Old timers in the western part of the county are reported to have outlined weather conditions during the winter according to the complexion of a caterpillar which was found. The caterpillar indicated a cold start, a comfortable let-up in mid-winter and a severe finish.

Senator Howell firmly announces his disengagement with his colleague, Senator Norris, over the presidential succession. Howell pins his faith to Hoover and says he will be able and disposed to handle every governmental task suggested by Norris better than Smith could do it.

There is a state law requiring motorists to stop before going on a highway, and many people observe it. Many others do not observe it, and sometimes fatal accidents happen by reason of the indifference. But there is no demand for repeal of the law because of the difficulty involved in enforcement.

W. P. Warner of Dakota City, who has served for six years as regent of the University of Nebraska, is a candidate for reelection, and according to people who know him, he is a valuable member and ought to be retained. He has stimulated interest in the agricultural college and experiment stations, and he has exerted much influence in behalf of farm development.

Whatever light Charley Bryan, democratic nominee for governor, is capable of reflecting is borrowed from his brother, the late W. J. Bryan, and whatever headway he has been able to make in politics has been due to the influence of the departed commoner.

Comparing the record and utterances of the two presidential candidates, there would seem no conceivably tenable ground for Senator Norris to try to scuttle the republicanism which has safely conveyed him to port many times. Months had passed since the nominations were made, platforms were prepared and published and speeches of acceptance were presented.

Charles Evans Hughes of New York, is world-famed as a statesman of highest rank, and it is a safe assurance that he would not take the stump in active support of a man for president unless he was certain that he was fully equal to the responsibility in prospect and that opposing speakers had engaged in misrepresentations in the hope of discrediting his public service and securing his defeat.

Judge Norris charges that the churches, schools and colleges are influenced by insidious propagandists to support the power trust, and that the easiest creatures in the world to handle are the country newspapers. His quotation from a trust leader touching the purchase of editors leads one to suppose that they are bought in bunches as one would buy radishes or asparagus tips, because the purchase of one at a time would be too easy to afford healthful exercise.

enemy of Tammany and a friend of the eighteenth amendment, whereas his protege, Charley, is now lending his support to the presidential candidate who is linked to Tammany and who is against the prohibition law.

When picking has been progressing rapidly during the past week, and many fields will be finished within the next week if snow does not interfere. Much corn was whipped down by the recent rain and therefore husking has been unusually difficult.

The Nebraska Farmer recalls that in July, 1914, wheat was 65 cents per bushel on Nebraska farms and that only the war saved agriculture from calamity.

In a recent political speech, Charles Evans Hughes, discussing prohibition, said he was not satisfied with the conditions, but that he believed there would be made worse if Smith were elected.

People who have witnessed the national campaign descend to the level to which they are not accustomed, and which is unwholesome and repulsive, will doubtless feel profound relief when the election is over and the fog of the total abstainers lifted.

When he was governor Mr. Bryan did not materially reduce taxes, and when he did so it was at the expense of activities such as road-building, insurance supervision and workmen's compensation.

Other taxpayers who have been misled by Mr. Bryan's claims should look over their tax receipts, apply the correct formula given by Dr. Atkinson, and they will find that instead of reducing anybody's taxes he merely postponed the date of their final payment.

The trouble is that too many candidates have private opinions on public questions.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot. We Democrats are afraid that if the G. O. P. carries the South it will be over our own party's head.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

THE AMENDMENT. An amendment to the constitution is to be voted on at the election next Tuesday, to provide for placing the schools for the deaf and blind under the jurisdiction of the university regents.

to do so came along in this late date, we would spurn it as we would the blandishments of the devil. And we do not believe we are an exception to the rule among editors. We resent the imputation that editorial influence is not only for sale, but that it can be bought so easily and cheaply that it is like taking candy from the hands of a helpless babe.

This is a fair example of the tactics pursued in misleading the taxpayers of the state, and is a part and parcel of the campaign conducted by Mr. Bryan, who is declaring that honesty is the main issue at the same time that he is marring the accuracy of approval records and promising a reduction of a third in taxes.

My 1924 taxes on my farm were $125.97 and my 1927 taxes $149.72. On the face of it this looks like a sizable increase, but when I deduct the special state levy of one and a half mills levied in 1927 to take care of accumulated deficits, I get $121.22, which is less than I paid the last year of Bryan's administration.

Troublesome Questions. Dr. A. L. Bixby: Tidings from the west: Henry L. Fillman, chairman of the democratic central committee in and for York county, has stirred up a hornet's nest by asking the party candidate for governor a few troublesome questions.

Box Social. A large crowd is wanted at District number 18 at the box social on Friday, Nov. 9. An especially pleasing program is being presented at 8:00. We are located two miles east of Carroll. Ina M. Fleming, teacher.

ers, and circulating literature to make it appear that there is a great farm sentiment in Nebraska for the democratic presidential candidate. The so-called League was very active in the arrangements for the Norris meeting in Omaha but the activities of the democratic campaign groups gave plain evidence that the immense costs of hall and the democratic campaign money, radio broadcast were met with The Norris address, it now appears, was long in preparation.

And this is particularly true for those students who find history hard. A number of studies of these pictures have been made by various schools. In each case they have found that, while all students seem to be benefited, yet it is the poorer students who have clearly received the greatest benefit.

The presentation of these pictures is not a money-making scheme for anyone connected with them. We are urging your students to buy, and you, as parents, to send your children because we believe that these pictures will help your students to do better work and us to do a better job of teaching. Every penny we receive will be accounted for to the proper authorities.

Writes Mr. Wade said in part: 'Our forefathers, when they were oppressed by ruling tyrants, and wanted changes in government, knew no better than to resort to brute force, war, and bloodshed, but the constitution gave us the right to decide changes by the ballot. By the constitution, the people were installed in power instead of the king.'
