed this, we proceed swiftly into the city, arriving on schedule in time for the eight o'clock and broad daylight and Wayne is fully awake. The bus pulls up at the hotel and right across the street is the new building of the Wayne Herald.

The opening of the new Wayne Herald building was an event. The building is a handsome one and the plant wonderfully modern and complete. Everything is in readiness for the opening and, as a last finishing touch, great baskets of beautiful red hot-house roses are brought in and artistically arranged in the front office. At 11:30, a banquet is served at the hotel for the correspondents and others connected with the paper and the guests fill a long table. The banquet is a most enjoyable affair and Ralph Gansko, son of the proprietor, entertains the company at the piano. W. M. Maupin of the Omaha Bee is present and makes a short speech.

The public opening and reception took place in the afternoon and evening and hundreds of town and country people passed through the building to admire it and to watch the presses, linotypes and other machinery in operation. Light refreshments were served and each man, woman and child received some remembrance. The college orchestra played during the opening and, together, the event was a great success. Every courtesy was extended to people who visited the Herald building on this occasion and it is hard to estimate the amount of good will which was created. It was a notable event in the history of the Wayne Herald and of the city of Wayne.

To newspaper writers and correspondents, one of the most valuable features of the day was the group meeting held in the basement of the new building. All the rural correspondents of the Wayne Herald, a number of students of journalism and several others engaged in newspaper work were present at this meeting and it was immensely interesting and profitable. W. M. Maupin of the Omaha Bee gave a splendid address; Editor Huse of the Wayne Herald made a talk and the discussion which was opened by the editor of

GOES THE LIMIT.

Lew Shelley in Fairbury News: Editor Huse of the Wayne Herald, has enlarged his newspaper, moved it into a new home of his own, and gives evidence of a constantly attending prosperity. He deserves the liberal patronage his paper is receiving, for if there is a better country, weekly anywhere on the globe we have never seen it. And that is taking in lots of territory.

the Hartington Herald on the subject of news writing was generally participated in. The subject was quite thoroughly discussed and many important points were emphasized.

One thing that impresses one especially about the Wayne Herald is its fine esprit d'corps. This has always been characteristic of the paper and no doubt has been a potent factor in its progress. The editor has the faculty of inspiring his associates to do their utmost and not only are the members of the Huse family enthusiastic in their work but every employe as well. Mrs. Dorothy Nyberg, who has followed in her father's footsteps and become a first class newspaper woman, is the associate editor of the Herald and its most dependable helper, while to Mrs. Huse and the other three daughters much credit is due for the success of the opening. Mr. Nyberg is also connected with the paper and the traditions of the family are preserved. Every employe of the Herald entered heartily into the spirit of the opening and showed the visitors every possible courtesy and attention.

Mrs. Walthers Tells of Narrow Escape

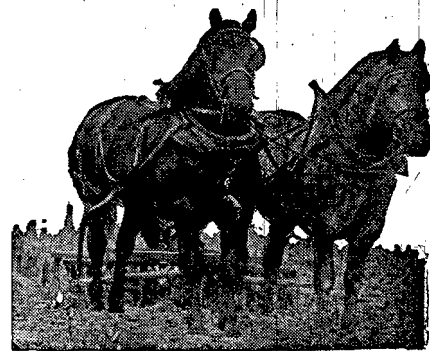

Nebraska Woman Suffering With Indigestion and Loss of Appetite Greatly Relieved. Thanks Tanlac

A few years ago Mrs. Grace Walthers, 1709 St. James, St. Paul, Minn., found herself on the verge of becoming an invalid suffering from indigestion and gastritis.

Mrs. Walthers says: "While living on a farm near here I suffered from loss of appetite. I was very nervous and my food was very unwholesome. At times to press against my heart, I was very nervous. One day a friend told me what Tanlac had done in similar cases. "With the first bottle of Tanlac I began to sleep better and rise refreshed each morning. I gained weight and felt stronger. Health has brought me happiness. I will always recommend Tanlac to friends who suffer as I did. This marvelous tonic, made from roots, herbs and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula, helps rebuild your run-down body, drive out pain and poison, gives you robust health. Ask your druggist for Tanlac today! Over 40 million bottles sold."

Horses At Auction

Winside Live Stock Pavilion Friday, February 11

On this date I will sell one car load of extra good horses, ages from 5 to 8 and weighing from 1,350 to 1,500 pounds. Some of these horses are well broke and others are green broke. Every horse will be hitched and all of them are halter-broke. In the lot are blacks, bays, iron grays and mixed. This is a better load of horses than I sold in Winside a year ago. Included will be one roan team that weighs 3,000.

MAKE THE USUAL GUARANTEE. If you are on the market for horses, this is your opportunity to buy some good ones.

New Silk Dresses

Flat crepes for dresses continue in universal esteem. For party wear georgette is very popular.

Variations and combinations of tans, rose, beige, Mother Goose, etc., are keeping to the fore.

Flers and pleats grace many skirts and most models exhibit slightly bloused waists, although the straight two-piece frock is still shown extensively.

The hundreds of new dresses we are assembling for our special sales in other towns are now coming in, and while they are here you have a very special opportunity to choose from an assortment much larger and finer than usual. We are making lower than usual prices at this time.

Influence of Massage Upon Nutrition, Haematogenesis and Phagocytosis—

That massage encourages the blood making process is demonstrated by the rapidity with which the number of red blood corpuscles and the amount of haemoglobin increase in the blood under the influence of this therapeutic means in cases of anaemia.

Some experiments conducted for the purpose of determining the influence of massage upon the blood show an increase of from three to seven per cent in the red cells and from forty to eighty per cent in white cells. The increase of blood count usually became apparent within thirty minutes, and lasted from an hour and a half to two hours.

When massage is applied to persons in health, the effect upon the blood count is temporary, but when the application is made to persons whose blood count is deficient, the increase continues for several hours; and if applied daily there will be a permanent increase in the blood count from day to day.

Massage is also valuable as a regulator of the nutritive processes. It is proven that massage increases the assimilation of nitrogenous food substances, while Zabludowski has shown that massage both diminishes the weight of very fleshy persons and increases the weight of badly nourished persons, giving increased appetite and sleep. He showed that these effects continue not only during treatment, but for some time afterward.

The first arrivals are here this week. We would like to show them to you.

Sport coats (are) to be very popular and will be surprising if they did not when you see the many beautiful soft, woolly plaids and small novelty patterns in high colors.

We have bought coats of many leading Eastern manufacturers as we need a great variety of styles and hundreds of garments to sell in the many other towns where we hold special sales each season.

These coats are all shipped here to our store first, and our customers then have the choice during a season of many times the styles which could be shown in a regular way.
