and which makes almost complete coverage of its field, bills issued within its territory are an unnecessary duplication and waste. Accustomed to looking for store news in the newspaper, people pay comparatively little attention to bills, and since bills are no longer needed to stuff bushes or wad shotguns, they offer serve little or no purpose.

Before a district meeting of teachers and parents at Norfolk, the school superintendent of that city set forth several reasons why students failed to make the grade in high school. He mentioned low mentality, indifference, laziness, irregularity of attendance, lack of effort, and home conditions. He mentioned late hours, parties, dances and other outside attractions, which occupy attention and which raise barriers to concentration in mental labors. We doubt if low mentality is so much responsible as is indicated by a monopoly of other interests. With a multiplicity of other considerations, mere study has slight chance.

When children who belong to the band were asked to attend band practice during the Sunday school hour, a local preacher friend told his congregation what he thought about it. He is broad-minded and tolerant, but he believes in Sunday school instruction as an inspirator to Christian living, and he felt deeply chagrined over having members of school led away to something else while the services especially designed for them were in progress. Liberal church rules should not be considered license to hamper the good work the church is trying to do. The fact that usually the church is no longer a stickler for narrow dogmas does not mean that its proper functions for spiritual growth may be treated as trivial and unnecessary.

The death of Tom Tibbles in Omaha this week at the age of nearly 90 years, revives memory of a remarkable frontiersman. He was in the thick of the fight to outlaw slavery. During that troublesome period he was hanged, but cut down in time to save his life. He was an editor, publisher and preacher. He was employed at one time by the Omaha Bee and later by the World-Herald. He was a fighting reformer, and he was in the front ranks behind every movement he thought would be better for society. He was a friend and defender of the Indians, and one of his three wives was the well known Indian, "Bright Eyes," whom Longfellow referred to as the embodiment of his Indian heroine, "Minnehaha." Tibbles often had a violently stormy life in expressing his convictions.

In his Hartington Herald, Editor Stone wonders how far one should go in service to his fellowmen if the effort is unappreciated, but he does not answer the query. Should one go the "second mile"? he asks. Supposing there is no material reward or evidence of gratitude, does not the service strengthen and uplift the individual who bestows it? That is compensation. However, free service may be so generously dealt out that recipients accept as a matter of course, and they are weakened by becoming parasites and ingrates. And the free service dispenser, his contributions greedily accepted and quickly forgotten, fails to be uplifted, and he grows pessimistic, and he wonders if civilization has struck a snag. Moderation in all things, would seem proper to follow in bestowing free service or other gifts.

With Al. Smith nominated by the democrats and Herbert Hoover by the republicans, prohibition will be the biggest issue in the forthcoming campaign, according to the judgment of the York Republican. Whether outlawing the liquor traffic is to be continued as a permanent policy of the country or not will be forcibly indicated by the result next November. Smith is known to lean to the wet side, while Hoover leans the other way. People may vote approval or disapproval of the present law by taking their choice of the two men.

People save many dollars every year by giving careful heed to Herald advertisements every week. In the early days when newspapers had small circulations, it was necessary to issue bills to spread buying information. Now with a newspaper like the Herald, it is a mere pretense, a sheer seeming, a worthless counterfeit. It is not that sort which has the power to inspire geniuses; it is not of that sort which I essay to write here.

Friendship is a term which doubtless is too often insulted and abused. Much that we refer to as friendship is not friendship at all. It is a mere pretense, a sheer seeming, a worthless counterfeit. It is not that sort which has the power to inspire geniuses; it is not of that sort which I essay to write here.

Friendship may arise between a man and a woman—some of such attachments most beautiful in their beginnings—but, by a basic law of human nature, such friendships invariably tend toward a nearer relation or end abruptly in sudden disruption. There is nothing finer than true friendship, that friendship which seeks to serve and help, rather than to be served and helped. Friends are one's salvation in time of troubles; a source of sure encouragement in times of depression; a dependable satisfaction in times of success and happiness. No man who is someone's friend is living in vain.

SCHOOLS CLOSE

The last weeks of May bring the school year to an end, and an increasing number of young people are graduated. Some go from high school into fields of employment; many others enter higher institutions of learning for further preparation. From the colleges hundreds of well equipped young people are poured into the professions and trades and arteries of business. Graduation is a sharp turn in the road. It marks progress. Changes are regarded with some regret, but they only yield to the inexorable passing of time. If each step in education, and character formation is taken with due thought of the future, a review is buoyed by a feeling of high satisfaction. Trained and serious-minded youths, charged with worthy purposes, enliven and stimulate. They put fresh momentum back of the world's work. If they are determined to apply themselves to accepted tasks and win on merit, they are needed, and they are welcomed into all fields for which they have been prepared. But one who figures that his diploma will carry him along and that he can get by without effort or responsibility will have a hard row to hoe.

Conscription. Geneva Signal: Newspaper discussion has developed the fact that the American Legion bill in congress for general conscription in case of war is hot at all what many of us thought it was. It does not include property and therefore doesn't mean much. National Commander Spafford of the legion says it would be unconstitutional to conscript wealth because of war or for any other reason. Then the constitution should be amended and the American Legion boys should make the submission of a suitable amendment one of their major activities. The best way to stop war, the most effective single means, is to put the principal burden of war upon wealth and make it impossible for any individual or corporation to make money out of war. Strife for power or financial advantage has always been the principal cause of war, hope of individual profit coupled with national desire for aggrandizement.

A SOLID TRAINLOAD OF International Six-Speed Special MOTOR TRUCKS WE ARE GETTING OUR SHARE So big a demand has developed for International Six-Speed Special Motor Trucks that a full trainload of them has just been delivered in the territory supervised by the International Harvester, Sioux City Branch House. This trainload shipment is the greatest single motor truck delivery in the history of this territory. There is a real need for International Six-Speed Special Motor Trucks in this community, therefore, we are getting our share of this trainload distribution. The Six-Speed Special is a fine-looking 1-ton truck of an exclusive design that puts it decidedly in advance of the times. It has six speeds forward and two reverse—an extra low range ordinarily found only in the larger heavy-duty jobs. That's for power in hard going. The new Six-Speed Special gives you 35 easy miles per hour at the top end of the range for speed and 3 1/2 fighting miles per hour at the low end to get your heaviest loads over the toughest roads. The Six-Speed Special is reasonable in price, economical to operate, trim and flexible, a pleasure to steer and to drive. It has a long and sturdy frame, heavy-duty springs and a simple 4-cylinder motor notable for ample power, quick acceleration, and exceptional fuel economy. It has a fine appearing high grade, full enclosed cab of the latest design, well upholstered and with the very best of fixtures. Bodies available for every kind of load. The combination farm/body is shown above. Come in and see the new International Six-Speed Special and find out what it will do for you. Nothing like it has ever been offered.
