In one minute all the mosquitoes in a room can be killed. Simply take a FLY-TOX Hand Sprayer, will with FLY-TOX and fill the upper half of the room with the fine atomized spray.

It will slowly settle to the floor killing all the insects in the room. Spray the ceiling, hangings and closets where the mosquitoes hide, and also spray on the screens. FLY-TOX will not stain the walls, draperies or the most delicate fabrics.

It has a pleasing fragrance, is absolutely harmless to people but sure death to insects. Does not matter whether windows and doors are open or closed. FLY-TOX is the scientific product developed at the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Fellowship. Every bottle guaranteed. -Ady.

THE KNOT-HOLE
No. 13 Wayne, Nebraska, Thursday, August 30, 1928. Vol. 2
Be it ever so mortgaged, there's no place like home.
An old house is neither an ornament nor an asset, but with some changing, it can be made very attractive. Evidently that is Amos Beckenhauer's conclusion, for he is now remodeling his frame home, making it modern and convenient. John James is doing the work.
We hereby offer a beautiful fur-lined water pitcher to anybody who can walk down the Main street of Wayne with a coil of rope without somebody asking him if he's going to hang himself. Or appear in public with an ax, without somebody inquiring if he's taking home a present to his wife.
Coal is arriving almost daily. Get your bins filled now. If the threatened railroad strike should become effective, coal will be a mighty scarce article while the strike is in progress. We have just received a car of baseburner hard coal from Pennsylvania. It is as good quality as we have ever seen.
You can't joke with a woman. The other day a Wayne man heard a new conun-to put in a supply of our HOT LUMP COAL. It is a large lump, high in heat, low in ash, and is clean. It does not smoke up the stove pipes like some coals do.

Mother, to small son. "Why don't you drive the cow home?" Son. "She won't come." "She won't come," get it away from here by the railroad track firin' with a tobacco sign."
During the fall season there is always more or less fixing to do around the farm. Some ppts, a few boards, a sack or two of cement. We can always supply these requirements at any time. It is a common saying, "When you can't get it here, where else, go to Carhart's. They have it."
There's lots of room at the top but lots of times it is taken by relatives of the boss's wife.
You may not know just what material you need for a certain building. Right there is where we are able to help you. You tell us what you want to build, we will make out your bill and tell you about what it will cost. We are glad to do this whether you buy or not.

 Life has a way of evening things. For every woman who makes a fool out of some man there's another who makes a man out of some fool.—Seattle Times.

GIVES NO HOPE.
 F. O. Edgecombe in Geneva Signal: We have found an optimist. Colonel Huse of the Wayne Herald proposes a national law to make it a crime to either give or accept tips. We must assume that Colonel Huse believes it would be possible to enforce such a law. If he has that belief no one will doubt his optimism. All tipping is born of greed on the part of both parties and the enforcement of a law to prevent one person from attempting to take advantage of another person would be far more difficult than the enforcement of the Volstead law. Of course Colonel Huse and the writer are included in the great majority of people who tip unwillingly but who do tip sparingly upon occasion on the no-rain-no-corn theory. The people who originated tipping and who are responsible for its preservation are persons who want to get what they are not entitled to get, to secure precedence over other people, to get more than other people get. The present universal tipping destroys the original object of tipping but the habit is pretty firmly established in the larger cities and especially under certain conditions of travel. Tipping is degrading and debasing but we have no confidence that it can be prevented by law.

The Old Days.
 Aurora Republican: The good old days! Ah! there's something to talk about! The good old days that linger in the memory of all of us! But why were they good? Largely because of our associations. Think back over the good old days and see if they weren't good because they contained some friend or relative now gone. True, they bring back memories of the old fishin' hole, the cider press, moonlit bob-sled parties, the house-warmin' and the 'root-in-tootin' political parades—things we can't forget and wouldn't if we could, but things, after all, which have been replaced with new pleasures. But with each of these joys of the good old days there is associated the name of a friend or relative—the pal who used to help dig fish worms and sit alongside you on the shady bank, dad at work at the cider press, the jolly bunch that struggled together in the old bob and the local politician who used to tar and feather the opposition in his campaign speeches. These faces and a host of others, many of them now gone or scattered to the four corners of the globe, rise up to make the old days good. Without them we would have no cherished memories, for we voluntarily gave up the other attributes of the good old days in favor of something better.

Junk To Prevent Erosion.
 Wymot Tribune: For the past two years the city of Pierre, S. D., has been dumping the discarded cars and other useless machinery into the Missouri river to prevent the serious cutting of the banks of the river front of that city.
 Now the officers of the Meridian bridge at Yankton are investigating the feasibility of using this old junk to protect the banks of the Missouri on the Nebraska side above the bridge. There appears to be danger that if the erosion at this point is allowed to continue it is liable to cause the destruction of the Nebraska approach to the Yankton bridge, as the cutting has already made serious inroads at this point.

Kansas Wheat Crop Largest On Record
 (Nebraska Farmer)
 This year's Kansas wheat crop is estimated as the largest on record for that state. An average of 17 bushels per acre on 10,532,000 acres harvested places the production at 179,044,000 bushels. This production has been approached only once in the past, 1914, when the total yield for the state was 176,800,000 bushels. However, the average yield per acre in 1914 was 20.5 bushels, but the total acreage in the state was considerably smaller.

Ed Rennie & Sons of Pilger, have started their fair showing, loading out twenty-two head of their fine Hampshires on Wednesday, August 22, going first to the Iowa State Fair at Des Moines. George Rennie and Boyd Jones are going in charge of the exhibit.

AFFILIATING MEMBER

In Paris August 27, representatives of fifteen nations signed the pact renouncing and outlawing war. This is the most forward step ever taken in the history of peace, and the masses everywhere regarding war as barbarous, hope it will stick.

By how narrow a margin we escaped, we do not know, but, anyway, we wish to express appreciation over the fact that we were not born a 9,000-pound sea elephant like the one exhibited by the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus. And we would not have the sea elephant accept this little note of appreciation as evidence that we feel superior or stuck up.

At the age of 68, Premier Raymond Poincare of France, works twelve hours per day, seven days a week, and he is keen, healthy and vigorous. He never smokes, and does not drink liquor of any kind. It is said he does foot play golf, hunt, fish or take any systematic exercise. It is likely he finds sufficient recreation in his work which offers refreshing variety.

Just as we predicted last week, Gov. McMillen has, on mature reflection, restored himself to the republican fold, accepting the republican party as the practical medium for any needed farm legislation and removing his coat in behalf of Hoover as the man disposed and able to help agriculture. We welcome the governor back, and immolation of the fatted calf shall follow in due time.

Senator Brookhart, Iowa's foremost radical, accepts Hoover as the practical friend of the farmer. In the course of a speech in Indiana, the senator said: "Herbert Hoover has handled two billion dollars worth of farm surpluses. He did it successfully and to the prosperity of the farmers all throughout the war and for a year and a half after the war was over. His acceptance speech shows that he knows how to do the same thing in time of peace."

The nose and mouth may be used interchangeably, but should not be so used unless necessary. When something happens to prevent the nose from complete functioning, it is necessary to transfer breathing partly or wholly to the mouth. When the mouth is swollen or otherwise out of order, it is unavoidable for the nose to share in the talk. But when one does either without occasion, it looks as though he were trying to thwart nature which had made all proper arrangements in advance. Neither should be overworked and made to appear to a disadvantage by being required to do the other's job.

EXCESSES.

E. W. Howe, the famous Kansas wit and philosopher, is contributing a series of articles to the Saturday Evening Post, reminiscent of his early life. His father farmed, preached and ran a country newspaper, and the cold, exacting and often abusive way in which he dealt with his son led to the latter's everlasting dislike which is expressed without attempt at concealment. While the father labored to bring others to grace, he neglected to arrive there himself, as the son's revelations would show. Cruel home restraints, most tyrannical mistreatment of helpless housewives in the old days seemed to be in evidence among men who were outwardly the most pious, and who pretended to deny harmless privileges and perpetrate excessive punishments in the name of religion. E. W. Howe does not say he was not benefited by being compelled to work at an early age and by being restricted and frequently lambasted, but he does say his father never expressed any affection for him and in return he never felt any affection for his father. The writer's experience confirms the belief that in restraints on children, a most other human experiences, excess is the thing to avoid, to promote wholesome growth and to insure happy relationships.

opens tomorrow and continues eight days, will have more and better exhibits than any of its predecessors. Notwithstanding increased accommodations, all room for entries have been taken. Improvements in handling a larger crowd than ever, and visitors in automobiles will find an arrangement by which they may come and go easily and quickly. We are informed that amusement features have been strengthened, and are calculated to satisfy all. The report concludes: "In every department the fair will be bigger, better, more interesting, a greater show of the human, animal, and material resources of Nebraska."

Reports tend to show that majorities in the big cities are favorable to Smith, while in rural communities the sentiment is just as pronounced for Hoover. Among the women, indications are that Hoover supporters predominate. This, it would seem that the liquor question takes precedence over other considerations. In the large centers the eighteenth amendment is regarded with less favor than in the country and the hope of many in those centers is that if Smith is elected, prohibition will be given a staggering blow and finally knocked out. In rural sections the majority frowns on the old order and will oppose any move that threatens to return to it. However, people may otherwise wish more liberty for liquor in the big question to be settled in November.

We have always believed in circuses as essential to the education and inspiration of youth, and while we had seen all on the road when we were young, we had not seen a big one for twenty years until this week. We went to Norfolk Tuesday night to see the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey and to see if we could feel the old thrill. There were more wild animals, more skilled performers and more grand spectacles than we had ever seen before, but we did not experience quite the same bubbling buoyancy that we felt when we attended our first circus—Dan Rice's one-ridged show in the late seventies. Dan Rice was the clown, and he surrounded himself with a small group of performers. He had no menagerie. Later we saw John Renbarger's, Forepaugh's, Barnum's and then Ringling's. The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey aggregation has no rivals in this day. It would seem that this circus had reached the limit in the way of trained animals and men and women, but probably not. In a swiftly changing and advancing world, circus attractions must improve with other things to hold popularity, and the Ringlings seem ever on the alert to acquire the latest and best in the world in their line. Certainly, nowhere can one see more for less money than may be found at a big circus.

M'Mullen's Choice.

Lincoln Journal: Governor McMillen announces that he will support Herbert Hoover for president. He makes this choice after a careful comparison of the utterances of the two candidates on the farm relief issue. He is not pleased with Hoover's attitude on this matter, but he is much less pleased with the manner in which it is dealt with by Governor Smith. It is his choice, long delayed, Nebraska's governor chooses the republican candidate because he places the problems of agriculture in first place and because the republican party offers more hope for a proper adjustment than does the democratic party.

The governor has convinced himself that Mr. Hoover is still in the dark as to how to proceed to solve the surplus problem, while Governor Smith has clearly and unhesitatingly repudiated a definite pledge of his party to agriculture. He is convinced that the democratic candidate either did not understand his party's pledge or that he wanted to avoid it. Governor Smith, he concludes, was correctly quoted when he was made to say he opposed the equalization fee principle.

One of the deciding factors in accepting the republican candidate was that Hoover places the agriculture problem first, while Smith makes it secondary to the liquor problem.

The protective tariff policy of the republican party offers some relief, while the espousal of that policy by democracy is too recent to merit confidence. Farmers and farm leaders have a right to expect that the benefits of the tariff will be distributed to "all groups in the house of its friends."

A careful reading of the McMillen statement leaves the impression that the governor is most unhappy; that the choice he has made, as he says, has not been based on political considerations, and that the governor is determined to continue the fight for the equalization fee principle as the one workable surplus control plan.

The surprising thing about the statement is that it has been so long delayed. Rightfully the governor can never be accused of playing politics by waiting until after nearly every other farm leader had spoken.

Now that the governor has thrown his support to the republican candidate for president he leaves many, minded about farm matters as he is known to be, wondering if he will announce, for Nebraska at least, a list of approved candidates for the national congress. "After all," he says, "the attainment of agricultural equality is purely a legislative matter."

NO SNAPS.

We heard a well educated professional man, employed at a fairly good salary, and giving meritorious service, express the wish that he might be as favorably situated as another fellow who has a considerable investment and who works long hours in order to steam ahead and make reasonable returns. One's tendency is to look with favor on the other fellow's job which seems to be going along easily and triumphantly. The rough sailing is largely concealed. Obstacles are not apparent. The public sees one at his best, and little knows of the difficulties that have to be overcome to make the grade. Every job has its advantages and drawbacks, its compensations and losses, and the one who thinks he would like the other fellow's place should inquire carefully to find out what it exacts in the way of hardship. Whether one rises above the average or is content to remain in mediocrity, he is not independent and he cannot free himself from responsibility, and he must pay the price in sweat for the measure of success which comes to him. There are no snaps.

Highlights In At Smith's Talk

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Outstanding points in Gov. Smith's speech of acceptance follow:

Prohibition.

Favors modification of eighteenth amendment to permit sale of alcoholic beverages by state agencies if approved by popular referendum vote; also amendment of Volstead act allowing each state to determine its own standard of alcoholic content; pledges honest endeavor to enforce dry laws and to stamp out corruption, and reiterates opposition to return of saloon.

Farm Relief.

Stands on platform for development of co-operative marketing and for earnest efforts to solve problem of distributing cost of handling surpluses over units benefited; promises to call in experts to study question and present recommendations upon reconvening of congress.

Foreign Relations.

Stresses necessity for restoring cordial relations with Latin-America; declares Monroe doctrine must be maintained but not as present for meddling with purely local troubles; approves extension of arbitration treaties, and promises "real" endeavor to end all wars by removing causes.

Tariff.

"Sudden or drastic" change in economic system, attacks workings of Fordney-McCumber act, and promises to restore scientific, nonpartisan tariff making.

Advocates public ownership and control.

Flood Relief.

Muscle Shoals.

Would develop method of operation and retain government ownership and control.

Women.

Advocates true equality for women in business, government and politics.

Veterans.

Would seek removal of red tape in their cases.

Other high lights were:

An attack on republican claims regarding prosperity, tax reduction, and economy, and employment, a pledge to effect "real" economy by reorganizing and consolidating governmental activities.

A declaration for a "constructive" campaign.

A statement that the republican party today "stands responsible for the widespread dishonesty that has honeycombed its administration."

"Certain utility corporations" are criticized for "dishonest" and "unpatriotic" propaganda.

A declaration that the candidate's nomination was brought about by no promises and a pledge that appointments would not be influenced by a person's wet or dry stand, religion, financial or sectional standing.

Horse Pulling Contest

There is a market for great-pulling pairs of horses. Randall Brothers of Agavam, Mass., are in the market for great-pulling teams and will pay $800 or over for a pair that can beat the present Massachusetts state record, which is 2,650 pounds' tractive pull for the full distance of 27 1/2 feet—made at Athol, Mass., in 1927.

If you have a good team, put them in at the local contest at the Fair and find out whether you have a pair that will measure up to the standard set by the record-making pair of pullers. Don't be afraid to test your horses; you may have a pair that will surprise you and the horsemen of your community. The world's record—3,475 pounds' tractive pull for the full distance of 27 1/2 feet—is held by a pair of crossed Percheron-Belgian geldings owned by Clarence Bugh of Cherokee, Iowa.

Oelschlager Girls Return To China

West Point Republican: Miss Freda and Miss Marie Oelschlager are rapidly completing plans for their return to the mission field in China where they previously worked for four years.

They were notified that their passages to the Orient were booked by the President Adams which sails from San Francisco October 5.

During their year's furlough in the United States, they have taken special work, Miss Frieda, the teacher, at the Wayne State Teachers College and Miss Marie, the nurse, at the Lutheran hospital in St. Louis, to better prepare themselves for their missionary labors. They return to their mission field with renewed enthusiasm and energy, confident of doing greater and better work.

The Lutheran church, under whose auspices they are working expects to keep them in China for a five-year period.

On September 14 the missionaries who will leave for China October 5, of whom there are five, will hold a meeting in St. Louis. Miss Frieda Oelschlager who left Wednesday for Leavenworth, Kansas and Farley, Missouri, at the latter place to lecture on Chinese missions, expects to go to St. Louis for the conference.

Training the Child

Hartington Herald: A thoughtful mother remarked to the writer that it seemed to her that one of the greatest duties which every parent owed his or her children was to teach them how to work and also to see that, as they grew older, they were taught some useful trade.

This, it seemed to her, would be a corrective for many youthful indiscretions and follies and would insure good citizenship when the boy or girl grew to maturity.

She thought the reason why so many children are idle, self-conscious and spoiled, not to say vicious, is that they have never been trained in the ways of industry nor had it impressed upon them that industry is the first and most important step to success.

To the writer, this seemed like good commonsense and sound reasoning. The most casual observer can not help but note the great number of idle, listless and purposeless children in the world and he can not escape the conclusion that this condition is due in part at least to the fault of the parents. Instead of being taught to work from earliest infancy, they have been petted, pampered and spoiled and have grown up with the idea that the world owes them a living or that there is some easy road to success.

The consequence is that they have no wholesome objectives or high aims in life and not only do they become morbidly self-conscious, but they also are liable to fall a prey to various temptations.

There is truth in the old saying that "the devil finds mischief for idle hands to do" and it is unquestionably a fact that idleness is the prolific mother of tragedy, vice and crime. We have a good illustration of this in the tragedy which recently occurred in this state resulting in the death of the son of well-to-do people living in the past. There was nothing vicious or criminal about the young man who lost his life—he opportunity and duty of being present, a responsibility that we shall be glad to assume again. Start in with the spirit that counts duty a joy and a delight, not something merely to endure and dread.

Let us begin going to the Sunday school right off at the start of the fall services, and remember that Sunday school in the modern meaning of that term, is for grown-ups as well as for children. If you don't realize this you are living in the far distant past. Up-to-date grown people of the church go to Sunday school when they can. Of course some have hindrances, but try to overcome them at all costs.

We shall be looking for a full attendance at next Sunday's services. We are depending on you all to count one, and bring one if you can, and add enthusiasm to the services by attendance. The door is open. Come in and be welcome.

About Nebraska and Nebraskans

Will M. Maupin.

The questions propounded last week will be answered next week. The writer has been traveling through the northwest and unable to connect up with the questions in time to answer this week.

Col. Charles Coffey of Chadron, pioneer cattleman and banker, still talks "go west" language. A couple of years ago while recuperating at Excelsior Springs, Mo., Col. Coffey had a birthday party, which one not being specified. A number of commission men from Kansas City, St. Joseph and Omaha were at Excelsior Springs, and learning of the anniversary, gave Col. Coffey a dinner. Now let the Colonel tell it: "Just before dinner I went to my room, washed and changed my shirt, and went down to the banquet room expecting to meet a bunch of cowmen dressed like me. Dangled if every fellow there but me didn't have on a Herford suit."

H. E. Dickenson, general manager of the Northwestern lines west of the Missouri, tells a good one. While repairing the bridge across the Elkhorst river near Chadron, a high steel girder was being lifted into place by a 60-foot boom. The block at the top of the boom fouled just as the beam was swung over the center of the river, and a steel worker climbed up to untangle it. The sudden release of the block jerked the man from the boom and he plunged downward, feet first, into the river. Mr. Dickenson and his crew expected to fish the man out of the river deeper than a smelt. But the man popped up, swam ashore and came limping up the bank. "Are you hurt," shouted Mr. Dickenson. "No, but I came darned near spraining my ankle," snarled the man.

The writer, who once thought he was adept in feeling the public pulse and diagnosing the political situation, has just completed a 10-day tour of Nebraska and the northwest. He knew little about the political situation when he started. He knows less now that he is back from the trip. The only one sure thing is that voters think as little of party ties these days as women of showing their knees.

Advocates of the referendum who live in Omaha are going to have full opportunity to exercise it. The color of the street cars, natural gas, a free bridge and a bond proposition are among the things to be submitted to a referendum in that city.

Col. F. M. Woods, one of the veterans of the Civil War, who located in Nebraska shortly after that great struggle, died at his home in Lincoln recently. Col. Woods was a pioneer in improved agricultural methods and was one of the leaders in improved live stock development. For many years his services as a live stock auctioneer were in demand all over the United States. He was the father of the Woods Bros., capitalists of Lincoln.

Henry J. Allen, former editor and publisher of the Wichita Beacon, who will be publisher of the Omaha Bee-News under the Hearst ownership, will make his headquarters in Omaha but will devote most of his time until after the election, to his duties as chairman of the publicity committee of the republican national committee. Mr. Allen will be directing editor of all the Hearst publications. Ballard Dunn remains with the Bee-News as editor-in-chief, and so far as now known there will be no material changes in the editorial staff.

Forty-four years ago Nebraska City celebrated with wild acclaim the opening of a combination railroad and wagon bridge across the Missouri river at that point. Now Nebraska City wants the Burlington to discontinue its toll vehicle bridge facilities in order to facilitate the erection of a non-toll vehicle bridge at that place. Tempus continues to fugit at a rapid pace.

Newport, Rock county, is the largest hay shipping station in the world. Arnold, Cass county, is the largest silica shipping station in the world. Silica, which is volcanic ash, is used in the manufacture of scouring soaps, etc. Scottsbluff is the largest one railroad shipping point west of the Mississippi river. Cozad, Dawson county, is the largest alfalfa shipping station in the world. Omaha is the world's largest butter market and the second largest meat packing center. Nebraska is the largest per capita producer of corn and wheat. Her annual production of butter, eggs and poultry is worth more than the world's annual production of gold. Nebraska is a whole lot bigger than most Nebraskans imagine, and getting bigger and better all the time.

Nebraska's $5,000,000 capital, which is going to cost more than $10,000,000 contains thousands of tons of steel. The largest steel beams in the building, used in the construction of the tower, weigh 12,000 pounds each.

Notice To Bidders The city of Wayne, Nebraska, will receive bids up to 7:30 o'clock p. m., of Thursday, September 6, 1928, for the furnishing and erection of an oil engine generating unit complete with cooling system, foundations, circulating pumps, oil pumps together with all necessary auxiliaries and appurtenances.

Plans and specifications may be obtained from the city clerk, Wayne, Nebraska, or from the consulting engineers, Nixon & Reynolds, 349 Omaha Grain Exchange Bldg., Omaha, Nebraska.

The engineer's estimated cost is $54,360.00.

A certified check in the amount of not less than $2,500.00 drawn on a Nebraska bank of known standing, shall accompany each proposal, which checks shall be returned to the unsuccessful bidders upon award of a contract and the check of the successful bidder shall be returned upon execution of a contract and after a satisfactory surety bond has been furnished and approved by the Council.

The city Council reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to waive any informalities.

Weeds Use Up Nitrogen. Lincoln, Neb.—The supply of nitrogen being the limiting factor of production on many Nebraska farms, the extension department of the State Agriculture college contends that some farmers do not realize that weeds use up much of the available nitrogen as well as sapping moisture from stubble fields.

Plowing under a big growth of weeds returns some humus to the soil, but the weeds tie up the nitrogen so it is not available until they decay, the department states. Fields that are to go into wheat this fall may be disc'd before fall plowing unless the plowing can be done in a hurry. The important point is to get the weeds turned under and the ground in shape to conserve all the moisture while it stores up a supply of available nitrogen for the next grain crop.

The Sediment Trap of the MAYTAG Cast Aluminum Tub Keeps the water clean

ONE of the important features of the Maytag tub is the cone-shape bottom which forms a sediment trap to collect the loose dirt that is flushed from the clothes. It keeps the water clean, and also permits the tub to drain itself thoroughly without tipping the washer.

The effective shape of the Maytag tub was scientifically planned to promote vigorous water action in every inch of the tub all the time, so that the washing is done by water action alone—an action that keeps the soap thoroughly mixed with the water and removes even stubborn edge dirt without hand-rubbing. Wringing the clothes is easy and effective with the Maytag. The large, soft rolls of the new Roller Water Remover hug every fold, lump and seam, removing both soap and water evenly from all parts of a bulky garment or a thin handkerchief.
