Plan Features For Fair Here

Modern Woodmen and Royal Neighbor Drill Teams Will Enter Competition.

Fireworks Display

Race Committee Is Busy Arranging Program—Improve Track and Ball Grounds.

Wayne county fair board is now arranging entertainment features for the evening programs of the annual fair which will be held from Wednesday until Saturday, September 12 to 15, at the grounds west of Wayne. Several orpheim circuit features have been secured for the afternoon and evening programs and teams from about twelve towns will conduct competitive drill one evening. Royal Neighbor teams from various towns will have an evening. One of the most spectacular fireworks displays ever shown in the state will be featured the closing evening. Entertainment for the first evening of the fair has not yet been definitely planned.

The race committee is busy working on the program for each afternoon. The track has been put into good shape already, and the ball diamond has been made ready for games.

The fair association had hoped this year to erect the first of four wings to what is planned will be the main exhibit hall on the grounds with a gift of $1,000 from the former chautauqua association. The fund is not yet available so the fair will have to leave this improvement up until next season. It was proposed that the first wing be put up for fine arts exhibits and other wings added as fast as possible. This plan will be carried out later.

The platform for free acts will be moved this summer to a site in front of the grandstand, instead of being on one side as at present.

Will Instruct At Baptist Assembly

Nebraska Baptist Assembly will be held August 6 to 17 at Grand Island college, and Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Downing of Wayne are principals of the vacation school. The Downing family and Miss Lavaine Stamm plan to go to Grand Island next Monday to attend and take part in the assembly. The assembly is a summer school for the whole church, conducted by the department of religious education of the Nebraska Baptist convention and the American Baptist publication society.

Rev. Downing gives instruction each morning on "How to Promote and Administer the Vacation School Work." This is a textbook and laboratory course.

The bible school, directed by Rev. and Mrs. Downing, was under their direction last year. This will provide valuable work for boys and girls and will relieve parents of any responsibility for them during the morning period.

AN INTERESTING VISIT TO SOUTH OMAHA DISTRICT

MEMBERS of the Herald group in Omaha Friday to attend the editors' outing, were directed through the packing house district by Mrs. M. A. Phillips who is principal of a South Omaha school, and who, as teacher, has developed familiar understanding of the lives and problems of the children and parents of that part of the city. Most of her pupils are Bohemians, and she says they and their parents are thoroughly loyal to American ideals and keenly appreciative of educational advantages. Many have a hard struggle to make the financial grade, and if the head of a household happens to be thrown out of a job, suffering for life's necessities is likely to follow, and then charity gives welcome relief. Packing house employees who are the least skilled and receive the least pay, live in the comparative hovels in the neighborhood. Usually a small patch of ground belonging to each home is intensively cultivated for a garden, one crop succeeding another through growing seasons. The numerous automobiles parked near packing houses belong to more skilled and better paid employees who usually reside in other sections of the city and are able to drive to and from work every day. Packing house districts present an interesting study of the different social strata that make up big centers of population. Such an insight on conditions of the comparative good fortune of those who live in rural communities where people are less selfish and more sympathetic.

Return From Trip To Western States

Mr. and Mrs. William Beckenhauer and daughters, Miss Frances, Miss Florence, Miss Fae and Miss Fannell, arrived home Saturday at midnight from a twelve days' trip to Colorado, Wyoming and western Nebraska. They found good roads. They were also in some pain which detained them a couple of times. Grain in the west will make a wonderful yield again this year and harvest was just starting when the Beckenhauers were in the west. They traveled 2,200 miles.

The family went to York and then to Superior, stopping at the latter place to see a sister of Mr. Beckenhauer, Mrs. H. G. Paul. Paul detained them a day longer than they planned. The party visited Rev. and Mrs. William Kilburn, formerly of Wayne, in McCook. Rev. Kilburn has been pastor there four years and a beautiful new church, costing $100,000, has just been dedicated. One man, a lumberman, was most helpful in getting this improvement. Furnishings in the church cost $20,000, and the organ cost $8,000.

At McCook the family visited a brother of Mrs. Beckenhauer, J. H. Krause. They stopped at Potter because of rain and accidentally found a man, Bob Wallick, who used to be employed by Mr. Beckenhauer.

A week Saturday they stopped in Kimball to see the John Seefeld family, formerly of Wayne. Mr. Seefeld is in the implement business and sells eighteen combines this season.

The Wayne party visited Mr. Beckenhauer's sister, Mrs. Martha Thiele, and niece, Mrs. J. H. Achison, in Denver. They and the relatives drove to Estes park Monday of last week. The road was good and the sights were wonderful. They spent two days there. All went to Cheyenne Wednesday to a rodeo. The Beckenhauer car was entered at Cheyenne and a kodak and souvenirs were taken. Coats and other property were not touched.

The Beckenhauers went to Chadron by way of Scottsbluff and Gering and visited the Rev. L. F. Townsend family at Chadron. The Townsends, Beckenhauers and Miss Joy, Miss Mary Alice and Miss Josephine Ley, who are visiting in Gordon, went to the Black Hills Friday.

Returning from Chadron Saturday, a distance of 420 miles, the Beckenhauers found considerable mud between Chadron and Long Pine but the rest of the roads were good.

Return From Trip To Minnesota Lakes

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Carhart and daughter, Miss Elsie Mae, and Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Judson and family returned Saturday from a two weeks' outing in the lake region of Minnesota. The party camped at Pine Park near Park Rapids, Minn. They found the country very beautiful. Pine trees and white birches grow thickly near the lakes and they found wild flowers in profusion. The pines are usually about two and one-half feet in diameter and grow very straight and tall. Red raspberries grow wild and members of the party were able to gather enough for a meal in a short time.

The lakes were covered with water lilies. Men of the party enjoyed fishing much of the time. Bathing in the lakes was much enjoyed.

The crops in Minnesota and along the route were excellent. Wheat will be a bumper crop there this year. Corn in Minnesota grows only to the height of two or three feet but if left in the fields, will mature. However, most of the corn is used as fodder and almost every farm has a large silo in which it is stored. The fields of buckwheat were a novelty to the travelers.

The party found roads in Minnesota excellent and traveled everywhere. They went by way of Wankton, S. D., and Pipestone and Slayton, Minn., and returned by way of Sioux City. They crossed the Mississippi river six times enroute home.

Places of interest visited while in Minnesota were Itaska park and the beautiful town of Bemidji north of where the party camped.

NAVIGATION OF MISSOURI RIVER URGED AT OMAHA

A GOVERNMENT engineer from St. Louis and A. J. Weaver, republican candidate for governor, were the principal speakers before Nebraska and Iowa editors, aboard a steamer on the Missouri river, off the coast of Omaha, Friday, and they talked about the importance and feasibility of making the river navigable from St. Louis to Sioux City. The engineer advised against dredging as temporary and too costly, but pointed out the practicability of fortifying and controlling the channel and making the current deepen the waters. Mr. Weaver urged navigation of the river as a way to reduce freight charges and increase profits to Nebraska producers and shippers. According to experience in other parts of the country where rivers are used for transportation, the railroads would not suffer by carrying out the proposed plan to utilize the Missouri. On the contrary, shipping would be increased and farmers would be rewarded by an important saving in transportation costs. He suggested that cheapened transportation would operate to such advantage of Nebraska farming communities that it would help materially in equalizing prices received and paid by farmers. Mr. Weaver is thoroughly sold on Missouri river navigation as a means to stimulate growth and prosperity in the middle west.

Return From Trip Through Northwest

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Blair and daughters, Mirabel and Betty, arrived home last evening from a month's visit and sightseeing trip through the northwest. They traveled 5,500 miles and found the best long stretches of highway are in Nebraska. They visited eight states and saw many interesting sights, but the greatest thrill of the trip, they found, was their arrival at home.

The Blairs were in Longview, Wash., July 13 and 14 when the city of 12,000 people was celebrating its fifth anniversary. The greatest lumber saw mills in the world are located at Longview and one man, R. A. Bell, who is very wealthy, has practically built the city. He donated a school costing $650,000, a church costing $150,000, a library costing $150,000, a hotel costing one million and a depot costing $350,000. The city has had no railroad line and the depot has been standing idle for three years, but just this summer the railroad came in for the celebration. Mr. Bell spent 120 millions on the saw mills there.

The Blairs were invited to drive in the five-mile parade at the celebration and mammoth roses and other flowers were used to decorate the car. Mr. Blair's car was third in the parade and Mr. Bell rode in the fourth car. All saw mills of Washington and Oregon entered floats and about ten bands played.

The Blairs visited relatives of Mr. Blair at Seattle. While there the battle ships came in and they went through the Arizona, a ship costing thirty-two millions.

The Wayne people took the boat trip to Victoria, B. C., and were there the day parties had changed in parliament and a great celebration was being staged. In Vancouver a woman saw the Nebraska license on their car and asked if they happened to be from Wayne. It was Miss Carmichael, who said she attended the Wayne Normal College when J. M. Pile was president. She is now with the chamber of commerce in Vancouver.

Heat in Washington and Oregon the Blairs found to be more intense than in Nebraska. Temperatures reached 110 and 116 at Arlington, Portland and Pendleton.

The Blairs went west on the Lincoln highway, going through Wyoming and then to Portland and Seattle. They returned to American Falls, Idaho, went through Yellowstone park and then to Fort Robinson and Highway No. 20 from Fort Robinson to Wayne was the best road on the trip.

In one place in Yellowstone park last Sunday traffic was blocked for some time when a part of a mountain caved in. About 200 cars were lined up on the steep grade wanting to go each way. Machinery was brought and soon cleared a path so traffic resumed. Hail and rain fell in profusion.

The Blairs visited Mt. Ranier and Mt. Hood, not being able to go high on the former because of heavy rain and fog. Hot water springs in the park were among interesting sights.

At Douglas, Wyo., the Blairs visited Cash Wadsworth, former mayor of Wayne. They stopped in Gordon with friends and saw the Ley girls who are visiting there.

Farmers' Picnic Largely Attended

Speches Supporting Cause of Agriculture, and Base Ball Game Follow Dinner.

Approximately 1,000 men, women and children attended the county Farmers' Union picnic on the fair grounds here last Sunday. A number of Wayne people joined the crowd and shared in the privileges of the occasion.

Following a generous picnic dinner which was enjoyed by everybody, the crowd gathered in the grandstand and listened to two speeches, one by a Mr. Reynolds of Niobrara, an official of the Farmers Union and a leader in its work, and the other by J. H. Kemp, of Wayne.

Mr. Reynolds stressed organization and cooperative effort as a means to advance the farmers' interests. Mr. Kemp pointed out that people in town and country were agriculturists, interdependent and mutually interested in the development and prosperity of agriculture.

Following the speeches, a base ball game between teams from Altona and south of Wakefield occupied attention, and resulted in a score of 5 to 4 in favor of Altona.

The weather was cool enough for comfort and aided the crowd in enjoying the occasion.

The Blairs went west on the Lincoln highway, going through Wyoming and then to Portland and Seattle. They returned to American Falls, Idaho, went through Yellowstone park and then to Fort Robinson and Highway No. 20 from Fort Robinson to Wayne was the best road on the trip.

In one place in Yellowstone park last Sunday traffic was blocked for some time when a part of a mountain caved in. About 200 cars were lined up on the steep grade wanting to go each way. Machinery was brought and soon cleared a path so traffic resumed. Hail and rain fell in profusion.

The Blairs visited Mt. Ranier and Mt. Hood, not being able to go high on the former because of heavy rain and fog. Hot water springs in the park were among interesting sights.

At Douglas, Wyo., the Blairs visited Cash Wadsworth, former mayor of Wayne. They stopped in Gordon with friends and saw the Ley girls who are visiting there.

Return From Trip Through Canada

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Miller arrived home Friday from an automobile trip three weeks through northern states and Canada, and they saw much of interest while gone. Three weeks of heavy rains, something unusual in that section, had helped crops wonderfully but made roads almost impassable in parts of Canada. The grade had been washed and the Millers found the roads the roughest they had ever traveled. Another cloudburst made the roads worse after they left, according to news accounts. Signs have been placed on highways near Yellowstone park telling tourists to avoid Canada roads if possible.

Wheat, which is the principal crop in the northern states and Canada, is of wonderful stand and quality this year. It was still green when the Millers were there. North of Calgary it was estimated the crop would go forty bushels to the acre. Wheat is always better in Alberta than in Saskatchewan, and travelers were informed. Hail is the chief worry of farmers there and the damaging storms come often.

The Millers saw no American cars after leaving Banff, until they returned to Winnipeg. They went to Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatchewan, Regina and Winnipeg, also to lakes. In Edmonton they spent a day with John Juhlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Juhlin of Wayne. Mr. Juhlin is manager of the stock yards company there and has a very responsible position.

In Roberts, Mont., the Millers visited Mrs. Claud Hudson, formerly Miss Mae Cunningham of Wayne. They stopped in Minneapolis with Mrs. Miller's sister, Mrs. A. W. Stewart, and Mrs. Stewart and son, Harry, accompanied the Millers to Wayne to visit a couple of weeks with relatives. The Millers also visited in Great Falls and Billings, Mont.

While gone the Millers attended two fairs. One at Calgary was called a stampee. A rodeo was entertainment and products of the country were displayed. At Edmonton there were exhibits and horse races.

Wayne Traveler Enjoys Europe

Miss Marguerite Chace Writes of Places and Sights of Interest on Continent.

Goes to Africa

Party Has Novel Experiences in Trip Over Mediterranean to the Arab Country.

Miss Marguerite Chace of Wayne, who is spending this summer touring Europe and Africa, has had many interesting experiences and enjoyed numerous unusual sights. Her route has taken her from England to France and then to African coast points and back to Paris through Italy and Switzerland. She is still in Europe and plans to go to Germany and Belgium as well as to stop longer in France and England.

When Miss Chace sailed from the United States the water was the roughest it had been in nineteen years, in fact so rough that the pilot could not be taken back to land. She went on an English ship and had as cabin company women from California who had been there before. She stayed with the party almost throughout her trip abroad. The storm on the sea lasted for two days and after that traveling was more pleasant.

When asked how far from land the ship was the captain of the boat replied two and one-half miles, and pointed down. Miss Chace and others on the boat spent some time each day walking on deck, six and one-half trips around being one mile.

The ship landed at Havre in France and Miss Chace went from there to Paris after claiming baggage, going through the immigration and customs houses.

Paris has many famous old buildings, Miss Chace writes. The bridge built by Napoleon and the buildings which have stood for centuries are in the center of the city.

Miss Having Water. Water is not drunk in France as it is not good and the American traveler misses good water. While it is used at meals, coffee is not good. Tables and chairs are found in many places along the streets and there people go for refreshing drinks and cocktails.

Traveling is not expensive after one reaches the continent. Taxis are cheap. Tips are ten percent of cost of meals. Women's garments are somewhat cheaper in Paris than in America, though some exclusive shops handle very high priced goods and sell mostly to millionaires. As a rule one finds in America all things to be had in Europe, and most are cheaper in the United States.

Motion pictures in France are poor, not like the ones in this country. Miss Chace found she could read the main captions but not the other writing on the films. The Bergere follies though are better than the Zigfield follies in this country.

"I think it is the trees along the streets that make Paris so beautiful. It is wonderful that there are so many woods near the city for all French go to the woods on holidays. A tree is sacred to them."

Miss Chace found that after one does a thing once in traveling the rest is easy, but the once is difficult.

Go to Baesque Country. After leaving Paris, Miss Chace and the others went to the Baesque country, Carcassone, Toulouse, Grasse and Nimes. At Toulouse they asked a priest to direct them to a church and the father led them there. All people in Europe lead one to places rather than pointing the way. A big celebration was being conducted in the town the day they were there for Jean of Arc. One hotel in Toulouse was built over a river.

The Baesque country, Miss Chace writes, is lovely, and looks like Estabon and Emily stories in the Saturday Evening Post sound. Mountains are covered with green foliage and villas. Many things built by the Romans are still standing, and there seem to be thousands of hotels. Grasse, located in this section, is the center of perfume manufacturing of the world. Kathleen Norris' palace stands as a sentinel on the mountain and the village houses cluster about. A winding road leads to it.

Small villages in the country use the gutters for refuse so they are not clean. Streets in Paris are the cleanest she has ever seen, Miss Chace states.

In Avignon the party visited the ancient pope's palace. In this town they met Mr. and Mrs. Tredway of Kansas, the former of whom John Neely of Wayne used to work for as engineer.

Nice is a place of grand old ruins, Miss Chace found. It is a colorful place and prices are reasonable. There are many hotels than one can imagine. Churches are old and worn and they contain wonderful windows. The party went to the Grand Bleu at Nice for tea at 11 in the evening and found Alice Terry and other stars making motion pictures.

Water in Nice is good as it is filtered. Monaco lies on a peninsula surrounded by the bluest water. Buildings are of stone with orange roofs. The sight is very impressive, Miss Chace found. The party went to the casino to see the crowd. Mary Garden was singing in the Grand Opera.

Visitors are allowed only in evening dress. There are no taxis in the town. No residents of the town are allowed to play. One lady lost 600 francs and said she would have to wait for money from home before traveling farther. All in the casino had cards and were trying to work out systems of breaking the bank of Monte Carlo.

"I fell down the other day," writes Miss Chace, "skinning both knees. The knees will heal while the holes in the stockings will not which is a calamity as the same $1.95 hose is $2.50 here."

Sail to North Africa. Miss Chace and her friends sailed over the Mediterranean after leaving Nice and went to Algiers, in northern Africa. "This is the most un-American and un-English place we have visited," she writes. The women tied French and English and found only one man, a Englisher, who could speak English and his was poor. Algiers is built in the form of an amphitheatre on the slope of a large hill and looks beautiful from the bay with its buildings all of white stone. The city is old and new, many of the old catacombs being just now explored and unearthed.

Wild jungles of north Africa were visited when the party drove to Bida. They saw wild monkey and other dangerous life of the jungles. Natives took them to the canyons and gorges.

Go to Arab Village. The party took automobile rides to towns in northern Africa from Algiers. Bou Saada, an Arab village, was visited in the evening. It was beautiful at night, but the next morning found the streets filthy with flies and dirt. Driving in the sand the party had the experience of breaking a spring twice and of running into a sand drift and each experience required considerable time. All along the road were seen camps of nomads and each time the party stopped these Arabs gathered around the car.

After being in Biskra two nights the party reached Constantine. They had tea sitting on the rug in the garden belonging to a shiek, a cousin of an Indian prince. They spent quite a while in the "Garden of Allah," which is beautiful. The drive around the gorge of Sumner river is the best piece of scenery in northern Africa. They spent one day at Carthage. There they found many pieces of broken pottery and glass. The group gathered a considerable lot of this but Miss Chace threw hers away when she went to pack it.

In Tunis they visited shops which are odd and different. They have lovely rugs and prints. The nice things are high priced in comparison with what one usually thinks.

On Italian Boat. Miss Chace and the others left Constantine by Italian boat for Italy. On board they met an Italian boy who had spent six months in the United States and who wants to return. He proposed to two of the party, trying to get a way into the United States.

An American boy on the ship told of experiences inland in Africa. He had gone farther than advised and was held up by Arabs and was robbed of his bicycle and 200 francs. When he put up a fight one drew a knife and slashed one of his arms. The lad said that third class traveling on the Italian boat is worse than jail.

Between Biskra and Constantine, Miss Chace states, the party passed the place where all the Algerian trouble has been found. The guide said that foreigners had worked the Arabs up to thinking they might be able to join the country again.

Is Fond of Naples. "I love Naples," Miss Chace writes, "and from the least attractive of Italian towns. The key is beautiful. From Naples the group took a boat trip to the island of Capri, this being something like the Catalina island trip. The ship stopped at Sorrento. Islanders came in row boats to the ship, many of them of Arc. One picturesque Italy."

Around the point of the island the party visited the Blue Grotto, a beautiful sight in the rocks. Two or three passengers are taken by a boatman in a small vessel through an opening in a cliff, the opening being so low that all have to lie down in the boat. Inside is the grotto. Beautiful formations of rock form a canopy over the water. The water is light blue and the edge of the water, the ores and boat appear in silver light. The sight is almost uncanny. It is so startling and beautiful, Miss Chace writes. "I like Palermo and the island of Sicily," Miss Chace states. The people look nice. The men are big and are fine types.

Churches are of inlaid marble and one is done in mosaics. Boys in Naples talk the best English for they study it in school. The police jabber in Italian.

Find Much Red Tape. Red tape is troublesome, Miss Chace found. While in southern Europe four men examined her passport, and she had to give a family history even for her mother's maiden name in a hotel.

Soldiers in Naples have jaunty uniforms, she writes. One janky wears a cascade of feathers on the hat. The men serenade each night in front of the hotel. One of the party left Rome for Egypt. The trip cost $800 extra.

Audience With Pope. Visiting Rome the party writes that they hit only the high spots. Miss Chace says it is not difficult to get an audience with the pope and her party succeeded in doing so. She wore a dark dress tied close at the neck and a veil. They went to the Vatican and Sixtine chapel. Guards in ornate garbs of olden days and the pope was dressed in a plain white robe. "He looks kind; the Vatican is very large and the pope uses only a part of it but never leaves it." The party climbed the sacred stairs on their knees and visited the two beautiful churches.

They also visited the spot where St. Paul was beheaded and saw the three spots where his head fell after bounding fifteen feet each time. They saw the golden house of Nero which is just being excavated.

To Mount Vesuvius. Miss Chace and others visited Pompeii one day. They went by funicular, cable cars, to the rim of Mt. Vesuvius at 4 p. m. to watch the crater in the evening, staying until 9. "It was wonderful. Red flames and once in a while lava poured out of a cone high in the center of the crater."

On a local train going to Florence Miss Chace's friend put one foot on a seat in the train and was fined. There was no argument for if she had objected she would have had to pay ten times as much later. There are evidences of a great cleaning up of dirt and dust in Italy. Fleas are bad.

Roman people are fine looking, resembling old Roman statues, and they love to be called Romans instead of Italians.

Disappointed in Florence. "Florence was not as pretty as I expected," Miss Chace writes. She was located in a hotel next to a church and an old castle. "We went to the museum on a holiday when there was no admittance fee. Hotel charges and embroideries, etc., are cheaper in Florence than in most other places visited. A mole coat costs but $150.

Miss Chace took a train from Florence to Paris, going through Switzerland. The train went along lakes for miles in northern Italy and Switzerland.

When people run out of money while traveling in Europe, they go to the bank and have the banker write the Bankers Trust Company of Paris for travelers checks from an American company. The Paris or some other city bank gets word from the U. S. bank with which the person deals and the bankers' checks are received.

A group of college youths Miss Chace overheard in Paris said that the only good thing about going to Europe is the boat ride and the going home. Many travelers say this but Miss Chace feels that she has seen much of interest there.

If any ladies are doing this kind of work, we will be glad to cut the plywood in the desired size. It comes in three thicknesses, quarter inch, three-eighths and seven-eighths.

Oklahoma Legion Builds Model Home For Children of Disabled Veterans EVERY child of every Oklahoma boy who was killed or disabled during the World War is going to be provided a permanent and comfortable home, under plans sponsored by the American Legion in Oklahoma. E. W. Marland, Ponca City, Oklahoma millionaire, is the father of the movement. He already has contributed more than $100,000, having donated a 10-acre site and erected the first billet of the American Legion Home School, adjacent to his new million-dollar home and game refuge. W. H. McFadden, business partner of Marland, donated the second billet, and these two were dedicated recently when nearly 20,000 Oklahoma ex-servicemen were present to witness the ceremony at which deeds for the property were turned over to the American Legion. To Care for 500 Forty needy children, the dependents of Oklahoma boys who were killed or disabled during the war, have already been installed in the home-school. Plans anticipate caring for 500 children, a recent survey having shown that that number are eligible to admission. Miss K. M. Jolly, a graduate of Orange Memorial hospital, Orange, N. J., and an overseas nurse during the World War, is director in charge of the home-school. Plans have already been started for five additional buildings, including an administration building, central dining hall, school building, and other necessities. While in Pender this week, J. H. Kemp, local democrat, stopped to see Mark Murray of the Pender Times, and he found he had gone to the Minnesota lakes. We would say that during the stress of a political campaign is no time for the leader of Thurston county democracy to leave home.

We are pleased to note that the first page of the Wayne Herald from an issue published in the spring of last year appears on the cover of a current bulletin of the University of Nebraska, featuring the journalism department. The page sets forth many of Wayne's doings and prospects at the time and is desirable additional advertising for the town.

Many everywhere heard reports of progress of the Tunney-Heyny fight Thursday night, and the only experience worse than listening would have been to sit at the ringside and watch the exchange of savage blows. The pay to participants may warrant the punishment suffered, but we can see nothing of value to society in such an exhibition of brutality. We would like to see civilization step up to a point where pugilistic bouts between world champions or others would fall through lack of interest and support.

RETROSPECTIVE.
Former Governor S. R. McKelvie, publisher of the Nebraska Farmer, gives to the public an interesting letter written by his father who is just entering his eightieth year, and who has been on a Clay county farm for nearly fifty years. This worthy octogenarian who is still active on his place, contrasts farm conditions now with what they were in the early "Nineties." He says crops of all kinds this year are exceptional, and that corn promises to equal the bumper yield of 1896. The following excerpt from his letter remind us that we are not so bad off as we are sometimes led to believe: "While corn was worth only 10 cents per bushel in the fall and winter of 1896, we were glad to have it, and we did not cry out much for farm relief. We still had in mind two years before when the hot winds in July burned our corn crop up in two days in earing time. Of course, a load of corn in '96 brought only about $2.50 or $3.00, and did not buy much coal, but we had plenty of feed for our stock and cobs to burn. In that year, I cribbed about 5,000 bushels of corn from a hundred acres. In addition to this, I borrowed some money and bought 8,000 bushels more from neighbors. "Times were different then. We had in all about $100 worth of machinery to grow the crop in '96: two 14-inch walking plows, a walking lister, a corn planter, and two tongueless cultivators. Now we have a tractor, two-row lister, a three-row go-dig and a two-row cultivator. All we have to do is ride and drive. The cost of the outfit is around $2,000 to $2,500. "For our pleasure trips in the early 'Nineties, we went to town on Memorial Day and the Fourth of July and to Sunday school and church on Sundays, etc., with very little expense. For our business and pleasure trips we had a spring wagon to which we hitched the best road team, and away we went without danger of arrest. Now we have for the same general purposes and a lot of 'etc.' two automobiles of the sedan pattern and one truck. These cost in the neighborhood of $3,000 while the spring wagon cost me $80. You might compare the horse feed against the gas and oil we now buy, and we had to have the tires reset on the spring wagon once in awhile as against the repair or replacement of the rubber tires on our automobiles today."

than any other of the year. distance leads enchantment and the El Dorado seems somewhere else. But anywhere one may go, distance still beckons, and the sensible thing to do, as one frets under accustomed tasks, is to go and see, find new scenes and new experiences, but leave the mornings in shape to return to them, for in the final analysis, after the vicissitudes of travel and after contributing to the daily menial of jiggers and mosquitoes, home and usual employment will be more acceptable and satisfactory than ever.

A report comes from Pennsylvania that forty sheriffs got together recently as members of an association in that state and that their meeting resolved itself into a drunken carousal. The county attorney raised one of the sessions and seized a quantity of liquor. He told the sheriffs what he thought of a lot of law-enforcing officers who were disregarding the law in a most shameful manner. It is an outrage on justice and orderly processes of government to clothe a man with authority to execute the law and then to find that he is breaking the law. It is worse for an officer to violate the law which he has sworn to uphold and enforce than for a private citizen to do so. The forty sheriffs ought to be promptly fired out of places.

The fact that Secretary Kellogg has persuaded fourteen nations to sign his proposed treaty with the United States to outlaw war is considered a long step in the direction of permanent peace and a distinct triumph for American statesmanship. Germany was the first to sign the treaty, followed by other leading nations of Europe. In the treaty it is agreed that all differences that may arise shall be settled by "pacific means." Any dispute that cannot be settled without resort to armed force, ought to remain unsettled, as people of the different nations will agree and should insist. Provision is made, however, for each nation to employ arms in self-defense in case of invasion or attack. If given a chance to express themselves it would be found that the citizens of no civilized nation want war and that they would yield to any reasonable compromise to avoid it. More and more people are becoming convinced that war as a means to arrive at conclusions in international disputes is a colossal mistake.

Business.
Sioux City Journal: Midsommer business is far stronger than was expected by the most optimistic forecasters earlier in the year. Beginning in June there was a perceptible increase in the movement of goods, which, of course, called for a steady production in industry to supply demand. This increase has continued and is now under way. Business has almost finished the month of July with a constant improvement. Freight car loadings, steel and iron activity, motor car sales, merchandising, building and employment tell the story of the sound economic condition now prevailing throughout the country. Instead of business running into a slack season as might have been expected owing to the fact that it was a presidential year, and also that the country generally was returning to normal there has been under way all the time a strengthening process. Business is now actually stronger than it was in March, April and May.

The federal reserve bank in the Ninth district has reported that the situation in the north-west is the best improved as it faces the last five months of the year. The crop year ends this month, and the farm income for that period in the district is reported 17 per cent in excess of the preceding year. That means

STOP SIGNS.
Importance of stop signs along main highways and of due observance of them was emphasized near Omaha Sunday when a young man was instantly killed. His brother who was driving, failed to heed the warning and crashed into a passing car. Besides the one fatality, several were seriously injured. The offending driver said he forgot the road sign and did not see the approaching automobile. While it is advisable for a motorist who is keeping clearly within his rights, to be on the alert for any one who may be inattentive or reckless, he has reason to expect that travelers will stop before going on the highway. Even with a clear view of the highway on either side for a considerable distance, it is a violation of the law to disregard stop signs, and those who are in the habit of doing so under any conditions run the risk of arrest and prosecution. Also taking chances may result in death or life-long injuries. Always keeping within the law gives greatest assurance of safety and of a clear conscience. If a motorist is not familiar with the rules of the road it is unable to remember what to do or what not to do, he should not be permitted to drive. One who is allowed at the wheel of an automobile in these days of much travel, ought to have all his mental faculties working with no abatement of attention until the car stops. The time may come when it will be necessary to require evidence of competency on the part of a driver with a bond to insure responsibility.

that trade is bound to be better, and the movement of goods in the district has proved it. A larger volume of business, fewer failures, a stronger rural banking condition and increases in investment holdings are noted. Meanwhile, with a stronger general condition in the farming area of the middle west and almost ideal weather for growing crops, agriculture is now looking forward to marked improvement in the fall. Corn, according to present indications, will produce a banner crop in every important corn state. In Iowa and Nebraska the outlook is most promising. Good reports are had from Illinois. Plenty of moisture and high temperatures without accompanying hot winds have brought corn along amazingly. If corn now survives next month without a drought a banner crop may be expected. Everywhere there seems to be more confidence in the business situation. Few sections are complaining. The times are far better than some politicians would have the people believe. Nineteen twenty-eight will come close to the showing made last year if it does not exceed it. With the general business movement constantly gaining momentum through the summer and with nothing threatening to interfere in the fall, complete recovery for the year is believed to be possible.

The Pioneer's Word.
Lincoln Journal: The pioneer's word is reputed to have been as good as his bond, or better. When he gave his word he made his utmost effort to keep it. Take the matter of payment of debts. If the pioneer, or at least a large portion of his class, gave his word that he would pay a debt he did so. The banker knows this better than anyone. Many small town Nebraska bankers started in the business at a time when their customers were predominately pioneers. In those days a banker often had among his customers, a number of hardy, trustworthy pioneers to whom he lent money without security. To ask some of these men to sign a note would have been to insult them and if they had no intention of paying, the note had little significance. The present day banker, however, can testify that times have changed. The Nebraska pioneer has almost passed from the ranks of active business. Many of his sons have also passed and the third generation is active in the business world. These latter were raised under less rugged circumstances and their code of business morals is not so highly developed as that of their ancestors. The banker of today very rarely lends money without security. Even then he experiences difficulty in collecting at times. Even his most trusted customers feel no offense at being required to sign a note or make a property statement.

This change does not necessarily indicate that the present generation is less honest than its predecessors. They have grown up under less strenuous conditions. They are not hardened against misfortune and adversity and they fall prey to the temptation to beat their creditor more readily than their ancestors, when hard times or ill luck are experienced.

Returns From Farming.
York Republican: What does the average farm return to the owner in net profits? Some figures just released by the federal department of agriculture throw some light upon this question. The department in 1927 surveyed 13,859 farms scattered over the country. The average size of these farms was 275 acres. The average investment was $15,445. Average gross receipts were $2,505, consisting of $987 from the sale of crops, $851 from live stock, $638 from live stock products and $39 from miscellaneous items. The average expense on these farms was $1215, which left a net profit to the farmer of $1290.

With an investment of $15,000 and the amount of labor required to do the necessary labor on the farm, $1290 a year seems pretty small. The return is not anywhere what it should be. But if the average return of the country should be surveyed it would be discovered that the lot of the business man in the country town is not more productive than that of his neighbor on the farm. It is exceedingly doubtful if any business of moderate size is returning to its owner $1290, after the expenses of operation are deducted.

There is a farm problem. But there is also a business problem. It is the problem of adjusting time-worn methods of producing profits to present day conditions which call for expenditures for living that were not known twenty years ago. Every farmer, every business man, every laborer is feeling the pinch of conditions which seem to manacle him, hand and foot, and render him incapable of making the profit in his business relations to which he is unjustly entitled.

The conditions which obtain will never be cured by legislative enactments. The cures will be found after an adjustment of living with the speed of these times has been made. No one can say when that will be for the pace is still fast and furious. But when the farmer's dollar and the business man's dollar and the laborer's dollar matches the value of the industrial, the investor's and speculator's dollar, the time of economic equality will be at hand.

Save by taking the State Journal, the only big morning newspaper in Nebraska selling Daily with Sunday for less than $7 a year, or daily only for less than $5 a year. The State Journal is $4 a year daily, or $5 a year with Sunday. The State Journal of Lincoln is the only morning newspaper

The State Journal has the only complete 24-hour newspaper publishing plant in this territory and is the only one printing after 5 p. m. each day and night. Journal readers get the latest news by the earliest trains no matter where they live.

Lincoln is nearer 774 of the 914 railroad stations in Nebraska than any other large publishing center, and so is the Journal. Nebraskans look to Lincoln, the capital city, and the State Journal for the best state news.

The State Journal hauls by auto early every morning to Fremont and there puts its papers on the fast mail trains of the Union Pacific and Northwestern and in this way gives unequalled service in this part of the state.

Market Report.

Furnished by Steele, Siman & Co., Sioux City Stock Yards.

August 2.—Unevenness has been noted in live stock markets this week. Bearishness has ruled the general cattle and sheep markets while hogs have gone down and up.

The 11 leading markets of the country received 106,400 cattle the first two days this week, 14,100 more than last Monday and Tuesday. Good and choice yearlings have held a firm basis and prices have reached the highest level of the season. However, plain and medium grades of light weight cattle have suffered short declines. There have not been many weighty steers offered but this was good for the trade as this class was discriminated against and prices slumped about a quarter.

Mixed yearling steers and heifers topped the market at $16.50, a new top for the season. Good light cattle sold at $15.00 to 16.00 with fair grades at $14.00 to 15.00 and plain lots down to $13.00 and under. Strong weight steers sold at $13.00 to 15.00 with the best quoted higher.

The butcher stock market has held a firm basis this week. Supplies have been limited and demands have been good from both shippers and packers. Some of the medium cows have been a rather slow sale.

Fed heifers were quoted at $12.00 to $16.00 with cows at $11.00 to $12.50. Grass heifers were quoted at $10.00 to $12.00 with cows at $7.00 to 10.50. Bulk of the cullers and low cutters ranged at $6.00 to 7.00.

Veals have held a steady basis. Selected light weights sold at $13.50 to independents and topped at $12.00 to big packers. Bulls have strengthened a trifle. Thin bologny sold at $7.25 to 8.00 with fleshy grades at $8.25 to 8.75 and beef grades at $9.00 to 10.00. Yearling and butcher bulls sold at $10.00 to 12.00.

Demands were broad for stockers and feeders of good quality early this week and prices were strong with spots a quarter higher. Some of the plainer grades were slow, as usual, and sold about steady. Inquiry from the country has not been broad, owing to the fact that farmers have been too busy with their field work.

A good class of feeders sold at $12.00 to $12.30 with choice kinds quoted to $13.00 and better. Fair to good fleshy steers sold at $11.00 to 12.00. Bulk of the stockers sold at $10.50 to 11.50 with plainer lots at $9.00 to 10.00 and a few cuts down to $8.00. Stock cows sold largely at $7.00 to 7.50 with heifers at $9.00 to 10.50, topping at $11. The 11 leading markets received 172,590 hogs on Monday and Tuesday, 26,200 more than last week and 29,600 short of the like period a year ago.

Monday's receipts were too heavy and the market took a 15 to 25 c loss. However, lighter receipts and broader demands caused a 15 to 25 c advance, Tuesday with most rules up a quarter and spots, 25 c up $11, within a quarter of the highest price of the season. Bulk of the butchers of all weights sold at $10.50 to 10.85. Bulk of the sows sold at $9.80 to $9.85 with a few to $10.00 and down to $9.25 and under. Stags sold at $9.25 and under. Feeding pigs sold at $9.00 to $9.75 and feeding sows at $8.50 to 9.00.

Garden Flourishes on Solid Rock

This beautiful garden was built on a solid rock by Frank Strausser of San Diego, Cal. (Inset). Seven hundred sticks of dynamite and 700 loads of earth were used in the preliminary work. Experts have pronounced the garden a marvel. There are 250 species of fruits and flowers and of these 75 are roses. Strausser has developed several unusual plants, including a rose bush bearing blossoms of three different colors.

Organization Brings Bigger Profits to Oklahoma Egg Producers

WHEN farmers in Payne county, Oklahoma, are getting 18 cents a dozen for eggs, some of their neighbors in Oklahoma county, not many miles away, receive an average of 26 1/2 cents a dozen.

When a Payne county farmer takes his eggs to town he has no idea where he will sell them. Oklahoma county farmers do not worry about a market. They do no bargain hunting. They deliver their eggs to a designated place, take a receipt for the number and attend to other business.

The reason for this state of affairs is the Oklahoma County Egg Producers Association, of which H. A. Harmon of Stillwater is president.

In one 26-week period this association sold 804,600 eggs. The association has thirty members who own more than 20,000 laying hens.

Keep Breeding Eggs

While the association gives its members top prices, the members, in turn, have definite obligations to the association. Each signs a contract, agreeing to supply the association all the eggs he produces on his farm, except those he uses for food or breeding and those he sells for breeding purposes.

The manager of the association caddles every egg received. These that are infertile, clean and of an acceptable size are graded and packed in special cases for marketing.

The problem of marketing the eggs lies wholly with the manager. An association eggs are recognized everywhere in the territory as being of high quality, he usually has no difficulty in getting top prices.

Sometimes he falls back on cold storage. Early in the fall the best the manager could get was $4.60 a crate for eggs. So he made an arrangement with a banker to loan $5.00 a crate and put them in cold storage.

More After Storage

Late in November they were taken out of cold storage and sold for $12.00 a crate. The banker got his $5.00 and interest on each crate and each member was sent almost $7.00 a crate for eggs he had in storage.

For this accommodation the manager deducts his fee for handling the eggs and an additional half cent a dozen for the association fund. Checks are mailed to the members every Saturday night for the eggs they have turned in during the week. The manager furnishes his own central handling station, supplies the caddling machine and the labor, takes care of the special crates and markets the eggs.

Caddling of all eggs and their proper marketing bring big returns to Oklahoma farmers under leadership of H. A. Harmon, inset.

A FAT BATTING AVERAGE DOESN'T ALWAYS MEAN A REGULAR JOB WITH A MAJOR LEAGUE CLUB—ONCE A HITTER, ALWAYS A HITTER.

BY PHILIP MARTIN

AS examples of the theory that a fat batting average doesn't always mean a regular job with a major league club, we cite the cases of Goose Goslin, Eddie Morgan and Larry Bettencourt.

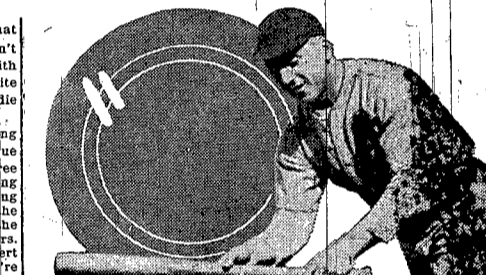

Just a glance at the batting averages of the American League suffices to show that these three players are boasting swatting marks which include them among the 15 leading hitters of the league—and one of them is the leader—but they are not regulars.

And it doesn't take any expert on baseball to explain why they're sitting on the bench and enacting the role of pinchhitters more than regulars.

You can dismiss Goslin easily—a bad arm which is not bad that a 400 batting average isn't enough to keep that bad arm in there. Lack of experience explains both Morgan and Bettencourt. Goslin's hitting was needed by the Senators and Manager Bucky Harris thought Shortstop Reeves could run out to left field and throw in for Goslin every time a ball went out there. But that caddying job got the best of Reeves and he began to wear down and suffer—so Harris benched Goslin in order to prevent ruining one of the best shortstoppers in the circuit.

Morgan came up from the Southern Association and was touted as one of the best prospects unearthed by major league clubs this year. He has had his chance at center field and at third base and his .345 mark with the club isn't enough to warrant his playing either position regularly. He can't field. Now, the Indians are talking about playing him at first base. At any rate, there's something wrong and it isn't his hitting.

Bettencourt jumped right from college without any minor league seasoning to the Browns and was thrown in at third base. He did well. He hit hard and he had who was valued out of the American League last year. Davey Robertson, who saw service with the Giants many seasons ago, is tearing down the fences in an eastern league.

Yam Yaryan, who couldn't stand the grade with the White Sox, is the best pitcher in the Southern Association.

Bobby Veach, the old Detroit, is one of the most respected hitters in the American Association.

And in practically every minor organization you run across the name of some former major leaguer who hit well while up and who is still making something when they swing!

CONCERNING THAT LITTLE ARGUMENT BETWEEN DR. SUMNER HARDY AND BIG BILL TILDEN—HIS EARLIER WRITINGS GOT BY ALL RIGHT

BY PHILIP MARTIN

POOR BILL Tilden! He does have his troubles.

After withstanding all the barages of eastern tennis officials for years, Big Bill was dropped from the Davis Cup team on one blast from Dr. Sumner Hardy, president of the Pacific coast district of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

And then, after much had been said in defense of Bill and it looked like he would not be reinstated for the matches with the French Davis Cup team—Big Bill was reinstated!

Tilden was dropped from the team because of expert pieces written for the papers on the Wimbledon tournament, which were read and disliked by Dr. Hardy in San Francisco and which caused that gentleman to complain that Bill was violating the amateur rule for writing.

And he was reinstated, so officials say, because the French demanded it.

Of course, we're glad that Bill was able to get in the Davis Cup matches, but somehow or other we don't understand all the squabble. Bill had done nothing so terrible that he hadn't done before and the action in barring Bill seemed more like a gesture of righteousness than to leave possible those "ifs" from it.—Marion Star.

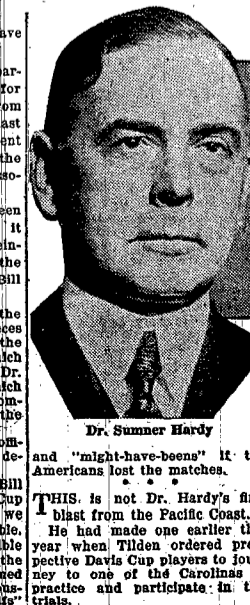

At the time, Dr. Hardy said the national association was making bumps out of our tennis players by ordering them around away from school to stage trial matches in order to clog the members of the team.

WHEN news that Tilden had been fired from the team reached the players, young George Lott was all in favor of starting a strike, but was talked out of that by Tilden. Now, we wonder what Bill Myrick and his associates who want to run the tennis association as they see fit will do to him when he comes back.

There's a bit of rebel in young Lott, and he's also a writer of newspaper stories on tennis. Young Lott's stories have been confined to general things, however, and he hasn't covered any tournaments yet. But the officials investigated his writings before he left and couldn't get anything on him except that he was using his title as third ranking player under his name and they made him stop that.

It's a clinch that Myrick and his cohorts will have something to say to Lott when he gets back. Merely because it is dangerous to say anything but "yes" to Myrick.

And we wonder what Lott will say if Myrick does get him on the carpet. There's no telling, because Lott usually says his piece, and he might say it to Myrick, regardless of all his power.

It's Time to Be Thinking of Fall

HARRIET SUGGESTS THAT ONE WAY TO KEEP COOL DURING THE HOT MONTHS IS TO PLAN CLOTHES FOR THE COOL ONES AHEAD

BY HARRIET

ONE way of keeping cool in hot weather is to keep busy thinking of something pleasant.

If nothing else offers itself, I suggest that some of August's days be given over to planning the autumn wardrobe. Planning in advance is one sure way to save and to succeed in having a much more complete line of wearing apparel than can be had by desultory buying.

Plan Ahead

You may not know what kind of coat you want this fall. But there are certain things you are sure to want. By planning ahead you may either be able to pick them up at sales at the better shops. Or you can buy your material and make them yourself.

Under this category come party frocks, all kinds of underwear and negligees and those most useful of all wearing apparel, the "little dresses."

Blue Always Good

While browns may come into vogue with a rush this autumn blue is and will always be good. Therefore, if you aren't sure what color of brown you will want, why not try a blue slightly lighter than a navy?

Materials for fall will either be some of the new very sheer woolsens, like asperles, or silks. Crepes stand a better chance of being favorites than satins do. Therefore, why not choose one silk dress and one of wool, tulle or wool georgette?

I show today two "little dresses."

That are eminently correct and that have that additional dash of chic that all women crave in their clothes.

Flounces Unusual

This frock uses the very tight hipline with double circular volants posed on a flaring skirt. The line of the flounces is unusual, rounding up on the right side, for novelty, caught at the waist by an unusual ornament of aquamarine beads.

The blouse has a small V-neck with the inset of white over one shoulder simulating a scarf.

Sleeves of tailored smartness have an unusual banding of white marking a pointed cuff.

The back of this blouse has more fullness than the front. And the flounces dip in the back, in the same way that they do in front.

New Ruffled Line

On the right, I show a very new "little dress" of rich golden brown woolen georgette, a material almost as sheer and pliable as silk georgette.

Here we have the new ruffled ethnettes with five full little ruffles flaring out around the skirt and these turning round corners to suggest a ruffled line on the left side.

The sleeves have two ruffles all their own. And to complete the ruffling, a collar of a new material, metal mesh, has on its outer edge an ecrû and brown tulle ruffle.

Both of these "little dresses" are very new. Either would give a woman great confidence, whether she actually wore it or whether she merely took pride in having it hanging in her closet, waiting for the first frosty air.

Now Wedding Gowns Permit Originality

GONE ARE THE DAYS WHEN BRIDES MUST CHOOSE A PARTICULAR TYPE OF COSTUME—THEY'RE NO LONGER "PUT AWAY IN LAVENDER"

BY HARRIET

"HERE comes the bride," will create more of a stir than ever among spectators this June.

For brides are allowed so much leeway in their choice of wedding gowns this season that originality is at a premium. A bride can be old-fashioned and have the traditional white satin built on classic lines. Or she can be modern and have off-white satin or chiffon, lace, tulle, crepe or even organdy. Bridal gowns have changed their characteristics since the old days. Worn once they used to be put away as mementoes of the "day of days" and proof that once grandmother had a waist that could be spanned by two hands.

Lace Gowns Favored Now they are designed to give use afterwards. A bridal gown that cannot be worn at parties afterwards is hard to find today.

Of all the gowns of today, the newest is probably the lace wedding gown. If one would be practical at her wedding, and the trend of the times is to be practical, she would rather than her gown did not divert her purse. On the left is pictured a wedding gown fashioned of white rayon lace that is an admirable choice for the June bride. Its three main points of chic are its uneven hemline, its bolero which follows the downward slope of the skirt, and its becoming V-neck which accents the backward slope.

This gown has a very strikingly kept in a slender silhouette, by having it gathered onto a fitted yoke. The sleeves are long and flare to mit-cuffs. Its pattern is in all-over rose and leaf design.

With a gown as effective as this all-over pattern, one should affect a simple veil. White tulle, gathered into a cap that has orange blossoms at each ear for luck, is ideal. It is very feminine looking, has a fresh crispness becoming to youthful brides and is inexpensive.

If one is to be married in the evening, she may desire a sleeveless gown that can be worn to parties later. White satin is a good choice for this. And there is a rayon satin this season that has the lustrous beauty brides crave. Juttied Silhouette Is Good

One good style for this kind of bridal gown is the juttied silhouette, shown on the right. This has the molded bodice and two or three puffs of the satin at and below the hip-line.

Necks may be square, modestly rounded, or the new neckline which is wide on the shoulders and then points to a V in the front. With the satin gown one needs a more ornate veil. If there is lace in the family that can be combined with net or tulle to make a veil, so much the better.

Usually Miss Moran wears eccentric clothes, so that the public probably has never seen her in any but "character" costume. One would hardly recognize her as the same Polly, in the neatly designed and tasteful costume she wears as the society woman in the new picture.

Her costume is a blue affair, trimmed, a smart fur, and a small hat such as is being worn today. Has "Dressed-Up" Role In Picture

Polly Moran, comedienne, and delineator of eccentric roles, played her first "dressed up" role in years, and incidentally proved what clothes can do toward making the woman, when she enacted a society dowager in "Detectives," new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy, co-starring Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, and coming next Sunday and Monday, August 5 and 6, to the Crystal Theatre.

Usually Miss Moran wears eccentric clothes, so that the public probably has never seen her in any but "character" costume. One would hardly recognize her as the same Polly, in the neatly designed and tasteful costume she wears as the society woman in the new picture.

THIS BUSINESS of BUYING TIRES

The tire buyer today is deflected by the claims of rival manufacturers. Everybody is yelling "bargain," "discount," "allowance," "guarantees" and "service"—all tricks of the trade.

The car owner is surrounded by superlatives—bewildered by claims.

Compared to tires of other years, doubtless many of these statements are true. Competition has made better tires.

But in comparing tires today, the buyer who seeks his money's worth must consider one significant fact.

It stands out alone, unchallenged and triumphant.

It is this:

MORE PEOPLE BUY GOODYEAR TIRES THAN ANY OTHER KIND

To maintain this popularity, each year, for more than ten years, Goodyear has made and sold more tires than any other manufacturer.

Goodyear leadership has been earned and kept by building a tire worthy of the world's largest manufacturer of rubber. It is backed by worldwide service of the same high character—courtous, expert, and in your interest.

Goodyear Tires won their supremacy upon the road where claims are proved by performance.

This incontestable fact means something to men who buy tires intelligently.

Over one hundred million Goodyear Tires have been sold.

A hundred million buyers can't be wrong.

Writes Of Trip Across Atlantic

Dr. Weldon Crossland of Pontiac, Mich., Describes Sights on Way to Europe.

Voyage On Sea

Tells of Experiences on Ship and in Places of Interest in British Isles.

Dr. Weldon Crossland of Pontiac, Mich., who is touring Europe this summer with Palestine as his objective, writes his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Crossland of Wayne, as follows:

St. Lawrence Flashlights.—Hardly half a dozen of the eight hundred passengers of our 16,000 ton ship "Regina" were on deck as at dawn—four-thirty—we quickly slipped away from the dock and down through the white mist of the St. Lawrence River toward the Atlantic.

Behind us, Montreal, Mt. Royal which sometimes called it, with its magnificent and highly ornate Notre Dame Cathedral, seating 10,000; the smaller but rich and highly influential United Church, formerly the American Presbyterian, to which Dr. Lynn Harold Hough will come as pastor in October; McGill University, one of the best medical schools in the continent, and towering over all the stately mountain, crowned with its 100 foot electric cross, truly a royal mountain. It's an excellent city, but there is no place like home.

Ahead, two days of picturesque and varied beauty such as one sees but a few times in a lifetime.

French villages, with the peace and contentment of Arcadia blessing them. The slender, graceful tower of the parish church, always the tallest building, pointing heavenward. Houses, clean and white, nestling near or scattered along the shore. Cliffs, fresh and green. Abrupt cliffs on either shore over which hundreds of silver ribbon-like waterfalls gracefully slip down to the edge of the river.

Quebec and the Heights of Abraham. What a consummate courtier Wolfe had to scold those shrewd rocks at night. Little did he know that his victory deeply influenced the future of the continent, giving the directions of its destinies to the British rather than the French.

We all regret that there is no time to land, to visit among other places of interest, the Shrine of St. Anne de Beau Pre.

Fog, and we slow down to five knots—nearly six miles—an hour. Once we stop. That fog-horn would raise the dead. That answering roar on the left is one of the stationary signal ships. It has the most bestial roar, ending in a grunt as if some gigantic seal lion were searching for us.

The fog lifts and we see Greenley Island, where the German Count and his trans-Atlantic airplane party landed. Just a light-house and a few rocks.

The Straights of Belle Isle, the outlet to the sea for what we hope sometime will be the Great-Lakes-to-the-sea waterway. Labrador. There has always been a romance to that country ever since that Christian doctor, Grenfell, made those poor fishermen of that cold, bleak coast his people. His ministry to their bodies and souls is one of the most beautiful services now being rendered anywhere in the name of love.

Atlantic Flashlights.—Fog again, and the sailors say there are ice bergs ahead. I hope we see them but do not strike them. A strong wind springs up, and it stayed with us for five days—coming from the Arctic north, from Greenland's icy mountains or some colder place.

Our first iceberg. The sun comes out again and as we pass it not half a mile away we are thrilled with its beauty. Flaming white where the sun strikes it. A great towering crystal cathedral. In the shadows, pale blue, emerald, whitish-green if there is any such color. A thing of deadly beauty, the chief enemy of the sailor. I think of the Noble party adrift on an ice floe, and wonder if they have yet been rescued. Our ship sighted thirty-one in the two days we were among them.

The Atlantic is really a great place, but your view of it will doubtless depend on how you feel. That graceful swell, that diffused glow, that white-crested wave that ripples sunset, those gilded clouds, that passing rain, the brusque music of the north wind—all sound splendidly in poetry; I've seen quite a number on board who apparently did not fully appreciate all the wonders and beauties of the sea all the time. Personally I had the most delightful of voyages, never missing a meal.

Rain ahead of us and the sun behind us in the late afternoon. A glorious double rainbow spanning the sky; and as we enter the rain I have the exquisite pleasure of seeing from the bow of the ship a complete and perfect rainbow circle—the first one I've ever seen. Airmen flying into a cloud often see the perfect circle of varied colors.

Those useless gulls followed all the way over. I watched one for over half an hour as with motionless wings he rode the fifty knot an hour north wind. Sometimes within a few inches of the water, they again a hundred feet in the air. I can now understand how little effort they require to follow us. The stormy petrel and several flocks of those plump brown-backed water fowl called "Mother Carey's Chickens" were the only signs of life we saw.

The Crow's Nest, correctly called "The Look-out", that small box-like affair high on the front mast—is one place on an ocean liner I had not seen. Uninvited I found the entrance, and after climbing fifty feet inside the hollow mast I reached the top. The lonesome look-out welcomed me gladly, and for nearly two hours we talked and watched. One gets on a clear day a twenty-five mile view.

"Land." A word we all had been hoping to hear. And it was indeed hailed at us. The Emerald Isle, which has furnished America with more policemen and politicians than any other country. The famous Isle of Man, which Hall Cain has immortalized in his books; the distant coast of Scotland; the mountains of Wales and Merly England—we could see them all within a few hours.

Liverpool, with its miles of docks and its sea of masts and funnels. England could live but a few months without her ships. Just over there on the left is the pilot ship. So dangerous is the channel up the Mersey river that special pilots are provided.

What a wonderful building that new Liverpool cathedral is! It has been a number of years building on the abandoned site of an old stone quarry. All creeds and sects are with hearty cooperation joining their wishes and their gifts in the erection of this symbol of the soul of the city of Liverpool. It will stand for the things that abide, and will be many more years before completed.

London Flashlights.

"London Bridge is falling down," sings the old song. Not the bridge today, but hundreds and even thousands of buildings, to make place for larger, taller, better ones. London is always building, but never on such a scale as now. Taxes may be high; the dole may keep the very poor and unemployed from starving to death; and Dean Inge, of St. Paul's Cathedral, formerly called the "Gloomy Dean," may prophesy the disintegration of the British Empire and the eclipse of England; but the business men of England are finding the money somewhere, and they have confidence in the future of Britain. No high buildings, that is not over eight or ten stories.

Those war debts, for which America courteously but firmly requested payment, are in the background of the thinking Englishman's attitude toward America. It is not markedly less friendly; it just is slightly irritable. They are cordial to us all; they receive us with open arms, and the tourists in no small way assist these Britishers in paying off that debt.

Most of us have almost lost our lives a dozen times as a result of the confusion in the traffic. All buses and automobiles pass on the left, and of course we have to put our mental machinery into reverse. Rather difficult the first day. What genius these bobbies show in handling traffic. That raised arm stops everything. Although the speed limit seems to be the same as that of Fenland, even in the busiest of the business section, I have yet to see a wreck, a collision or any broken glass on the street. Why is it? Lighter cars, better brakes, a conservative Englishman at the wheel, and perhaps a dozen other reasons.

Westminster Abbey.

"If we had that old pile of stone over in our country," said one unspeakable American member of our Church Touring Guild party, "we would have torn it down years ago and put up something modern in its place." The English guide, a graduate of Cambridge university and a colonel in the World War, only smiled, but I felt like choking that fellow countryman from South Carolina. The Abbey is the heart of England, the national shrine. It's the burial place of England's ancient kings and of many of her greatest sons. They had been heavily barricaded with sand bags the last time I saw them in 1916 for the sake of protection against Zeppelin bombs.

The Poets' Corner, perhaps the favorite spot of Americans. The bust of Longfellow, with that gracious inscription indicating that it was presented by the British admirers of an American poet, is typical of the fine spirit and gentlemanliness of the Englishman at his best. The great statue of Lincoln near the Abbey and that of Washington near Trafalgar Square reveal more clearly than words the attitude of England toward our own country. A tablet to Lowell and another to Walter Hines Page grace the chapter house. I have not yet heard of any movement being started to secure a bust or statue of the mayor of Chicago, whom they look upon as the chief political clown of America. I wish many of our own people took him no more seriously than they do over here.

Marble busts of Shakespeare, Milton, Scott, Browning and scores of others bring vividly to one's mind the richness of the language we borrowed from the mother country.

It is one of the deepest disappointments of my trip that I did not get to sit for even one brief moment in the Coronation chair, in which all kings and queens of Britain sit when crowned. After waiting about fifteen minutes, until "the coast was clear" I tried to crawl through the wood-paneled railing that had five sizes smaller I should have sat where the kings have sat. As it was impossible to take the railing apart, and as people were constantly coming, I had to give up. Next time I shall be more fortunate, I hope.

Flashlight of War.

In the Abbey, near the main entrance I found what to me was one of the most significant memorials in the entire building, and the grave of the Unknown Soldier.

"Beneath this stone," it reads, "rests the body of a British Warrior, unknown by name or rank. Buried here on Armistice day, 11th November, 1920. Unknown and yet well-known. They buried him among the Kings because he hath done good toward God and toward his house."

It is a solemn spot near which the British rarely speak aloud. At the top of the slab was a gorgeous wreath of red, white and yellow roses, at least one yard across it.

Just below it at the edge was a spray of paper poppies with quite a different inscription, one which brought the tears to my eyes: "Lest We Forget. From a bereaved mother of St. Cyprian's" church, Salford, Manchester." The paths and tragedy of it! In imagination I saw a million mothers, sisters, wives or sweethearts whose hearts suffered that sad separation, and I saw those million Britons who gave their lives in the struggle. How could one help swearing eternal hatred of war? And as an American I could not help feeling humble in the presence of this sacrifice, which according to population was in mortality, twenty-five times as great as our own.

"Glorified Debating Society."

"When an Englishman wishes to be sarcastic about the House of Commons he speaks of it as a 'glorified debating society.'" They do a lot of talking there, to which nobody listens. Sometimes they have a genuinely exciting passage of verbal arms, and occasionally they employ the fistic method, but entirely unknown in our own United States senate.

The two hours I spent in the gallery of the House were among the most profitable in London. There was the premier, Mr. Baldwin, who seemed not to hear any of the abusive attacks on his party, the conservative. Why should he worry, with a margin of over a hundred and sixty votes? Let the opposition talk; it could do no harm.

The iron-gray Ramsey MacDonald was there also, as the leader of the opposition or labor group. The program of the labor party which he issued yesterday, is generally regarded as a statesmanlike document. The labor party in England has a well-thought out philosophy, one that has been evolving through the past several decades. American labor circles, if they ever expect to exercise an influence commensurate with their numbers, must work out a similar program. Only economic necessity, which is a long way off, will make this possible.

Lloyd George, who was prime minister during the war days, was absent from the house. I remember him often, with his feet on the table, during the days of his power, as he too had listened to the warnings and criticisms of his political opponents.

They are voting on the measure to reduce certain of the taxes on mines in Scotland. The viva voce vote of those in favor cannot be heard—there are only half a dozen of the conservatives in the house. They do not think it worth while to vote audibly. The noisy shouts of "No" from over a hundred opposition throats would cause any normal American to believe that the motion had just. The chairman says "I believe the 'Ayes' have it." "No," the other side answers. "I believe the 'Ayes' have it," he patiently repeats, and in one case he kept on repeating this simple statement until there was no opposing vote—seven times I believe. "The 'Ayes' have it and the motion is passed," he said with a slight smile.

Everybody knew that if the whole House were called to vote, they vote by leaving the House of Commons Hall and by passing by a voting place, either on the right or the left,—the vote would be two hundred and fifty or sixty to one hundred and twenty.

I've never seen a political steamroller work so fast and so effectively. No possibility of a deadlock.

Bee-News, Now Hearst Owned, Bigger, Better

Omaha in Metropolitan Class. Sunday Paper With Big Magazine Section at 10 Cents.

The Omaha Bee-News takes its place today alongside the newspapers of the nation's great metropolitan cities. It was taken over as of August 1, by William Randolph Hearst and thus has become a Hearst newspaper with all that that means in the way of aggressive newspaper leadership.

The Omaha Bee-News thus becomes a greater Omaha Bee-News. It will have available, and will give to its readers the full benefit of the world wide Hearst newspaper organization, the most comprehensive and alert.

The newspaper under its new ownership will continue to be a champion of the cause of the middle west. The Hearst newspapers in every city where they are published are fighting newspapers. Progressive in politics with a liberal outlook these newspapers have made a constructive impress upon the communities in which they are published.

This fighting spirit of the Hearst organization, with all its resources, now becomes linked with the long history of the fighting spirit of The Omaha Bee-News with its wide knowledge of the needs of the middle west.

Omaha will particularly benefit by this broadened scope of The Bee-News, and all of Nebraska will benefit likewise. With a truly metropolitan newspaper Omaha will take on more of the character of a metropolis. There will come to Omaha a wider appreciation of its opportunities and its obligations.

Bigger Things for Omaha.

Omaha is entering at this time upon a new era of growth and expansion. With the experience of the Hearst newspapers in bigger and broader things, those who know the influence of a fighting newspaper, look forward to an awakening of the people of Omaha, to a stirring of the best within them and to the launching of programs that are essentially a part of America's great cities.

In keeping with the plans for a greater newspaper The Omaha Bee-News will take its place alongside the big dailies in New York and Chicago. The Sunday issue of the paper, for that reason, it is announced, will sell at 10 cents and the daily, either morning or evening, in conjunction with the Sunday will be delivered by carrier at 20 cents a week.

In an announcement to the people attention is called to the fact that The Bee-News "now gives its subscribers the panned thoughts and the genius of the greatest array of the world's highest paid writers. It will publish the most popular features. All made possible by the resources of the world's greatest newspaper organization."

Both Promise and Forecast.

The list of names of writers who will contribute to the greater Omaha Bee-News marks the extent of what is thus both a promise and a forecast. Among them are some friends familiar for years to readers of The Bee-News, Arthur Brisbane, O. O. McIntyre and Damon Runyon. In addition the paper will print regularly material from the pens of such giants as David Lloyd-George, H. G. Wells, Emil Ludwig, Karl von Wiegand, Rupert Hughes, Kathleen Norris, George Bernard Shaw, Guglielmo Ferrero and Dr. Woods Hutchinson. Among the contributors in the field of sport will be Charlie Padlock, James J. Corbett, Lawson Robertson and others.

The Sunday paper will bring to its readers The American Weekly magazine as a regular weekly section. This is the most popular magazine section published. The total circulation of the Sunday newspapers which print it is more than 5,500,000. All these newspapers are sold at 10 cents per copy.

There is a thrill in all of this to the people of the middle west. With a great metropolitan newspaper, a fighting newspaper, a fearless newspaper, much can be accomplished for a great section of the nation whose fighting champions have been all too few.

Very likely "Big Bill" Thompson is reminded of his nickname when the court tells him and his friends to pay back almost a million and three-quarters to the city of Chicago.—Manchester Union.
