THE KNOT-HOLE

No. 31. Wayne, Neb., Thursday, January 3, 1929. Vol. 2. This is the first line we have written in 1929. We hope we may be able to write other lines during the year that will mean more than that one. In motoring over country, have you ever noticed how many fool drivers there are who pass or attempt to pass at the top of a hill? The driver who does that is sure to get into trouble at the top of some hill some time for the law of averages will eventually bring him face to face with another driver coming from the opposite direction. The result will be just too bad. First Sailor—Dan, what's a heifer—is it a pig or a sheep? Second Sailor—To tell you the truth I don't know much about poultry. Your home isn't your castle unless it's arranged the way you want it. Talk over your remodeling plans with us. We've always noticed that the man who is for something never talks as long nor as loud as the man who is against it. Carhart Lumber Co. Wayne, Neb. "EVERYTHING TO BUILD ANYTHING WITH"

TIP-TOP CARHART LUMBER CO. The convenience and all-around utility of this farrowing house must be seen to be appreciated. It is easily taken apart into sections. No nails or nailing. All the sections are held together with a special clamp and bolt so that it can be quickly assembled and set up. There are six pens. Each pen is served by a double door and each upper door is provided with a ventilating window that can be opened or closed without entering the building. Also, each pen can be served with feed and water without entering the building or opening the bottom door or without the necessity of crawling over pen divisions. These are very valuable features and mean the saving of much time to the farmer during the busy spring months and farrowing season. Each house is equipped with a heater for cold weather and the hover can be regulated also without entering the building. We urge every farmer who is thinking of investing in a farrowing house to look the Tip-Top over carefully.

To Change Calendar.
York Republican: There are some hopes that the proposal to establish a new calendar of thirteen months of equal length, each one to begin on Sunday with holidays falling always on the same day of the year, is making headway. Leading manufacturers, bankers and business men appeared before the house committee on foreign affairs in Congress to advocate the idea and to promote interest in a move to have the plan considered by a world conference. The plan has already been submitted to the League of Nations and a committee appointed by that body found that thirtythree countries favor a change in the calendar in the interest of uniformity. But there are many precious precedents, to be set aside and a long campaign of education and persuasion before the change will be accomplished. Nevertheless, there is a rapidly growing sentiment in favor of a calendar revision and the better understanding and cooperation between nations at this time makes the project one to be viewed with a good degree of hope that it will become an accomplished international observance.

The state legislature is in session. With unusual problems to handle, the members will need wisdom and courage to exercise soundest judgment. May they have both in abundance.

At the beginning of a new year we would suggest that the same effort required to get something for nothing will earn one's way and at the same time build a record that is more creditable and more satisfying.

Former Governor Samuel McKelvie explains in his Nebraska Farmer the horrors of the illness which had beset him for a few weeks, but which has subsided, leaving him on the road to recovery. Report that he is out of misery will be a source of gratification to his numerous friends over the state.

Queen Marie of Roumania is planning another trip to the United States. We still feel resentful over the indignity implied in the ejection of W. M. Maupin from her special train because he lacked official or royal title, and so we don't care a pipayune whether she comes or not.

The late Charles P. Steinmetz, leading electrical engineer of his time, said the greatest discovery is to be made along scientific lines, and that then "the world will see more advancement in one generation than it has seen in the past four." Science that has added to human convenience and comfort may do more than it has ever done for peace of mind by seeking spiritual values and studying to direct spiritual forces.

In large centers, the New Year is greeted with much noise and often much drinking of liquid tangefoot. Whether drinking fiery stimulants is necessary property to celebrate or whether celebrating is merely an excuse for indulging a whetted appetite, we do not know. Anyway, we think the glory of the New Year's arrival or the passing of any other notable event would not be diminished by observance of due sobriety. And the object celebrated would feel just as well and the one doing the celebrating would feel a great deal better afterwards.

The week following New Year's is one of the two duller weeks in the year, and we imagine it shouts back at the other one, the week of July Fourth, in a sort of sympathetic brotherhood. Each marks the closing of certain activities, and a little time is required to make the turn in the road and take a new hold. Corn is usually laid by in time to celebrate the Fourth. When the new year wheels into the tracks, invoices are taken and preparations are made for a fresh start. If we did not really independence day in spirit, we would say the start in January unfolds the hardest week in the year to issue a satisfactory newspaper.

OBLIGATIONS.

What does one owe his community? This is well to consider at the beginning of the new year. It is likely none make full payment, and that the one who owes the most, is short in making due reimbursement. When we are asked to do something that we do not want to do, we are reminded that we owe it to the community, to some institution, group or individual. Often we have felt pitifully weak in unwillingness to respond to the call of duty. We realize that it is unjust to sit back and let other fellow carry the load, at the same time sharing in the advantages that accrue as a result of public-spirited effort. Often courage flags and one shrinks from the task, which he is invited to perform as a contribution to public service. The greater one's strength, the more he is expected to do and the more he should do to make his community an attractive spot on the map, to enliven its arteries, fire drooping ambitions, and stimulate forward and upward movement. The more one's initiative and resourcefulness are rewarded, the more does he owe and the less should be his inclination to lie down and let those already burdened respond to the cry of community needs. Let 1929 see united action, pulling forward, without eyes fixed so much on individual gain as on popular benefit and community advancement.

Nebraska newspapers are asked in behalf of state pride and the everlasting truth not to make careless use of the word, "blizzard." A blizzard is defined as "a dry, cold, violent storm with high wind and driving snow." This kind of storm happens so seldom that more than one is not likely to be seen during a lifetime. The last one to sweep Nebraska happened January 12, 1888. It lasted only one day, whereas the customary blizzard in earlier times required three days to run its course. But the storm forty years ago was bad enough while it lasted to entitle it to be remembered as a blizzard. One must live a long time or be born within fairly close proximity to a blizzard period in order ever to see one.

The Ord Quiz which is one of the outstanding weekly newspapers of the state and which is published by H. D. Leggett in cooperation with his son, E. C. Leggett, has bought and absorbed its competitor, the Ord Journal. The step follows a universal policy to improve service without causing corresponding increase in cost of operation. It but follows the tendency of the time for fewer and better newspapers. The Journal was founded in 1887 by O. S. Haskell and Rev. B. F. Hilton who ran it as a prohibition newspaper and then as a populist newspaper. Like most towns Ord had had different newspaper ventures, all fading from the map excepting the Quiz, which survives and which serves a real purpose and answers a real demand.

Meet At Perdue Home.

Central Social circle members and their husbands met Wednesday at the Ray Perdue home for a covered-dish dinner and social afternoon. Mrs. Roy Klopning had charge of the social time. Roll call was answered with ways of earning spending money and with New Year's resolutions. Mrs. Glenn Wingett was taken into the club as a new member. Songs were sung with Mrs. John Grier at the piano. Miss Charlotte Ziegler played piano numbers. Mrs. J. W. Ziegler, Miss Charlotte Ziegler, George Bish, Miss Lotitia Bush, Mrs. S. W. Elder, Mrs. Ernest Elder, Mrs. Sadie Snodgrass of Iowa, who is a sister of Mrs. S. W. Elder, and Mr. and Mrs. Aden Austin were guests. The club will have a covered-dish dinner next month at the Elmer Phillips home. Mrs. Basil Osborn will be leader.

Merry Makers Club Meets.

Merry Makers club had a New Year's party Saturday evening in the Ray Perdue home. The party also celebrated the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Aden Austin. A large cake and fall flowers were table decorations. Besides members, Mr. and Mrs. Elhardt Pospishil and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lindsay were guests.

Hans Madsen who has been quite ill, is improving.

Mrs. U. S. Conn left Saturday for Syracuse, Ind., to spend a couple of weeks with her sister, Miss Lily Baum.

THE FUTURE.

Roger W. Babson, famous business statistician, looks ahead in a spirit of encouraging optimism. He says the condition of the country is fundamentally healthy, and he expects distinct improvement in agricultural sections. He thinks prosperity will be more evenly distributed during the new year. He believes active business will furnish employment at somewhat stimulated payrolls. He says commodity prices may tend upward early in the year, and then decrease, with a somewhat lessening of living costs. In connection with forecasting tendencies in 1929, Mr. Babson peers into the more distant future. He looks developments during the next twenty-five years will even surpass those of the last quarter century. He looks for "canned sunlight" delivered with the groceries and face-to-face conversations from the ends of the earth." He looks for successful processes for transforming individuals, among other accomplishments, the making of good, useful citizens out of those criminal-minded. The naturally sad will be made happy, and the indolent will be filled with ambition. According to Babson's notion, one will want to see and have a hand in future evolutions, and when his predictions are realized, it would seem about time for the millennium.

Hog Killing Dog Slain By Farmer

Pierce, Neb., Dec. 27.—A large black dog that for the past year has been running about, terrorizing and killing stock and many hogs north of Pierce, finally was killed by a farmer in that vicinity. The dog had been the cause of the loss of a great deal of young stock and farmers had been trying to kill him for many months but it seemed almost impossible to find him or to get close enough to shoot him. Some time ago a posse of forty men and boys, armed with shotguns, was organized and the country was thoroughly searched. The dog was discovered early one morning in a hog lot, by the owner, who thinks that he was attracted there by the carcass of a hog which had died of cholera the day previous. The farmer got his shotgun and killed the dog. Auditorium Soon Done. Newman Grove, Neb., Dec. 27.—Work on the new school auditorium will be completed by the new year. Supt. J. H. Responsibility in these matters rests, to a very large extent, with the mortician. His duty it is to use discriminating judgment in adopting the new and discarding the old. About Nebraska and Nebraskans

Will M. Maupin.

George L. Sheldon, of Cass county, was elected governor of Nebraska on the republican ticket in 1906. That Nebraska was acquiring age was evidenced by the fact that he was the first native son of Nebraska to be elected to the office of chief executive. During his term of two years a number of political reforms were adopted by the legislature. Railroad passes were abolished and the state railway commission authorized and established. The direct primary law was also put upon the statute books. Ashton C. Shallenberger of Harlan county, democrat, was elected governor in 1908, and for the second time in history Nebraska's electoral vote was given to a democrat. During Gov. Shallenberger's administration the present bank guaranty law, now the subject of so much controversy and thought, was enacted. The first forward step in temperance legislation was also taken in the enactment of the "8 o'clock closing," which confined the hours for the legal sale of liquor to 7 a. m. and 8 p. m. The direct election of senators was also adopted.

This series of political reminiscences have now been brought down to the time when even the youngest of voters can remember subsequent political events. The legislature of 1911 enacted the initiative and referendum law, and since that time no reform legislation, or legislation of particular moment has been enacted. These reminiscences should not close, however, without some reference to Nebraska's part in the World War. Keith Neville of Lincoln county, democrat, was governor during the war period. In the purchase of Liberty bonds and war savings stamps Nebraska exceeded her quota, and in the purchase of war savings stamps stood at the very top of the list in proportion to population. Up that titanic struggle Nebraska sent 47,800 to the army and navy, many of them going overseas. The largest number of Nebraskans in any one regiment was in the 355th Inf., 88th Division. In the battles of Argonne Forest and the Meuse river this regiment lost practically one-third of its number. A former Nebraskan, Gen. John J. Pershing, was in supreme command of the American Expeditionary Force.

To have lived 55 years in one home on the original homestead taken by her husband, and to have seen a city of more than 17,000 inhabitants grow up on and around that homestead is the experience of Mrs. H. R. Alexander of Hastings. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander located where Hastings now stands in the spring of 1873. Their first home was on the extreme southwest corner of the homestead, on the exact spot where Mrs. Alexander's present home now stands, and the south line of the homestead is now Seventh street. Mr. Alexander died several years ago. The Alexanders helped to establish Hastings college. Mrs. Alexander helped trim the first Christmas tree ever erected in Hastings.

After an existence of 48 years the Ord Journal passes into oblivion, having been purchased by and consolidated with the Ord Quiz. The Journal was founded by Evans Bros., in 1880, and the Quiz was founded by W. W. Haskell in 1882.

The Nebraska Palladium was the first newspaper printed in Nebraska. The first issue of the Palladium was printed in St. Mary, Ia., on July 15, 1854, but it carried "Bellue, Nebraska," in its title line. The Palladium of Nov. 15, 1854, was set up and printed at Bellevue. The type was set in Bellevue by Thomas Morton, who was later connected with several other Nebraska newspapers during the territorial days. The Palladium expired, probably from malnutrition, in April, 1855. The oldest newspaper in Nebraska is the Nebraska City News-Press, the News having been founded in November, 1854, and published continuously until consolidated with the Daily Press about three years ago. J. Sterling Morton was editor of the News for a short time.

Many years ago the Missouri river, always erratic, cut some peculiar ditches between Nebraska and Iowa in the vicinity of Omaha and Council Bluffs. It switched its current from the Nebraska to the Iowa side in one place, and from the Iowa side to the Nebraska side in another place. As a result a portion of Iowa was on the west side of the river, and a portion of Nebraska on the east side. Carter Lake was formerly the bed of the river. In the Carter Lake section a fine residential section sprang up, peculiarly Omaha and Nebraskan in everything but the facts that it belonged to Council Bluffs and Iowa. The residents paid city tax to Council Bluffs and state tax to Iowa, and received no benefits from either. They had to depend on Omaha for fire protection, for water and for power and lights. They finally seceded in everything but actual secession. They just bought their way out of Iowa and Council Bluffs and are now Nebraskans in fact as well as in name.

Over on the east side of the river, in the vicinity of Lake Manawa, was a little slice of Nebraska, paying taxes to Omaha and Nebraska and receiving no benefits from either. Not being strong enough to make their complaints of any effect, they waited until the fall season, when the Iowa territory, just as it was, as certain legal formalities can be straightened out the old river will once more be the actual dividing line between the two states.

On November 27 Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Cowan of Beaver City celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary. They have resided in Nebraska since 1878.

Dr. J. B. Whittier, 92, a pioneer of the west and for 30 years a resident of Nebraska, died at his home in Decatur, Burt county, on Dec. 22. He was a cousin of the poet, John G. Whittier. He was reputed to be a multi-millionaire. The foundation of his fortune was laid in mining in the days of the Black Hills rush. Dr. Whittier was interested in a number of banks and was one of the largest landholders in the state. He served as paymaster in the Union army by special appointment of President Lincoln.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred V. Trott of Omaha celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on December 23. On the same day their daughter, Mrs. Edward Mair, and her husband, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary.

The Pinch Speaker. An exchange reports: The "orator" from the city failed to reach the typical Nebraska town where he was clubbed at the noon-day luncheon. So the humble fellow-incheson was called on to pinch-hit for the occasion. And this is substantially what he said:

"There are about forty of us here this noon, all interested in our own businesses and all trying to make a profit in doing a legitimate business with one another. But we are all interested in our community, our state and our country; therein we have a common purpose.

"Here sits a doctor. He is my friend and my neighbor. I thought he charged me too much for a tonsil operation, but how do I know what it cost him to get his education and keep prepared to do that service when needed. Sometimes I think the editor here charges me pretty high for the advertising I put in his newspaper; but there is no way of proving it. My business prospers as a result of judicious advertising and I keep on buying space.

"Of course it is a little hard for me to believe that Lawyer Blank works as hard as some of the rest of us, but even at that I am glad to pay him to do some of the disagreeable things that I would not want to do. I might say the same about our preacher friend, for certainly I could not take his place, nor do his work in this community.

"The manager of the electric plant and the manager of the telephone company also have their problems. We are all of necessity their customers and perhaps some of us get a notion once in a while that we should be preferred customers. And here is my competitor in the same line of business I am. We have some honest differences, but I know some of the problems he is up against as he does about me, and he is doing his level best to bring customers to this town and send them away satisfied.

"There are some farmers here and they are not crying because they have less corn crop. If this country ever goes hungry it will not be because our farmer friends have not planted year after year with courageous hope. Maybe the banker has seemed harsh at times, but he is charged with the responsibility of taking care of our money as well as his own. His job is a big one.

"And so gathered here are representatives of all of the business professions, the industries and the trades that go to make up a well rounded organized community.

"My thought is this: That we all depend upon one another much more than we realize; we are better fellows and better citizens than we think we are. And if we honestly believe and act on this principle of community cooperation we will be doing our very best for our town, our country, our state and nation."

Englishman Stirs London With Wit

London.—Londoners never tire of hearing and trying to memorize Lord Dewar's famous epigrams.

Lord Dewar, who is a wealthy bachelor and director of the famous whisky firm that bears his name, has occupied a suite of rooms in the Savoy hotel for nearly 25 years. Recently he supplied the Evening News with a list of his favorites among the thousands of witty sayings he is credited with originating.

These appear under several headings, the first being about life:

Life is made up of trials, with an occasional conviction. To some mothers, life is just one darn stocking after another.

Every man has a black and white side of life. Most men are believers in heredity until the son makes a fool of himself.

Man reaps what he sows, unless he be an amateur gardener. Four-fifths of the perjury of the world is expended on tombstones.

Providence never intended us to be equal except when we are asleep.

Wedded on Permanent Wave. On the subject of matrimony, Lord Dewar says:

No man is so good but a good woman can make him better. A golden wedding is when a couple have gone fifty-fifty.

Marriage is a great institution—for those who like institutions. Many a bachelorship has been wrecked on a permanent wave.

Marriage is a committee of two—with power to add to their numbers.

There are more Mormons in London than in Salt Lake City, but their wives don't know it.

Two pronouncements on divorces follow his marriage observations:

Divorce is a great institution: it keeps women in circulation. If husbands went everywhere their wives told them to go there would be fewer divorces but more widows.

Dewar's philosophy of life shows in the following bits of wisdom:

A philosopher is a man who can look at an empty glass with a smile. It is much better to have a few hundreds in the bank than millions in the brain.

Women's Hair in Chanel. No gentleman has ever heard your story before. To achieve disarmament build battleships by public subscription. It seems to me that woman's place is no longer in the home; it is in the channel.

A man's reputation is that which is not found out about him. A man who hides behind a woman's skirts today is not a coward; he is a magician.

When a man says his word is as good as his bond—get his bond. We have been told that man is the noblest work of God, but nobody ever said so except man.

It is a wise wife who laughs at her husband's jokes. Poets are born, not paid. The road to success is filled with women pushing their husbands along.

It is not so much what a man stands for as what he falls for. Looking at the world today, Lord Dewar has observed:

There are no idle rich—they are all dodging people who want their money. Motor cars are increasing by leaps and bounds—pedestrians are surviving by the same process.

David Rollins in Rush to End "The Air Circus"

David Rollins spent the busiest day of his three months on "The Air Circus," Howard Hawks' and Lew Seiler's Fox Films production, on the final lap of this epic of the air.

David Butler, the Fox director who gave Rollins his first big start in pictures, had the youth in his production of "Prep and Yeh," filmed at Culver Military Academy in Indiana, and was anxious for Rollins to start.

However, cloudy weather held up production on the air picture and Butler had to leave for the east without Rollins. It was expected that Rollins would have to take a plane to get to the Butler unit as soon as he finished, but bright sun for two days and concentration on scenes in which Rollins appeared cleaned up his part in "The Air Circus" at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 6 P. M. Rollins was on the Santa Fe Chief headed for Hoosierdom to take up his next role.

In the cast with Rollins are Sue Carol, Arthur Lake, Charles Delaney, Heinie Conklin, Jane Keckley, Cleve Moore, Sumner Getchell, Henry Okawa and Aggie Herrling.

"The Air Circus" comes to the Gay Theatre January 6 and 7, and has as its theme the interest of young America in commercial aviation, motivated by the daring of Colonel Lindbergh.
