EATABLES.

In Wayne on Saturday strawberries sold as low as nineteen cents a pint, and we understand the price in some other towns at the same time was up as high as thirty cents. Perhaps no-profit was realized at nineteen cents, and that the price of thirty cents came nearer yielding just returns on the investment. But as long as people have to eat it would seem plainly advantageous to cater to buy cabbages here. Competition is sharp, volumes is large and naturally and necessarily prices are marked down to lowest levels. Even if one doesn't care for the ride to Wayne and the experience of surveying beautiful scenery enroute, it would appear that it would be well to drive a considerable distance just to supply himself with the week's groceries.

LATE SNOW FALL CUTS OFF OMAHA NONE COMES HERE

HEAVY snows fell in the eastern and southeastern parts of the state Friday, and for several hours Omaha was wholly cut off from wire communication with the world. In the wheat belts, snow was accepted as a boon to growth. Up this way no snow fell, and the need of additional moisture was not felt. The subsequent cold snap was felt here, however, and gave temporary halt to the rising tendency to spring fever. Bubbling expectancy over vernal flowers and foliage and basking lambs and lambskins on the over-spreading green ceased to bubble during the few days of low temperature. As to moisture, this part of the state is reported sufficiently supplied for present needs and it lost nothing by not sharing in the late snow. On the contrary, it avoids inconvenience and delay, and it will have work well advanced and ready for later rains which so far have not failed to come in time to do the most good.

Love, Curtis Foster, Paul Mines and Linn Robertson comprise the committee for entertainment at that time.

WOULD BUILD UP COSTLY MACHINE WITHOUT RELIEF

NELS Johnson who in past years spent considerable time and effort in behalf of agricultural organizations, told us, while in town Saturday, that his farm operations require so much of his attention that he has been compelled to give up much of his former public service. But he is just as much interested as ever in developing the farm industry and in making the life of the farmer more profitable and more agreeable. Speaking of the proposed federal relief, he thinks it would build up cumbersome and costly government machinery without yielding the promised aid to farming communities. He believes in cooperation, equal advantages and the improvement of marketing conditions, but he sees in late congressional fulminations more political bunk than practical statesmanship.

Prof. H. Clyde Filley of the state agricultural college in Lincoln, addressed Wayne Kiwanians Monday following their noonday luncheon, his talk dealing with farming problems and their solutions. Prof. Filley gives many lectures to farm organizations on subjects of interest to them.

By use of statistics and charts Prof. Filley pointed out problems of transportation, nature of soil, cost of production and such like which face farmers in various sections of the country. He stated that by watching these charts, notices arise, farmers are able to raise the products for which there is demand and may be able to market them at times which will bring them greatest returns.

The Fremont Herald offers $5 for the best letter explaining what's the matter with Fremont. The fault of one town is usually the fault of another, and so we shall be anxious to find out what's wrong.

Politicians have had their preliminary skirmish, and next will come conventions and then a long campaign and finally the election in November. And since the Lord created everything for a good purpose, it is assumed that politicians are for the best.

Sometimes it seems that no matter how many kind things you may say or generous deeds you may do, if you slip inadvertently or otherwise in one particular, you may lose all credit in the eyes of some critics and have to turn for comfort to your own approving conscience.

After an absence of several months a visitor to Wayne this week was surprised to see the numerous improvements that are now going forward. Besides improvements in the business district, many new residences were found in course of construction. By fall the change for the better will be still more marked.

We do not know how the weather was in and around Jerusalem on Easter morn, but we do know the day broke cold enough here to discourage summer immediate installation of the summer fineries. However, the sky was clear and it smiled as well as it could through the frost, and the ardor of religious observances appropriate to the day, was not apparently diminished.

We do not like to see any one put himself in a position to call down on his head the penalties of the law, but we think the one who violates the statutes in an orderly and gentlemanly manner is just as deserving of punishment as the one who sneaks from cover and steals an automobile or takes one's purse at the point of a gun.

The federal government is asked to take a firm hand against merchandise thieves and good individuals to whom stolen goods are sold. It is alleged that a big, well-organized system of handling stolen merchandise exists in different cities, and that the consequence is not only loss to country dealers, but unfair competition to legitimate stores in fields where low-priced stolen wares are retailed. It is believed there would be small temptation to rob stores if there were no ready market for the loot. The government is requested to aid in putting a stop to the unlawful business.

We are told that science has discovered that thought vibrations show colors that betray sensibilities and indicate character. Intense selfishness, deceit, malice, envy, jealousy or an outburst of bad temper each produces its peculiar color which may be photographed. Unselfish love and kindness are also easily detected. We'll have to watch our thoughts as well as our steps in this latest in science comes into general use. There are newspapers that develop certain colors of color combinations that we would not like to have photographed. If thoughts are to be thus recorded, we would like to be taken before we get under the week's peak load.

Two Johnsons were running for state auditor on the republican ticket, and there is no law against amassing the Johnsons for auditor or any other office. Johnson is already state auditor, and other Johnsons of whom there are many, doubtless figured that what was good for one Johnson was desirable for others of the same popular name. But many people were not posted on the initials or first names of the two Johnsons and consequently did not know whether they were voting for the present incumbent or another of the same familiar cognomen. This passion of the Johnsons for the auditorship may lead the Smiths to pick on one state office two years hence, or the Browns, Joneses and Petersons to flock to other offices, so confusing voters that each candidate would have an equal chance with every other candidate.

E. M. Newman has been investigating conditions in Russia and taking pictures there as unmistakable proof of what he saw. He says he did not go into Russia either to condemn or comment the Soviet government, but to find out the facts for a book which he is writing. According to his report, society in Russia is still in a good deal of a chaotic state. Private property has been confiscated, and people who were trained for leadership have been impoverished and humbled. As everything raised by the farmer is taxed, so called "bootlegging" of food is practiced to escape the tax which is considered unjust and inexcusable. A farmer takes produce to town to sell in secret, and he avoids police detection if possible. As described by Mr. Newman, life in Russia, with government interference on every hand and with no opportunity for exercise of initiative or reward for merit, is most uninviting. It would seem the Soviet plan is to deal out injustice and put in over-time trying to do the wrong thing. Sovietism appears cold and heartless, void of reason or sense, and rather than live there we would prefer trying our luck in Dante's worst inferno. As contrasted with Russia, America where industry is usually commended and rewarded, is a veritable paradise.

IN A NEW WORLD. The fact that two boys and two girls, still in their teens, left a Nebraska town for Denver to get married and see the world, led the World-Herald to treat youthful tendencies in a recent editorial. The World-Herald points out that youths are in a different world from that which engaged their elders when they were young, and that the latter must meet new conditions. Whether young people have much or little money at their command, we think they must be required to assume increasing burdens of responsibility. They should not be enervated and weakened and made restless and uneasy by being relieved of reasonable work and hardship. Parents impair youthful ambition and stamina by over-indulgence, by allowing them to lie in bed when they should be up and doing, by permitting them to avoid chores, to escape obligations, and to find an easy trail over obstacles and around constructive endeavor. Elders who do all the heavy work to save their children, are likely to discover to their sorrow reaction in the way of spineless character and wishy-washy surrender to purposeless living. The World-Herald concludes its editorial with these paragraphs: "Youth is signing a declaration of independence and it is time for Age to sit up and take notice thereof. The boys and girls today are beginning life in the CHAUNCEY DEPEW. Chauncey Dewey who died last Thursday, would have lived 94 years old if he had lived until April 23. He was a noted after-dinner speaker, and those who were privileged to hear him relished his rich good humor and kindly advice. He was an ardent optimist. He absorbed and radiated sunshine, and he minimized the shadows of life. He practiced his belief that one to attain great longevity should keep busy and remain alive to current interests. He maintained contacts with young men and youthful ideas and ambitions. He sought and prized the inspiration of youth. He was active in politics, an active participant in most republican conventions for seventy years, but his activity was kindly and constructive. He felt secure in the faith of the church of which he was a firm and constant supporter. He accepted the Christian religion as it had been taught to him, and he was encouraged and sustained by it. He had plenty of eyes and ears, but he did not allow either to disturb his wonderful poise. His state of mind doubtless had much to do in prolonging his life and in making him an agreeable friend and a safe counselor through the long series of years.

teens, knowing more, capable of more, doing more, than their fathers and mothers possibly, their grandfathers and grandmothers certainly, were doing in their twenties. Are short skirts, a frank curiosity about petting and sex, a gay disregard for the prohibition law, a questioning of the dogma of the church, an insistence upon broader educational methods, a demand to be admitted to the council room of the elders; are all these things that Youth is exploring, without significance and without warning? Or are they not the natural result of a civilization which has removed the gusto from life by depriving it of all the old zestful adventures, and yet failing to supply anything in its place? "It must be so. Instead of the hard work of a generation ago, the boy or girl of today, as a rule, is raised in a life of comparative ease, and of a good deal too much idleness. Instead of sharing in the labor and the adventure of blazing pioneer trails in a new country, he finds the forests felled, the virgin soil broken, the mines staked out, the Indians subdued, equality for women won. Instead of a battle with Indians, instead of roundup of the cattle, instead of the formation of a vigilante committee, we offer our boys a Tom Mix movie. Instead of an early romance and a large family, brought into life by travail usually unaided except by a midwife's blundering hands, we offer our girls the companionate marriage and birth control. Instead of the long drive over country roads, the square dance and Virginia reel in the old barn, and the long ride back home, arriving at daylight to milk the cows, we bring to our polished home-floors by radio the music of syncopating orchestra of Broadway, together with flashy dances borrowed from the Congo. "The problem is to find some way of giving the boys and girls the necessary backbone to accept this softer, more sensuous, more enervating life and civilization, and find in it still the old dare to be up and doing worthwhile things. They are here, to be done. Youth has the necessary adventurous spirit. It is straining at the leash, waiting to be put to work at worthy things. "The consideration of the problem can only end with a question mark. This much is certain. Having showered blessings and ease and a predigested life-experience upon the boys and girls of today, it is too much to expect them, young, strong, and beautiful, tamely to sit down and wait for Age to die. Youth will be served; and if Age does not recognize its demands, Youth will enforce them with madness and bring ruin about all our ears."

PUBLIC PULSE

To this department communications touching facts of opinions are invited. Signed contributions are preferred, but in any event the editor must know the name of the author to justify publication.

California. Los Angeles, Calif., Mar. 30, 1928. To the Editor of The Herald: A letter from Mrs. Morrison recently appearing in your excellent newspaper states that she didn't see any flowers out of doors, except a few poinsettias at La Habra; that it was winter time and maybe it is different in summer. That business is slow in California, and if it were not for the rich easterners coming in for the winter there wouldn't be much doing.

If it is agreeable to the idea of the public pulse column, may I say that California has only two seasons, the wet and the dry; there is no winter, and in the southern part in many places not even frost. As for flowers, almost all kinds are abundant everywhere out doors, although here as elsewhere there is a change of seasons, and flowers are even more common in the dry season; all they need is a little water, scarcely any care at all. As to business, California appreciates the tourist trade, which is important, but if it had no more than other states, still, in a short time, it would scarcely notice the difference. There are four great universities now under way or about to be built at Los Angeles, each costing millions, and anyone of which would be a major enterprise in any great city. The improvements going on at the harbor by the federal government, and the city are on a great scale, and the business done there ranks along with New York or Liverpool. The growth of the city is about the same as Detroit, the two being regarded as remarkable in that respect.

There is no desire herein to boom Los Angeles, or California. Both might be as well off if there were less immigration for a while. But the impression given by your correspondent is that of the dusty little pueblo of fifty years ago, while that has long since been replaced by the present metropolis, the fifth in size and business in the United States. Nebraska is a great state and this state is one of the best markets for all its products. Each needs the peculiar production of the other and can do best by cooperation. If California has been over advertised by some over-zealous individuals, so was Nebraska in the early days, but both had and have great merits as a basis. Yours very truly, W. M. Wheeler.

What is a Tree Worth? Omaha See: Judge Leslie, in the district court, has approved a tentative value of $2,500 for a single walnut tree. The tree was cut down by an Iowa lumbering company, it having stood before the home of a Nebraska farmer. He denies having sold the tree or consented to its removal. In the suit yet to be heard on its merits, the value of the tree may be determined, that is, so far as its worth in lumber is concerned. No one can estimate the sentimental or esthetic value of a tree. In this case, the majestic old veteran had withstood the storms of more than a century. For fifty years it had provided grateful shade for the home of its owner, and annually had poured into his hands its bounty of rich food in the form of walnuts. By what measure will that value be computed? Nebraska has produced many wonderful walnut trees. Most of them were here when the settlers first came, but many have been planted since. From these trees real profit has accrued, for the users of walnut lumber have sought them out and bought them at prices that pleased the owners. It takes a long time to mature a walnut tree to a point where it really is marketable, but once it has come to that point, it is worth something. Only a few of the trees that have been sold and removed have been replaced by new planting. This is a serious form of neglect. Everyone of them should be replaced by a new tree, and these should be added to. Not for an immediate yield, but that the people of 1978 may have walnut lumber for their use, and that those who come ahead of them may have the shade and the nuts, and the indefinable uplift that comes in the presence of a handsome walnut tree. Not the least of the value of the $2,500 tree was its owner's knowledge that it stood where it was when he pitched his home in Nebraska, and some part of his damage is that he will never again stand in its presence. Such points may not cut much figure with a jury, but they do mean a lot to a man who has associated with a great tree for half a century of storm and sunshine in Nebraska.

Court Opens the Way. Lincoln Journal: The decision just entered by the supreme court in the case brought to ascertain the legal limitations, if any, upon the power of co-operative associations organized for purposes of orderly marketing and not for profit opens the way to a full development of the state wheat pool. A close reading of the decision is commendable to those interested in the important work of these co-operatives.

The decision is based on the fact that when the legislature passed a law giving to non-stock and non-profit marketing organizations wide powers it announced a public policy with respect to them as distinct from other forms of marketing. The court says that this makes lawful any plan of co-operative marketing whereby the grain of its membership is delivered into the channel of trade. This permits the association, regardless of the provisions of the warehouse law, to make contracts with elevators for the handling of the grain of members and to pay any charge agreed upon, regardless of the limitations of the public storage house statutes. The fact that the grower gets an advance payment does not divest him of control of the grain, but, on the contrary, makes him a partner in the enterprise, says the court. The feature of the decision that will commend it to the farmers and to business men generally is that which throws the door wide open to the carrying on of this experiment in securing for the grower a greater portion of the price finally paid. It does this when the court says that carrying out the undertaking of the co-operative is authorized to do and perform each and every thing reasonably necessary, suitable and proper for the accomplishment of its purpose.

"Water Purifies Itself in Freezing"
THE discovery that many disease germs survive freezing led to natural ice from rivers becoming suspected and to artificial ice largely taking its place. But it has now been discovered that, in the process of freezing, the impurities are expelled by the ice into the surrounding water. And natural ice has this advantage over artificial, that it is exposed to the sun and air, and sunlight and fresh air are fatal to most disease germs.

"Therefore in the words of the Journal of the American Medical Association, 'artificial ice made from pure water and clean, sanitary factories may be regarded as safe; so also may natural ice cut from reasonably pure deep ponds or lakes and stored under sanitary conditions. Artificial ice made from polluted water in dirty, unsanitary factories is unsafe; natural ice cut from shallow, polluted ponds or from grossly polluted rivers is also unsafe. And dirty appearing, cloudy ice may be infected as well as polluted; no such ice should be used in contact with foods or drinks.'

"Ice which is otherwise safe may become infected by improper handling—by being dragged across dirty streets or sidewalks or distributed by unclean hands. This is the great source of danger. We may practically eliminate danger by avoiding the handling of ice with dirty hands, by washing the ice with pure water, and by using only clear ice."

Speaks Friday On Health Measures

Dr. S. A. Lutgen Gives Radio Talk On Preventatives and Relation To Long Life.

Dr. S. A. Lutgen gave the following health talk over the radio Friday evening: "In these days of hygiene, preventatives, medicine and surgery, the average age at death has increased to a remarkable degree. Some authorities claim that the average man in modern society lives from fifteen to twenty years longer than he did a comparatively few years ago. Truly the infant death rate has greatly decreased. An undertaker used to lay in an extra supply of baby caskets at certain seasons of the year, such as in the spring or fall for pneumonia and in mid-summer for cholera infantum. Now we have learned that proper food and hygiene are preventives against intestinal disorders; suitable clothing protects against drafts and inclement weather, reducing the liability to pneumonia and other acute long infections. As I told you in an earlier talk, most of the infectious diseases of childhood are now adequately combated by anti-toxin remedies.

In 1870 the four leading causes of death were tuberculosis, diphtheria, scarlet fever and typhoid fever. By 1900 scarlet fever had dropped out of the first rank and diphtheria and typhoid were on their way to the bottom of the list. By 1925 tuberculosis had fallen still more, having been cut to nearly a third through the proper precautions, protecting the well from those afflicted and by treating the patient with abundant fresh air, sunshine, cod liver oil, and body builders. Typhoid fever in the United States had been cut nearly to a fifth through the use of typhoid antitoxins; diphtheria rate to only about a sixth and malaria to about a fourth. Then with the advent of whooping cough serums this horror of childhood has been reduced to one-half. Through proper care and isolation measles is only a fifth of its former prevalence although it would be hard to prove that here at Wayne just now. Scarlet fever has been cut to a quarter its former severity and prevalence, while yellow fever, bubonic plague, typhus and cholera have been almost banished. This medicine has been helping to give every child a chance at life.

Not many generations ago an infant death rate of fifty out of a one hundred was not unusual even in the most progressive communities. In backward countries some such rate is likely to prevail today, as in Russia for example. In the United States the rate for infants is about one in fourteen. In healthy New Zealand it is about one in twenty-five.

It is common cause for congratulation that the average life span is much longer now than it used to be. The average death rate has dropped. In Chicago it is half what it was fifty years ago. In New York it is one-fourth of what it was seventy-five years ago.

In the seventeenth century a child at birth had about an even chance of living to the age of 30. By 1900 the expectation had gone up to fifty years. In present day Chicago life insurance statistics place it about 60 years.

But these falling death rates and increasing life spans have no meaning of great optimism for the average man past 50. He still dies in about the same way and in about the same proportion as he used to. The men or women who profit by the longer span are those who are wise enough to check up on themselves, and take time by the forelock so to speak. One of the greatest agencies in helping men to find their weaknesses in time, is the life insurance organization. And what a pity it is that people take no thought of checking up their bodies until they desire to "cash in" on them!

At the present time the five deadliest diseases are those of the heart, and pneumonia, nephritis, cancer and cerebral hemorrhage. Three of these five leading diseases, heart, cerebral hemorrhage, kidney diseases form what medicine knows as the cardio-vascular-renal group and are often degenerative. Cancer seldom attacks before middle age. "Any of these diseases, as is so often true of all diseases, can be held back if not wholly eradicated, if brought to the attention of the profession in time. Today the minds of all medical scientists are turned toward the cause, nature, prevention and cure of the degenerative diseases—certain diseases of the heart and blood vessels and certain types of nephritis.

Many times proper diet and health habits answer all that is necessary; again timely surgical interference may re-establish normal functioning of bodily organs and restore health. It may be that decayed teeth or tonsils are spreading their infections throughout the system and are thus responsible for stomach or kidney involvement or for rheumatism that makes existence a misery.

Why not take your body to the proper "physical garage" and have it overhauled just as you do that automobile? "Today 50 is the beginning of life's downhill slope; yet at the age of 60 people should have reached the most useful period of their lives. Ripened in wisdom, their family obligations lightened, they should be able then to perform their most valuable social service.

Many of my listeners may say that there was never an age when men of advanced years were occupying such a prominent part in public life. That is true beyond a doubt. Many such outstanding characters exist today. There is no deadline in regard to intellectual possibilities. Some men at 60, 70 or even many men at 40, it is only the physical body which is not so alert.

Let me name a few of the old men who are outstanding: Thomas A. Edison who is 80 and is still the best inventor of vision; yet without any definite knowledge along this line, I am positive that Edison has checked up his physical weaknesses and does his bit to overcome them and keeps himself as fit as time will allow.

Eliah Root is 82; Justice Holmes of the U. S. supreme court is 86. Without a doubt these men have the private physicians whose job it is to watch out for danger signs. In England Lord Balfour at 89 is still one of the great authorities of Great Britain. Perhaps his words carry more weight than any other one individual. Clemenceau occupies such a position at 86 in France and Hindenburg at 80 is the president and dominating figure of the German republic. All are men of great genius, great influence and great foresight, men who have proven conclusively that age is not of the mind but of the body.

Without doubt the medical profession has done much towards decreasing the death rate of infants. How much it can do towards increasing life span of man depends largely upon whether they are permitted to examine and prescribe for the patient before degenerative diseases have secured a stronghold upon him. The wise man of today will have his body examined for possible breakdowns while he is yet fit and able to carry on."

Do Husbands Really Trust Their Wives?

HERBERT: (to Betty, his wife) I'm sorry, but you'll have to stop going to Guido Petti's studio. His affairs with women are the talk of the town. Betty: That's silly. No matter what Guido's relations with other women may be, he is a perfect gentleman— with me. I shall continue my studies with him. Weeks pass. Guido Petti and Betty are in the studio alone. Guido: (drawing her to him) So beautiful you are. Soon we shall go abroad—just you and I. Betty: But—my husband— Guido: Bah! What does he know of your desires? So young you are—so lovely. Suddenly he clasps her in his arms—kissing her with a fierce passion she is powerless to resist. Unheard by either, the door opens—someone starts to enter—then retreats, closing the door softly.

Two hours later Herbert bitterly accuses his wife. Betty: Stop, Herbert! You don't know what you are saying. I swear to you—

Herbert: (flinging her aside) I'm through with you. I should have killed you as you lay in your lover's arms. Take what you want and get out.

What happens to Betty after she is driven from home by her husband completes one of the most pathetic dramas ever enacted in real life. Millions of Model T Fords are still in active service

FOR nearly twenty years, the Model T Ford led the motor industry and it still is used by more people than any other automobile. More than eight million Model T Fords are in active service today—an indication of their sturdy worth, reliability and economy.

Because of the tremendous investment which people have in these cars and because so many of them will be driven for two, three, and even five more years, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make replacement parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

For the Ford Motor Company has always believed that its full duty consists not only in making a good automobile at a low price, but also in keeping it running efficiently for you as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

No matter where you live, therefore, you can still buy Model T Ford parts with the same assurance as formerly, knowing that they will give you the kind of service you have a right to expect, and at the same time protect the money you have invested in your car.

All Ford replacement parts, as you may know, are made of the same materials and in the same way as those from which your car was originally assembled, and are low in price because of the established Ford policy.

So that you may get the greatest use from your Model T Ford over the longest period of time, we suggest that you take the car to the nearest Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of any replacement parts which may be necessary. You may find that a very small expenditure will maintain the value of your car and will be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional service.

Preparations Are Made For Meetings

San Antonio, Texas.—Arrangements for the national convention of the American Legion Auxiliary to be held here October 8 to 12 are going forward full speed under the direction of the chairman appointed by Mrs.
Irene McIntyre Walbridge, national president and in cooperation with the Legion national convention bureau.
The Plaza hotel, one of San Antonio's newest and best hotels, has been selected as convention
headquarters for the Auxiliary.
This hotel, a very beautiful structure, was erected about a year and a half ago. A large addition is now being completed.
Contrary to past procedure, all sessions of the Auxiliary convention will be held in the forenoon, instead of in the afternoon. This action was taken to make it possible for Auxiliary delegates and those concerned with the active transaction of the business of the convention to enjoy the very elaborate program of entertainment being planned
by the convention bureau.

Preliminary arrangements for various events of the Auxiliary convention were worked out.
Plans for the states' dinner indicate that this chief social event of the Legion and Auxiliary gatherings will be even more pretentious and elaborate than heretofore.

THE GREAT AMERICAN HOME

Cost of State Government.
York Republican: The federal department of commerce has studied revenues and expenditures in Nebraska and produced some challenging conclusions.
The state has a population of 1,390,000, or had that estimated number on July 1, 1927. For each of these million and a third citizens there was a per capita expenditure of $7.90 for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927.
The whole grand total was included the sums apportioned to county schools, which totaled $1,314, 251. In a year period the expenditures increased from $7.04 to $7.90 per capita which is not a surprising increase when the higher cost of everything, including government, is taken into consideration, and there is added to the outlay in Nebraska the cost of a new state capitol. It is surprising, however, to contemplate the increase in the cost of state government in a ten year period. In 1917 the expenditures amounted to $3.86 per citizen. The increase in a decade has been a full 100 per cent.
Good roads, good schools, good government, a new state capitol cost immense sums of money.
There seems to be little for the taxpayers to do but to protest whenever he thinks a protest is timely, and then march up to the receipt of custom and pay his share with as good grace as he can muster. There is one comfort every Nebraskan can derive,
if he enjoys the policy of paying as he goes. The state has not a dollar of bonded debt. The improvements we are making in roads and the building of a fine state capitol are being paid for as we go. We are leaving no staggering state debt, with enormous interest accumulations, to posterity.

Wayne County Sale
Appealed To Court
Lincoln, Neb., April 5.—An appeal of Carl Ritze and others
was made to the supreme court from the confirmation of sale under foreclosure of a tract of Wayne county land that brought $30,000. It formerly was owned by Stephen Auker, who sold it to Edward Perry for $50,000 in later to the Ritzes for $80,000.

fore the court at least once before, when the Ritzes lost in an effort to annul the sale and their assumption of the mortgage debt.

Misplaced Patriotism.
Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln
Journal: We fear that the leaders of thought among the Boston
D. A. R. have been influenced by the ultra-patriotic illuminations of Big Bill Thompson of Chicago in the stand they have so boldly taken against noted men of modern ideas whose world-vision is somewhat broader than that of our forefathers who happened to have their hands full attending to matters of vital interest to the colonies. The issues of 1776 were seasonably and reasonably attended to. It was some chore to gain political independence, but the boys got by with it, receiving royal, if not loyal, assistance from abroad as well as at home. There were Baron Stuben, Thaddeus Kosci-
sko, Count Pulaski, General La-Fayette and many others. Our ancestors did nobly but they did not do it all. Wherefore our hero worship should not be confined too closely to our departed ancestors, among whom, if the truth were known, not a few would grade No. 3, rejected, same as we grade inferior wheat. Let us not, dear sisters, boycott great men of modern times because they have ceased to think in terms of hatred fashionable a century and a half ago. With all reverence and respect for our patriotic forefathers, let us be mindful of the fact that they were human, and perhaps not wiser in their day than we in ours.

To worship noble ancestry is great,
But is it not the proper thing,
and right,
To show respect for statesmen
up-to-date
Who think it better to have peace than fight?
Two of my great-grandfathers
boldly wrought,
By bloody deeds to make us
free—somehow
I do not want to fight because they fought.
We have a better way to do things now.
And I'll stand pat, as long as I can write Upon this platform, it may be inferred;
That Roscoe Pound and William
Allen White
Are men who think and thinkers should be heard.

The Real Man.
Tim Sedgwick: There are fine veins of thought and sentiment that seem to be alien to some otherwise very agreeable men. When you hear a man speak disparagingly and even contemptuously of his dead father, you have a very good index to the man's character. The chances are more than sixteen to one, that the father was more wise and human than the son, and did far better for him than he would have done for himself.
Respect, veneration, appreciation, spiritual impulses, these are qualities that denote the real man.

The Best In Life.

Sioux City Journal: It was Henry Van Dyke who admonished that one be governed by one's admirations more than by one's dislikes. That is to say that the best in life for every individual is to be realized in gladness instead of in displeasure.

Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, University preacher of Washington, D. C., puts it this way:

"Are you more thrilled by generosity than you are disgusted by greed? Is your joy in the people you admire deeper than your sadness over the people you dislike? Is your rejoicing over the present day worldwide passion for international peace deeper than your horror and loathing aroused by the hideous anarchy of war? Which really interests you more, health or disease? Which do you the more instinctively talk about, your neighbor's excellences or his defects?"

"I recall a day when handling a sailing craft in a strong breeze and an ugly tide tortured sea. Two men aboard variously spoke their feelings. 'This is a nasty sea,' said one. 'This is a great boat,' said the other. The first was not frightened; the second was not oblivious to peril. But the joy of the latter in the seaworthiness of the boat was stronger than any sense of the fearfulness of the sea. And, after all, it is a trustworthy ship more than a smooth sea that brings a seaman [to port]."

But human nature will express itself despite the argument that there is more in joy and gladness and generosity than in despair and sorrow and revenge. There are persons who pride themselves upon the fact that they are "good haters." There are hordes who get more of a thrill out of a divorce than from a golden wedding, who delight in gossip of a sensation and have no time for the narrative of a noble, generous deed.

Optimists are always happier than pessimists. Persons who make the best of conditions whatever they may be, who say it might be worse, and who seek hopefully a way out of the difficulty are more likely to find it. But there are many who are happiest—or think they are—when they are most miserable. The expression, "enjoying poor health," has its place and application in every community. The woman, drenched in tears as she sat watching a sad, highly emotional play, berated her husband who suggested that they leave since it made her so unhappy.

"That's the way with you," she rebuked him. "You never want me to have a good time."

Crusaders are needed in the world, it is true, but perhaps they would be better crusaders if they did not work at their jobs all the time and thus found an opportunity to see things that were worthy. Truth may need no press agent, but the devil-maker seems to have any trouble in making the first page.

General Summerall says: "Desire for peace does not insure it. No, and desire for a meal does not satisfy hunger; but it does start you toward a restaurant.—Cincinnati Inquirer"

MESSRS. HARRIS AND MCGRAW RISE TO DISAGREE WITH MOST PENNANT PREDICTIONS

BY PHILIP MARTIN

NEITHER Mr. Bucky Harris, of the Washington Senators nor Mr. John McGraw of the New York Giants are in concord with the opinions of those who have "experted" on the outcome of the 1928 pennant races in the two major leagues.

Those supposed to know better have heralded wide and far that the New York Yankees and either the Pittsburgh Pirates or the St. Louis Cards will nab the next world series. On both sides in the next week there is mention of the Senators or the Giants as a possibility for the October classic.

It so happens that the Cards and the Yankees are this writer's predictions for the next world series, but that does not affect the fact that the Senators and the Giants must rate as the best outside chance to win if the present favorites do not come through.

A RECENT visitor to the training camps of all clubs in the south—only the Pirates and the Cubs were not viewed by this visitor—says that he likes the Nats to win—if anything happens to the Yankees.

Bucky Harris has one of the best clubs in either league this season, and if everything turns out as he has reasons to hope, the Nats are going to be on the heels of the Yankees from the very start of this friendly rivalry.

He has some great young pitchers and enough veterans to have a classy gang for mound duty. He has Lisabee and Hadley all set to win at least 20 games each this season.

His shortstop problem is the only one on the infield, and he has Gillis, Hayes and Reeves to take care of that. Gillis seems to be favored for the job.

This outfield has a weak spot in center and Sam Rice is not as young as he once was, but it will have a punch to it and also cover lots of ground.

If the Yankees crack the least little bit and Harris doesn't run into a streak of tough luck, the Yankees will have a better chance than any club in the race except the Yankees and all I say is this—those Yankees had better not slip.

OR reasons that may be termed just a hunch, this writer thinks the New York Giants are going to be pressing the Nats for the pennant winner in the National League.

Andy Cohen is not a Rogers Hornsby, we know, but don't ever think that Cohen can't field that better around second. He has a right arm to burn. His batting mark should hang around the .300 figure all season and that is enough to enable him to keep his job.

That Andy's catcher to center field must be strong, the wise ones say, if a club expects to win. Well, isn't that like a heavy dotted one on the Giants' outfit? With Hogan doing the catching, any one of several pitchers on the mound, Jackson and Cohen around second, and Eddie Roush in center—what better would you ask for?

John McGraw (top), whose New York Giants, and Bucky Harris (bottom), whose Washington Senators are considered by many to be the best "dark horse" bets to win the pennants in their respective leagues, say their teams will "come through."

ones say, if a club expects to win. Well, isn't that like a heavy dotted one on the Giants' outfit? With Hogan doing the catching, any one of several pitchers on the mound, Jackson and Cohen around second, and Eddie Roush in center—what better would you ask for?

If one wishes to believe that Hornsby caused a lot of dissension among the Giants last season, one must also believe that the Giants who are holdovers will play better ball this season.

It may be just a hunch, but the Giants look to be a much better club this season than most of the wise ones think. They have a batting punch and they have a pitcher who can punch it if it comes through. And whether it sounds perfectly logical or not, this writer insists that they will be around the top when it is all over next October.

John McGraw and Bucky Harris must be served the real reason if the must be given.

The Walter Grose home, four miles north of Wakefield, was burned to the ground together with most of the contents Sunday morning about 9 o'clock by fire which started, it is thought, from sparks from the chimney. The loss is estimated at about $10,000 and insurance covers about $20,000 of the amount. Mr. Grose will build a residence on the site this spring. The Grose family was eating breakfast when smoke was noticed. It was thought this was coming from the chimney. When the hired man went into the yard to do chores he saw that the roof was ablaze and notified the family. It was found that the upstairs rooms were blazing by this time also. Some articles of furniture were taken from the house but the wind fanned the flames which spread fast and prevented more from being saved. The Wakefield fire department responded to aid but the building was too far gone to save. The house, furniture and furnishings and electric light plant were destroyed. Sportier Sport Clothes, Fashion's Cry STREET ATTIRE BECOMES MORE FORMAL, HARRIET SAYS, AND WHOLE TREND IS AWAY FROM MASCULINITY THIS SEASON

SPORTS costumes are growing sportier. And street attire gets more formal. Those are the two outstanding developments right now in the realm of clothes. Audacious sweaters liven sports suits and quite sedate coats and suits make the street costumes more conventional. It is all a sign of these very feminine times in which we live. Once Dame Fashion made up her mind to obliterate the masculine boyish form, she determined to go the whole way and create styles definitely that would let a woman change her mind, her clothes and her personality as many times as she wanted. Modernistic sweaters and frocks that have signs of the Zodiac for their decoration are the two new stylish facts in sports wear. The frocks have Zodiac signs for each month of the year and one picks her birthday month to be sure to have luck. Sometimes the belts with these frocks are in gold or silver with all the signs of the Zodiac worked out elaborately around them. White Range of Sweaters. The modernistic sweaters seem to be slated for more popularity. Daring indeed are they in their color combinations and their oddities. They range from the soft all-wool types to soft, felt ones in pastel colors that call for a finely pleated pastel satin skirt. The sports sweaters that have attracted the most attention are those that have their modernistic designs woven right into them. Others have appliqued colors elaborating these designs. All colors, however, are toned to fade into each other, the design furnishing enough novelty without having too much contrasting color to smite the eye. Soft sweaters merge into silver, blue, gray range from dark to sky blue and there are some such color schemes as chocolate beige and gray, or dark green, pink and blue. One outstanding feature of these sweaters is that the sleeves will sometimes be of different colors, one dark, the other very light—giving an astonishingly attractive sweater. "Crew" Neck Is New. The model shown today uses dark green, flesh, pink and pale orange.

This sport costume (left) and the other for street wear emphasize the diverging aims of the two types. Sport clothes are getting sportier and street costumes more formal, Harriet says.

In a modernistic sweater, with one sleeve a dark green, the other a pale orange. Here we see the new idea garment, the most successful one is that which gives the appearance of sheer simplicity, rather severity. A typical ultra-stylish sweater for this season is the medium blue, or broadcloth shown today. Light weight, it is as soft as the exquisite silver crepe satin which lines it. WALTER LEAGUE MEETS

The Walter Grose home, four miles north of Wakefield, was burned to the ground together with most of the contents Sunday morning about 9 o'clock by fire which started, it is thought, from sparks from the chimney. The loss is estimated at about $10,000 and insurance covers about $20,000 of the amount. Mr. Grose will build a residence on the site this spring. The Grose family was eating breakfast when smoke was noticed. It was thought this was coming from the chimney. When the hired man went into the yard to do chores he saw that the roof was ablaze and notified the family. It was found that the upstairs rooms were blazing by this time also. Some articles of furniture were taken from the house but the wind fanned the flames which spread fast and prevented more from being saved. The Wakefield fire department responded to aid but the building was too far gone to save. The house, furniture and furnishings and electric light plant were destroyed. Wind from the northwest prevented the blaze from spreading to barns and other buildings which were west of the house. The family is staying at the Fred Muller home temporarily.

WILL TEX PACK 'EM IN WITH GENE HIS SOLE DRAWING CARD?—YANKEE DOPE AGAIN BY PHILIP MARTIN

Two of our very distinguished members of the boxing racket are soon to be on trial—Mr. Tex Rickard for his reputation and Mr. Gene Tunney for an oft-declared statement.

One of the pet legends of our very assisting public is that Mr. Rickard without doubt is the greatest of all fight promoters. He must maintain this reputation in the coming Tunney-Heeneey fight.

Mr. Tunney often has said that he, just as much as Jack Dempsey, was the person the followers of the racket paid to see perform at Philadelphia and at Chicago. Although he has not many adherents to his belief, the fair-minded are willing to delay final judgment in order to see just what there is to this notion of Gene's.

Now, Mr. Dempsey will be present only as a spectator if he is present at this coming fight. Mr. Tunney and Mr. Heeneey will do the fighting if there is any done. Nothing in Mr. Heeneey's record in this country gives reasons for thought that he is a great drawing card. Therefore, assuming that Tunney is not enough to attract a couple of million dollars into the coffers, Mr. Rickard must go to all ends to have the customers get down with their cold cash.

And what has he to hallyhoo? It is a championship fight. That always attracts the ones who live to repeat day after day that they were among those present. He has the champion, a very good champion, who should retain his title easily.

Market Report.

Furnished by Steele, Siman & Co., Sioux City Stock Yards.

Sioux City Stock Yards, April 11.—Live stock receipts fell off sharply this week as markets responded with strong advances.

Cattle receipts amounted to 76,500 head at the 11 leading markets of the country on the first two days of the week, a decrease of 17,300 compared with the corresponding time last week.

Local receipts amounted to 5,300 on Monday and Tuesday, a decrease of 1,000 and 2,000 head, compared with last week and the same period a year ago.

Demands were broad for beef steers and yearlings on the initial session of the week and prices advanced 15c to 25c, to the highest level in over a month.

The butcher stock market was active and 15c to 25c higher on the opening day of the week, due to curtailed supplies.

A few choice light heifers sold up to $12.75 and a number of sales ranged at $11.00 to $12.00 with full grades down to $9.50.

Good choice cows brought $10.00 to $11.00 with fair to good kinds at $8.00 to $10.00 and plain lots down to $7.00.

Veals advanced a half-dollar to top at $12.50 to independents and at $11.50 to packers. Bulk of the calves sold at $9.00 to $11.50.

A top at $12.40 was paid for a load of choice green steers weighing around 750 pounds, the best price paid here for some time.

Feeding cows and heifers held steady. Cows sold mostly at $7.00 to $8.00 with heifers at $5.50 to $10.00.

The reputations of Tex Rickard (top) and Gene Tunney (below) are at stake in the coming fight between Gene and Tom Heeneey.

THE boys are about to start their annual baseball campaign, and among several American League clubs there exists a feeling that the New York Yankees will not be the all-powerful club of last year.

For the sake of Mr. Rickard, AS for Mr. Tunney's belief, he can aid in upholding Mr. Rickard's reputation if he will just prove he is an attraction.

Oil's not quiet along the Potomac.—Tampa Tribune.

Eleven Years. Lincoln Journal, April 6: Eleven years ago today the United States entered the World war. That was a great day for the allies.

It will soon be ten years since the war ended. Time is blurring our memories and slowly healing the wounds all the participants received. The war taught us many things. Some of the lessons will stay with us for years to come.

Now that it is long since over and we look back we cannot see how our entry could have been avoided, nor did we then care to avoid it. We still have doubts as to what was accomplished but we are certain that our intentions were good. The United States did not enter the war until it felt that it would be shirking a duty not to do so and effort was made to fulfill that duty.

And what a relief when it ended. April 6, 1917, was a day which marked the reviving of hope in the breasts of the allies but November 11, 1918, was a day upon which all the world breathed a sigh of relief. April 6 passes almost without note. Few think of its significance as an anniversary. But who can forget what November 11 signifies? That is an encouraging sign.

President to Be Elected This Year Will Not Be a Heavyweight, Doctor Says

"LET me have men about me who are fat . . ." may have been true enough when Shakespeare wrote it, but Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk of the Life Extension Institute arises to take exception. "The lean and hungry look isn't so dangerous as the fat look," says the doctor, and just to prove his point dares bet his own dapper waistline that the next president of the United States won't have an extra ounce of fat and might, in fact, have "the lean and hungry look."

has been made something of a disgrace the past few years. Of course this old saying that 'nobody loves a fat man' is funny just because it's untrue. Everybody loves a fat man, they're so jolly and good-tempered because their nerves are well cushioned and protected.

"But we must have more in a president than good temper."

Now let's see. Suppose that some of the men considered presidential timber should be president, would Dr. Fisk be right?

He says that Hoover, Longworth and Borah aren't fat—just big. Judge for yourself from the pictures. Hoover is 54, Longworth 59 and Borah 63.

Senator Frank B. Willis of Ohio, 57, is another big man, but not fat.

A. Victor Donahey, 55, Democratic governor of Ohio, is just plain big, too.

Al Smith of New York, 55, has quite a tummy in a bathing suit. Senator Jim Reed, 57, is another spilling type.

No one can complain of the waistline of Vice President Charles G. Dawes. He's 63.

Frank O. Lowden, 67, is rather hefty. Governor Albert C. Ritchie, 52, looks pretty big to some of us, but Dr. Fisk calls him just medium.

Senator Charles Curtis, 63, is no lightning rod. The average age then is an even 60. The oldest, Senator Charles Curtis, is 67 and the youngest, Governor Ritchie, is 52.

But how about past presidents? weren't Garfield and McKinley and even Roosevelt at least plumpish?

Were there really more Willsons and Abraham Lincolns than any other type?

Dr. Fisk says that there must have been. His book of averages eliminates the fat people. Fat says so.

Hoover Not Fat

Neither is Dr. Fisk eliminating such gentlemen who border on the burly as Herbert Hoover, Nick Longworth or William Borah.

"They aren't really fat men," he says—"just big men. Besides, Hoover is not far enough beyond the 50 mark to make it so surprising to find an able man who is also slightly embonpointed."

Dr. Fisk explains his certainty that his next president won't be fat. Like this:

"The very nature of the job demands that a president be a man of wide experience. He would have to be over 50. Now the proportion of able heavy men over 50 compared with slight men is so small that there's hardly a remote chance that one of these rarities will be president.

"Tall, of course, is the one outstanding rarity. But for every

Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, who says that in all probability a heavy man will not have a "fat man's chance" of being elected president in 1928, is pictured above.

Taft there was a spare Lincoln or Wilson or a dozen presidents without an ounce of superfluous flesh.

"Fat slows up a man, so that a man who is fat before 50 rarely reaches the pinnacle of the White House. Besides, few of them live to be old enough to be president."

Fat People Passing? "Social pressure has been eliminating the fat people. Fat says so.

THE SPORT WORLD

BABE AND LOU HOLD SPRING TRAINING SPOTLIGHT —PITT A GREAT BASKETBALL TEAM

BY PHILIP MARTIN

AMONG other things to be found in Florida the next few weeks which the native sons of California won't have will be the greatest attraction in baseball—namely, Messrs. Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees.

Should any reader care to indulge in light correspondence with these two celebrities, their address is St. Petersburg. Likewise, to the curious, the Babe and the Buster are there to engage in the business of conditioning themselves for the coming baseball season.

Inasmuch as most critics of the day expect the Yankees to repeat in the American League this autumn, it is vitally essential that these twin-thrillers rid themselves of any surplus fat that they may have accumulated to their physical frames during the winter months so that the business of making home runs may go on as it did last summer.

Babe in Good Shape The Babe is said to be in better condition than he has ever been. One expects the same from his boy-friend. In fact, knowing the Babe has a very serious purpose in life, that of making great additions each year to the Ruth bankroll, and that Gehrig also has great ambitions in life, such a statement is not surprising.

Will the Babe and the Buster repeat their home-run struggle of last year? Take it from them, they will. Not in the sense of a struggle against each other, however, but merely in the day's work as members of the Yankees in an effort to cop another pennant.

Perhaps the Babe won't hit $1 home runs this year, and perhaps the Buster won't hit 47, but if they do engage in another one of those races that had the pop-eyed world watching them in every game last season, the turstles will click merrily again, regardless of the fact that the Yankees are able to get so far in the lead early in the season that there won't be any race to it at all.

At any rate, the Babe and Buster are now in Florida. If you care to acquaint yourself with their doings for the next few weeks, you need not become alarmed and journey to Florida to see for yourself. The public prints will have enough about them to fully acquaint you with their daily vicissitudes, even with Babe Ruth (top) and Lou Gehrig, Yankee home run kings, are in training for what they believe will be another record home-run year.

The Great American Bunion Derby, better known as C. C. Pyle's go-as-you-can marathon public eye during the next few weeks, perhaps months.

Runners from the four corners of the globe are slated to get away from Los Angeles on their 3400-mile jaunt to New York on March 4. Some 700 are expected to start. It has not been revealed in any of the ballyhoo about the contest how many will finish on the eastern shore front.

Although Mr. Pyle has not announced just how he will profit himself and his associates by such a contest, there is no fear but that the ambitious promoter who made the London and Grand bankrolls will enhance the Pyle bankroll considerably in various and sundry fashions.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Is Built on Land Deeded 172 Years Ago to Jesus Christ

THE land upon which Winston-Salem, N. C., is located was deeded 172 years ago to Jesus Christ. Its citizens are living upon it now because they were described in that early document as "His people."

Down through dusty pages of legal records, the story of this interesting fact runs like a bright ribbon. An English king—two noblemen—hundreds of pioneers—hundreds of zealous churchmen—great industries—all have had a hand in the shaping of this ground—that became Christ's legal property when the unusual deed was filed. The story has made Winston-Salem probably the only city in the world located upon ground legally and specifically Christ's.

Salem Founded in 1750 The deed was executed by Lord Granville—who held an original grant to the property from the English king—to Jesus Christ, at the instance of Moravian, or United Brethren church, pioneers, who had settled in the territory.

Salem, forerunner of Winston-Salem, was founded about 1750 by a colony of Moravians from Pennsylvania under Bishop August Gottlieb Spangenberg. In 1766, approximately 500,000 acres were purchased by the Moravians for five hundred pounds sterling, with a yearly rent of 148 pounds.

The church did not have sufficient funds with which to purchase the property so Count Zinzendorf, a zealous Moravian, came to the rescue with money, but stipulated that the deed should convey the property directly to Christ.

Land Sold to Industries Thus far the story revolves around an English king, the two noblemen, the pioneer settlers of Salem and the zealous Moravians. But industries entered into the story of Winston-Salem because the thirty religionists sold parts of their enormous tract to induce the purchase price had been low.

This is given as one explanation of the location of such a thriving industrial city as Winston-Salem in a comparatively isolated section of the state.

Legumes and Manure Keep Up Fertility

Lincoln, Neb.—The most important soil problem with which Nebraska farmers have to contend is the maintenance of organic matter and nitrogen. In the course of investigation of this problem, the agronomy department of the Nebraska college of agriculture has analyzed the soil from 91 fields scattered throughout the state. Sixty-eight of these fields represent farms that have had practically no attention toward maintaining the soil. Nine of these 68 fields have been under cultivation from two to seven years and show an average loss of 6.5 per cent of organic matter. Nine others have been under cultivation from 8 to 15 years and show an average loss of 14.2 per cent. Twelve have been under cultivation from 17 to 30 years and show an average loss of 25.6 per cent. Twenty-five have been under cultivation from 32 to 43 years and show an average loss of 26.2 per cent. The balance, 12 fields ranging from 46 to 60 years under cultivation have lost on the average 28 per cent of organic matter. Fifteen of the 91 fields, all of them from 30 to 60 years old, which have been eroded by water more or less showed 56 per cent loss which was just twice the loss found in uneroded portions of the same fields. Lastly, nine fields, all of them well kept up either by returning crop residues or manure, or by growing legumes, that is sweet clover, red clover, or alfalfa, and all of them from 30 to 47 years old, showed an average loss of only 6.5 per cent of organic matter—which is the same loss found in new soil only 3 to 7 years old. Here is more proof of the value of clover and alfalfa, two crops which build up the soil and fit well into a general farming program.

Population and Peasantry. Nebraska Farmer: Population of the United States which is increasing at the rate of two million a year, is estimated to reach the saturation point of 250,000,000 not later than 1950. Alarmists are now concerned about what shall be done to feed our people when the population increase has overtaken the possible productivity of the land. At the same time a great many writers, statisticians and other would-be authorities on rural economics are bewailing the decrease in farm population, on the grounds that food production will thereby be reduced below the needs of even our present population, that conditions on the farms are unbearable, and that those who remain are being driven into peasantry. In a recent article in Nation's Business, Professor Walter Burr of the Kansas State Agricultural College, calls attention to these alarming views. "All of which," he goes on to say, "to one who actually travels out over the farming area, visits in the homes and on the farms, and studies conditions and people as they are is to laugh. "That there are fewer farmers in certain areas, and that for all the United States there was a decrease in farm people in 1926 of 649,000 statistics accurately show. That this was in any way other than for the welfare of the country as a whole and the farm communities themselves, and the farm people who moved, statistics do not show. To the contrary, such statistics as are available indicate that the movement from the farm is due to very wholesome and sound economic causes, and that in all instances it is a readjustment of population which must continue for some years yet to come."

Professor Burr then proceeds to point out some of the sound underlying causes for the decrease in rural population. He mentions the homestead law which resulted in the cutting up of the rural acres generally into 160-acre farms by the first settlers. While 160 acres still constitutes a fair-sized farm in Iowa, Illinois and Ohio, larger units are more profitable in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado. Consequently there has been a tendency toward merging farms in these latter states, which naturally resulted in decreased population, but with no decrease in total production from the land and with a greater return for farmers who remain. There has been in some states, particularly in the east, an abandonment of many farms situated on land not well adapted to present-day methods, or of worn-out farms. Another factor which Professor Burr declares is operating to reduce materially our farm population is smaller families. Today the family of ten to twenty children is a rare occurrence in the country, just as it is among the better classes in cities. Three or four children is the rule today in the country, and there is little to lament in that situation, either.

The very beneficial effects which these readjustments in farm population are having generally, is well illustrated in the following figures given by Professor Burr. These figures are the result of a typical Kansas county which has been experiencing the depopulation movement for twenty years. "In the twenty-year period studied, the number of farms decreased by one hundred and forty-four, but no farms were abandoned. The number of farms in the class between 360 acres and 1,000 acres greatly increased, indicating a merger of the smaller farms. In 1900 all farm implements in the county were valued at $474,920, divided among 1,948 farmers, while in 1920 all farm implements were valued at $2,170,840 distributed among 144 fewer farmers. That is, while the number of farms decreased 7.39 per cent, the value of farm machinery increased approximately 357.2 per cent. "In this county the value of crops produced in 1909 was $3,060,046. In 1913, ten years later, the value of the same classes of crops produced was $6,882,428—with a greatly decreased number of farm people. In 1909 this county produced 1,639,656 bushels of wheat, and 1913, with fewer farms and fewer farm people, it produced 2,203,407 bushels of wheat." All of which, we should say, is something for the alarmists to think about. Sometimes one wonders whether war will be any the less lawless as an "outlaw" than it is now.—Boston Transcript.

Diversify Farming. The Manufacturer and Industrial News Bureau: A few years ago, most of "Eastern" Montana was raising opium or flax. During the crop season, the farm was a madhouse of industry; the rest of the year it had nothing to do, except chamberpaining a herd of horses that were "eating their heads off" in idleness. Under this plan, most of the farmers went broke.

Though wheat is still their principal crop, Montana farmers are now raising sugar beets, beans, certified alfalfa seeds, certified potatoes, canning peas, farm flocks, dairy cows, corn, poultry, honey, apples, cherries, strawberries. Canneries, sugar factories, creameries, seed warehouses, have sprung up. The people have become industrially minded; they realize that where capital is not working steadily, it loses ground. A farm investment of $15,000, idle two-thirds of the year, is entitled to no more return than a $5,000 investment working all the time. Putting this axiom into action, they are making Montana farms all-year workshops.

Rotation and diversification of crops, that give the farmer a steady all-year job instead of a hysterical over-rush during short seasons and a soul-killing idleness during the rest of the year, is the salvation of farming anywhere.
