If this cool weather keeps up we may have to concede something to the gloom prophet who predicted an unseasonable summer. We notice that Bill Holenkamp is sheriff out in Loup county, and if there is anything in a name he ought to be a terror to evil doers.

The cool to control the marketing of wheat crops from Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and Oklahoma is endorsed as practical by S. R. McKelvie's Nebraska Farmer and others, following a study of the plan, in the belief that it will really work to the advantage of the growers.

Frank O. Edgcombe of the Geneva Signal, has had his sleep disturbed by honking automobile horns at night, and he is anxious to see civilization speed up to the point where it will be legal and proper for the authorities to arrest and jail any one who is guilty of such an offense against the peace and quiet of a neighborhood.

A man is inclined to resent the idea that he is "at his best," because, if he admits it, he admits that he could not do better than he is doing which, reviewing results, is not always encouraging. But everybody expects soon to be at his best, and continues so for a long period, and then he intends to do something extraordinary. But that time is just ahead and never arrives.

to run on an independent ticket. It seems odd to try to corral and use a vehicle he has so often constructed.

We have just received a letter from a Chicago authority learnedly explaining how we may, through proper diet, avoid becoming uncomfortably and unwisely fat with the approach of winter. We are told we may eat all we want if we eat the right victuals. We can't gorge on starch vegetables and butter and cream if we expect to escape developing into an adipose monstrosity. This thought makes us dread the coming of winter.

The Hartington Herald justly applauds the fidelity and endurance of its linotype operator, Otto Wiley, who, in the absence of the usual force, stuck to his machine continuously for over twenty-four hours in order to enable the newspaper to be issued on time. A man who is thus faithful to his task, indifferent to the clock and untroubled by determination to win, is rewarded in large measure by the satisfaction of reaching his goal on time. "It was a record of stamina and fidelity which is seldom, if ever, equalled," observes the editor of the Herald, "and it was this remarkable achievement which enabled the Herald to go to press on time."

The editor of the Omaha World-Herald was at one time awarded the Pulitzer prize for the best editorial written during the year, and he is universally considered a top-notch editor. An editorial writer, radiating sense of humor and employing clear-cut and expressive diction. Whether people always agree with his opinions or not, none can justly say he is not rich in ideas or that he is unable to make himself clearly understood. Notwithstanding his acceptance among literary people as far above the average as an editorial writer, he quotes someone signing himself a "Constant Reader," with this crushing note: "You are probably the burliest editorial writer in the United States. I have read all of them for years and they surely are rotten." The injustice of the critic shows great depth of ignorance with his inexpressible poor taste. He also shows that one cannot rise high enough in any profession or business to insure escape from the blanket denunciation of a shallow brain, doubtless plucked by some trivial disagreement.

We think H. G. Wells is wrong in saying that Christianity is passing or has passed. Many millions attest to the truth and inviolability of Christian principles. Many millions have been encouraged and sustained by such principles. Through the ages great injustices have been done in the name of Christianity, but they were not the fault of Christianity. They were due to misinterpretations and to narrow, unreasoning bigotry. Many of the material trappings, made by men, have been modified or removed, but underlying essentials remain to buoy the world and breathe hope into weary souls. Christianity embodies the Golden Rule, inspires silent communion with invisible forces and encourages the conviction that life here, with its ill and joys, is but preparation for a higher plane where understanding is less limited and where service is enlarged and more generously rewarded. Wells may tear off the non-essentials which Christianity has been fixed up to suit different groups in different periods, but the spirit of the founder, radiating the light of love and helpful fellowship, remains a powerful and effective force in our civilization.

Making Farm Waste Useful. (Literary Digest.) The huge piles of waste straw and other such material seen on Western farm lands, much of it now annually burned to get rid of it, will in future be an added source of income to the farmer, owing to methods now developed for using it in the production of useful chemicals, paper and straw-board. In a paper contributed to Forbes Magazine (N. Y.), Dr. Robert Stewart, dean of the College of Agriculture of the University of Nevada, points out that some types of farming are in serious difficulty because of surplus production, and, as a result, industry everywhere is being affected by the reduced buying power of the farmer. He writes: "There is no known practical way of limiting production in farming, as is the case in other lines of industry whenever a surplus threatens to lower the price of the product or glut the market. "What is urgently needed is the development of new uses other than food for the products of the farms. One interesting development of the past two or three years is the creation of a new industry based upon the industrial utilization of wheat and oat straw once a burden to many farms. George H. Harrison, of Minnesota, is the pioneer in this development. After numerous experiments, Mr. Harrison has perfected a small plant for the production of a distillation of a mixture of oil and straw whereby the important products in the gas and oil are saved. He claims that one ton of this straw mixture on distillation produces 1,600 pounds of new, useful chemical products worth at least $250!"

ACKNOWLEDGMENT. We are republishing today many comments on the recent special edition in the belief that people hereabouts will be interested in opinions touching the Herald and the Wayne territory. Only a few of many letters are published, most of those received being of a personal nature and thus omitted. However, we appreciate the favorable reception which the edition has met, and we make grateful acknowledgment for words spoken and written here and elsewhere. In passing, we may suggest that while the Herald has shucked off many of the old methods, employed in rural journalism, other newspapers everywhere have done the same thing, and altogether country newspapers standards have been lifted and the service has been made more nearly worth while. The Herald is looking ahead, and it hopes to be able so to shape its course that it will not shake public confidence or prove disappointing to its friends.

Two Vacations. Lyons, Kans., News: The other day a Lyons man said, "Bill Goofus, who has owed me about $100 for two years, went off the other day with his family on a vacation. I figured he probably wanted to forget the money he owes around town. Then I arranged for a vacation, so I could forget what Bill Goofus and others owe me. Bill is hard up because he owes more than he can pay, I am hard up because the Gill Goofuses won't pay me. Neither of us can afford a vacation. But if he can have one I can have one."

He Had to Listen. Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: It is told of a Kansas woman that she went to the store to see her husband about an important matter, but he was so busy waiting on customers he put her off until a more convenient season. Then she went home, called him over the phone and he had to listen.

Critics Commenting on Herald's Edition Place High Value on Wayne Territory

COMMENTS.
Naturally we are pleased over the liberal appraisal given the Herald's 60-page effort by editors and other friends. We appreciate the high estimate placed on the country and towns within this newspaper's territory. Naturally we like to have our communities well thought of, and in common with others, we like to measure up to expectations. Believing Herald readers will be interested in comments from newspapers and others, they are reproduced here.

After Fifty Years.
Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: August 11 the Wayne Herald issued a paper of sixty pages, the biggest achievement for a weekly in any city of its size in the whole country. It is a de luxe history of Wayne county and city and many of the surrounding communities, telling a story of industrial development that seems like a dream to one who passed over that territory almost fifty years ago. It was a phenomenal performance, creditable in every detail. The best is at ways to be expected from E. W. Huse, but in this latest enterprise he attained the superlative.

Reflects Growing Country.
Fremont Herald: The Herald would be guilty of gross fraternal discourtesy if it allowed the big sixty-page special edition of the Wayne Herald, issued last week, to pass without mention and without the praise which so fine an effort deserves. The mammoth edition seems to have been issued without occasion. It is simply a fine historical, booster edition brought out to record the greatness of Wayne city and county. It is truly a praiseworthy product, delightful in every feature of its making, and The Fremont Herald congratulates Editor Huse, and envies him as the editor and publisher of so excellent a home weekly.

Will Continue to Serve.
York Republican: The Wayne Herald never does anything half way. So when it undertook an illustrated edition setting forth the resources of Wayne and Wayne county, and incidentally celebrating the seventeenth anniversary of the arrival in Wayne of the editor and publisher, E. W. Huse, it did not stop with a few pictures and some quickly gathered data, but it went about the job in a thorough manner and the result was a sixty page edition of the Herald that was handsome, vital and valuable. The Herald is one Nebraska county weekly newspaper whose carefully chosen and written contents and beautiful appearance is the secret envy of every other progressive country newspaper publisher in the state. In seventeen years it has reached an enviable place. Editor Huse is not the kind to rest on laurels already won. His newspaper is now at the place of its greatest efficiency, and that means for him it will continue to improve, grow and serve.

Wideawake Section.
Albion News: We have been waiting for several weeks for the special edition promised by the Wayne Herald. We knew it would be good, even better than most such editions, but we did not quite anticipate a paper of the size the greatest venture in this line we have ever observed in the country newspaper world. It is a wonderfully well written and arranged edition, but nothing more than one can expect of the Huse—father and daughter. The Herald is one of the leading country newspapers in the United States and its efforts are appreciated by the live business people of Wayne as is indicated by the patronage given. The Times extends congratulations and best wishes.

Former Staff Member Writes.
Chicago, August 16, 1927.
Dear Mr. Huse: Congratulations on the special edition. We both think it was the best number the Herald ever printed. Yesterday we were guests of the Crawford in Berwyn and much of the conversation centered around the 60-page Herald.

I took you back to 1917 when Mrs. Crawford and I were both on the Herald staff. We recalled what a tremendous effort it was then to get out 20-pages for the special Christmas issue. And then we marvelled again at last Thursday's issue with three times the number of pages to say nothing of the increased amount of space by reason of your changing over from six to eight columns.

The first page make-up was especially good, the well-balanced "heads" giving each story its proper emphasis. Each of the seven sections showed careful planning to give every part of the Herald territory its proportionate share of attention. Impartial service to the whole territory always has been your objective, I know, and it seems to me you have come very close to that ideal in the last issue. Town and country share alike in both the advertising columns and the news sections. This has become such a matter-of-fact viewpoint around the Herald office that I doubt if you even planned that the stories captioned by four of the seven major heads on the first page were of particular interest to country folks.

I remember the first summer you started the plan of calling on the farmers. Ward Rindold and later, Jean Madsen, "lived over" about the country in search of news and subscriptions. And occasionally when things were quiet at the office, I went along. We soon found out that Herald representatives weren't always as welcome as we might wish, largely because people in the country didn't find enough of interest in the paper.

But that complaint isn't voiced today, I know. Every corner of the territory seems to be represented in the news columns and farmers are glad to use the Herald as an advertising medium. In this way the Herald has helped to build up a real community of interests between town and country people that is expressing itself in such worthwhile projects as the county fair.

The historical sketches of early days gives us a new sense of pride in the old home town. We are looking forward to the complete volume by Dorothy Huse Nyberg. Sincerely, Marguerite Ingham.

Free From Party Snarls.
Tokamah Tribune: Last week's issue of the Wayne Herald contained 60 pages. It happened to be the anniversary of this up-to-date paper and Editor Huse celebrated the event by issuing a 60-page paper giving the history of the county, and of the civic and religious activities thereof. It is a fine appearing issue and contains copious amount of advertising from all over the county. In commenting editorially on the paper for last week, Mr. Huse said: "This enlarged edition of the Herald, designed to emphasize the development of Wayne county and neighboring towns, comes appropriately now as marking the anniversary of the time when we came into possession of this newspaper. In our experience we had come to feel that country weeklies were not adequately serving their fields. The happenings of the surrounding country were neglected and the columns were filled with political disquisitions and the events occurring within a stone's throw of the point of publication. There seemed an unanswered call for more comprehensive publications in the country." Without question Mr. Huse is right. The function of the country weekly should be to give the news of the territory it serves and leave the political snarls to political bodies to unravel. The Tribune congratulates the Herald on this splendid edition and wishes for it many more years of the type of service it is rendering Wayne county.

As a Vacation.
Hartington Herald: Speaking of vacations, we referred last week to certain persons who, instead of doing less work by way of recreation, do more—who, instead of suspending or curtailing effort at this season of the year, undertake greater and more arduous tasks. We have an illustration of this sort of individual in the case of Editor Huse of the Wayne Herald who during the month of August—so called vacation month, issued a magnificent special edition of 60 pages, representing an enormous amount of hard work. In another place, we shall comment briefly on the excellence of this edition; but the point we are making here is that Mr. Huse finds his greatest enjoyment—his vacation, if you please—in achievement. Instead of slowing up during the hot weather, he speeds up and, instead of cutting down his newspaper as the custom is with many, in August, he not only maintains his usual high standard, but sets a new high mark of journalistic endeavor. And we venture to say that Mr. Huse has derived fully as much enjoyment and refreshment from the enterprise as though he had spent the month of August at some summer resort—probably, a great deal more.

Portraying Development.
Hartington Herald: The Wayne Herald issued a special edition last week which is an outstanding achievement in the weekly newspaper field. The edition consists of 60 pages in seven sections and presents a remarkably comprehensive view of both the city of Wayne and of the county of which Wayne is the county seat. Liberal space is devoted to the agricultural and livestock resources of the county; to church, club and society activities; to the Wayne State Teachers College and public schools; to county and city officials and business and professional men; and to the historical development of the various institutions and industries which have made this city and county of Wayne what they are today.

All the other towns in or adjacent to Wayne county, including Wakefield, Carroll, Windside, etc., are represented in the edition and their industrial, social and religious life receives due attention. The edition is profusely illustrated with half tones of county officials, professional and business men, churches, schools and town and country residences and it carries a large amount of advertising from the different localities and industries represented in its pages. It is a masterpiece of journalistic attainment, largely conceived and splendidly realized, and it will not only stand as a monument to the enterprise of the Wayne Herald, but also as an invaluable record of the progress of the community which it so effectively portrays.

Distance Lends Enchantment.
Fairbury Journal: Editor Huse and his able assistants last week turned out a 60-page paper at Wayne, Neb., a town about one-half the size of Fairbury. Each page was larger than those of the Journal, 8 columns instead of 6. The paper was perfect and a model of its kind in every respect and exceeded anything ever attempted before outside a large city.

Fairbury merchants and business men boast that this is a "good advertising town," but Wayne, Neb., has Fairbury set far back in the shade. Incidentally, Editor Huse and his daughter, Mrs. Nyberg, associate editor, cast a large and obscuring shadow on Fairbury editors and most all others in this class.

Exceptional Support.
Auburn Republican: The Wayne Herald that comes to our desk every week came to us last week in a very large edition, 60 pages. It was celebrating the seventeenth anniversary of the present editor's management and direction. It was an exceptional edition and presented efficient work in every line and department. The articles were prepared by scholars and the advertisements were excellent in artistic designing and construction. The press work was far above the average country printing office. Every line of reading matter, every picture and every advertisement presented the appearance of having on a Sunday suit. The big edition met with extremely liberal advertising support. Such a large edition generally has a number of criticisms, especially from the point of the head of the organization, but we believe that Editor Huse can sit back in his big chair and look his big 60-page edition over and say, "well done!"

Emphasizing Development.
Custer County Chief, Broken Bow: The Wayne Herald, of which E. W. Huse is editor and publisher, put out a very fine edition last week and one that was a credit to Mr. Huse and his entire force. The issue contained seven sections, a total of sixty pages. It contained considerable historic material and pictures of some of the old pioneers of that country. Most of the feature stories were written by members of the Herald reporting force. The enlarged edition of the Herald "was designed to emphasize the development of Wayne county and neighboring towns," and it carried out its mission in a very creditable manner.

Touching Richard's Fame.
Hamilton County Register, Aurora: The Wayne Herald, one of the best printed and best patronized county papers we ever saw, comes out this week with a 60-page edition, of an eight column paper. What a weary lot of work! Dr. J. T. House has a brief biography and historic sketch of the life and work of John G. Richard, the Wayne poet, who attended the Nebraska Normal college in that place; edited the Bancroft Blade, was made blood brother by the Indians and given the name of "Tai Nuga Zingha" which does not sound like "little bull buffalo." His first verses were "A bundle of Myrrh," and from the first he obtained recognition as a poet. His three epic are well known and he hopes to finish his life work in ten years. The Niehardt club was not organized until 1916, so his fame is of comparatively recent origin. One of the outstanding features of this edition is the beauty with which pictures and reading matter is printed, and another the industry and ability that were required to produce such a creation in a town and country little if any better than our own.

Depicts Progress.
Leigh World: The Wayne Herald issued a 60-page paper last week that is not only a beauty from the standpoint of typography, but the editorial matter throughout the paper is a remarkable work. The edition depicts the history of progress of Wayne county, its people, organizations, business, industrial and agricultural pursuits. Editor Huse is to be congratulated upon his accomplishment.

Value to Business Interests.
Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 12, 1927.
Mr. E. W. Huse, Editor, Wayne Herald, Wayne, Nebraska: Dear Mr. Huse: Just received a copy of your special edition commemorating your seventeenth anniversary and want to congratulate you on this excellent production. An edition of this size is not only unusual for a weekly newspaper but also wish to compliment you on its excellent appearance and the quality of the typographical work.

I feel sure that this special edition, featuring as it does news of interest to all classes of people throughout the county, can not but be of real cash value to the business men of your town. This thought particularly has prompted me to write you.

The Nebraska Merchant and Trade Review is interested in everything which works to the benefit of local retailers. What we think of the value of a good live newspaper to the retailer will be evident from the clipping of a recent editorial from The Nebraska Merchant and Trade Review, which I am closing.

Yours very truly,
The Nebraska Merchant and Trade Review,
Harold Harris, Managing Editor.

To Advertise Home Towns.
Omaha, Neb., August 18, 1927.
E. W. Huse, Editor Herald, Wayne, Neb. Dear Mr. Huse: You are to be congratulated on the special issue of August 11. I have seen a good many special issues of various Nebraska newspapers during my fifty-one years' experience in that line, but recall none that excels yours of August 11, and but few that equalled it in any.

The make-up and the matter throughout is all that could have been asked. Wayne citizens doubtless are proud of the effort, and if they have not sent all available extra copies away to advertise their home town, they have missed an opportunity that comes but rarely. To gather the matter and put in shape; to provide half-tones of places and people, and to print the edition, was accomplished at no small cost, I am in position to realize, even more than the general public.

With kindest wishes and asking to be remembered to any Wayneite who may recall me, I beg to remain, most cordially,
Eugene O. Mayfield,
(Editorial Dept., World-Herald)

Spirit of Town Reflected.
Fairbury News: We received this week what is in our belief the most creditable issue of a country weekly newspaper that was ever printed in the state of Nebraska. It was last week's issue of the Wayne Herald, published at Wayne, Nebraska. The issue contained 60 pages of eight columns each and was printed in seven sections. It was devoted to the historical and commercial interests of Wayne county. In addition to carrying about 300 columns of advertising it had 200 columns of historic matter, well edited and illustrated, about 300 half-tone illustrations being used. And all this in a town about half the size of Fairbury. While the edition was a credit to the enterprise, skill and ability of its editor and publisher, it was a monument to the progressive spirit of the people of that county. They realize that a good newspaper is one of the most valuable assets to any community, and they are lucky to have a man like Mr. Huse cast his lot among them. He has done more to put Wayne on the map than all other agencies combined.

Dear Friend: I received the special edition of the Herald and think it a wonderful achievement for so small a town. I went all through it and read many of the articles and I should think the town would be proud of such a paper. Especially I congratulate your pressman. I never saw a better job of printing on news paper. I often think of the old times in Beatrice. I still get the Daily Sun to keep in touch with doings there.

but, nearly all my old friends are gone. There is a new generation altogether, and few of the names I see in the paper now are familiar to me. We are very sorry to see here, in a little, bungalow overlooking the sea, and we spend much time joyriding. I was very sick all last winter and have not fully recovered, but am in fair shape for an old relic of my age. Hoping you are well and happy, I remain
Sincerely yours,
Walt Mason

World's Lowest Ton-Mile Cost

Tens of thousands of users have learned by actual comparison that Chevrolet provides the lowest ton-mile cost* in the history of the commercial car industry! Come to our salesroom and learn for yourself how Chevrolet is designed and built to save you money. Note the advanced, modern engineering—typified by a powerful valve-in-head motor, with three-speed transmission and sturdy single-plate disc-clutch. Mark the rugged, quality construction throughout: heavy channel steel frame—massive banjo-type rear axle—long extra-leaved, heavy steel springs, set parallel to the frame. Go for a trial load demonstration—see how perfectly Chevrolet meets your own haulage requirements: If you do that, the next truck you buy will be a Chevrolet!

McCORMICK-DEERING Spreaders

—A light draft and easy pulling machine, with six speeds to the conveyor. It will be noted that the box is braced to prevent the side from spreading.

Two Sizes and Two Types

The McCormick-Deering is primarily a tight bottom or drag conveyor or manure spreader and this type is the one almost universally used. However, it also can be supplied with an open bottom and with a full slatted apron conveyor.

Both types are made in two sizes. Under ordinary conditions the No. 1, made for two horses, will carry from fifty to sixty bushels, and the No. 2, made for three horses, will carry from sixty-five to seventy-five bushels when loaded to a height of twenty-six inches. The box can be loaded to the top of the arch, thirty-four inches high. The seat is hinged and can be folded over in front of the box when loading.

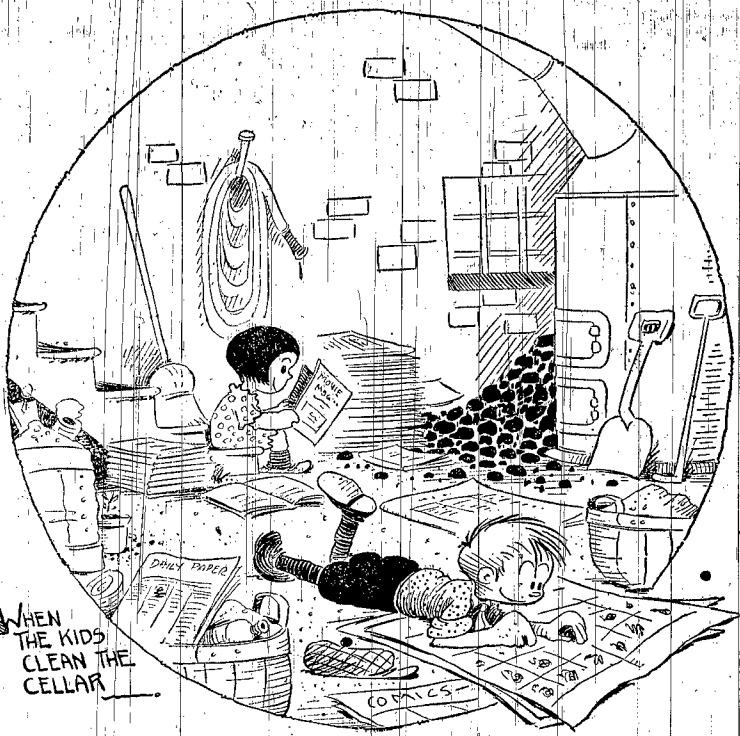

McCormick-Deering Weber Wagons

McCormick-Deering Weber farm wagons which we sell, have been used on American farms for over eighty years. They are built in various sizes, and with equipment to meet the local requirements in all sections of the country. However, there is but one grade of Weber wagons—the best—the first and highest grade. If a farmer is shown that the Weber wagon, by reason of the use of the highest grade materials, backed by an organization of wagon makers whose only object is to make the best wagons, and still further reinforced by the patented swivel reach coupling and the patented malleable iron fifth wheel, is really the good wagon we claim for it, he will have no other. The Weber is also a light draft wagon, which means that it is an easily-drawn wagon, free from undue friction. Every axle, on a Weber wagon is accurately gauged for pitch and gather. This is the scientific part of the construction of a wagon and its life depends more upon this one feature than upon anything else, outside of the grade and quality of the materials used.

Omaha Bee: "Sleep that knits the raveled sleeve of care" is being psychoanalyzed in Pittsburgh. Professors at the Mellon institute are finding out all about it. Principally, up to date, they have discovered how to go to sleep. Just relax. They tell us we can not relax while thinking, nor think while relaxing. Therefore, the thing to be learned is how to quiet the mind, to check the mental processes, to simply forget all and drift into dreamless slumber. Everybody can not do this. So the savants are carrying on their experiments. Maybe when they finish they will have the solution. One suggestion is to learn to relax, and if you can not to get a doctor to tell you how. That is the secret of sound slumber, and the one who conquers the idea is the one who will benefit.

Market Report

Sioux City Stock Yards, August 24.—The fat cattle trade over the opening half of this week continued to present a ragged appearance, with the demands spotted and the incoming supplies badly mixed. Corn fed steers and yearlings formed a very light percentage of the general total and sold steady to strong. Toppers were lacking, however, and therefore the sales did not offer a very pleasing appearance as listed on paper. However, the fair to good fat yearlings can safely be quoted from $11.00 to $12.00 and the good to near choice from $12.00 to $13.25. Ripe mixed yearlings would earn as much as $13.50, or more, with fancy straight steer consignments to $14.00, a top already paid several times of late. Fair to good grass fat steers found underlying strength in feeder buyer competition and sold from $8.50 to $9.50 where the quality was fair to good and from $9.50 to $10.50 where the quality ran from good to choice. The few fed yearling heifers uncovered held up as in the past and look firm with the best values of the season. Fair to good yearling heifers figure from $10 to $11 and good to choice from $11 to $12.25. Sorts from mixed yearling shipments run on up to a top well over $13. Grass fat heifers have been scarce and have received order buyer competition. Firm prices have resulted, which has been the means of keeping fair to good kinds in a $7.50 to $8.50 spread and the choice kinds up around $9 and over. Buyers evidently did not consider recent heavy declines sufficient and applied new pressure on a generous assortment of grass fat cows this week. Values look 50 cents to $1 lower than 10 days ago. Plain to fair kinds sell from $5 to $6 and fair to good from $6 to $7, with toppers over. Cutters steady from $4.75 to $5 and canners likewise unchanged in an outlet extending from $4 to $4.75. Bulls reflect recent losses, with bolognas from $5 to $6 and heavy fed bulls from $6 to $6.50. Veals strong at all recent advances. Independents paying $13 freely for choice light veals, with a fancy outside top to $14. A liberal country demand proved the means of keeping the stocker and feeder trade on a strong footing. The big Monday run was cleared promptly and Tuesday enough added life was shown to place the deal on a strong to 25c higher level, with good to choice from $8.50 to $9.50. Heavy fleshy feeders found tops over $10. Choice feeding heifers all of 25c higher at midweek. Top of $8.40 paid for kinds averaging under 600 pounds, while desirable heifers sold from $7.50 to $8. Feeding downs strong from $5 to $5.75. Only plain kinds around $4.75. The first two days of the week brought around 150,000 cattle to the 11 leading markets of the country, about 13,000 more than arrived the same days last week. The same centers reported 184,000 hogs, a loss of 3,200 head, as compared to last week, but 13,800 more than arrived the same period in 1926. Prices have been jumping around more or less violently, but a summary shows hogs in a stronger position and light hogs lower. Top for light hogs now around $10.25, with hogs, which form the bulk of current runs, from $7.75 to $8.25. Shipper demands for hogs have been heavy. An aggregate of 150,000 sheep and lambs at the 11 leading markets carried a 46,000 head increase the first two days of this week. Native lamb prices dropped 75 cents and tops are back to $13.15. Ewes and yearlings steady.
