Supreme Court Passes On Case

Decision Filed in Bronzynski Case Holds Deeds to Be Valid and Not Taxable.

Phrase In Question

Interprets 'Transfers in Contemplation of Death' Not as Ordinary Apprehension.

That the deeds to property made by the late Carl Bronzynski, Wayne county farmer, were valid and are not taxable is the decision of the state supreme court, filed Monday at Lincoln.

The matter came before the court in the form of an appeal by the heirs of Carl Bronzynski, who had an estate of $400,000 before he started dividing it. When he was 65 years old and in good health, Mr. Bronzynski divided part of his 2,640 acres of land among his children, giving deeds of varying character, some of them absolute and others for small amounts as consideration. The court below held that the deeds were made "in contemplation of death."

When appealed to the supreme court, it was necessary for the phrase, "in contemplation of death," to be interpreted. It was to be decided whether this means that ordinary apprehension of death which every man possesses that urges him to make a will or whether it means made at a time when the maker is plainly approaching death. The supreme court takes the first definition to be correct, but states that the decision in each case is governed by circumstances. In the case considered the court decided that Mr. Bronzynski followed a natural and lawful impulse to put part of his responsibilities on the shoulders of his right sons, at the same time retaining enough property for his own support.

The decision is an important interpretation of that section of the inheritance tax law which brings within the taxation clause any and all transfers made in contemplation of death. The Bronzynski estate will thus be exempt from such tax.

Service Is Held In Wayne Friday

Funeral Is Conducted for Floyd C. Wilson Who Died as Result of Accident.

Funeral service was conducted in Wayne Friday morning at the Beckenauer parlors for Floyd Courtney Wilson who died November 22 near Winner, S. D., as a result of an accidental shot. He was 39 years of age. He was a member of the Methodist church and was in charge of the cemetery. The American Legion men attended in a body and had charge of burial rites.

Mr. Wilson and his brother, Clark Wilson, were living together on a farm near Winner. On the afternoon of the tragedy, a neighbor's cattle got into a field on the Wilson place. The two brothers started to drive them out, Clark going ahead. After the latter had driven the cattle away he returned to the house and found his brother dead. It is thought that Floyd Wilson picked up his shotgun in preparation to go to the field to help his brother. When he set the gun on the floor, placing the butt end down, it is thought the gun discharged, the charge grazing Mr. Wilson's temple.

Deceased was 38 years old. The family lived in Wayne recently. Floyd Courtney Wilson was born February 27, 1894, near Logan, Iowa. He enlisted in the U. S. army July 27, 1918, and served in the Vespz sector overseas. He received honorable discharge on June 15, 1919.

Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Wilson, deceased leaves the following sisters and brothers: Frank H. Wilson and Clark W. Wilson of near Winner, Mrs. Earl Bennett of Earlham, Iowa, Charles R. Wilson of Carroll, Miss Vern Wilson and Miss Isadore Wilson of Clarks, Neb. All were present for the funeral excepting Charles Wilson.

Remove Partition To Improve Church

Members and friends of the Church of Christ were happy last Sunday when they entered the church room to find that a partition which divided the two rooms had been removed and replaced with an arch. This improvement makes it possible for all to see the speaker, all being seated in one large room. The change also gives a place for the choir which formerly did not have sufficient room. Fifteen more people can now be seated in the building, located at the corner of Fourth and Logan.

POSTOFFICE GOES TO NEW QUARTERS END OF THIS WEEK

The postoffice will be moved the last of this week into the double room formerly occupied by the Herald plant. The two combined buildings belong to John T. Bressler and A. R. Davis, who have remodeled them, installed a steam heating system, put in a new, modern front and dolled them up in attractive style for reception of the federal business. For many years and until about fifteen years ago the postoffice occupied the east building, but when it gets back there it will not find any of the scenery with which it was familiar in the old days. Everything has been changed and made roomy, comfortable and neat. It is doubtful if there is left anything that would arouse tender recollections of the Herald which moved to its new quarters less than a year ago.

Pastor Speaks To Club Monday

Rev. A. C. Downing Addresses Wayne Kiwanians on the Meaning of Cooperation.

Gives A Definition

Urges Application of the Golden Rule as Means of Solving All Social Ills.

Rev. A. C. Downing, pastor of the Wayne Baptist church, addressed the Kiwanis club Monday following the noonday luncheon. His subject being "Cooperation". He emphasized the well-known truth that the individual, group or community is independent. This has been brought about by the processes of socialization, namely, aggregation, association, organization and cooperation.

In reviewing the social structure from the earliest time, Rev. Downing pointed out that the horde, groups, neighborhoods, hamlets, villages, towns and cities have formed the social framework. The social body with closely related parts has thus developed.

Within society are four constituent parts. These are the sustaining, perpetuating, communicating and regulating groups. The sustaining group includes branches of society which produce goods for satisfaction of human wants. This group administers to physical sustenance. The perpetuating group includes the family, medical and sanitary societies, all charged with perpetuation of the species. The communicating group is essential in the work of carrying knowledge. Papers, books, magazines, telephones, telegraph and radio are included in this group. The cultural group includes churches, educational systems and scientific societies. In the regulating group are protective systems, legislative institutions, police systems, labor organizations and fraternal societies.

The first step in the process of socialization, stated Rev. Downing, is the fitting together of groups, small in the start and growing to large as the state and organization thus, closely following aggregation. A desire for association is natural.

Business, churches and all activities are transacted through association. Character is largely determined by association also, and thinking and utterances are influenced.

Association leads to action and organization quickly follows the group of human beings; the speaker stated. Each owes his fellow individual the right to exist, to think and to act for himself. Because of the law of survival of the fittest, it is asserted that there never has been a natural justice. Out of the conflict for survival have come codes of civil law, and here it is that the individual relinquishes his right to regulate his own conduct to the government.

No man is absolutely independent. Rev. Downing stated. His welfare depends upon industrial organization and upon recognition of the dependence upon others and his dependence upon them.

Because of the great dependence on others, cooperation is essential in the social process. Unless each unit or individual learns the art of true cooperation, the whole social structure is weak and fails to accomplish its purpose. There must be faith between cooperating parties. There can be no true cooperation unless there be sympathetic recognition of the rights of all concerned. Cooperation has been defined as "love in action." Where love fails to exist, cooperation is merely an expression and not a fact.

Cooperation then, stated the speaker, is nothing more than putting the Golden Rule into practice. All human relationships would be revolutionized if the Golden Rule were really practiced. No method for the solving of economic and social problems has yet been found as a substitute for living the Golden Rule. When the professors of and actually practice this principle, stated Rev. Downing, the conflict between labor and capital and the antagonism between other elements of society will soon be eliminated. The plea today is for better understanding between individuals, each making an earnest effort to live for others as well as for himself.

THE KNOT-HOLE

No. 26 Wayne, Nebraska, Thursday, Dec. 1, 1927. Vol. 1 Have you your Christmas shopping done? Neither have we. Poultry pays. One lady tells us that the returns from her chickens last year paid all the family grocery bills and some other expenses besides. But you can't raise chickens successfully without a good poultry house. We have some splendid plans for small modern poultry houses that you should see. By holding the hammer handle with both hands, you can avoid striking your thumb. Small pigs should have shelter. These movable hog houses are just the thing. Right now is a good time to be making these houses. We have the material, dimensions and complete instructions, or we will build them for you at a reasonable additional cost for labor. Mother. "Willie, you've been fighting. Why you've lost your front teeth." Willie. "No, I ain't, mother. Here they are." This week, we are unloading a car of "EVERYTHING TO BUILD ANYTHING WITH" roll. You buy this of us, 90 pounds per roll, for $2.95. Why spend for it? A great big car swept by, in a cloud of dust. "That car raises a heap of dust," remarked a carpenter laborer who was standing. "No wonder," said a man who knew the owner, "it's dragging a mortgage on an eighty acre farm." We are often asked how we can sell roofings and other building materials at as low figures as we do. You should remember we buy all our building materials direct from the manufacturers in car lots, for cash and get the lowest possible car load freight. In this connection, let us say, we will duplicate any catalog house at the catalog price and furnish you better materials in most cases. Take as an example, Wardway Homes, page 49, The Waverly in Kansas City to Wayne is 64 1/2 c per roll, making a total cost of $2.84 1/2 per sq. yard. "You can't qualify as a leading citizen until you get blamed for everything," remarks Ernest Bichel.

If we cultivate the generous Christmas spirit all through this month, it may become so fastened to us that it will stick all through the coming year.

We would suggest that Henry Ford make practical demonstration of his strong friendship for editors by presenting each one with a Ford of the new model. This could happen appropriately around Christmas.

Andy Chance of Wayne, has an excerpt from the New York World bearing date of January 19, 1881, and containing a lengthy discussion of the tariff. It is an interesting review of the way people were thinking nearly forty-seven years ago.

Russia has been celebrating the tenth anniversary of the establishment of its soviet government, and while it has looked like the substitution of one despotism for another, it may reasonably be expected in the coming years to develop into a properly functioning democracy.

In the course of its Thanksgiving day editorial, the Lincoln Journal observes that "there is no blacker word in the dictionary of sin than ingratitude." Often people are so absorbed by thoughts of expected favors that they forget to feel grateful for those already received.

"A mockery of religion" is the way Dr. A. L. Bixby regards the scramble for the chaplaincy of the United States senate, and he thinks the victor will be one who can muster the most "appealing dignity and poise, the most engaging mannerisms, and can make a prayer in the choicest and fewest words."

Fair weather has permitted corn picking to proceed under a full head of steam, and it will not be long until all the crop will be out of the fields. Some have finished the task. With no assurance that the weather will long continue mild and free from snow, the forehanded farmer is losing no time in gathering his corn and having it safely cribbed.

With its new press installed and in running order, the Hartington Herald issued in eight-column form last week, and the improved appearance is marked in all respects. The enlarged size is amply justified by increased advertising and news demands. The Hartington Herald has made wonderful progress during the last few years, and it is still going.

The testimony in the trial of George Remus at Cincinnati, charged with murdering his wife, shows that an agent of the federal government was the means of sending Remus to prison for bootlegging, and that while he was serving time, the agent tried to

TRIAL MARRIAGE
A great deal is being said these days about so called trial marriages. Down in Kansas a boy and girl of tender years and immature judgment were permitted by their parents to marry with an understanding that if love ceased and happiness vanished, they could go their respective ways unburdened by marital ties. All marriages may be said to be trial marriages, but happily most of them continue successfully and are therefore unheard of. When the trial fails and the divorce courts act, it becomes a conspicuous exception to the rule. Most people consider marriage a solemn and sacred institution, not to be entered into lightly, nor set aside as carelessly, as one would lay off a used garment. Succeeding the more or less fanciful and often spasmodic loves of youth, there comes the sustaining and lasting companionship of middle life and old age when mutual understanding and sympathy illuminate the home stretch and make it less gloomy and difficult. In maturity, after fruitful love has had its day, usually ties are more closely knitted by an appreciation of spiritual values. As to children, they furnish sound reason for ambition and useful endeavor, and whatever rights we had to come into the world and grow as individuals, would seem just as valid in contemplating the rights of future generations.

steal his wife. It is alleged that when he got back from the pen and ready to settle down, he found his luxurious home stripped of its furniture. So the defense claims that Remus killed his wife while suffering from temporary insanity caused by troubles that did not end with release from prison.

"Chang" is the name of a picture appearing at the local theatre last week, and its setting is in the jungles of Asia, revealing the experiences of the natives in battling for the crudest livelihood against the savagery of the wildest and fiercest animals still extant. The most primitive habitations and barest necessities in the way of food often surrendered to the terrible onslaughts of the jungle beasts. Compared to the natives of Asia, we have made a good deal of headway in the comforts of life, but seemingly they are just as contented and happy as we are.

Home folks down in Massachusetts are passing resolutions and burning red fire in the hope of persuading their fellow-citizen, President Coolidge, to rescind his pronouncement about choosing not to run again. In showing their enthusiasm, they go too far in asking that he be elected for life. This foolish suggestion would tend more to quiet than to quicken popular sentiment for the president. While Coolidge has many excellent qualities and has made a very acceptable chief executive, no one outside of Massachusetts would seriously consider electing any one for life even if the constitution would permit him to do so.

The Literary Digest republishes extracts from letters received from many leading women of the country in response to the query: "Do women lose power to think earlier than men?" The answers indicate that women are doing more studying and thinking than ever, and that age is no barrier to the constructive mental operations of either men or women. The letters call attention to the benefits derived by women from club activities—association that stimulates research and study along many lines, science, literature and art as well as practical domestic affairs and politics. It is pointed out that more girls than boys are being educated in the schools of the country, and that more of the former are laying foundations for later intellectual development. But continued study and interest in affairs keep the mind of either a man or woman alive and alert, and thus employed, multiplied years should not hinder analytical and productive thinking.

A World Power.
Lincoln Journal: In his convocation address before the University of Nebraska Phillip Kerr, of London, secretary of the Rhodes trust, astonished his hearers by telling them that in another year, generating the United States will own one-half of the productive wealth of the world. That stewardship will carry grave responsibilities. We cannot extend our financial and economic power into every other nation without becoming deeply immersed in world politics. For, as Mr. Kerr elaborated in private conversations, the prosperity of the world depends on world peace. As owner and guardian of this wealth we must see that peace is maintained. When pressed for details as to how we may prepare ourselves for this enormous responsibility Mr. Kerr contented himself by observing that people who have shown sufficient business acumen to win first place in industry and finance can be depended upon to develop enough political sagacity to manage the trust that has been placed in their hands.

When we contemplate the problem thus placed before us we see that membership in the League of Nations and the world court will be not the climax of our venture into world politics but merely a beginning. Compared with other political implications these will be almost minor engagements. If we are to meet the fate outlined for us by this able British publicist we will find it necessary to pass on from the comparatively mild obligations of Geneva and The Hague to such a study of world affairs as we have never undertaken and such a course of training of men for diplomacy and world trade as has never been contemplated even by our most forward looking educators. In his addresses and conferences in Lincoln Mr. Kerr did not even suggest that we should join the League of Nations as a first step in the management of our vast estate. What he did say was that with America outside the league the work of organizing against war has been checked until the smaller nations are becoming impatient. The sanctions of economic war upon any nation that breaks the peace cannot be agreed upon because Great Britain is far-sighted enough to realize that it might involve her in war with the United States. Suppose Italy, to take an example not mentioned by Mr. Kerr, should declare war upon a neighbor. Suppose the league should declare an economic boycott of the offender. As a neutral non-member of the league the United States would have the right to trade with Italy. Great Britain, after supporting the sanctions, would be called upon to use her navy in enforcing a blockade of Italian ports. That would involve war with the United States, a thing Great Britain refuses to consider. This lifting of the curtain of European politics shows us that we cannot be a world power in trade and finance without also becoming an expert and a force in world politics.

TO BE UNPOPULAR
A current magazine contains an article giving ten ways in which to make people hate one, and the author says he has tried all of them and knows. The different ways are briefly suggested as follows: When a fellow starts a friendly conversation, shoot him with an abrupt disagreement. Without solicitation, criticize a man's friends and members of his family. Place low value on accomplishments that another is proud of. Within a circle of friends, engage in a dispute over every topic presented. Call to one's attention his mistakes and explain how he could have avoided them. Drag your favorite topic before people who are interested in something else. Remind people of broken promises made in haste and without thought of fulfillment. Insist on occupying the front of the stage and being the whole show. Smother people's enthusiasm and try to make them think they are antiquated. Criticize people's religion or patriotic sentiments and try to show them they are prejudiced and short-sighted. If any one wants to be unpopular, he may rest assured of success by following one or more of the rules suggested.

As to "Deplorable Condition."
Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: Governor McMullen has been quoted as saying in effect that the president's latest pronouncement as to the state of the union ignored "the greatest industry of all and the industry that is in the most deplorable condition of all." From our own observation no industry, except wildcatting for oil, is in a "deplorable" condition. In agriculture, horticulture and kindred activities reasonable profits are accruing to the industrious and prudent. Dairying is not conducted at a loss, while eggs and barnyard fowls find a ready market at reasonable prices. What does the ultimate consumer have to pay for pork tenderloin or beef liver? "Dunt esk!" It is assumed that the industrial energies of the country produce an income of $90,000,000,000 a year. One-third of that huge sum goes to the credit of agriculture. Yet the speaker is alleged to have said that one-tenth of the $30,000,000,000,000 is the farmers' apportionment in the big distribution. That would be but $3,000,000,000. Senator Capper is more conservative. He says the farmers get $10,000,000,000,000 of the general take-off. That is more encouraging. When we try to think that amount of money takes us almost to the edge of infinitude in figures, and we almost wonder what the farmers and all the rest of us can possibly do with so much money. Then, the grocery bill comes in, and it gives us a hint of our industrial and commercial capacity for absorption, and we cease to wonder at anything, except the facility of politicians in handling incomprehensible totals. But are any of us, except the politicians who inhabit this grand and glorious country, in a "deplorable condition?"

Simplify Income Tax.
From the Albany News: Every one who has ever had to make out an income tax report sincerely hopes that the special joint tax committee now convening at Washington to simplify the revenue laws will be able to evolve something understandable to the ordinary mind. The technical mind may feel it necessary to include all sorts of restrictions and counter restrictions and all manner of complications in the law, but the layman who has to make out an income tax ought to be able to report simply what he got, what his deductions can be and what his net taxable income amounts to without consulting a lawyer or an income tax deputy collector. The man of small income usually knows that he received so much in wages, that he is married and can deduct so much for that, and that he can deduct for children or others dependent on him and that he paid so much in taxes and gave so much to his church or to charity. That is enough. Making out income tax reports has become a bugaboo for the best of us. The government ought to be able to simplify this annual mental horror without any loss to itself and permit all men to go about their business instead of spending February and part of March in creeping through the pages of tax blanks.

Successful Farming.
Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: On the east-bound train the other day, somewhere this side of Mankato, we contracted with a Minnesota horticulturist of mature years. He said he was eighty-five and had been a resident of Nobles county more than fifty years. He is a farmer who specializes in horticulture, and gets by with it. The mighty grasshopper siege was on when he moved into the county but he refused to believe with some that the plague might last forever. Having little else to do for a couple of years, he planted trees on his prairie farm, fruit and forest, shrubs and vines. The goddess of fortune frowned on his initial efforts, but he persisted, and she smiled with a smile that never comes off. His orchards now yield a handsome profit, and forest trees, planted fifty years ago, furnish abundant fuel. For the first few years they burned hay. Since last February he says he cut and saved forty cords of wood, more than enough fuel to last all winter, and the exercise has kept him in health, same as playing golf would have done. We asked him if the farmers of his section generally are prosperous. "Very much so, considering," he answered. That was rather indefinite and we asked him to explain. He replied: "About 90 percent of the farmers don't know how to farm. They try to do too much and don't do half enough. Good farming pays, always has and always will, while slipshod farming is as certainly unsuccessful as slipshod business." He thinks "political farm relief" has no significance except relief for the politicians who advocate something of the sort as a desperate means of keeping the majority of voters interested in the game by which professional office seekers get into office. From the general appearance of this kindly old man we are impressed that a man of sense lives longer and has better health than the political piffle who trifles with truth.

Sanitary Pigs Are Winners Of Prizes
Four pigs raised by a Georgia farmer cooperating with the United States Department of Agriculture in a parasite-control experiment won first, second, and third prizes and also the championship of their breed at the southwest Georgia fair held recently. The pigs were raised under a system of sanitation designed to control parasitic worms which are a troublesome parasite on hog lots. These pigs, according to a report of Dr. E. M. Nighbert, in charge of the experiment, were the first animals exhibited by their owner and were shown in good competition. They were 6 months and 12 days old and averaged 202 1/2 pounds. An accompanying exhibit on swine sanitation showed the manner in which the pigs had been raised, and attracted much favorable attention and comment. Many swine owners who were impressed by the practical benefits of parasite control returned later bringing their friends.

Needs the Money.
Hartington Herald: Ruth Elder, the pretty aviatrix who succeeded in flying across the Atlantic or part way across without being drowned, is beginning to cash in already on her fame by accepting a stage contract at $1,000 a day. Ruth made no secret of the fact, when she hopped off on her perilous flight, that she was out for the dough and now she is making the most of her golden opportunity by signing up a good fat contract. As far as Miss Elder's service in the interest of aviation is concerned, that is nil and she is perfectly frank in disclaiming any; but her eagerness for publicity and its financial rewards will not win for her the admiration which was accorded Lindbergh and the other flyers whose only motive was the advancement of science. This very charming young woman has already been sharply criticized both at home and abroad for her melodramatic behavior, but having been lucky enough to escape the watery grave which was the fate of the no less courageous Miss Doran, no one can question her right to capitalize on it if she so desires.

Art Exhibit To Come To School

Display of American Designed Silks Will Be Shown At College in December.

The art department of the Wayne State Teachers College will provide entertainment for lovers of art during the first two weeks of December. In the school gallery will be hung an exhibition of American designed silks. In addition to the painted designs in use in the production of costume silks, swatches of silks and photographs of costumes made of the fabrics will be shown. The various designs are named by the artists who created them, some of them quite fancifully, as plum blossom, grand canyon, Tango weed, Manhattan, jungle, map of Paris, Inca and others.

The exhibit was loaned by the Stehli Silk corporation of New York City. The American Federation of Arts is circulating the exhibit among the museums, art schools and college art departments of the west.

The following, quoted from the Nashville Banner of Nashville, Tenn., gives some hint of the pleasure to be derived from viewing this unusual exhibition.

"Astounding variations from the art Michael Angelo, Raphael, Davinci, and even recent John Singer Sargent have come to pass with the puzzling futuristic and impressionistic dabbings of the present revolting age.

"The most recent, and perhaps the most pleasing and useful of these departures in art are the printed designs on crepe silk being offered by the Nashville Art Association in the galleries of Carnegie library.

"The silks, being sent out from the Metropolitan museum by the American Federation of Arts, are not the handiwork of confirmed faddists or futurist artists, but are the production of such internationally known craftsmen as Katherine Sturges, Rene Clark, Neysa McMein, Ralph Barton, Clayton Knight, and Charles B. Falls, all of whom command remunerations that leave them out of the 'art-for-art's sake' list. The designs are for dress goods patterns.

"Confronted with the conglomeration of glaring tabs of harmonizing colors, soft fade-aways that are so striking, and ideas that shock you when you think of them on a street dress, one has to catch one's breath a moment before getting down to earth and attempting to see what it's all about.

"There are plaids in the crepe silk some twelve inches wide with colors that hold the eye and with postlike designs in them.

"There are pale flower gardens on silk, done in a decorative manner, and there are waves rolling in from the sea, getting bigger and bigger with each roll. One might imagine these waves around the bottom of madame's dress leaving her in the middle of the ocean, but unlike the bathing beauties, fully gowned.

"Old Fashioned Garden," a design of poster effect mixing five colors into a bold weaving of flowers magnified beyond the size of the original product, is probably the central attraction of the exhibit. It is printed on silk, and one would prefer it as a window curtain or screen design rather than as a frock, but the fashion plates show that such work was intended to be made up into the latest dress styles. It is by Katherine Sturges, who after studying in America went to the Orient and absorbed the knowledge of those great Chinese and Japanese gniuses, Chin Hung Chow of Canton, Tekeuchi Seiho of Kyola and among others, Shojuro Nomuro, the great textile designer of Kyola.

"Her work shows that she was inspired by the unusual craft of the orientals, 'Sargasso,' 'Bouqquets' and 'Checkers' are the titles she has given some of her other silk designs.

"Ralph Barton, he who jests at the great and near great with his pen and pencil caricatures, and draws funny pictures as well as artistic ones, was inspired by an aeroplane ride over Paris to draw a picture, map-like but with the originality of twists and lines that only Barton can do for others to imitate, of that city in which he studied. This picture is printed in sepia on silk and a fashion photo accompanying it shows that it makes a pretty frock for Miss America.

"Neysa McMein, she who made a business of art painting expensive magazine covers of pretty girls before she became Mrs. John A. Baranaweth, wife of the banker, has made some of the most delightful of these designs for silk prints. Her 'Birches' depicting graceful and decorative trees among a mass of color, is a rare product.

"There is no way of telling why Rene Clark calls a conglomeration of colors, futuristic buildings or just cubes with feeling in their bold colors, jazz. His 'Hollyhocks' is the best of his work on exhibit.

"Clayton Knight has a design called 'Jungle' and another called 'Grand Canyon' which might be or might not be meant for pictures of such places, but they are effective and fascinating.

"A feature of the exhibition is a water color design, the original, of dozens of little men and women delicately colored and dressed in the fashion of 1830."

the beef trade. Moreover the zestful trade on the finished product; lent confidence to operations on feeder cattle and briskness characterized the outlet on all classes of cattle.

The first two days of the week brought approximately 144,000 cattle to the eleven leading markets of the country, about 9,000 less than arrived the first two days of last week.

Shorted offerings were offered in increased numbers and sold especially at strong prices over the first half of the week. Good to choice kind can safely be figured from $14.00 to $16.00 and fair to good from $11.50 to $14.00. Plain kinds sold from $11.00 and some warmed up trade down around $9.00.

No ripe longfeds were uncovered to Wednesday, the country seeming to have little such material. However, buyers continued to search eagerly and accordingly the outlet is still pegged at the high time. A possible top of $17.50 waits for choice long feds from now until the demand is filled for the annual holiday beef.

Short fed yearling heifers sold consistently from $9.00 to $12.00, that spread covering fair to choice kinds. Also some fed cows arrived to sell in scattered lots around $9.00, while the good to choice grass cows sold firmly from $7.50 to $8.50 and fair to good kinds from $6.50 to $7.50. Fewer of the grass fat heifers are coming, but are nevertheless meeting a healthy call from $7.50 to $10.00.

Plain grass beef cows sold down to $6.00, with cutters in the same old brisk call from $5.25 to $5.75. No alterations marked the canner trade this week and sales again ranged from $4.50 to $5.00. Bulls sold strong, with bolognas $6.25 to $6.75 and heavy fed bulls $7.00 to $7.00.

Veals came in for added favor this week and advanced fully a half dollar. Tops to packers ran from $11.00 to $11.50 and occasionally an outside sale was reported to city butchers as high as $12.00.

Stockers and feeders continued to receive a wide country call and command strong prices. Values are apparently as high as ever, with fair to good thin steers worth from $8.75 to $10.25. Few extra good kinds have been arriving to sell up, around $11.00. No choice kinds have been received, such as would sell to $12.00, if offered.

Range cleanups are moving in moderate numbers and cashing slowly steady from $7.50 down to as low as $6.00 for trash.

Choice light feeding heifers again hit the year's top at $9.75, while light heiferly feeding cows topped over $7.00 and regulation feeding cows sold from $6.00 up, with only good mouthed canners going down around the $5.00 line.

After opening higher hog prices reacted and at midweek hog prices a position very nearly steady as compared to the close of last week. Again the fluctuations indicate that packers have about placed prices on the proper level for the "winter packing season." Tops for butchers hover close around $9.00 and the best light sows are only able to beat $8.00 by an odd nickel, or two. Excessive weight continues to meet discrimination on both sows and butchers.

The eleven leading markets of the country reported an aggregate of 247,200 hogs the first two days of the week, 6,500 more than arrived the same period last week, and 2,100 more than put in an appearance the same time a year ago.

The usual unevenness marked the fat lamb trade this week. Ups and downs, however, brought forth no radical changes and Wednesday found the top on both fat natives and fed westerns close to $13.75. Top on feeding lambs now $13.25 and best ewes $8.75.

St. Paul Lutheran Church. Rev. Henry Krohn of Kansas, has been called as pastor of the congregation and accepted the invitation. He will be installed on December 11.

The Ladies' Aid society met Wednesday with Mrs. H. L. Bredemeyer.

Methodist Church. (Rev. J. H. Johnson, Pastor). Sunday school attendance is still climbing up. We are having a real school now. The junior department will have a tree, exchange of presents and a treat on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 24. We will have a miscellaneous program on Christmas morning and a cantata at night.

If you have any clothes in your home that you do not care for, bring them to church and leave them in the room east of south entrance. Any kind of they have wear in them. Anyone who would like some of these clothes to make over for yourself or children are welcome to go there and select what you want.

Next Sunday evening we are going to try out a new kind of illustrating device, films instead of glass slides. It will be used in both the League and public service. We want the people to express themselves as to whether they want to keep the outfit or not.

Last Sunday we observed Good Literature day. We received several new subscriptions to our church paper. If there are others just notify the pastor. If you wish your subscription renewed do the same.

We have a committee who are looking after the installing of a toilet in our church. After that is done we will have the most complete plant that we ever saw. They expect to get after it right away.

The W. H. M. S. will meet with Mrs. A. S. Hirsch this Thursday afternoon. The Aid met on Wednesday, serving a pot-lunch. They will have their apron bazaar and supper next Saturday. Your patronage will be appreciated. Fine place to get your Christmas present and a good meal.

The choir will meet with Mrs. M. S. Linn next Friday evening. They are not getting very many invitations for their rehearsals.

Sorry to miss little Jack Davenport in our Sunday school and League. Hope you remember him with a call or card, anything to cheer him up. Here is hope that his recovery will be speedy and leave no permanent effects.

Baptist Church. (Rev. M. G. Jones, Pastor). Sunday school at 10 a. m. Hurrah for the red and blue, but please inquire for which side I will.

Preaching at 11 a. m. Theme, Moses' Prayer and Interest in the People.

As Sunday, December 4, is proclaimed as Bible Sunday, see that the word, the hymn of praise and prayer get their rightful place in your heart.

Congregational Church. (Rev. M. G. Jones, Pastor). There will be no service at the Congregational church as we shall unite with the south church in observing Bible Sunday in prayer, song and speech. This meeting will begin at 1 p. m. Arrange to attend and feed upon the things that count the most. Preaching at 7 p. m. at the same church. Theme, Moses' Prayer and Interest in the People. It is of great importance how we receive the word of God, but still more important is the use we make of it. Moses' valuable instructions to the Hebrews to read, study and impart the truth to their children and children's children may be learned in the word and bring forth the works of the children of light.

"October in Kansas." Emporia Gazette: Every fall the Gazette prints W. E. Blackburn's "October in Kansas," which unquestionably is the best bit of descriptive writing ever done by a Kansan. It follows:

"The very air is invigorating; fragrant from the harvest, spiced with wood smoke, bracing from the first frosts, scintillant with the glorious sunshine that fills the shortening autumn days with splendor and makes thin and luminous the attending shadow.

"'Bob White' shrills of 'more wet, more wet'; his Quakerish little wife, with half-grown brood, trimly speeds across the roadway into the ripening corn, or with musical 'whir-r-r' rises to dive into the distant sea of undulating brown.

"Prairie larks trill and carol, on the rusty wire or perched on the infrequent posts that hold the cattle from the ripened field. Hawks fly low; frightened sparrows; rabbits scurry from bare pastures to grassy covert, or sit erect and watch with distended eye, quivering nostril, rigid with impending danger.

"The murmur of voices, the merrily cock-crow, the loving of cattle are as distant music, carried softly to the ear by the voluptuous air.

"Corn shocks dot the field—tents of an army that stand near by in whispering ranks. A multitude of peace and plenty; no arms; no equipment, but a harvest of golden grain on hip and shoulder. Save a weary few, they stand expectant, awaiting to deliver their garnered wealth, be mustered out and with empty pockets, light hearts and fluttering banners retrace their steps via the mouldering way to the place whence they come, and rest. In rusty, velvet fields big dusty haystacks stand in herds or gather in about the barn, shouldering one another in ponderous good humor.

"From the inspiration of the caressing air, the peaceful, plentiful view, satisfied achievements of a farmer's work, of goodly store from nature's plenty, we look with brightened eye, bounding blood and defiant head, to the north, undaunted by the icy breath that tells of coming snow."

Another of life's problems is how to keep dump people from talking.—Arkansas Gazette.

The cigarette that knows how to "be itself"

There is no "pose" about Camel. It's just a good honest cigarette—the best ever—and it doesn't try to be anything else.

If all cigarettes were as good as Camel you wouldn't hear anything about special treatments to make cigarettes good for the throat. Nothing takes the place of choice tobaccos.

The new policy will give us quicker return on the capital invested and greater purchasing power which means we will be in a position to give you lower prices for quality merchandise and better service than ever. Income Tax. Fairbury News: Washington reports indicate that congress will lop off at least $250,000,000 in federal taxes when it convenes next month. While the details have not been worked out yet, and could not be announced with any degree of certainty until congress has given them its O. K. still there is a rumor that a bill will be introduced providing for a new method of computing incomes that will simplify the work very materially, and this will be hailed with a good deal of satisfaction by the fellow who suffers from mental exertion in making out his income report every year. It is said that one feature of the bill will be to allow the tax payer considerable more than $400 for each dependent, and this seems just. It is very apparent, from advance discussion however, that congress will experience difficulty in getting together on the provisions of the bill, and it naturally must be a compromise measure.

Job's Helpers. York Republican: Always, nowadays, when we read the press interviews with the farm bloc leaders in congress, we remember Job's friends. Their intentions may have been good and they may have thought they were doing a neighborly act, but Job's troubles were not banished until he took command of the situation himself.

In the face of great crops all over the country and unusually good general economic and trade conditions, it is going to be hard for a small coterie of self-appointed political friends of the farmer to make him think he is terribly misused and fearfully oppressed. He is less and less likely, in times when his own stock is rising, to think it wisdom to trust his affairs to the government and depend on congress to better his financial state.

From the point of view of a country newspaper editor who observes serves a little and makes a reasonable discount for political bunk, it looks as though the farm bloc is making a last and gallant stand for the right to be premier advisors to the farmers. A great political hope is flickering. The plight of the farmer, sad as it was, is fast becoming a situation that needs not political aid but the adoption of widespread cooperation. Better economic conditions and better prices should not, by any means, turn attention from injustices that exist, but it will be found in the end that the injustices will be cured not through party or group politics, but by arousing the nation to a need. When the need is generally recognized a way will be found to cure it, not with political poisons but with sound business wisdom.

Novelties for This Year's Christmas Giving. The punch bowl is high and has a dome-shaped lid. At one side is a notch for the handle of the ladle to project. The bowl and glasses are painted with sprays of flowers. A handsome tray completes the set. For one who enjoys the sun room or porch, there are several kinds of lemonade sets. A basket tray holds the pitcher with glasses set round it and has a high handle over all, so that it may be carried easily. These sets come in different colors, rose, amber, green and so on. In the same part of the store, intricate arrangements of glass beads are made for gifts, peacocks and pheasants and birds, such odd birds that never were. New and Old in Jewelry. Speaking of beads, if one is able to give jewelry for one's gifts, there are things that make one catch one's breath at some of the jewelry shops. Here again the ancient and modern are sharply contrasted. If the one to whom you are giving, cares for old things, you will find the jewelers have collected some of these for you. Little sets are available, for instance a necklace, a pair of earrings and a brooch, that match, and were made for the belle of 1780. Some times a pair of bracelets are included. The modern things have much charm and great beauty of workmanship and design. Some of them attain a delicate frosted effect by setting tiny diamonds in platinum. There are so many things from which to choose, rings, pins, hat ornaments, bracelets, watches, clocks, cigarette cases and so on. "Just What I Wanted!" Jewelry for personal adornment has been influenced strongly by fashions in dress. Simple hats have called for greater variety in hat ornaments. Wide bracelets are worn. Pins are used for the shoulders or hip, where formerly bar pins were used for the open collar of shirtwaists. Pearls fit in with so many kinds of costumes that they have had great popularity. Consider the one on whom you are about to inflict your gift. (Alas, some gifts are an infliction, aren't they!) It makes one perfectly glib to have to say "thank you" for them. To give that which they are anxious to please each other's friends is our parting good wish for you! shape, with a mirror top and feet, that bring it the least bit higher than the cushions. By Marjorie Howe Dixon.

To start with you must consider the recipient of the gift slightly, if she is ultra modern, and most sophisticated you will have no trouble at all finding something to please her. But suppose he is really and truly mid-Victorian, well then you will have to select with greater care, his gift. Of course he would never admit he was mid-Victorian, they never do! But if you keep in mind his being very conventional and matter-of-fact and conservative you will doubtless be able to select some little thing he will really like.

If your friend is collecting antiques, say some particular thing, like old clocks or old glass, or second and third grade readers, McGuffey's preferably,—your task is somewhat simplified,—and then again it isn't. Because your search may lead you far afield, but it will be a fascinating search for all that.

For the Antique-ophile You may find the very thing you are looking for, in some tiny antique shop in another town, and at the same time a pair of those charmingly elegant ladies of fashion of the Eighteen-twenties that you have been wanting for ever so long. To one who enjoys it, there is nothing quite so delightful as to browse around in an antique shop.

For contrast, let us return to our ultra modern, young person who feels, and quite sincerely too, that the lovely things that originated in the Paris Exhibition of Modern Decorative Arts are "perfectly darling." Is there something for her? Yes indeed.

The Low Perspective. To begin with in the modern art it seems to be largely a matter of perspective. That sounds like the veriest bromide, but it isn't. A low perspective especially characterizes the modern things. One is expected to sit on a cushion, or low stool, or at the very highest on a bench lower than the average chair, which is eighteen inches from the floor.

For this purpose there are lovely gay cushions to sit on—and a tray along side of an unusual

Reception To Hear About New Ford Car

Wayne will get its first full description of the new line of Ford automobiles, tomorrow. A public reception to be held by local dealers is part of the national introduction of the new Ford models. In thousands of communities all over the United States tomorrow this new line of moderate-priced light automobiles will be introduced to millions of people.
The doors of the show rooms are to be opened promptly at 8 a. m. and attendants will be on hand throughout the remainder of the day to explain the new and interesting features of the car which is expected to make a new chapter in automotive history.
The new Ford cars are said to be the product of several years of study and planning by Henry Ford and his engineers in the great Ford laboratories at Dearborn. Mr. Ford himself has announced that "there is nothing quite like the new Ford car" and has stated that it will prove just as great a pioneer in the present field of low-priced light cars of quality as the famous Model T was a pioneer in its field for more than nineteen years.
Among the visitors to the reception tomorrow will be many city officials, executives of business, civic and professional organizations and other leaders in the life of the community, who have been specially invited.
The performance of these new cars, it is said, will be startling when viewed in the light of automobile performance of the past.
Local dealers have been notified by Ford officials at Detroit, that the factories throughout the country are now preparing to produce the new cars in numbers exceeding even the tremendous production records achieved in the manufacture of the Model T line.
Company officials at Detroit also repeated their early announcement that production of the new Ford line will not make the Model T line obsolete. The manufacture of new parts for Model T replacements will continue to be an important factor of the Ford plants as long as any of the Model T cars are still in operation, the local dealers were advised. Because of this policy, present owners of Model T Ford cars will be able to keep their cars in perfect order as long as those cars remain in commission.

Fatal Shooting At St. Edward Friday

Albion, Neb., Nov. 26.—Thorval Hansen, 27, unmarried young farmer living near St. Edward, was shot and killed last evening about 7:30 o'clock by Charles Lane, 31, who fired three shots while standing in front of the St. Edward home in which Mrs. Lane, from whom the slayer was separated, had been living.
Lane, formerly of St. Edward, escaped in the excitement, and a statewide search is being made for him.
Hansen, whose lung was penetrated by one of the pistol bullets, died from the effects of hemorrhaging about two hours after the shooting.
Divorce Suit Pending.
Until a few days ago Lane lived in California. He had returned to St. Edward to make arrangements for the divorce suit which is pending between him and his wife. Early yesterday evening Lane, according to authorities, called upon his estranged wife relative to signing papers in the divorce proceedings.
After Lane and his wife had talked for some time, during which they appeared to be on friendly terms, they decided to drive to the business section of St. Edward and get Hansen, who authorities were told, had been calling upon Mrs. Lane for some time.
After finding Hansen who got in the Lane automobile, the trio returned to the house occupied by Mrs. Lane, the slayer stopping the car in front of the home. While enroute to the home the conversation between the three was friendly according to information given the officers.
Hansen was asked by Lane to go into the house to sign the divorce case papers as a witness, which the young farmer refused to do. A heated argument that lasted a few minutes ensued between the two men.
Fires Three Shots.
Standing with one foot on the running board of his car, Lane pulled a pistol from his pocket and fired three times at Hansen who was standing only a few feet away. One of the shots took effect, striking Hansen below the shoulder.
Hansen staggered blindly away from the automobile and made his way to the front porch of the Nate Vanderhoof home where he died.
Lane, the officers were informed, climbed into his automobile and disappeared before residents in the neighborhood where the shooting occurred, were aware of what had happened.
Slayer Captured.
Norfolk, Neb., Nov. 28.—Lane was captured Saturday and placed in the county jail at Albion. A murder charge has been lodged against him.

Most Of Us Just Get By.
Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: "Farming at it is usually carried on in not an industry that should be allowed to live." These are the words of Henry Ford, who sometimes knows what he is talking about. It has often been asserted that more than 90 percent of those who engage in mercantile pursuits ultimately lose out. A fraction only of professional men become forehanded. And so it would seem that a majority of the human family are financial failures. The most of us manage to get by after a fashion and are just as well off as need be when we reach the level where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. Better farming would mean that a larger percentage of those engaged in agriculture could patronize Mr. Ford without embarrassment, and that is an item worth considering. But the same thing applies to all of us, the merchant, lawyer, doctor, preacher, teacher and newspaper scribbler. We should all do better work, draw better wages and more prudently husband our modest resources. And this opens a field of discussion where Henry Ford might, if he would, deliver a serious series of lectures of inestimable value to his fellow beings. A constructive program for men in every occupation is the hope for which humanity hungers. Hop to it, Henry.

A Forbidding Task.
Dr. A. L. Bixby: Congress will face a forbidding winter season with four major problems for the capable consideration of such of its members as have the time or disposition to think: Farm relief, tax dodging and flood control. These major themes, at any rate, are fruitful ones for wild debate. Blanton of Texas ought to find in these a chance to free his mind; Or he in the house the fur will fly. Or he will know the reason why. Some stalwart statesmen will, by dint of words that they "beg leave to print, impress their friends at home that they are doing bully, anyway. It will appear that they stand pat for either this reform or that. And, standing thus, they trust that fate will send them back in '28. The burdens congress cannot lift. Meantime, the people must make shift. To tote along as best they may until the dawning of a day when those now toiling at their best. Have sought the silent bed of rest. And younger generations get To pay the big left-over debt.

days of rest. If they are to be spent in idleness, aimless loafing, attendance upon amusements and futile chasing over the country in automobiles, then the new hours of leisure will prove a doubtful blessing. If they are to be spent sanely, in self-education, in home building and the sort of recreation that puts a man back on Monday morning with his whole nature eager for his work, the change would be profitable.
As a people we make a poor fist at enjoying ourselves. Our habitual amusements have sunk to a discouraging level. We make slow progress in music. Our commercialized sport is on such a plane that it would not be well for society to have it suddenly extended. Country living, with two days for gardening, poultry raising, bee keeping and so forth, is an ideal impossible of realization for the great masses of our workers because of geographical obstacles.

The business and professional classes have been moving toward week-end leisure for some time. The argument is that the workers should be allowed to enjoy the same amount of free time. But it is true that no man profits from work unless he has his time so occupied that it gives real refreshment; a re-charging of his vital forces. There is reason to fear that the classes now privileged to enjoy this weekly rest do not make the best use of it. Leisure that is not needed for some hobby, some definite personal building program, easily becomes a curse and not a blessing. In America it is inevitable that we shall all work and all play about the same number of hours and days. We have so organized our work and the rewards of labor that an approximately fair division seems to be in sight. The apportionment and use of leisure is in fact the most difficult social task we have before us.

A publisher is reported as saying that people in every walk of life think they can write novels. The delusion seems to be especially prevalent among novelists. Punch.

Early Settlers Celebrate Here

Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Juhlin Will Be at Home to Friends on Their Golden Wedding.

Entertain Friday

Have Seen Many Changes During Forty-Three Years of Residence in Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Nels J. Juhlin, residents of Wayne for forty-three years, will be at home to friends Friday from 2 to 5 and from 7 to 9 p. m. in observance of their golden wedding anniversary. Relatives and friends will be here for the occasion.

Mr. Juhlin married Miss Anna Christina Borggren December 2, 1877, at high noon at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lay Peter Borggren in Ahus, Sweden. They lived in Christianstad, Sweden, after their marriage. With his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. Juhlin came to America in the fall of 1881, leaving Sweden on September 2 and arriving in New York September 19, the day President Garfield died. His wife and son remained in Sweden until Mr. Juhlin found a location for his home. He came to Stanton, Iowa, with his sister and her husband.

In 1884, on his birthday, May 26, Mr. Juhlin came to Wayne and opened a shoe store. He was favorably impressed with the new town and decided to locate here. Mrs. Juhlin and son, John, then 4 years old, came from Sweden that fall and stopped first in Stanton, Iowa, with relatives. To Iowa people Nebraska then seemed like a wilderness filled with Indians, and it took courage to come west. Mrs. Juhlin and son arrived in Wayne on November 7, 1884. They soon became acquainted, and have made many friends and enjoyed the years spent here.

Cities in Sweden and in this country were quite similar when the Juhlins came to this country. The small towns differed in several respects, however. Farmers in Sweden lived in small villages and towns and went to their land each day to work. Stores and professional men served each village, just as in this country. Farms were about the same size as here. Villages were close enough so that no farmer had to drive more than about two miles to his work. Each farmer had about two men helping with the field work and usually a girl helped each woman in the home. All of the yarn for clothing and house linen was spun and woven in the homes. This work was done during the winter months. Cloth was bleached in the spring. Thus each home had considerable linen. Women washed the garments in the lake, pounding them on stones or wood.

Mr. Juhlin opened the first shoe store in Wayne. This was in a frame building joining the Ahern store. Later he moved the store to a frame building where the Crystal theatre now stands. Mr. Juhlin had a store on the site of the Mines jewelry store, and he moved to the building now occupied by the Moore grocery later.

A general store on the corner now occupied by the State Bank of Wayne and the Henry Ley store in the building now occupied by the Hrabak stock were the principal business houses when the Juhlins arrived.

Very few houses were in Wayne in the early eighties. It was possible to go from the Ley store diagonally northeast to the school which is now near the A. T. Claycomb farm. No houses were in the east part of town. Mr. Juhlin built his residence in 1886 and he and his wife are living in the same home today. Robert Armstrong built his residence across the street from the Juhlin place in the same year. The two families have been neighbors for forty-three years and have had many happy experiences together.

Mr. and Mrs. Juhlin have seven children. All were born in Wayne excepting John, who came with his mother from Sweden. The children are: John L. Juhlin of Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, Bert Juhlin of Omaha, George Juhlin and Mrs. Harry McMillan of near Wayne, Mrs. Merle Milton of Long Pine, Neb., Paul Juhlin of Omaha, and Carl Juhlin of Chicago. Most of the children will be here for the golden anniversary celebration. Carl Juhlin of Chicago, will be unable to come at this time.

Freshmen Day Is Observed In Wayne

Freshmen day was observed at the Wayne high school Wednesday of last week, sponsored by the senior class. This custom was started by the 1927 class of graduates. Freshmen wore green arm and head bands and were led in a march about the assembly room by Max Ellis, senior student. Max ine Rhoades, senior, and Robert Jorgensen, freshman, furnished piano and drum music for the marching. Kathryn Loy Davis, senior vice president, introduced the students taking part. Letha Porterfield, freshman president, spoke. Harry Ellis Fisher, senior, talked on school activities. Dorothy Loomis, senior, spoke on what is expected of freshmen.

Finish Initial Test In County

First General Tuberculosis Eradication Campaign Shows Percentage of 2.11.

Retest Is Started

Dr. D. M. Purdy and Dr. William Frakes Are Working in Garfield Precinct.

In the first tests of Wayne county cattle for tuberculosis, begun January 10, 1927, and completed November 12, 1927, the average percent of infection was found to be 2.11. Percentage of herds infected was 16.64. The total number of herds tested was 1,606 and the total number of cattle examined was 22,530.

Retest of herds in which tuberculosis was found on the initial test, is being completed as fast as they are due. A period of sixty days must elapse between the two tests. The number of reactors found in the previously infected herds is less than one-half of one per cent.

Wayne county was declared an area for testing under the state law of December 8, 1926. The initial test began January 10. This test was done by veterinarians under the immediate direction and assignment of the Nebraska and United States Bureau of Animal Industry cooperatively engaged in tuberculosis eradication work in Nebraska. Dr. D. M. Purdy is in charge.

The 1,606 herds tested comprise all the herds of breeding cattle in Wayne county. Of the 22,530 cattle tested, 461 head, or 2.11 per cent, were found by tuberculosis test to be affected with tuberculosis.

These diseased were located in 361 different herds, which represented 16.64 per cent of the herds tested. This means that approximately one of every six herds in Wayne county, when the work began, contained one or more reactors. Such distribution of the disease need not now be cause for alarm since it has been determined where this infection is located and the diseased cattle have been removed. The evidence of the infection should be sufficient argument, states Dr. Purdy, that Wayne county herds needed testing to protect the health and wealth of the people. Though the infection among cattle was comparatively low, Dr. Purdy asserts, a number of herds were found to contain a high percentage of diseased cattle, and to these special attention will be directed in order that all possible may be done to eradicate the infection of tuberculosis.

The report for precincts of the county is as follows: Brenna, 117 herds, 1775 cattle, 19 reactors, 8 herds infected, 1.11 percentage; Chapin, 137 herds, 1932 cattle, 30 reactors, 23 herds infected, 1.56 percentage; Dow Creek, 126 herds, 2142 cattle, 31 reactors, 21 herds infected, 1.41 percentage; Garfield, 116 herds, 1639 cattle, 34 reactors, 18 herds infected, 2.07 percentage; Hancock, 127 herds, 2010 cattle, 23 reactors, 14 herds infected, 1.14 percentage; Hoskins, 142 herds, 2007 cattle, 58 reactors, 20 herds infected, 2.8 percentage; Hunter, 135 herds, 2034 cattle, 41 reactors, 30 herds infected, 2.1 percentage; Leslie, 70 herds, 1203 cattle, 10 reactors, 7 herds infected, .83 percentage; Logan, 69 herds, 1090 cattle, 52 reactors, 18 herds infected, 4.7 percentage; Plum Creek, 116 herds, 1810 cattle, 27 reactors, 18 herds infected, 1.49 percentage; Sherman, 122 herds, 1905 cattle, 56 reactors, 35 herds infected, 2.93 percentage; Strahan, 121 herds, 1504 cattle, 53 reactors, 30 herds infected, 3.52 percentage; Wilbur, 108 herds, 1539 cattle, 27 reactors, 19 herds infected, 1.75 percentage.

Dr. Purdy is being assisted in the second tests by Dr. William Frakes of Lincoln. Work was begun this week in Garfield precinct.

Wayne Band Given Compliment On Work

Had the bands which competed in the Sioux City Tribune contest November 15 to 18 been classified, the Wayne band would probably have been placed first in its class, it is stated by E. S. Townsend of Sioux City. Wayne took tenth place in competition with bands from four states. Mr. Townsend writes Prof. F. C. Reed, director of the Wayne band, as follows:

"I am enclosing a check for $25 which is your prize money in the Tribune Inter-State Band contest. I just hope that the Wayne citizens realize that your band was forced to compete without regard to classification, and against the best bands in the Sioux City territory, including four or five of what we might call professional bands.

"You have made a wonderful showing for your town and had the contest been held under classification rules, you might today be the first prize winner of your grade. Next year, as you know, this classification will be worked out properly, and I want you to give it a lot of thought for it is men with experience such as yours that enables me to perfect the ideal I have in mind.

"You have every reason to feel proud of your boys and girls, and the showing they made with the stiff competition they were up against."

Former Wayne Girl Will Be Married

Miss Ruby Grace Randol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Randol of near Ponca, will be married in Sioux City Saturday, December 3 to Mr. Earl D. Curry. The young couple will be at home at Ponca after the first of the year.

Miss Randol attended the Wayne high school and the Wayne State Teachers College, being graduated from the latter institution in 1925. She taught in Rosalie last year.

The Randol family lived two miles north of Wayne for several years, going to Ponca from here.

"Stop! Look! Listen!" Means It Now.

Literary Digest: The "Stop! Look! Listen!" signs at railroad grade crossings take on new significance throughout ruling of the United States Supreme Court. The public, we are reminded by the New York Times, "has been accustomed to throw the blame for all grade-crossing accidents on the railroads." But the Supreme Court, in a decision handed down by Associate Justice Holmes, holds that motorists, not railroad companies, are responsible for their own safety when crossing railroad tracks.

The case, which was carried to our highest tribunal, was that of an Ohio automobile truck driver who approached a railroad crossing at five miles an hour, and was killed by a train going at the rate of sixty. His widow testified in the lower courts that this driver had taken all the precautions required of him; the Supreme Court holds otherwise. Said Mr. Justice Holmes, in his ruling:

"When a man goes upon a railroad track, he knows that he goes to a place where he will be killed if a train comes upon him before he is clear of the track. He knows that he must stop for the train; not the train for him.

"In such circumstances, it seems to us that if a driver can not be sure otherwise wherever a train is dangerously near, he must stop and get out of his vehicle, although obviously he will not often be required to do more than stop and look. It seems to us that if he relies upon not hearing the train, or upon any signal, and takes no further precautions, he does so at his own risk."

"It would be hard to exaggerate the far-reaching effects of this dictum of our highest Court," observes the Province News. One editor recalls that two thousand persons are killed each year and six thousand injured, on the average, in grade-crossing accidents throughout the United States. "It is the proper duty of the railroad to mark the crossing so that even the stranger along the highway shall be aware of its presence. The railroad should also warn the motorist of the train's approach. But the responsibility of 'due care' rests upon the individual driver."

"maintains the Philadelphia Bulletin. "If he can not be sure that it is safe to cross the railroad tracks, points out one editor, he must satisfy himself on that point, "even if to do so it is necessary for him to alight and look up and down the tracks." To quote the New York Morning Telegraph:

"Frequenters of the highways, drivers as well as pedestrians, must sooner or later realize that the right-of-way of a railroad is private property and that railroad trains, operated on standard schedule, have the right-of-way and are not supposed to stop to permit the passage of person or vehicles across the tracks. Conservative people are duty-bound to exercise the greatest precautions at all crossings. It is unfair to expect the railroads to pay huge sums for lives wiped out because of the carelessness and neglect of individuals. The Supreme Court decision is proper and just. It should serve as a warning to the public and a protection to the railroads."

"The ruling of Mr. Justice Holmes puts the issue squarely up to the motorist," agrees the Washington Star. For—

"In spite of watchmen, gates, bells, lights, and road barricades, motorists insist on 'taking a chance' with their lives. There have been innumerable cases when the driver of an automobile with an approaching train in sight has driven squarely upon the tracks, there to stall his motor in his excitement, and a few seconds later, add his name to the long list of victims of grade-crossing accidents. There have also been cases when, with the gates down, motorists have tried to drive under them to get across the tracks.

"The grade-crossing menace has long been recognized as a potent factor in the annual automobile fatality toll. Railroads are working for the elimination of grade crossings, but the expense is so great that it will be many years before this desirable condition is brought about. In the meantime the railroads are safeguarding motorists by gates, signals, and watchmen. In view of these efforts it is logical to put the responsibility upon the driver of an automobile."

But other newspaper editors take the position that the Supreme Court decision does not relieve the railroad companies of the duty of protecting grade crossings. In the opinion of the Albany News, the ruling "is another argument for grade-crossing elimination," and the Washington Post would meanwhile make it impossible for any railroad to lay down a new grade crossing.

Motorists should be careful at grade crossings, admits the Newark News. But at the same time—

"The convenience of the public is something the railroads have a moral as well as a legal obligation to respect. It is to their interest as well to make their crossings safe. The Supreme Court decision does not license them to be reckless and negligent. Although the Court's decision frees them from damages for injury to negligent driver, the railroads cross the highways at their own risks. Delay, damage to their property, harm done to their reputation as safe public carriers and public ill-will are liabilities they incur unless they do their full part to avoid accidents."

"The highways and railways alike are for the service and convenience of the public. Both should be made as safe as possible."

Whether the new ruling of the Supreme Court "will greatly tend to promote safety at railroad crossings, however, is open to question," thinks the Boston Transcript. Furthermore—

"Question arises whether or not the rule of contact laid down by the learned Justices is in all cases as much of a safeguard against accidents as it might seem to be. The train which killed the man whose wife sued the Baltimore & Ohio was alleged to be moving at the rate of sixty miles an hour. It is not improbable that a man who had taken the precaution to stand upon a railroad crossing and look both ways, might be struck and killed by a rapidly moving train after he had returned to his motor-car and driven onto the tracks."

WAYNE'S LEADING CLOTHIER

"Ye have done it unto me."

By Marjorie Howe Dixon.

Always at Christmas time there has been brought out the spirit of good fellowship which has tried to share its abundance with those in need.

The way in which the work is carried forward varies with different towns and with the kind of work in hand.

Free Hair Cuts for Orphans. For instance, because there happens not to be a single orphanage in one county in the middle west, the work done by the clubs, besides, of course, caring for their local needs, is concentrated on the poor farm and the hospital for disabled veterans of the war.

In a town in the Rockies, much kindly thought is given to the children in the orphanage there. If there is a good play at the playhouse, the manager gives each child a free ticket during the holidays and the street car company gives them free transportation.

The members of this town give all the children free hair cuts. Firemen as Santa's Helpers. In this same Western town another happy custom prevails, that allows every so many to share in the fun of giving.

Along about December first, the school children are invited to bring their cast off toys to school. These are collected and sent to the firemen. The firemen work busily at them, painting and repairing them. It is quite in the scheme of things for the youngsters to go down to the fire station after school and watch the work in progress. The Rotary club of that city takes care of the baskets for the poor, and distributes the toys with the baskets. This method of having so many contribute of time, or skill, or whatever they have to give, seems especially commendable.

Xmas Spirit at R. R. Stations. Another Christmas custom that this same city takes care of, is arranging for a Christmas tree inside the railway station. Through the holiday week, from 8 to 10 o'clock every evening, there is some sort of entertainment provided for the travelers who must wait for trains. The Camp Fire girls have charge one evening, the boys' band, another. The high school Glee club takes part and many of the church choirs. One evening there was a fine musical program given by the choir from the colored church.

Individual charities are always possible. Sometimes these take the form of giving a good time to some elderly person who is really not in need. Old ladies are left stranded in hotels and boarding houses, their families scattered or indifferent to their welfare. They may have sufficient for all their material wants or even more than enough. But the holiday season may find them cruelly lonesome, memories of happier times, surrounded by loved ones, pressing in upon them.

Kindness Is Its Own Reward. In such a case an invitation to your home for Christmas dinner and perhaps a ride with your family afterwards may mean a bright spot to some elderly friend, that will give pleasure in memory for weeks afterwards.

Dinner in a hotel or boarding house on Christmas with no close friend at hand is indeed a dismal prospect. Those who are shut in because of invalidism deserve our special thoughtfulness and care. All sorts of little loving attentions can be arranged for such ones without great expense.

One friend makes a point of saving up magazine articles that are bright and sparkling and collecting them in a scrap book for one or two she knows, who are shut-in. She finds out beforehand what particular subject they are following and through the year watches for stories that apply to it.

Charity in Institutions. A treasure chest made of amusing toys, tiny useful articles and good little bits of pottery can be carefully packed, each one in a separate package. With it a prescription should be sent.

"Take one each morning after breakfast, with a glass of water." At a certain county home for incurables there was a wise rule that the workers who came to visit and conduct religious services there, should not give presents other than periodicals.

One worker found that another had broken the rule in a very loving way. She had taken an old lady's glasses and had them repaired for her. The light on the old lady's face when the glasses were returned to her more than repaid the trouble.

Of course, it is hardly necessary to mention that giving in large institutions must be arranged with great care. Each present on the Christmas tree must be about the same in value so that no one will feel slighted.

The Golden Rule.

It all seems to come back to the original proposition: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." It was once observed by a keen thinker, that to listen patiently to a garrulous old lady tell you exactly why she changed the flower on her hat to a ribbon, was one way of obeying the Golden Rule. Anyone who wants to give some loving sympathy to others at Christmas will find a way.

Greetings from a Christmas Card

You have to believe in Christmas cards to enjoy them. If you believe in them you enjoy receiving and sending them. If they are a cold duty to you, you miss all the fun.

One can picture perfectly the sort of card you'd send. There would be one single bit of stereotyped holly at the top, neat engraving below, and that is all. The person receiving your card will give it one glance, and say, "Oh, the Jenkinses," and toss it in a pile of others just like it and pass on to one more interesting, and original.

The Note of Warmth. The point of which is—don't feel, please, don't feel it your solemn duty to send Christmas cards, because the card will always show it. The friend who receives it will feel as if a dash of cold water had struck him in the face and a clammy limp hand had been laid in his. That feeling is somewhat lacking in the proper Christmas spirit, oh, ever so slightly, you know.

If you must be dignified and formal, at least do not be rigid and cold. Your engraved message can have a bit of originality in expression and your formal etching or design can be a thing of beauty with warmth of tone and coloring.

A Variety of Good Cards. With all the perfectly delightful designs in cards arranged for you by the several publishers there is really no excuse for frigid and meaningless ones.

Making Your Own. Artists always have the advantage over others in that they can design their own Christmas cards. Sometimes they cut the blocks necessary and print them as well. The charm of these has become so apparent that many of the commercial cards imitate the hand-cut block with the effect of original work.

Some of the methods of printing are most interesting. A silver and deer springing blithely over a snow laden landscape on a grey paper graced one card found in the shops. Reindeer seem especially popular this year. Last year the cards all seemed to show jolly stage coaches laden with holiday merry makers. Santa and his swift sleigh are to have the limelight this year.

Gay Tints in Cards. Gay tints of papiers are characteristic of this year's Christmas messages. Silver stars are scattered over some envelope and card. One especially vigorous in color wore brilliant stripes in green, red and silver on a black ground. A greeting was printed on the cover and inside a white insert was tied. One side had a picture of men singing Christmas carols, the other message of good will.

The Christmas Card Fever. It is suggested for children's cards that they do not tackle too intricate a design. It is far easier to draw than to cut a design. The cutting of the lettering will cause the most trouble. A holly wreath with open spaces left for hand coloring is a good subject. Candles, pine boughs and cones, and Christmas trees lend themselves to the somewhat stiff treatment involved in cutting blocks. Correspondence cards are excellent for use in printing because the envelopes are made to match.

Once a person becomes interested in printing his own Christmas cards he is forever lost. For from then on he will not only send forth his own humble efforts from year to year, but will take great delight in collecting the efforts of others, smitten with a peculiar sort of fever, that of hand wrought Christmas Cards.

The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation Investigating the Hazards and Dangers of Automobile Ownership.

The Press of the Country is Replete With Automobile Accidents.

The deaths, distress and destruction caused by automobiles are becoming alarming, to the extent that many organizations besides the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation are taking an active interest in trying to devise ways and means of alleviating this condition. The "Bureau Farmer," a journal of national scope, is publishing two pages in each issue, containing instructions and information as to proper driving and warnings against improper driving, recklessness and carelessness. Through the efforts which have been put forth by the Farm Bureau and kindred organizations, much has been accomplished toward better conditions. These questions have been discussed at the gatherings, meetings and conventions, and as a natural result the question of insurance protection received its full share of attention.

In 1921 a convention of Illinois farmers, composed of officials and members of farm mutual insurance companies and Farm Bureau officials and members, gave these matters grave consideration, which resulted in the organization of a full legal reserve, purely mutual insurance company for the purpose of affording protection against unavoidable accidents of every nature, and at a cost at which the people of the rural community could afford. This was the origin of the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company of Bloomington, Illinois. It is now in its sixth year of operation. The results that have been attained by this Company which was conceived and organized by the people themselves, has been most remarkable.

The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation in carrying out the program, has sponsored the admittance of this Company to Nebraska for the purpose of bringing to the citizens of this state this real service. The Company is now licensed to do business in Nebraska with the Farm Bureau Federation its supervising agent. They are now busily engaged in establishing their agency force in this state and will as rapidly as possible put forth every effort to bring to the attention of those car owners who are property owners and responsible business men and careful drivers, the value of this service.

The Nebraska Farm Bureau is to be commended for the good work done in this direction. The past years of experience show that in the eleven states in which this Company is operating at the present time, the service is deeply appreciated by the people of those states and it is filling a long-felt want.

The policies that are issued by this Company are unique and provide complete protection on every hazard that should be insured. The Company's standing is unquestionable, their financial strength such as to enable them to pay all losses promptly, and to fulfill in every particular, their policy contract. Insurance authorities and very many institutions, highly recommend this Company to those who desire real protection at extremely low cost.

Business. Sioux City Journal: Temporary there is a lull in business activity as indicated by freight car loadings for the last week reported, that ending November 12. The figure fell off 83,990 cars below the preceding week, totaling only 974,862 cars. This was 12,027 cars below the total for the same week last year and 75,073 under the figure for the same period in 1925. Miscellaneous freight, coal, live stock, merchandise in less than carload lots, forest products, ores and coke all showed a decrease. Grain and grain products increased.

In view of the steady flow of optimistic predictions for the approaching new year it is taken that the car loading reduction is merely temporary. A good deal of the inactivity may be traced to changes ordered in industry. Various lines are known to be making plans for expansion, and production is somewhat curtailed as a result. On the whole however the industrial situation is safe enough, the increased buying power in the agricultural regions being sufficient guarantee of a strong domestic market for next year.

The Harvard committee on economic research, regarded as one of the most conservative bodies giving service of this kind, has predicted prosperity for the first six months in 1928. The committee's conclusion is based upon present indications and is influenced in a great degree by the exceptional ease in money and the conservatism of business noted throughout the present year. It has recommended a continuation of the federal reserve system's easy money program, feeling that this one feature of the economic situation encourages more than anything else logical plans of industrial expansion.

As though meeting another prediction of a boom in 1928 the Harvard committee sees no indication whatever of an overproduction in goods. It notes with satisfaction that manufacturers as a rule are operating at a lower rate than obtained last year, and it expects a strong impression to result from the greatly increased buying power of the farm element.

In this connection it may be pointed out that Bradstreet's already has seen a demonstration of the stronger buying power, reporting that the greatest retail activity was in the northwestern quarter of the country. This is indeed encouraging in view of the fact that the northwestern suffered heavily from the general agricultural depression. Apparently it is now staging a recovery.

Painted Gifts and Needlework

In a story recently there was a long and spirited discussion of the "duty complex." Some, who have analyzed their thinking a little way, know that to make a thing for the sheer joy of creating an object of beauty is sufficient reason for doing it.

Others whose "duty" sense is strong cannot permit themselves to make a thing for the joy of doing it, but needs must have some other purpose.

loveliest fanciful fluffy articles one could ever wish to embroider. Delicate tints of organdie are piped together and need but a few gay bow knots of flowers and lace edging to complete them.

Bridge Table Sets. A sweetly grave apron for grandmother is made of lavender, cross bar organdie, to be edged with black lace.

County Eliminates All Scrub Bulls

A systematic drive against scrub and grade bulls in Craig county, Va., resulted October 26 in their complete eradication. The county now contains 41 registered purebred bulls. The use of purebred bulls exclusively in cattle-breeding operations is a goal which many counties have sought but only one other besides Craig county has attained. That county was Union county, Ky., which eradicated its scrub and grade bulls in 1926. Craig county thus is the second in the United States and the first in Virginia to achieve its distinction as a 100 per cent purebred-bull area. The campaign for eradicating inferior sires was conducted by W. O. Martin, county agent, and progressive livestock owners of the county, with the assistance of L. J. Case, animal husbandman of the State Extension Division. In recognizing the county's achievement, the United States Department of Agriculture states that the result is especially noteworthy since Craig county had no purebred bulls whatever eleven years ago. The beef breeds of cattle predominate in the region and a marked improvement in the quality of young stock raised has been evident during the last few years in which purebred sires have replaced the scrubs and grades formerly used.

Immunize Animals Against Cholera

Special reports made to the United States Department of Agriculture from thirty states in which cooperative hog cholera work is being conducted indicate an increased use of anti-hog cholera serum as a protection against hog cholera. Apparently, the unusual prevalence of the disease in the fall of 1926 did much to impress farmers with the potential danger of the malady and stimulated action in the adoption of preventive methods. The spring crop of pigs received extensive protection by the preventive-serum treatment, the number immunized ranging from 10 to 75 per cent of the entire production in the thirty states; according to the reports. There was also an increase in the number of hogs immunized. These factors, no doubt, are largely responsible for the sudden drop in the death rate from cholera compared with that of last year. The reports also indicated at the time they were submitted that, with the exception of Arkansas, Maryland, Michigan, North Carolina, and Kentucky, the other states had suffered no greater losses from cholera this year than they had in 1924 and 1925, showing a sharp decline in the disease from the destructive wave of 1926. The department stresses the importance and value of sanitary measures in the raising of swine, not only as an aid in the prevention of hog cholera but in preventing other diseases. It also calls attention to the fact that cholera infection may reach well-kept herds as well as those in insanitary surroundings, and if not immunized one will succumb as quickly as the other. After all, the use of the simultaneous treatment is the only reliable safeguard against attacks of hog cholera.

Formulate Dietary Scale For Children

For many years, in considering whether or not a dietary was adequate for a group such as a family or an institution, it was thought sufficient to know how many calories or energy units it supplied. Until recently, in computing the needs of families or groups composed of persons of different sexes and ages in terms of the needs of an adult man, scientific workers have used a scale set up in 1886 by W. O. Atwater, or similar scales based chiefly on energy requirements. The need for a scale based on the recent findings in nutrition became evident to the Bureau of Home Economics in the course of its work in analyzing the food-consumption data from about 4,000 farm families. The accepted dietary scales did not fit the requirements of persons of different sex and age groups as they are now known. Particularly in the case of growing boys and girls it is felt that there must be a definite allowance for protein and minerals in the diet as well as for energy. Otherwise it might be possible for a diet to furnish sufficient energy but not enough body-building material. At certain ages boys and girls may need from one to one and a half times as much protein and mineral material as a man. A new double dietary scale has been worked out as a result of this study. It will be chiefly of use to specialists in nutrition and its general adoption will make results comparable and hence of great value. The new scale is based on Lusk's and Holt's energy scales already in use, but it has a parallel scale for protein and mineral needs. Interpreted in everyday language, when applied to family dietary needs, it shows that there is nothing astonishing in the phenomenon of the always hungry boy or girl between 9 and 18 years of age. This normal hunger, especially evident in the active boy between 14 and 18, needs to be appeased with foods which supply protein and minerals as well as energy, so the mother who provides plenty of milk, eggs, fresh vegetables, and fruits in the daily meals is wisely supplementing the bread and butter, cereals, potatoes, cookies, or other energy foods. McCormick-Deering Feed Grinders Built in three sizes, from 6-inch to 10-inch, requiring from 3 to 16 h. p. according to size and type. Designed to grind various combinations of grains and forage crops. Save 12 per cent to 26 per cent on your grain bill. Actual tests with whole grain, fed to healthy, full-toothed animals, show an average loss of from 12 per cent to 26 per cent. In other words, out of every 100 bushels of whole corn fed, 26 bushels yield practically no nourishment. The unground oat diet shows a loss of 12 bushels out of every 100. Even though you feed only a few animals, such feeding losses cannot be overlooked. A few minutes, now and then, with a McCormick-Deering Feed Grinder will turn the whole grain into nourishing, easily digestible feed at low cost.
