One of the plans suggested was the adding of a period to the day's schedule, having eight instead of seven periods. This eighth period, it was suggested, would be for study and instructors would give individual instruction at this time. It was also suggested that a pep organization be formed, the group to be in charge of rallies and other group gatherings. Membership, it was suggested, might be based on points earned for basketball, glee club, scholarship and other activities. Miss Bacon and Miss Valsnik were assisted by Mrs. Mable Adamson, Miss Cora Schlauf and Miss Mary Mielenz in planning the project. The faculty favored the plans.

High School Lad Injured Friday

Suffers Cuts and Bruises When Car Turns Over with Nine Students Near Here.

Ray Chandler of Norfolk, aged about 15, sustained severe cuts which required several stitches to close, Friday when the car in which he was returning home from the high school track meet here turned over southwest of Wayne.

Ray had had one deep cut on the arm and another on the scalp. He sustained numerous minor cuts and bruises.

Nine were riding in the car when the accident happened. Ray was one of the boys who were standing on the running board. As the car turned the corner three miles southwest of here, it went over. Ray was thrown against the barbed wire fence and was fortunate in escaping more serious injury. One wheel was taken off of the car and only slight damage was done to the machine.

Ray was the only boy hurt. He was brought to Wayne and the wounds were dressed. He was able to return home that night. The car had to be left here for repairs, and the boys accompanied friends on their trip home.

First crops planted by pioneers in this section were wonderfully abundant. Rich sod of the prairies was turned and seed was placed in the ridges hacked in the turned ground with spades, hoes or other sharp tools.

The Ingredients of Service

Service is not an easy thing to measure. To a large extent it consists of intangible things—little acts of thoughtfulness and consideration that may go unnoticed, but that leave a glaring gap when they are missing. Our beautiful chapel and splendid equipment—all of this would be vain without the leaven of sympathy and good will that go with it.

Conduct Experiment With Cedar Chests

Experiments conducted by the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture on the storage of clothing in chests made of the East Indian woods known as "kamfer" and "lagan," to protect it from clothes moth damage were completed in March with negative results. Chests made of the heart wood of red cedar, however, killed the newly hatched or young larvae of clothes moths when tightly constructed. They could not be depended upon to kill the moths or millers, or their eggs, or the worms after they were one-half to full grown, or after they were 3 or 4 months old. Neither did the cedar chests kill all the pupae or chrysalids. Cedar chests are recommended as protectors of clothing from moth attack only when fabrics put in them are thoroughly cleaned, brushed, or beaten just before they are placed in the chests, so that all stages of the insect that the chest will not kill are removed beforehand.

Wayne county will be an unpopular field for automobile thieves if Sheriff Stephens keeps on restoring stolen cars to their owners.

In contemplating the excessive rainfall and unseasonable cold of the past week, with tornadoes south of us and blizzards west of us, and with extra requirements in the way of fires and clothing, one has to swallow a couple of times before rising to sublime heights and uttering chapbooks of praise over the grandeur of a day in May.

A contract having been awarded, Wayne is assured of an extension of its paved area this summer. Also petitions are on file asking for the paving of alleys in the business district, and they will receive definite action in due time. Down-town alleys are necessarily used a great deal in hauling heavy freight, and paving them will serve convenience and save pavement from being plastered with mud. Paved alleys will insure a cleaner business district.

For many years beef going through packing houses has been inspected as an insurance against disease, but just lately provision has been made to make inspections to determine quality. It is announced that graded and stamped beef will be provided only on request. Beef will be stamped "Prime" and "Choice," and retailers and consumers may know exactly what they are buying in quality. It is believed to be an important forward step in marketing beef.

The secretary of trade and commerce at Lincoln reports that deposits in 880 Nebraska state banks have increased more than $4,000,000 during the first three months of this year. Commenting on the improved condition, the secretary says: "We have had a long climb over a road that gave us a good many bumps, but it looks now as though we had reached the top of the hill at last and will not have such hard pulling hereafter. Banking figures are certainly encouraging. With a good crop year ahead, as there is every reason to expect, things are bound to improve steadily."

The third term bogey has been brought forth to intercept the renomination of President Coolidge. He has filled the unexpired term of the late President Harding, and is now filling one term of his own election. Some complain that his renomination would amount to a third term, and a number express fear, as emphasized by Nebraska Senator Geo. W. Norris, that the president would be moving in the direction of a monarchical form of government. Others who are equally as prominent and influential, think the president's renomination would not do violence to tradition and that Senator Norris'

PRUNES.

The Sonoma Valley Moon, published at Sonoma, Calif., by William L. Gaston, former Baptist preacher here, announces the result of a prune contest in which cash prizes aggregating $10,000 were awarded. The contest was promoted by the California Prune Growers' association and was of course designed to still further popularize consumption of prunes which constitute one of the big fruit crops of the Pacific coast. We remember when prunes were a drug on the market. We recall a school teacher in the Sacramento Valley who had to use her wages to pay taxes and meet other costs incident to owning a prune orchard. Prunes will grow on mountains and in high altitudes where many more tender varieties will just stick up their noses and refuse to do anything. Thus prunes were plentiful, the demand was light and the price was but a trifle. Consequently, any one who owned a prune orchard had a white elephant on his hands. With no market, many owners were compelled to allow ripened fruit to drop to the ground and rot. Finally organization came to the rescue. An association took hold of handling the crop and stimulating demand, and the result has been increased consumption of a healthy fruit and justly remunerative prices. Organization was the one thing needed to develop appreciation and win due rewards.

fear is wholly unfounded. It would seem that those politicians who are opposed to the president, shouting the third-term scare, would believe in his renomination in the belief that the third-term influence would operate in the direction of his defeat.

It seems the game laws of the state of New York protect an editor or writer from being killed the same as they do other people, there being no open season for that kind of sport. This fact has just been revealed to Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray who have been convicted of first degree murder for killing the woman's husband who was a writer, but who had written nothing that warranted any one in killing him. It appears that the dead writer carried a lot of life insurance, and that his wife and her clandestine lover wanted to realize on it. So they executed a most diabolical murder plot. If the woman's picture is true to life, it is probable the dead husband would have paid a good-sized bonus if the nefarious Gray had peacefully taken her off his hands. But to be killed, especially in such an ungentlemanly manner, in order to gratify greed for lucre, is more than any rational husband could be expected to concede.

Schools and colleges will wind up their year's work during the next few weeks. Activities incident to closing will enliven interest, and then, following commencement, another turning point in the lives of young people will have been reached. Some will step from one grade into another. Others having finished the high school, will enter college, and still many others will be graduated from higher institutions of learning and will be ready for practical use of their knowledge. We still think schools are more efficient than they used to be and that students come out of them better prepared for useful endeavor. The great danger that besets the youthful pathway is too great dependence on diplomas and too little determination to win on individual merit. A foundation of knowledge must be backed with energy and ambition and strict adherence to highest standards of character. A student must not figure on big pay for little work. He must not figure on little getting by.

Business.
Sioux City Journal: So far spring business is not what it was hoped it might be, yet there is no ground for depression in any particular direction. Undoubtedly there is room for improvement, but the situation is not discouraging in a general sense. Reasons may be found for the lull in trade, which is seen as only temporary. The factors that have been responsible for a perceptible decline in general activity are well known. The most compelling thing has been adverse weather conditions. The flood in the south has been responsible for much disappointment, and it actually has made an impression on trade. It remains to be seen whether the good efforts to recover from the inundation and to repair the damage will offset the decline already influenced. An appreciable effect has been the psychological influence exerted over a wide section of the country. A disaster of such proportions cannot fail to depress in an appreciable degree. Labor is not responsible for a large amount of the discouragement now seen, yet it is a fact that the bituminous miners' strike has weakened the buying power of hundreds of thousands of people. This would not have meant much at another time, but, when the business operations already were declining, it only contributed to the reduction movement.

Industry, so far has not felt any particular effect of the change, which, after all, is slight. Manufacturing is in good condition, and it is apparent that industry has no fear of what the future may bring. Wholesaling, of course, has had a reaction in greater degree, but can recover just as quickly when the demand strengthens with an expected seasonal recovery. Farming conditions in the north-west and middle west have not been any too good, what with almost unprecedented precipitation which interrupted seeding preparations. However, soil condition is better than usual, and farmers have taken advantage of breaks in the weather to carry on their work. Spring wheat seeding and corn planting probably have not been hindered so much after all, encouraging reports having come from various sections of the middle west. Warmer weather and more sunshine would be highly acceptable right now, and no doubt they will come since they usually do.

Reassuring.
York Republican: The president of the Nebraska Federation of Women's clubs, who has been directing a survey of modern facilities in the homes of the state, announces as the result of the survey that, in her estimation, "Nebraska husbands love their wives."
If Mrs. Minier's term includes utility in a heaping measure we are with her—Nebraska husbands do love their wives. But we think there is more utility than sentiment about it.
A good cook in a poor kitchen and a good housekeeper in an inefficient home, plant are denied their right of self-expression. They cannot keep house economically or serve their husbands and children with good meals like other women who have the easy facilities of modern house life at their command.
But the matter goes further than that. A housewife whose household burdens are lightened with modern home equipment has more time for the improvement of her mind, more time for culture

DRAWN CONTRAST.

A retired Wayne county farmer who made himself comfortably off in agriculture and stock feeding, draws a sharp contrast between opportunities when he was a young man and those offered now. One of his first jobs was in the employ of an Illinois farmer who paid him $10 a month besides board and lodging. In spring and summer he ate breakfast at 10 o'clock, worked all day in the field and then did chores until 10 o'clock at night. At the end of nine months during which he saved all he earned, he was rewarded with $90 which he took home to his mother. It was during the second Cleveland administration when he was farming on his own hook, that a married man in desperate need of a job, came along and offered his services at 75 cents a day. He was employed and he proved a wonderful worker. As this retired farmer reviews his experiences, he is amazed at the reluctance or indifference with which present wages are often regarded. He is convinced that opportunities for profitable employment were never so great as they are now, and in his opinion the increased compensation far more than makes up for the increased cost of living. This retired farmer has a stinging recollection of the time when men were looking for jobs at any price, whereas now jobs are looking for men at good wages.

and more time to be an agreeable wife and an attentive mother. So it generally happens that in the wake of better facilities for doing the work of the home come home makers who are saved from drudgery and fatigue, and homes that are happier because the executive head has time to cultivate as well as clean and feed them.

If providing the modern home facilities is a mark of love of man for his helpmate, Nebraska husbands are stepping up in the scale of affection, for the survey shows that a lot of love is being scattered over the broad acres of the state to the betterment of all who live in the homes.

A Tragic Story.
Hartington Herald: A recent newspaper dispatch told the tragic story of a man—a husband and the father of several children—who committed suicide on account of financial troubles. No other reason was assigned but this, that the man had lost considerable money, and in a fit of despondency, took his life. Which was a very foolish, and under the circumstances, a very cowardly act. Financial reverses, one would say, is one of the poorest excuses for self destruction if there are any at all, for a person who suffers a financial loss always has a chance to recoup; but there is another aspect of this case which is much more serious than that. This man, by committing suicide, not only acknowledged defeat himself, which was a cowardly thing to do, but he also left his family, who should have been his chief concern, to struggle alone under the disgrace of his rash deed. Had this suicide been the victim of poor health or other circumstances which might have produced despondency, a possible explanation could be found for his act, but, that a man should kill himself simply because he had lost a sum of money, is hard to understand. One would suppose that, even if he had lost interest in life himself, he would have been more thoughtful for the welfare of those who were dependent on him.

More About Cornstalks.

Lincoln Journal: A pile of bales of cornstalks stands in a field near Ames, Iowa, which are destined to furnish material for the wallboard factory at Des Moines. The factory is expected to be in operation in the fall. Farmers have been in doubt, since the enterprise was announced, whether it would do them any good. They fear that the cost of cutting and marketing the stalks would take any profit out of their sale.

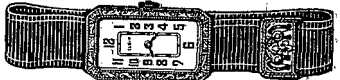

Answering the question, Prof. O. R. Sweeney of the Iowa agriculture college finds that the factory will be able to pay about $6 a ton and that Iowa cornfields average at least a ton and a half per acre. Several methods of harvesting the stalks have been tried but the most successful machine is a combination hay loader and baler drawn thru the field by a tractor. It takes four men to operate it and necessitates handling the stalks only once, cutting about twenty-five acres a day. Neither climatic conditions nor the practice of letting cattle run in the fields make any appreciable difference in the stalk yield, Professor Sweeney found. According to Professor Sweeney's estimate a sixty-acre field should yield between $500 and $600, beside the grain.

Some farmers will find themselves situated near a market and with the equipment and labor available so that they can profitably take advantage of this outlet, while others will be unable to harvest and market their cornstalks at a profit. Officials of a pulp company, which expects to begin operations in Illinois soon, report that cornstalks are superior to wood for certain products so the stalks may command a still higher price when the products are marketed and their advantages discovered by consumers.
