THE WORLD OF SPORTS

ANALYZING THAT RACE BETWEEN THE YANKEES AND "NEVER-SAY-DIE" ATHLETICS—HEIMACH MAY BE KEY MAN

BY PHILIP MARTIN THERE is no truer saying in sports, especially in baseball, than you never can tell what may happen next. Who would have thought—say, a few weeks ago—that we were going to have a real pennant race in the American League? And that the Athletics, who have crumbled before the Yanks so often this season, would furnish the opposition? And that Fred Heimach, a Mack castoff, would be the man to answer the Yankers' SOS? But we're on the verge of having one of the best two-team races of years in the American League; and the Athletics are the ones who have the match who has been called to bolster a rapidly weakening pitching staff.

Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, (top) and Fred Heimach, former Mack castoff, whom Huggins recalled from the minors to stop the onrushing Mackmen.

sett out, and the Dugan wasn't any great help at keeping him up. And Uebrig's work has not been as sparkling as it might have been. And, on a whole, the infield cracked. FRED HEIMACH has enjoyed one of the most successful seasons of an American Association pitcher has had in years. Pitching for St. Paul, he has registered victory after victory. He was with the A's several years ago when Connie Mack didn't have much of a ball club. He was quite a pitcher then, and gave promise of becoming a great left hander. Then old hard luck stepped in and he was injured. He couldn't stay around with Mack while getting well, so he drifted to Boston, failed there, and then went on to the minors. He has recovered fully from his injury. The Boston Braves, when Johnny first became manager, tried to get Heimach but their offer of a big bank of cash and several players didn't seem enough. When the Yankees, a big brother to the St. Paul club, asked for him, they got him at some expense, and he's likely to prove the linch of the race to Connie Mack. He's likely to be just the additional pitching strength the Yankers need to repel the threat of the Athletics. And such seems to be about the way it will turn out. These castoffs have a habit of getting with rival clubs and making their former owners sorry they ever turned them away from the pay window.

WITH Lazert out, the Yankees tried using rocky Durocher at

According to the recollection of old settlers, the nearest to a crop failure in Wayne county happened in 1894, and times were already hard that year.

Cemeteries are filling up with motorists who have insisted on their rights. Better to let the other fellow hog the road than run the risk of being transplanted for keeps.

We are doubtless guilty of many inflections, but we are not guilty of trying to convince an indifferent world that we are indispensable and that we arrived just in time to prevent it from slipping backwards.

If we were running the weather we would make a more nearly equal and satisfactory distribution of moisture. We would not flood Florida nor dry up northeast Nebraska. We would give each what it needs and no more. But aside from politicians, we know of no one who would presume to regulate the elements.

We think mid-summer is the most unfavorable time of the year for literary effort. Prolonged heat makes one more dull and less studious. One has few ideas and slight inclination to express them. When autumn fills the air with frost and spreads it over pumpkins and other things, people become reanimated, with revived ambition and sharpened wits. Then they have more thoughts and greater power to reflect them.

Criminals are made, not born, according to Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing, New York, and he adds that criminals outside of prison far outnumber those inside. He thinks the big criminals who escape just deserts, influence smaller ones to regard laws with indifference. As a result of dealing with over 30,000 convicts in twentyfour years, the warden is convinced that society often misjudges men sent to prison and that frequently the worst ones are never caught and never punished.

People who are toothless or partially so, and who are not satisfied with the way their jaws are equipped and reinforced, or those who expect sometime to have their natural grinders drawn and artificial ones installed, will be interested in the snap-on tooth, latest thing in dentistry, announced at a conference of National Dental Laboratory Technicians at Chicago. It is proposed to have teeth that will snap on and off like shirt studs, and the report

ACCEPTS.
 Hearing the acceptance speech of Herbert Hoover, republican presidential nominee, was not restricted to the 75,000 people gathered in the big stadium of Stanford university at Palo Alto, Calif. Through the marvels of the radio, millions throughout the United States and other countries heard it. And the speech, reflecting the wisdom of a world figure, reviewed affairs in a fair, impartial manner, without exaggeration and without attempting to conceal facts or mislead public opinion. It was manifestly the speech of a man possessing a broad understanding of national and international problems, equipped with results of long and valuable experience in the public service. In expressing the opinion that millions in appropriation might well be spent in improving distribution and readjusting market conditions to create a just parity between prices received by farmers and prices paid by them. Several ways—among them, water transportation and tariff rearrangement—were suggested. The speaker was not forgetful of the needs and desires of farming communities, but did not dwell on rosy theories or make extravagant and unworkable promises. The speech is considered a masterly presentation of present day conditions and issues, and without boasting, he indicated the readiness and capacity of a man sent on such leadership would keep American civilization in an onward and upward course.

states that there will be "formal teeth" for dinner wear, snappy snap-ons for the golf links and broad base teeth for making grinding noises at the bridge party.

Wisner whose wideawake people entertained the editors of this part of the state last week, as reported elsewhere in today's Herald, is an old town, but it shows no symptoms of decrepitude or decline. On the contrary, it is full of live wires. It is supported by a rich country and is peopled by intelligent and progressive citizenship. The banquet Friday evening was faultless, and Wisner musical and speech-making talent taking part in the program was of a high order. The more one knows of Wisner, the better he likes it.

Congressman Edgar Howard regards Hoover's acceptance speech as strong in some respects and weak in others, but gives rather more emphasis to the latter than to the former. Our congressman likes Hoover's stand against religious intolerance and in support of law enforcement, but thinks he is so closely associated with big business octopuses that he does not sympathize with the rest of us, which, however, we fear is the view of partisan prejudice rather than that of unbiased reflection on the merits of his utterances. We just suspect that Howard will vote for the other fellow.

If we were permitted to start over again, we would begin early to acquire a broad and firmly rooted education, and with wholesome habits that would insure sound health, we would be able to accomplish more as experience developed. Often young people value time too lightly, and they are slow in settling down to the business of learning. They waste good parts of years that should be devoted to laying a foundation which would facilitate service and speed up and increase production. One who is edging towards the shadows is able to see what could have been done, and it is unfortunate that all young people do not have the foresight to act and prepare themselves before it is too late.

In a town where the local newspaper had a long established policy of giving weddings a column write-up, it happened that one couple, equally as deserving as others in the past, was treated to a trifle less than a half column. This discrimination in quantity led the bride who felt injured, to file suit against the offending newspaper for $20,000 for damages alleged, as we remember. No objection was lodged against the quality of the write-up, but serious violation of custom had struck a terrible blow at the accomplished and otherwise happy couple, inflicting wounds that only a sum of money could repair. The inability that the newspaper lacked usual space on account of surplus advertising would be no excuse for failure to pour out the accustomed quantity of correctly tempered atmosphere in behalf of an event that seldom takes place more than once in a lifetime. This action opens an attractive field in the way of trying to get something for nothing. Any one whose tea parties or other social doings are not dished up according to standard measurements could allege damages and ask for due reparation.

We join the Hartington Herald in resenting criticism touching the personal appearance of our congressman, Edgar Howard. The suggestion that he does not wear socks would be unimportant and no-one would mention it if true. We have known men to wear pants as slick as the polished floor of a skating rink, and they were possessed of finest qualities of mind and heart. We could not regard the dress prescribed by so-called high society, and we would much prefer the social stratum where noses are not lifted if one's coat happens to look as though it had been sandpapered and waxed. The Hartington Herald says: "Congressman Edgar Howard of Nebraska, who was recently lampooned by H. L. Mencken's 'Mercury' on his personal appearance, takes the ridicule good naturedly, but presents the statement that his pants are 'threadbare' or that he is a 'sockless statesman.' He says that on the occasion of Mr. Mencken's visit to congress he had on his best pants and that he can not be called a 'sockless statesman' for the reason that he wears socks at least part of the time. But Congressman Howard need not worry over the frothy utterances of that self appointed critic of the universe, H. L. Mencken, Sinclair Lewis or any of the other so-called 'intelligentsia.' He has the brains to represent a great state in congress as well as be editor of a good newspaper and that is something which neither Mencken nor any of his school will ever have."

Dr. A. L. Bixby, poet-philosopher of the Lincoln Journal, has been touring the northwest, and his popular Daily Drift has contained results of his observations from day to day. One of his latest reports gives a description of his visit to Crater lake, sunk deep in the summit of the Cascade in southern Oregon. With over twenty miles of unbroken rim, perpendicular and varying from 1,000 to 2,000 feet deep, the lake is truly the greatest scenic wonder of the west, not excepting the Yosemite or the Grand Canyon. Since our visit there twentyfive years ago, it has been made the center of a national park, with hotel quarters and other improvements for the convenience of tourists. Going down to the water twentyfive years ago, following a narrow, winding trail, giving assurance that a misstep would precipitate one into the water hundreds of feet below, has since been safeguarded, as we understand. Crater lake occupies half of a huge cavity 4,000 feet deep, its antecedent supposed to have been a great mountain like Shasta or Rainier, disappearing under force of a volcanic eruption centuries ago. Down the mountain bulk that holds the lake are countless crystal streams, with which none elsewhere in the world compare. Any one in the vicinity ought to visit Crater lake, and we are glad Dr. Bixby did so. Making the journey in automobiles is a great improvement over the long, uphill pull in wagons twenty years ago.

ANNUAL REUNION.
 The old settlers' reunion which is to be held at Winside next Thursday, reminds one of the great changes that have taken place in Wayne county since the first hardy pioneers pitched tents here and commenced breaking virgin soil. Not many of the original settlers are still here. Some have gone to make homes elsewhere while others have crossed into the invisible and unknown. Those who remain will be glad to share in the event held in their honor, and they will relish review of the struggles and triumphs that led from raw prairies to highly developed agricultural communities. The transition from treeless, unbroken tracts to grove-decked and richly productive farms, from cow paths to graveled highways and paved streets, from crudely built shacks to palatial homes, from monotonous isolation to close contact with all the world is wonderful to contemplate. The pioneers are fast passing, and it would be well if their recollections could be preserved in the memories of later generations. Reminiscences make for higher appreciation of present advantages.

Who Really Paid?
 One Journal: Once upon a time, there were three competing mousetrap makers, all doing about the same amount of business. Each charged the trade twenty cents a trap. The merchant retailed for thirty cents. One day one of the manufacturers decided to spend one cent per trap to advertise. He did not raise his price to the dealer, and the dealer did not raise his price to the public.

The advertising trap maker kept up the advertising for a couple of years, when it was found that his business had grown to such a volume that he could build better machinery. So, instead of turning out a trap for fifteen cents, by quantity production he could make a better trap for ten cents.

This he was able to sell to the dealer for fifteen cents, and the dealer sold it to the consumer for twentyfive cents. Now, who paid for the advertising? Not the consumer who now got a better trap for less money. Not the dealer, because he now made a better percentage of profit, gave his customers better value, and made a quick turnover. Neither did the manufacturer pay for the advertising because he now sold so many more traps where he used to make five cents profit per trap and sold a thousand a day, he now made three cents per trap and sold three thousand a day. He was selling three times as many traps. Yet the supply of mice had not increased like that. By looking closer it is discovered that the other two mousetrap men had gone out of business. The men who really paid for this advertising were the two who had not advertised, and who paid with their business. If the non-advertisers only realized it while they are talking about needless expense of advertising, they are really paying the advertisers' advertising bills.

Business.
 Sioux City Journal: The general tone of business is better week by week. Reports from east, west, north and south indicate progress. No considerable area anywhere in the country is complaining against conditions. Employment is better than it was earlier in the summer. Industry is holding its own during the hot weather in a way that brings a promise of greatly increased activity in the fall and winter. Building keeps up its program. Various cities, bank clearings are impressive, buying power is stronger and there is more public confidence in the economic situation than at any time since the first of the year. Railroad activity continues, with freight car loadings topping the million mark week after week. The last report fell a little short of the same week in 1927 and also was below the same week in 1926, but car loadings have gained more consistently this summer than for a long time. Goods are in demand. Loadings are expected to jump above the 1927 and 1926 figures when the harvest comes.

There will be bumper crops this year. Small grain already has shown a remarkable yield, whereas corn may be the best in a decade. In the corn belt states the growing crop is fully two weeks ahead of the season, and some sections report that it can develop to maturity without any more rain if necessary. That, however, cannot be claimed for the whole corn belt. More moisture will be needed. It is not too late for hot winds to sap the life of the corn unless there is moisture in the ground. No drought is feared at this time.

Merchants meeting in Chicago for the 14th session of the annual interstate merchants council made glowing reports of the retail trade outlook. They agreed that "business is good and the outlook for the fall and winter trade is even better." The delegates attending the convention represent cities and towns throughout the country, and the most impressive thing was that no one reported depression.

Orders for goods are heavier than usual in the areas represented. Wholesalers already had reported a quickening of trade demand. Merchants have felt the pressure of stronger buying power and are stocking more heavily than they were a few months ago.

Unfair Discrimination Charged.
 Fairbury News: A Millbank, South Dakota editor, J. E. Brown of the Herald Advance of that city was the winner of the second prize in a contest sponsored by the National Editorial Association for letter written to congressmen concerning the evils of government envelope printing. The letter he submitted to Hon. Royal C. Johnson follows: "My dear Mr. Johnson: This morning I went over to the postoffice, as is my usual custom, to gather this morning mail. While glancing over the letters, some of which originated in various departments of this great government of ours, and intended as free publicity matter in the rural press, a merchant from down the street walked into the postoffice and placed his order for 2,000 printed envelopes. He knew I was one of the town printers and apologized for sending his business out of the community but explained that I couldn't compete with the government anyway, and he had to profect his own interests by buying them where he could get them the cheapest. About noon it started to snow and the wind from the northwest was cold. My ten-year-old young hopeful bursted into the office and announced quite emphatically that his last year's overcoat had went, and that he was in need of a new one. A baby thought struck me, and together we wended our way to the postoffice. I gave the postoffice clerk an idea of the style I wanted, the size, etc., but was informed that the government didn't sell overcoats and that four clothing stores in town were doing a thriving business in that line. At this point I discovered that the patent on my shoes was about to expire and that soon I would be obliged to open negotiations for a new pair. I inquired about the kind sold by the government and was informed that the government was not in the shoe business. Further inquiry revealed the fact that the only thing sold by the government in competition with private business was envelopes. Now if the government can sell envelopes and get away with it in such fine shape, why not include overcoats, shoes, washing machines and automobiles? Pass the good thing along and sell everything from cow bells to totem poles. That's the question that the many thousand of printers in the United States would like to have settled at this session of congress. They want equal privileges—that's all!"

Attend Funeral of Zenais Tiech
 Mr. and Mrs. William Beckenhauer were in Hancock Wednesday to attend the funeral of Zenais Tiech, who died suddenly Sunday from paralysis of the heart. He was ill but a few hours. Mr. Tiech was 27 years old. He leaves his parents, two brothers and six sisters. One of the sisters, Essie, taught in Wayne several years ago. Funeral service was held on the Tiech lawn on account of the illness of the father of deceased.

By Contrast.
 York Republic: The pleasures of life are by contrast. An idle man, sitting in the breeze on a porch on a hot summer day, will complain bitterly of the heat. The good wife, cooking dinner in the kitchen, will come out on the porch for a breath of air and say, "My, how cool it is out here." You have to know some of the hardships others are having, and some of their disappointments before you can know what pleasures you yourself enjoy. You have to taste some of their denials and trials before you know how well you fare.

Fortner, Mrs. J. G. Mines, Mrs. A. H. Schmale, Mrs. J. G. Miller, Mrs. E. W. Huse, Mrs. F. E. Cavanaugh and Mrs. Mary Brittain. Mirabel Blair and Catherine Craven entertained the children. Guests from out of town were: Mrs. Frank Tracey of Orpha, Wyo., Mrs. E. Bernhill of Warren, Ariz., Mrs. R. B. Atwater of Des Moines and Mrs. Hugh Drake of Kearney.

Hostesses for the social afternoon next Tuesday are the following: Mrs. H. B. Jones, Mrs. H. J. Felber, Mrs. F. E. Gamble, Mrs. D. S. Wightman, Mrs. F. G. Dale and Mrs. Roy McDonald.

The third and last of a series of social evenings at the club house will be held this Thursday. The committee includes: Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shults, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Coryell, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Canning and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wright.

Women of the club will serve a banquet next Monday evening for local and visiting golfers who are here for the tournament. They will also serve luncheons for the players Tuesday and Wednesday. Any who wish to volunteer helping serve the luncheon Tuesday or Wednesday are asked to call Mrs. F. S. Morgan.

Appreciation. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Fox wish to express in this way their appreciation for the excellent skill and care given their son, Russell Fox, at the Wayne hospital. Two weeks after an operation for appendicitis the lad is up and around and is feeling fine. Mr. and Mrs. Fox feel that only a home institution with skill and interest in patients could have done so well for the boy.

J. H. Foster went to Crystal lake Friday to spend the weekend.

Accession Books At City Library

A number of new books have been accessioned at the Wayne city library the past week. One is "The Duddess of Wrex" by Hugh Walpole. The Duchess of Wrex was a tradition in England and had not stirred from her room for thirty years though she still ruled her people. Two forces, the rising generation and the awakening of the people, unite to undo her hold. Another book by Hugh Walpole is "The Green Mirror." This deals with Mrs. Trenehard, British matron, who is inflexible, dominant and imposing. She tries to force submission of every member of the Trenehard family to her will. In Phillip Mark, young man who has spent some time in Russia, she finds her Waterloo.

"In the Hills of Galilee," by Louis Tucker, is presented a new sense of reality of Jesus and His friends, and a vivid understanding of the time and land in which they lived.

"A Passage to India," by E. M. Forster, is an ironic and beautiful novel with India, the romantic, the old, the practical and the new as the fascinating background.

"Growth of the Soil," is by Knut Hamsun, and is a story of a man who rises in elemental strength and simplicity out of the very soil of Norway.

"A Popular History of American Invention" is a two-volume edition. One part shows the development of material resources of the country, such as coal, lumber, cotton, etc., and the other shows the changes in manufacturing which have brought labor-saving devices.

Market Report. Furnished by Steele, Siman & Co., Sioux City Stock Yards.

August 16.—The fat cattle market ruled steady to lower this week while the stocker market strengthened. Bullishness featured in the live pork market but the lamb market slumped.

The 11 leading markets of the country received 118,000 cattle the first two days this week, 18,300 more than last week. Increased shipments from western ranges accounted for the larger receipts. The nature of the cattle run has been changing gradually from a majority of native cornfeds to grassers and west-erns. However, the western run will not be in full force until late this season.

The beef steer and yearling market was under pressure on the initial session of the week, even though receipts were short owing to the continued hot weather throughout the country and the poor condition of eastern dressed beef markets. Good and choice light weight cattle held steady but plain grades and weighty steers were weak to a quarter lower. Slight improvement in the undertone was noted on the following days.

A good class of cattle sold at $15.00 to $16.00 with a few yearlings up to $16.50. Plain and medium cattle sold at $13.00 to $15.00. A few grass steers sold to packers at $12.00 to $13.50.

The butcher stock market has not changed much this week. Receipts have been moderate with demands have been fairly broad from all sources.

Cornfed cows and heifers were very scarce. A few heifers sold at $13.00 to $15.00 and cows at $10.50 to $12.00. Grass heifers ranged at $10.00 to $12.00 and grass cows at $7.50 to $10.50. Cutters and low cutters sold largely at $6.00 to $7.00.

Veals topped at $15.00 independent, the same as last week and big packers paid up to $14. Thin bulls sold at $7.50 to $8.00 with medium grades at $8.00 to $9.00 and beef bulls at $9.00 to $9.75. A few yearling and butcher bulls sold at $10.00 to $12.00.

The stocker and feeder market has been active and is stronger than last week, at the high level of the season. Receipts have been fair sized but dealers made a close clearance last week and needed the fresh arrivals. The inquiry from the country has been heavy for this season, over 1,800 going out on Monday.

A few sales have been made around $13.00, with a good grade at $12.00 to $12.75; fair to good, $10.50 to $12.00, and plainer lots down to $9.00 and under. Stock cows ranged at $7.00 to $8.50 and heifers at $9.00 to $12.00, the latter price being the highest price in a long time.

Hog receipts amounted to 147,

000 at the 11 leading markets on Monday and Tuesday, 10,000 less than last week and 20,000 short of the corresponding period a year ago. The two day receipts were the lightest for any corresponding two days in many months.

Shippers were active on the first two days and they put on 35c a hundred in order to get week they desired. Packers held back on each day and would not follow the strength. They did not get many hogs. On Tuesday, the top reached $11.75, the highest price since February, 1927, and the average cost beat $10.80, also the highest in a year and a half. Good butchers of fall weights ranged from $11.25 up with sows at $10.25 to 10.75.

The 11 leading markets received 135,300 sheep on Monday and Tuesday, 38,800 more than last week.

The lamb market broke 50c and ewes held steady. Native lambs topped at $14.10 Tuesday and ewes sold up to $7.00.

Labor and Poverty in British Isles Are Found to Be Greatest Problems.

Compares Farming

Dr. W. C. Wightman Contrasts
Advantages of Production in This Country.

Labor problems in England are of considerable moment, Dr. W. C. Wightman found, when in that country this summer. Dr. and Mrs. Wightman and Miss Suzanne Wightman of Long Beach, Calif., arrived in Wayne last week Tuesday enroute home after spending the summer in the British Isles. They noted that English farm problems in rural and city life that must be very puzzling in solution, and the fact that they have not been solved since the World war shows that they are difficult.

Great numbers of unemployed are to be found in the cities. Some manufacturing is conducted, such as making dishes, cutlery, audubons, acropans, woolen fabric and wines. Some coal is mined but not sufficient for the needs of the country itself. Farms are small; land and labor are cheap; and returns are not great. So many of the necessities of the country have to be shipped in, that employment is scarce. As a result the island is overrun with beggars, and the tourist crop, which is harvested between June and September, is one of the best sources of revenue.

England, which is not so large as the state of Nebraska, contains some good land and some that is not good for production of crops. Shale underlies the ground in many places and makes cultivation difficult. Soil is about a foot deep. Hills and rocks interfere with cultivation in Scotland.

Land Value Is Low.
Land is valued at $10 an acre in Kent county, southern England. A hired man on a farm receives one pound, or about $5, a month salary and his board and room. Thus, for a year's work, he receives about the same as a farm laborer in this country during one month.

The century old custom of arranging farms in triangles, all of the owners living in one group for protection, is still observed. The landlord on an estate usually lives now at the point of contact for several such triangular fields on his estate. Each triangle, which contains perhaps ten acres, is farmed by one man. This small piece of land is enclosed with a hedge. In northern England and Scotland stone fences replace the hedges. When the Wightmans asked one owner why he did not have only one man farm his whole estate, he replied that he didn't know what he would have the other men do. Each has become accustomed to hire one man for each triangle, though it is small, and he clings to this plan.

Dole System in Use.
As a relief measure during the war the dole system, devised by the government, was instituted to care for unemployed. This is a sort of union run by the government. Each laborer must pay certain fees into a fund. If these are kept up and a person is out of work he will receive his dole from the fund. If, however, he has not joined the union and is out of work he usually resorts to begging.

Beggars Are Numerous.
And begging in England seems to be a legitimate occupation, the visitors found. While in a store a stranger seated himself beside Dr. Wightman and asked if he would give him assistance. The doctor thought he had been mistaken for a clerk in the store and referred him to one of the storekeepers. The well-dressed man, however, explained that he was misunderstood. He held a long tale of woe and asked for alms.

The London Times publishes each day a list of the well-to-do men who die and who leave 1,000 pounds, $5,000, or more. This list is quite large. One baker, the visitors noted, left an estate which would equal $15,000,000. A writer left one valued at $200,000. There seems to be some who amass great sums of money, but there are more who live in poverty and who resort to begging.

Tippling is a practice which prevails to a great extent in England, this being one of the ways of harvesting the tourist crop. The travelers saw lines of servants at hotels, eating houses and stations, all anxiously waiting for tips. On the boat crossing the ocean tips are set by schedule, the amount for each person being $15 on the journey each way.

Raised Small Grains.
Farmers in England speak of raising corn, and, in truth, raise no such crop as is called corn in this country. They refer to barley, oats and such small grains as corn. Barley is the main grain crop. Potatoes are raised in larger amounts than any crop. Considerable hay is raised and most is stacked in fields. Many hogs are grown for beef.

Some English people informed the travelers that many hogs are raised in the island, but the Wightmans estimate that they saw in all about fifty. In any farming operation many or a large number to an Englishman would be considered a small number or amount to farmers of the middle west here. Large numbers of sheep are raised in the country, and mutton is the principal meat food. Many fish are also caught and used for food. Very few cattle are raised. One long-haired variety is grown in Scotland. This type is smaller than the diverse cow in this country, and has long hair. The animals are good for milk and also beef production. Most of the beef used for food in the country is, however, shipped there from the United States.

Season Is Cool One.
The season this summer has been cool in the island. For two successive years crops have failed in Scotland, and it is feared they will not mature this season on account of the cold. Many farmers this year also lost many sheep because of shearing them in June and July when the weather was so cool. Usually it is best to wait until August.

English people take much interest in their horses and dogs. Sturdy Clydesdales are the favorite horses and they are heavy, well kept teams. Many also have riding horses and bridal paths are used much for riders. Some of those who cling most to the past still demand black horses and harness with black plumes for funerals in Edinburgh. Dogs in England and Scotland are beautiful and are thought of with much consideration by owners. They are taken onto trains and busses and fare is paid just as for persons.

Roads Are Excellent.
Highways are excellent throughout the island. Many of the old stone roads built by the Romans still remain. The newly surfaced ones are of concrete. In this country concrete is set in blocks so as to allow expansion and contraction. This is not necessary in England. The concrete is poured in solid masses for perhaps forty miles. Less variation in temperature through the year and the fact that they are under the ground and is not subject to great changes according to weather conditions are given as reasons for not providing means of expansion.

Automobiles Are Small.
The highways are quite narrow, however, and this necessitates the automobiles being small. Many American makes, such as Cadillac, Buick, Dodge, Chevrolet and Ford, are used in the country, but many of them are smaller models than are used here. England makes some cars and large signs in the country advise people to use English cars and patronize home industry. Another notable difference in the cars is that they have right-hand driving. Cars sent from this country have to be changed to conform to this usage. Brakes have to be operated with the left hand. Drivers use the opposite side of the road from what Americans do.

Many large busses have established regular routes in England, just as in this country. They are cutting into the train business. Busses and trains both make the trip from London to Edinburgh, 360 miles, in one day. The train service is good, though the engines are not as powerful as those used here. They do not need to be. Each passenger car-

HIGHLIGHTS.

Highlights in the acceptance address of Herbert Hoover were:

Opposition to the repeal of the prohibition amendment and a pledge for enforcement of the laws enacted under it.

Farm relief through tariff protection, development of inland water transportation and federal aid for farm stabilization corporations. An honest campaign with public accounting of all expenditures. Repeal of the national origin basis of the immigration laws. Indorsement of the principle of collective bargaining and freedom in labor negotiations with a pledge to curtail the excessive use of injunctions in labor disputes. A comprehensive and co-ordinated plan for waterway improvements, flood control, development of hydroelectric power and irrigation.

Furture economy in government by reorganization and grouping of governmental agencies dealing with the same general schedule. Co-operation between government and business on a voluntary basis for the benefit alike of producer, distributor and national defense. Honesty in government with no place for cynicism in the creed of America. A declaration for religious tolerance.

Direction of economic progress in support of moral and spiritual progress. A call to the women and youth of America to contribute their enthusiasm to the success of the American experiment in democracy. A pledge to adhere to the course of government charted by President Coolidge.

Police systems in London and Edinburgh are most efficient. Policemen, on motorcycles or horses, control traffic in a wonderful way. The police and courts are also efficient in detecting and punishing crime. While visiting in England the case of an innocent man, who served nineteen years on murder charge, came up. The man's innocence was later proved and the government paid him for the years he had served. Court methods are quick and usually effective.

Police and others in England seem to delight in wearing flashy uniforms. A red hat, grey tuxedo and many medals are often seen. Firmen wear gold-colored hats. Some traffic men wear white cuffs. Doormen wear uniforms. No straw hats are seen in England. Men wear low derbys. Business men do not dress as well as in this country. None of them are as big business men as some found in this country. Women dress plainly.

English cities have numerous beautiful parks, but they are usually locked. When they are open and one goes to them he has to pay a pence or two pence to sit on the benches there.

One striking place of beauty in Edinburgh, the city built on seven hills, the Wightmans found was the new memorial built to soldiers of the World war. This new structure stands with those built centuries ago. The marble slab, the base of which is rock of one of the hills, is a gift of the king and queen of England and bears the names of all soldiers. The Wightmans found the trip to England enjoyable, but feel that a glimpse of life in the islands makes Americans more satisfied with their own homes and occupations.

Walking is a favorite pastime of English people. Men and women, all using canes, are seen in the cities and on the winding country paths, walking. They wear sensible shoes and a good walker often goes fifteen miles at a time. The automobile has, however, caused some lessening of the interest in walking. The country lanes, which take walkers through hay fields and valleys, are beautiful.

Golf is another favorite sport of the English. Courts are so crowded that reservations have to be made on many of them. Traveling by aeroplane is gaining favor in the island. The air route over the English channel, a distance of twenty miles, is operated every few hours. The journey costs $25 and reservations are made far in advance. When the Wightmans were in England work started on a giant trans-Atlantic plane which is being constructed and which, it is planned, will carry 100 passengers.

Motocycles and bicycles are used everywhere in the islands. London, Edinburgh and other cities are not doing a large amount of building. Structures are of brick and stone. Edinburgh is erecting tenement houses of the same type as were built years ago. Neither city has skyscrapers as American cities do. London, with its seven million people, has no buildings more than five stories, so the city covers a large area. Streets run in all directions.

Living Cost Is Low.
Cost of living the Wightmans say, is cheaper than in the United States. A man's suit costs $20. Vegetables and other foods raised on the islands are sold very reasonably. The Wightmans state that board and room for each person in one of the good hotels amounted to $30 a week. This provided every convenience and even a private dining room. Food was good and well prepared. Turkeys, mutton and fish were the meats usually served. English do not serve biscuits, and the fact that they have apple dumplings often. Wines are always offered before meals. The travelers found costs very reasonable and service excellent. Cream, however, cost 12c extra but was so thick it couldn't be poured. They had paid 60c for one baked potato, 70c for a dish of peas and such prices in a New York hotel enroute over. The English are very courteous and treat American travelers exceptionally well, the Wightmans found. Some difficulty was experienced in understanding the English brogue, the Scotch accent being easier to interpret.

Banks Are Stable.
Banks in England are exceptionally well established and sound, Dr. Wightman found. They are established by large companies, one system having perhaps 800 branches. No small banks are founded and operated by one or two private individuals. A large city company, having many large institutions, manages the ones in smaller places. The Bankley and Lloyd companies are among the largest. The Bank of England is a big institution. Some United States banks have branches in that country also. Speculation is not participated in by English generally. Some buy American stock and make or lose on this. Some buy shares in promotion of air service or such industries. As a rule, however, the English are content to move along in a slower course and get rich gradually. One scheme being promoted while the Wightmans were there was a plan to reclaim food from hotels. Subscriptions were being taken for this purpose. The aim is to provide some way of saving and making into a useful food the wasted foodstuffs from eating houses.

Glasgow, formerly the world's greatest ship building center, no longer holds this distinction, the visitors found. Germany, France and Italy now make the greatest ships. One which Italy is constructing will surpass the Majestic, it is stated.

Police systems in London and Edinburgh are most efficient. Policemen, on motorcycles or horses, control traffic in a wonderful way. The police and courts are also efficient in detecting and punishing crime. While visiting in England the case of an innocent man, who served nineteen years on murder charge, came up. One striking place of beauty in Edinburgh, the city built on seven hills, the Wightmans found was the new memorial built to soldiers of the World war. This new structure stands with those built centuries ago. The marble slab, the base of which is rock of one of the hills, is a gift of the king and queen of England and bears the names of all soldiers. The Wightmans found the trip to England enjoyable, but feel that a glimpse of life in the islands makes Americans more satisfied with their own homes and occupations.

Actor Plays Two Roles At Once

For two weeks, John Gilbert was a nineteenth century model Cossack in the morning and a 1928 New York city gangster in the afternoon. That was because while Gilbert was making his new starring picture "Four Walls" which comes August 19 and 20 to the Crystal theatre, he was also making added scenes on his previous picture, "The Cossacks." "It wasn't so bad," said Gilbert, "except that I didn't know whether to speak my titles in English or Russian. I decided on English as I don't speak Russian."

THE KNOT-HOLE No. 11 Wayne, Nebraska, Thursday, August 16, 1927. Vol. 2

It's a dull evening in Wayne when one can't see five or six young people riding around in a Ford coupe. If your home needs a new roof, lay EDGWOOD shingles over the old roof. It is the practical way; saves the labor and expense of removing the old shingles; eliminates the unsightly litter and possible damage to shrubs or plants; provides protection in the event of sudden storms during the construction; saves fuel, harnesses your house warmer and later returned the hat unharmed. Next day an argument broke out at the corner grocery. "Bet a dollar I can do the same trick," said the proprietor. "No, you can't," and the hat borrowed. The proprietor gravely broke a dozen eggs in the head-piece and then stirred up the mess with a stick. Suddenly he stopped. "Well, I'll be darned!" he exclaimed. "I've plumb forgot how to finish the job." How about hard wood floors in your home this season? Best investment you can make. Science has proved that fifty per cent of the married people live in the United States are women. "I want to return on my train," said the man to the ticket agent. "Well, I'd recommend..."

Finds Watch Lost Number Years Ago

Gust Gartner of northwest of Wayne, in plowing last week turned up a seventeen jewel gold watch of Hamilton make which was probably lost some fifteen or twenty years ago. The case bears the letter "R" and aside from the ring and hands which have been rusted away the watch appears to be in an excellent state of preservation. There are a few rust spots in the work but Mr. Gartner believes that with little repairing the watch can be made to run as well as ever. Mr. Gartner has lived on the farm for three years and previous to that Harry Lesman occupied the farm for a period of eight years. The farm was owned for a number of years prior to that time by Henry Bartels and none of the men questioned have any knowledge of the lost watch. All of this wheat is of a fine milling grade, some 14.5 percent wheat and some early spring wheat, buyers say. Yields range from 20 to 40 bushels an acre. Using a crowbar to pry open doors, thieves broke into Newton's hardware store and J. W. Harmon's drug store at Orchard and stole small sums of money and goods, including jackknives, watches and rings. The thieves escaped with about $10 in small change and a large number of jackknives as the result of their visit to the hardware store. At Harmon's store they stole between $10 and $15 in change that was in a bill, a number of watches and rings. Several years ago a variety test of different alfalfas was put out on the August Volk farm, southeast of Battle Creek. Volk said that the Cossack and northwestern Nebraska alfalfas are still in good shape but that the Cossack seemed to be the first to come out in the spring. Probably one reason for the Cossack and Grim being more uniformly satisfactory is because the area in which they will produce is more limited than the common. Garments Lost From Automobile

Two dresses belonging to Miss Dorothy Ellis were lost from the car in which she and others were returning from Omaha last week Wednesday. When one of the party got out of the car at Fremont it is thought the box fell onto the running board and was not noticed. Later it dropped off onto the highway. The loss was noticed at Hooper and the party returned to Fremont but could not find the parcel.

Every individual requires a certain amount of relaxation and rest in order to maintain efficiency but a continual round of automobile riding, sight-seeing, entertaining, visiting and excitement is exhausting and defeats the very purpose of a vacation.
