School Meeting Here On Friday

Men and Women of Northeast Nebraska Head Addresses at Annual Session.

Iowa Man Speaks

Dr. Ruchmich and Dean H. H. Hahn Talk of Topics of Interest to Educators.

School men and women of northeast Nebraska, at their annual meeting at the college in Wayne last Friday, heard an interesting program on present-day school questions. About 125 attended. Following addresses and a round-table discussion in the afternoon a banquet was served in the college cafeteria. Addresses closed the session in the evening.

Dr. Ruchmich, assistant head of psychology department at the University of Iowa in Iowa City, spoke in the afternoon and evening. In the afternoon Dr. Ruchmich addressed the group on factors in good teaching, and he stressed the necessity of a teacher being a student, being able to stimulate the best efforts in pupils and having ability to accomplish results. Dr. Ruchmich held of the place of culture in the course of study in his evening address. He stated that music, art, architecture and nature study are most important in bringing out the higher qualities in character development.

Dean H. H. Hahn of the Wayne State Teachers' College training school, presented facts which showed that in most cases the ratings given by instructors at the college in regard to teachers who finish the course prove accurate. Instructors provide information regarding ability, character, etc., of students when they finish courses. After a year's teaching the same questions are answered by superintendents with whom the teachers have worked. Dean Hahn read the ratings given by instructors here and those given by superintendents, showing the striking agreement. The information shows that in most instances instructors here can give an accurate analysis of a teacher's ability and the information is reliable.

Supt. E. J. Hodapp of Emerson, led round-table discussion on the value of high school contests. The question was discussed pro and con, some thinking that the numerous contests are most valuable and some thinking that the matter is overdone. For those who agreed that some should be eliminated, the question of which to take out brought further discussion. No definite conclusion was reached.

Supt. W. Glenn Bell of Allen, presided at the meeting. Supt. R. A. Dawson of Randolph, was elected head of the group for next year. Many of the visitors were shown through the new dormitory at the college at the conclusion of the afternoon program. They expressed themselves as most favorably impressed with the new structure.

ADVERTISING IS POWERFUL AID TO TRADE EXTENSION

THE pulling power of newspaper advertising is evidenced every week in Wayne. Increasing discrimination in buying prompts the wise dealer to enlarge his stock and improve his sales methods. Doubling with such progressive policy is constant and consistent newspaper advertising. The result is deserved extension of the town's trade area. Special sales events attract big crowds from long distances. Every day merchants have new things to offer, and prices are made uniformly attractive. Thus, more and more people come here to trade, and more people get away satisfied. Use of this newspaper's advertising columns enters into the momentum back of the town's business policy and trade growth. It tells people of a large neighboring area what may be expected here in the way of buying opportunities, and so it proves advantageous to both sellers and shoppers. It is the medium by which people may live better for less money.

RULE OF HEALTH IS FOUND AMONG BUSINESS WOMEN

IN contributing to a current magazine, Dr. Barbara Beattie stresses the rule of health and the need of health among business women. The writer says she finds "the business woman healthier than her jobless sister." In business, the woman finds regularity of habits necessary, and such regularity contributes to a healthy body. Health habits, as pointed out, include regularity in nutrition, sleep, occupation, recreation and cheerfulness. Eating the right kinds of food at proper times is important. One cannot storm the stomach with poorly cooked victuals of the wrong kind at unusual hours and expect to stimulate the best health. Sensible proportions of food and sleep and recreation are essential. A cheerful state of mind is not only comforting, but it lends real value to one's work. Work is coming more and more to be regarded a blessing, and its incentive for regular habits among women in business is a source of greater content and prolonged life.

Tells Club Of Art In State

Miss Martha Pierce Gives Address Before Kiwanis Monday Following Luncheon.

Interest Grows

Number of Nebraskans Interested in Various Art Work is Growing Steadily.

"Present Day Artists in Nebraska" was the subject of the address given by Miss Martha Pierce, head of the art department at the Wayne State Teachers College, Monday before Kiwanis following their noonday luncheon at Hotel Stratton. The speaker pointed out that art is fast developing and interesting people of this state because Nebraska is growing out of the pioneer stage and is becoming wealthy. People have leisure time to appreciate art and time to develop their talent in the direction. Young folks with artistic ability are being trained in this line. Art is coming into its own in the state.

Within the past eight years the Omaha Art Institute has sponsored exhibits by Nebraska artists. These annual displays are held in Omaha, usually in December. Thirty-nine oil and nineteen water color paintings were judged by prominent art critics to be of best quality and they were hung in the exhibit last fall. This was about one-third of the paintings sent to the institute, Miss Pierce stated.

Best work in the Omaha exhibit is sent to the five-state display in Kansas City. Of 600 sent to Kansas City the past year 144 were hung. Mark Levings of Omaha, who is gaining national prominence for his etchings, had work displayed in Kansas City. Mr. Levings has established a school in Omaha and a number are studying etching with him. Mary Ann Good and Augusta Knight are among his pupils who are gaining prominence.

Miss Pierce mentioned Gutzen Borglum, sculptor, and Lawton Parker, painter, Nebraska artists who have gained national fame for their work. She also spoke of Claire Briggs and Herbert Johnson, former Nebraskans, who are now well known cartoonists.

Art interest is being given a special stimulus in Omaha by Mrs. Jesslyntin of $3,000,000 for an art institute. A site has been purchased near the Omaha high school and work will start soon on an art museum which will equal the one in Chicago. An art school has already been started in Omaha with Miss Thayer in charge, and with completion of the museum the school will be located there. This new institute will do much, Miss Pierce states, to encourage art development in the state.

Mrs. Alice Edmiston, wife of a Lincoln lawyer, is gaining prominence for her painting. Mrs. Clara Walsh Leland is another who is continuing her art study. Lincoln has an artists' guild, to which Miss Pierce belongs, and displays of the work of members are held each year. A new policy adopted this year is that of having each artist give one piece of work and after the exhibit these will be sold and the money start a fund for helping worthy art students continue study.

Arbor Day Program. Prof. A. V. Teed will speak to the club next Monday about J. Sterling Morton, Nebraskan, who founded Arbor day.

College Enters Team In Relays

Wayne Track Men Run In Hastings Relays—Plan Future Events.

Coach W. R. Hickman and the Wayne State Teachers College track team went to Hastings to participate in the third annual Hastings relays for high schools, universities and colleges last Saturday, April 13.

Wayne was one of the eleven colleges to participate in the meet. The high schools held a separate contest.

R. Andrews of Wayne College was first in the javelin throw; Ray placed second in the discus throw and Farrow took third in the same event. In the high hurdles Farrow took third and Ray fourth place. Rae Evans tied with three others for first place in the high jump. Litel qualified in the 100 yard dash, but had the misfortune of pulling a muscle so that he was unable to run in the finals. This accident seriously handicapped the Wayne relay team as Litel was to run with them.

The relay team, however, came through fourth in the mile and fourth in the half mile despite their handicap.

Elmer Christensen came in fourth in the two mile run. R. Andrews took second in the broad jump, and H. Walden fourth in that event.

Plans are now under way for the state college track meet to be held here May 18. Negotiations are being made with other colleges to enter the meet. Another similar event is scheduled to take place in the near future at Lincoln. This triangular affair will have Nebraska Wesleyan, Cotner and Wayne as participants.

BUY FLUSHER TO RID DISTRICT OF DAMAGING DUST

RUBBING wrinkles out of the moon with a toothbrush would seem about as feasible as use of a broom in trying to conquer Main street dust, lifted and circulated by Nebraska zephyrs. When a zephyr has had a sound night's rest and comes out in the morning full of snap and zip, it carries dirt into business houses with terrible consequences. A Nebraska zephyr is capable of more energy and more complete distribution of dust than any zephyr thus far on the market. Therefore, a more effective way than that now employed to meet a situation of annoyance and multiplying damages is suggested in the purchase of a street flusher. This machine would make a thorough job of cleaning and the zephyrs could frisk and cavort without veneering counters and goods with dust.

Young Farmer Returns Home

Theodore Lessman Who Left During Lapse of Memory, Is Back After Two Weeks.

Does Not Recall Where He Was Or What Happened While He Was Missing.

After wandering about the country for two weeks during a complete lapse of memory, Theodore Lessman, young farmer living near Allen, was found unconscious Monday morning in his one-half mile south of his home. The steering wheel of the machine was broken and the car was turned onto one side against a bank at the side of the highway. Lessman was lying in the car. A neighbor boy found him when on his way to Allen to school. The lad notified the family and Lessman was taken home where he has now completely regained his senses and is feeling well again.

Lessman left his wife and 2-year-old son two weeks ago Tuesday morning, saying that he was going to a neighbor's. He was clad in overalls and did not wear a coat or hat. He drove away in his Ford coupe but did not get to the neighbor's home. He was traced to the Weber filling station in Wayne where he filled the car with gas and he was seen in Omaha by G. W. Fortner the following day, the latter not knowing that search was being made for Lessman. The family has conducted a search through every possible means since his disappearance, and reward of $200 had been offered for information about him.

Lessman is unable yet to recall anything about his wandering, not knowing where he had been or what happened. It is thought that he regained consciousness while the car starts the ditch, again making him lose his memory. He was wearing a new suit of overalls and new shirt when found.

With the care of a doctor and his family he has regained his right mind. Lessman suffered a lapse of memory for a few hours last July and it is thought this was a similar condition, though more prolonged. He has not been well since undergoing an operation last year.

Mr. Lessman plans to sell his farm equipment on account of his health and go into other work. His plans are not yet definite.

Young People's Class.

The Young People's Bible Study class met Friday evening in the E. B. Young home for a review of Ephesians. The class meets this Friday for a lesson in Revelations. Miss Turbitt who is on her way from Minnesota to South America to do work in an Indian tribe, plans to be here this week and will speak to the young folks Friday. Only one woman knows the language of this tribe in South America and she plans to leave the field so Miss Turbitt is going there to learn the language and reduce it to writing in order that the work may continue. Miss Nell Severson of East Africa, missionary who is in this country on furlough, plans to be here soon from her home in Iowa and she will speak to the class about her work. On the invitation of Mrs. Fred Cornell, superintendent of a country Sunday school southwest of Stanton, a group of the young people from here went to the school meeting last Sunday morning to speak and assist in the services. Loren Carlson, William Beishoof, Miss Genevieve Craig and Miss Ethel Curtis were those who went.

Wayne Scouts Enter Contest

Troop One Goes to Norfolk To-day for District Rally This Week-End.

Annual invitation boy scout rally will be held in Norfolk from Thursday until Sunday this week and eleven members of Wayne troop One will attend, there being about twelve troops from this section of the state competing.

The program includes contests in various lines of scout work. This year a new plan is being worked out in that a preliminary test is held in each troop and the best selected to go to the Norfolk meeting. This lessens the number attending. Besides competitive work, the scouts will be banqueted and they will attend church together Sunday. Prof. A. F. Gulliver, scout master, will accompany the boys. Those winning last Thursday in the elimination contest are: Tenderfoot contestants, Jack Morgan; knot tying, Kenyon Lewis; first aid, Miles Tyrrell and Dale Hanks; signaling, Robert Gulliver and Dale Hanks; fire by friction, John Kemp and Lewellyn Whitmore; water boiling, William Mellor, Jr., and John Kemp; swimming, Alphonse Marischang, Robert Theobald and William Ahern. All will send work for the handicraft contest.

To prospective home builders we offer to finance you up to 75 per cent of the cost of your new home—5 to 15 years to pay—interest rate very low. We do this through the building and loan payment plan. It is a safe and easy way to pay for a home with the same money you would spend for rent.

They say wishing never comes (amiss). But we know a couple who wished for a boy and it came a miss.

Never in the history of the asphalt roofing industry has the opportunity been offered to re-roof at so low a cost for material as right now. We offer asphalt Hexagonal 2-tab slate surfaced shingles, size 11 1/2 by 36 inches at $4.50 per square. Carpenter cost averages $2.00 per square. You get a new roof at approximately $6.50 per square. This offer for shingles is good for thirty days only. We have already received notice from the manufacturers of an advance in price on all strip shingles. Whether or not we renew this offer will depend on market and stock conditions.

If we ever own a railroad we're going to equip all the station waiting rooms with big leather rocking chairs. Meanwhile if the Omaha railroad wants to use the idea, they're welcome to it.

This season we are offering Diamond Point Asphalt Slate coated roofing at $3.00 per square. It costs about $1.25 per square to lay it. Why pay the roof peddler twice that amount for an inferior quality? Don't all speak at once.

Most people think of boards as just boards. Yet there is a remarkable difference in rough boards for instance. Measure the width of the average rough board in the average lumber yard and you will find it measures about 11 1/2 inches. Then measure the rough board we sell you and you will find it runs 12 1/2 to 13 inches in width. In other words, twelve of our boards will cover as much corn crib floor as thirteen of the other kind. To put it another way, we give you the value of thirteen boards for the price of twelve.

An aristocracy based on work may be encouraged without harm.

The season of high school and college commencements is just ahead, and the more we see of the strong, ambitious students who are completing courses in these institutions, the more we are encouraged for the future of our civilization.

The annual assessing is now going forward, and when the assessor approaches, one feels just as different from what he would if he were offering his possessions for sale as can be imagined. The sensation is prompted by an altogether different kind of inspiration.

The World-Herald suggests that with the coming of radio communication between America and all foreign countries will come greater assurance of understanding and peaceful relations. In that way we can talk things over. Much heard would please, whereas any disturbing note may be quietly turned off without offending the speaker or other performer.

At a recent meeting of school men here the advisability of having numerous contests was discussed, developing sharp differences of opinion. Those who favored reducing the contest business, disagreed as to the particular contests that ought to be eliminated. Opposing opinions were as numerous as there were opponents. So the matter will have to be referred to the world court.

Many new buildings for Wayne are in mind, but few have been started thus far this year. But why hesitate? The season opens with promise, and conditions for investment are not unpropitious. New buildings are needed, and the sooner they are started and completed, the sooner will the enjoyment of possession and use be realized. The sooner payments on improvements are started, the sooner they will be paid for. Let the work proceed without delay.

Next Tuesday delegates from Nebraska and Wyoming will meet in Lincoln to organize a grain cooperative marketing association and to outline a marketing program. As we understand, the purpose is especially to look after the advantageous marketing of wheat. Speakers experienced in cooperative marketing will present practical plans and emphasize advantages that may accrue to farming districts. While farming communities will be represented by delegates, FILTH AND FLIES.

We note from correspondence that Egypt wallows in dirt. It appears that natives wash their feet two or three times a day as religious custom, not to keep clean. Bathing seems to be restricted to the pedal extremities and is carried on sparingly and without unnecessary waste of water. Filth attracts flies, and the country is reported plagued by them. Modern ways of sanitary disposal or put the brakes on their activities are not in use, and as a consequence they attack everybody and everything without fear. It is surprising that Egypt, settled for centuries, should continue so ignorant and backward. It was there that Moses started on his pilgrimage to the land of Canaan. It was there that imperishable pyramids were built. But it is there that little of no headway has been made in two thousand years. Unwholesome conditions in Egypt remind us of the steady progress made in this country in sanitation and general cleanliness. Not many years ago flies infested people's houses and places of business. But increasing freedom from the pest has yielded to campaigns of extermination. Quickly disposed of garbage receptacles, headquarters, and inventories have given people means to hinder and eradicate flies. Results give more comfort and greater health. Flies are not so numerous, and decreased numbers find foraging a more difficult task. According to reports Egypt is the place for flies to go to be assured of unhampered existence.

The general public is invited to attend. It is hoped and believed the result will be organized and effective effort in behalf of stimulated and stabilized farm markets.

The legislature is speeding up work, and expects to be able to adjourn by the end of the week. In the closing days a good deal of a struggle is taking place over disposal of banking problems, and what will finally come out of the hopper as a finished product is still uncertain. One bill reported out of the senate this week provided for submission to the people of a proposition to appropriate not to exceed eight million dollars for relief of depositors in failed state banks.

The weather has been favorable for farm work, and everything is well advanced. Oats are in, and plowing is in progress. Corn planting will start around May 1. Chickens are hatching and pigs are coming into the world in unusual numbers. The elements are friendly to young stock of all kinds. Gardens are being planted, and new trees and shrubbery are being set out. Farm communities are bounding with activity, and the scene thrills one who is in rapport with nature and who fully senses the wonders of growth.

The so-called Jorles law which was approved March 2, last, and copy of which has been sent to us from Washington for our information and guidance, puts a lot of sharp teeth into prohibition. For the illegal manufacturer, sale, transportation, importation or exportation of intoxicating liquor, as defined by section 1, title 2, of the national prohibition act, the penalty imposed for each such offense shall be a fine not to exceed $10,000 or imprisonment not to exceed five years or both. The law explains that courts are expected to "discriminate between casual or slight violations and habitual sales of intoxicating liquor, or attempts to commercialize violations of the law."

In a current magazine former President Coolidge explains why he did not choose to run for another term. He expresses the belief that a president cannot successfully serve more than eight years. He adds that the latter part of an eight-year tenure shows little constructive work accomplished. In the matter of health, he thinks that while he and Mrs. Coolidge retire with unimpaired health, they could not have remained in the white house ten years without serious injury. He mentions that the president whose fitness is based on achievement and character, comes from the people and goes back to the people, which he is pleased to do. The former president does not expect to be idle. He proposes to continue to work. He says: "Our country does not desire an idler. I wanted to serve the country again as a private citizen."

Every Home a Night Club.
 Milwaukee Journal: Texas Gurn, acquitted by a New York jury on a prohibition charge, efferveces like a pitcher of Salon Royale gingerale: "Light up your life with a smile," she says, "Make your home a night club. Make your family your audience and playmates."
 Now that's an idea. Tex's technique would fit so perfectly into the great American home.
 Mother, bedecked like a circus performer, meets dad at the door with a toothsome grin: "Hello, sucker!" she says.
 Dad responds with a merry: "You got me wrong, kid; I'm the big batter and yegg man from Chicago."

They take dad's hat and coat and give him a check. Junior collects a $12 cover charge. Phyllis hands him a paper hat and a horn. Dinner is served—lobster, cream tart, coffee; an effervescent something in a pitcher; ice cubes in glasses; ginger ale at $2 a bottle. The maid collects $40.90, not including the tip. Cheap at half the price.
 The family adjourns to the drawing room. Mother sits on the baby grand. Junior dashes off a chord or two and swings into "Alabama Moon." Phyllis tentatively kicks a pendant out of the chandelier, then gyrates, pivots and turns a hand spring. Dad tinkles the ice in his glass and yells: "Whoopie, baby, get hot! Get hot!"
 So they are playmates, this happy American family. The night, alone outside in the dark and cold, slinks blackly by. A rosy fingered dawn blushes in the east. Mother's smile wanes; Junior's syncopeating fingers falter like a car running out of gas, then linger over almost forgotten chords. Phyllis throws away her cigarettes. Mother plops down from off the top of the piano. Dad tucks over from the davenport. They entwine arms around four shoulders.

"Now, Junior," says dad; "bear down with the barber-shop tenor." Soufully they sing: "Sweet A-d-o-line, Sweet A-d-o-line." And as the day breaks, the happy family totters off to bed.
 Yes, it's a great idea. By all means, let's make every home into a night club.

Plant Shrubbery At Country Club

A number of different varieties of shrubs were set out at the Country club yesterday. The largest shrubbery was planted in clumps along the creek and smaller varieties near the club house. Money for the shrubbery was raised by the women through luncheons served at socials. About ten members of the club set out the plants. Ladies served dinner to the workers at noon.

IN CONGRESS.
 The special session of congress which opened Monday has for its main purpose legislation looking to improved financial conditions in farming communities. It is not deemed advisable as possible to attempt to fix prices. It is not intended to impose a tax on the farmer. On the contrary it is proposed to aid the farmer and his organizations in the advantageous marketing of agricultural products. As President Hoover suggests in his message, farm difficulties cannot be cured in a day nor by legislation alone. Cooperation is necessary with no relaxation of interest or effort on the part of the agricultural bodies. It is not the purpose of the government to hamper initiative, or do for the farmer what he can and should do for himself. It is proposed to avoid unnecessary government domination and interference. It is proposed to have a federal farm board to assist in the orderly marketing of products, to prevent speculation in farm products and to insure steadiness in markets. It is proposed to appropriate $500,000,000 for the purpose of making loans to farm organizations for use in storing crops and in cooperative marketing. It is understood that any changes in the tariff deemed necessary to stabilize farm prices and put them on an equality with those of other industries will be made.

Nebraska Students On State Papers

Seniors in the Nebraska School of Journalism are engaged in a new experiment this week. Twenty-eight students have been sent out to work on various newspapers over the state to get some practical experience. Miss Josephine Vaught is with the Wayne Herald. Gayle C. Walker, acting director of the school, has made this week's work a new requirement for graduation.

This plan provides a valuable opportunity for close contact with the actual working part of the newspaper. The idea was suggested at the Nebraska press association this winter.
 The university is grateful to the editors who have cooperated in this experiment.
 Nebraska is the first to try any plan of this type. Other universities send their students out in teams to take entire charge of the operation of the paper for a week. The students have in most cases been provided with transportation, but all other expenses the student must pay himself.
 Seniors have been sent to several places near Wayne. Phil Blake is with the Norfolk Daily News, Garnet Fader with the Newman Grove Reporter, LaVerne Keetel at the Leigh World, Paul Nelson at Hartington with the Cedar County News, Harriet Ray at the Norfolk Press, and Josephine Vaught with the Wayne Herald. Miss Vaught has been a guest in the C. E. Carhart home.

Those who will take part on the program are Dr. U. S. Conn, Prof. J. H. Britell, Miss Inez Armstrong, Miss Ann Kibbs, Miss Dorothy Lerner and Donald Simpson. Sermon Is Based On Favorite Text

Rev. A. C. Downing of the Baptist church, used as his text Sunday evening the last words of S. C. Kopp, who passed away in January. They are, "The earth is the Lord's and He will sweep it clean." He added, "God has His work for you; be sure to do it well."
 In his sermon Rev. Downing pointed out the truth in the favorite passage of the late Mr. Kopp. He showed that the quotation first of all acknowledged ownership of the earth, stating that it is the Lord's. In the second place, the quotation acknowledges the excellence of sin, this in the phrase that the earth will be swept clean. In the third place the passage recognizes the service expected of the believer by the creator; and in the fourth place it contains an admonition and exhortation. "Be sure and do it well."
 Rev. Downing urged his congregation that the last words of Mr. Kopp are most important in that each is challenged to find the work God has for him and to do it well.
 Mr. Kopp was for many years a faithful member of the Baptist church. Rev. Downing paid tribute to his faith, also to his love and kindness for his family.

The Country's Greatest Asset.

Lincoln Journal: An enterprising statistician has figured out that, reduced to an economic formula, human life is the most important asset to a community, or to a country, more important than all its material possessions. The value of the lives of the citizens of this country, based on their future earning power, is more than $1,500,000,000,000, a sum five times as large as that representing the nation's wealth.

Since the earning power of a resident of this country is greater than that of other countries, and much greater than that of the residents of countries which have larger populations, the value of human life in the United States is probably higher than in any other country. Not only is our earning power higher than that of Europeans, but our population is larger than of most of those countries. China, on the other hand, has several times our population, but the earning power of the individual is only a fraction of that of an American. These two factors probably balance in our favor.

This treasure in human life does not exist without loss. In fact, sickness and death take a heavy economic toll. The average citizen loses seven days each year due to sickness, a loss of 2 percent a year in his productivity. The loss from this source is estimated at a billion dollars a year. And if the worker must receive a medical treatment which totals more than $10 per capita annually for another billion a year.

There was a time when sickness was taken as inevitable and the loss resulting was not considered a loss. Instead of determining what a man could earn in a year and subtracting what he did earn to find what he lost, his earnings were counted at the end of the year and no loss was thought of, unless he actually experienced financial reverses of some sort. Now we are satisfied that much sickness can be avoided. Federal, state and city public health departments are working toward that end. They are concerned with preventing illness and, once started, staying its spread. Curing is left to the family physician in most cases. Since human life is the country's greatest asset, it is also the greatest potential source of loss and waste. Illness, drunkenness, untimely death from disease, accident or war are all threats against this resource and must be guarded off if we are to keep this huge investment on a paying basis.

If the men on Mars also have six legs apiece, as the eminent scientist assures us the girls have, we wonder how much a two-pants suit costs on our neighboring planet.—Ohio State Journal.

America liked the installment plan so well that she extended the system to Europe so it could enjoy its wars by convenient payments.—Miami Herald.

Why Natural Ice Is PURE Ice

Nature has safeguarded the purity, cleanliness and wholesomeness of your ice supply to a remarkable degree—to a point, in fact, where scientists maintain that it is among the purest of all raw foods.

The sanitary safety of Natural Ice is due mainly to freezing and storage. Ice purifies itself in freezing; this act of freezing takes up crystallization which the chemists claim is the best means of purification.

Natural Ice is stored for a considerable period and this fact materially increases its safety from the public health standpoint.

The idea that typhoid germs and other diseases may be spread through the use of Natural Ice has been proven fallacious by expert scientists.

Laboratory tests have shown that after two weeks' exposure in the ice, upwards of 99 per cent of the germs die, and the remaining ones finally die after months of storage.

As a vehicle of disease Natural Ice is plainly far less dangerous to the public health than either water or milk.

A trial will convince you that Natural Ice is superior in results and economy.

Prospects for a prosperous year for the farmer in Wayne county are bright. The early spring weather has permitted him to get his work well started. The rain of last week was exactly what was needed to put the ground in shape. Many water pipes however, are still frozen which cause a great inconvenience, in some cases making it necessary to hire an extra man to haul water to stock.

Raise Chickens In Proper Way

J. H. Kate Explains How to Be Successful in This Important Industry.

Learn Every Phase

Modern Type Brooder Houses and Scientific Feeds Are Essential Aids.

One who is willing to start at the bottom and work up and who takes advantage of the modern shelters and feeds is found to succeed in the chicken industry, according to John H. Kate, who started in the business about twenty years ago while operating a clothing store in Wayne and later developed a large incubator business. Though retired now, Mr. Kate is still interested in chicken raising and can give others many helpful suggestions in care of the feathered creatures.

Mr. Kate started to raise chickens as a side line in Wayne. He did what he advises all others to do before beginning the chicken business or any other industry, secured all information he could about the work. He studied two years the information sent him as a member of the American Poultry association, which he joined at a fee of $2. He also sought all information obtainable from experimental stations at the university and other places. They have worked out best methods, says Mr. Kate, and one learns without cost many things which he could not get in years of experience by the trial and error method.

After getting information which he thought necessary for starting to raise chickens, Mr. Kate invested $5 in fifteen White Rock eggs. These he got from U. R. Fisher of Indiana, recognized then as the leading White Rock raiser in the country. "Start with the best," Mr. Kate advises, "for it pays in a short time." One should select the kind of chickens he likes from the recognized good breeds, choosing a chicken he likes to look at and work with. The best eggs to be had in this breed are the ones to be sought.

After raising eleven of the chickens from his first hatch of fifteen, Mr. Kate enlarged his flock. The second year he made $260 from the fowls. He then started the X-ray incubator factory in Wayne and developed this industry, going into the chicken raising business exclusively and on a large scale.

The incubator business prospered. Mr. Kate had a good incubator and marketed it well. He advertised his product every week of every year in his home paper. He found that careful advertising, along with service, had been successful in his clothing business here and he applied the same principles to the new industry. Mr. Kate says he advertised fifty-two weeks, each year, and that his advertising was his greatest investment.

The incubator factory grew and was moved to Des Moines to secure better shipping facilities. By the move the factory was able to save $2,000 a year on freight. Mr. Kate remained in the business there for several years.

Hatcheries Developed. Hatcheries have now developed rapidly. Though many still hatch chickens by use of hens and incubators, many take eggs to a hatchery or buy the hatched baby chicks from these hatcheries.

Need Brooder Houses. After securing the best eggs possible and having them hatched, the chicken raiser is confronted with several problems which determine his success. Mr. Kate asserts. Shelter is important. The brooder houses and scratch pens built by lumber yards are a great asset in raising chickens. They provide warmth, plenty of room and scratch pens for the fowls.

Prepared Foods Good. With proper shelter provided, chickens need nourishing food. Here, again, Mr. Kate states, is where one can gain by learning from experiment stations and large companies which have conducted experiments for years. The prepared chick starter and other feeds contain mixtures of the needed ingredients for healthy chickens, Mr. Kate asserts. Years of scientific research and experiment are the foundation for the formula of these feeds and they are best for the fowls. Plenty of gravel and fresh water are also essential.

Mortality Too Great. Mortality among chickens has been too great in the past, Mr. Kate states. It is estimated that to have 200 laying hens a person must have 400 chickens, hatched. This is a sixty percent loss, which is too great.

If chickens have a healthy start, the flock should be raised successfully if the fowls have proper housing, food and water. They must be raised in comparatively small groups also to be healthy. It is generally conceded that 100 chickens in a single brooder house are sufficient to insure health. Keeping the pens clean is also important.

A farmer should have 200 to 300 laying hens on his farm. He can profit most in the industry by making just two hatches a year and having these early so that the pullets will be laying in November and December when price of eggs is high.

Should Realize Profit. Farmers, Mr. Kate stated, can realize a fine profit on chickens if the fowls are raised properly. But if not given these attentions, chickens average at less weight and they do not lay well. A pullet, given proper care when young, should lay six dozen eggs a year.

Mr. Kate has within the past five years been working on a chicken brooder house plan, endeavoring to make it safe, convenient, free from dirt and easy to care for. About eighty percent of the chickens are raised by women and during the season they are closely tied down to the industry. In the device Mr. Kate is making chicks stand on half-inch wire and they are provided roosts immediately. An oil lamp outside the brooder provides heat.

Mr. Kate urges chicken raisers to avail themselves of brooder houses and scientific feeds on the market, and to get all information possible from large companies and from experiment stations. He sees a great future for chicken raisers who do the work according to modern methods.

"Sunrise" Film Here At Crystal

No picture which has ever played the Crystal theatre has been preceded by such favorable reports as have come ahead of "Sunrise," the William Fox special which is to be shown at that house for a run of three days beginning Sunday, April 21, and continuing Monday and Tuesday.

In New York, Los Angeles, Detroit and Philadelphia, where it played extended runs at six prices, $1.65 and $2.20, it aroused no end of favorable comment both from general audiences and from critics of motion pictures and the drama. Mr. Murnau, who made it, is hailed as having done for films what no other director has succeeded in doing for ten years. He was immediately given credit for showing how law unadorned story could be "put over" in an entirely new manner. His camera effects and his use of contrasts in working out his action are said to be entirely different from anything previously attempted with film.

Business. Sioux City Journal: The important interest of American business at the moment is the fact that the special session of congress called by President Hoover to consider farm relief legislation and tariff revision convenes today. For upon the action to be taken in congress on these two questions depends a good deal on the country's economic progress in the next several years. Meanwhile the country as a whole, interested as it necessarily must be in satisfactory solution of both problems, is hopeful that out of the special session will come those adjustments the people have been encouraged to expect.

Mr. Hoover is known to have a definite idea of what ought to be done both as to farm relief and tariff revision. The work of committees and subcommittees in Washington in preparation for the session has been completed, with a general understanding reached as to what shall be offered. The plans are known to incorporate the chief executive's ideas. So far it appears that the White House and the capitol are in close agreement on the fundamentals to be employed in working out the solution. It is believed that a satisfactory solution of these two problems will go far toward increasing the prosperity the country is now enjoying.

The department of agriculture has published a most encouraging report as to the condition of winter wheat, which, in view of the fact that farm relief legislation is believed to be in sight, is bound to make a deep impression in the middle west. The winter wheat crop is $2.7 per cent normal, an improvement over this time last year of 13.9 per cent. This is almost 1 per cent better than the average for this crop for the last 10 years. It is somewhat surprising because of the impression that the severe cold of January and February had seriously injured the crop.

Freight car loadings have shown another gratifying increase, the total for the week ending March 30 going to 967,029 as compared to 948,743 for the same week last year. It was a gain over the week ending March 23 of 6,381. Miscellaneous freight loadings, usually considered as an index to retail merchandise activity, showed an increase of 36,659 cars over the same week in 1928.

Numerous leading industrialists have made reports for the first quarter, showing remarkable increases in net corporate earnings over last year. Some of the increases run as high as 25 per cent.

Market Report. Furnished by Steele, Siman & Co., Sioux City Stock Yards. Sioux City Stock Yards.—Live stock markets carried a satisfactory undertone this week after a slow and weak start. Receipts were moderate in all divisions and demands were fairly good from all sources for all classes of stock. The 11 leading markets of the country received 96,300 cattle the first two days of the week, practically the same as a week ago. Beef steers and yearlings were slow on the opening day of the week but they sold nearly steady with spots a little lower on heavier weights moved in good style and they came in for a strong to quarter advance on the second session. Heavy steers also strengthened on Tuesday with instances of nearly a quarter rise. Bulk of the beef steers and yearlings sold at $12.50@13.65 with mixed yearlings at $14 and strong yearlings, averaging over 1,300 pounds, at $14.25, the highest price of the season for this weight. No real choice yearlings were offered to bring above $14.25. Plain cattle ranged on down to $11.25 and heifers. Yearling steers moved at about steady prices on the first day and were strong to a quarter higher, Tuesday. Bulk of the supply cashed at $11.50@13 with a sprinkling on up to $13.75, equalling last week's crest, the highest price of the season. The cow market was fairly active and is strong to 25c above the close of last week. Koshers sold up to $11.25 and better. Bulk of the plain cows sold at $8.50@10 with beef cows down to $7.50. Bulk of the cutters and low cutters cashed at $6@7.25. Veals brought firm prices with the extreme top at $14 and the bulk at $12@13.50. Bulls sold at last week's prices with the big end of the bolognas at $8.50@9. Shippers took a number of steers, cows and heifers, and some of the bulls and veals, this week. Packers also were good buyers after the early rounds on the initial session. Improvement was noted in the stocker and feeder market. Receipts were moderate and light and demands were broader, owing to better weather and road conditions and the nearness of the pasturing season. Bulk of the cattle suitable to return to the country for further finishing cashed at $11@12 with a few to $12.50 and top at $13 for some 700-pounders. Cows ranged downward from $8.75 and heifers, up to $11.50. Hog receipts amounted to 203,000 at the 11 main markets on Monday and Tuesday, 6,500 more than a week ago and 18,000 more than the corresponding period a year ago. Heavy receipts on Monday caused the market to sag a little but packers competed in good style on the following day, forcing prices up $10 to 15c on the average. On Tuesday, the top reached $11.15. Bulk of the butchers and light hogs sold at $11@11.10, with plainer hogs down to $10.75 and under. Sows slumped a quarter to a $10 basis and stags sold around $9.75. Pigs ranged under $10.75. The 11 leading markets received 11,300 sheep on the first two days of the week, a slight increase over a week ago.

Omaha World-Herald: When Marion Talley takes a dive into publicity she seems to make just about the biggest splash of any simple, unaffected, little middle western home body that we know of. Perhaps it is the very fact of her simplicity and her unaffectedness and her home bodiness that makes the splash so great. She crashed the Metropolitan stage as a child prodigy and now she is quitting, the youngest singer who ever voluntarily left a promising career flat on its back. If it were anybody but Marion we should be inclined to credit her decision to abandon music for a farm to temperament and to expect her back before the footlights as soon as her peeve wore off. But since it is Marion we are afraid she means it, that there isn't a single thing behind her announcement except that she doesn't want to sing any more and that she doesn't want to go and live on a farm. That doesn't mean that she may never appear again on the concert or operatic stage, but that her choice is the result of rational consideration rather than a flare-up with the leading tenor or the attempt to get a better contract out of the Metropolitan management. It is a little difficult for most of us to understand how anybody with half a million can consider that enough to long as the opportunity remains of doubling it and doubling that a few times perhaps. But Marion seems to us just the kind of person to consider enough as sufficient. As for her art there doesn't seem to be any reason why she cannot get just as much pleasure out of singing to cows and chickens as to diamond horseshoes. Her brilliant though brief career is said to have left her little if any changed from the artless child that Kansas City loved before Gatti-Casazza ever heard of her. She really likes to putter around with household chores, and those things that other celebrities hire maids and secretaries to do for them she preferred to do for herself. Miss Talley may find, after she gives it a whirl, that she will care no more for the farm than she apparently does for the necessary traveling about on concert tours, but for the present she evidently really means to give it a try. Another difference between the United States and Mexico is that Mexican ex-Presidents don't write magazine articles.—San Diego Union.

Source of True Comfort. The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for April 21. The Source of True Comfort, Isaiah 40:1-11. WITH this lesson we begin the study of a portion of the book of Isaiah, from the fortieth chapter to the end, which most of the outstanding Old Testament scholars of the present day regard as the work of a prophet whose identity is not known, who lived about 150 years after the time of Isaiah. The writer of this latter portion of the book is often referred to as "the Second Isaiah." It has been suggested that he deliberately chose to keep his identity unknown, wishing to emphasize his message rather than his own personality. He describes himself here as "the voice of one crying in the wilderness." It should not be necessary to point out that the idea of the book of Isaiah as consisting of two parts does not affect the moral and spiritual teachings of the book as a whole. Most careful students of the book would, in fact, claim that this view has greatly clarified and enhanced the teaching, as it is in studying the latter portions of the book in relation to the events of this later period that we appreciate the full significance of the teachings. Is it not only as we succeed in relating the prophecies to their own time that we can adequately grasp their meaning for our time? Whatever conception of the book one may have, it seems perfectly clear that the chapters of Isaiah from this lesson on relate to the period of Babylonian captivity. We have seen that the Northern Kingdom—the Kingdom of Israel fell in 722 B. C., and that the 10 tribes of that kingdom were dispersed never again to have their kingdom re-established. In 538 B. C., that is, nearly 200 years later, the southern Kingdom of Judah fell before the power of Babylon, and its people were carried off into captivity. In this instance, however, there was a restoration of the kingdom, as every student of the Old Testament knows, and a recolonization of Palestine by the Jews whose return from Babylon to their own land was made possible by a later ruler. If it were anybody but Marion we should be inclined to credit her decision to abandon music for a farm to temperament and to expect her back before the footlights as soon as her peeve wore off. But since it is Marion we are afraid she means it, that there isn't a single thing behind her announcement except that she doesn't want to sing any more and that she doesn't want to go and live on a farm. That doesn't mean that she may never appear again on the concert or operatic stage, but that her choice is the result of rational consideration rather than a flare-up with the leading tenor or the attempt to get a better contract out of the Metropolitan management. It is a little difficult for most of us to understand how anybody with half a million can consider that enough to long as the opportunity remains of doubling it and doubling that a few times perhaps. But Marion seems to us just the kind of person to consider enough as sufficient. As for her art there doesn't seem to be any reason why she cannot get just as much pleasure out of singing to cows and chickens as to diamond horseshoes. Her brilliant though brief career is said to have left her little if

McCormick-Deering Corn Planters

Imagine counting kernels from your right hand to your left hand—one, two, three and drop them—one, two, three and drop them. You could do that repeatedly until it became strictly mechanical, and drop three kernels every time with unerring accuracy, yet you can do it scarcely more accurately than the mechanism under the McCormick-Deering 100 Series planter or drill hopper will do it. By cunning devices the seed is herded, one kernel to a cell (in edge or flat-drop plates, two, three or four to a cell in full hill-drop plates) carried to the discharge opening and released to the seed channel in the boot, where the unique and smoothly working valve arrangement holds it until the proper time to release it to the soil.

A Sure-Shot Variable Drop

Earlier inventors probably thought they had attained the ultimate when they had devised a machine that would put two, three or four kernels in the ground in checked rows with a fair degree of accuracy. But to be able to regulate, instantly, the amount of seed which would be accurately counted out to the discharge channel was unthought of. Today, the particular grower demands this feature and it has been worked out in the McCormick-Deering planter in a simple, practical manner, which gives the user his choice of two, three or four kernels in checked hills, or one of three variations of drilling distance, with the same seed plate. A mere shifting of the foot lever (without stopping the planter) does the trick.

Built-in Power Hill-Drop

On most planters it is necessary to order special equipment when it is desired to bunch-drop drill. On the McCormick-Deering check-row planter a very simple change in one of the clutch members converts the planter into a power hill-drop drill for bunch dropping. This additional feature gives the McCormick-Deering planter, as regularly equipped, a wider range of adjustments than is to be found on any other planter.

The McCormick-Deering No. 102 corn planter. Equipment includes reel, eighty rods of check wire, two steel stakes, and seed plates to cover all usual requirements. Plants in rows 28 to 48 inches apart.

Spring's Furbelows Add Smart Touch To Style, and Freshen Old Frocks

BY HARRIET

FASHIONS flower into furbelows as spring advances. Much in made of little things which is quite fitting for this time of year. Some of the new touches can be used admirably to freshen up last year's frocks and suits to this year's smartness. By observing the individual touches to the latest styles you can discover little trimmings or slants on chic that may enable you to re-make the style of a garment that is perfectly good but not new.

Collars and Cuffs
Take the matter of collars and cuffs. It has been years since it was correct to add contrasting ones of utterly different fabrics. Now it is not only good; it is positively chic. A linen, batiste or organza rounding collar and matching cuffs are a lovely thing. What will make it into a modish affair. Bandings of brighter or darker silk grosgrain ribbon on patterned frocks brighten them and make them like new.

Consider the little peplum that is so good now. A frock strolling down Park avenue the other day had a plain bright blue pleated peplum decorating a figured bright blue material. Doubtless the collar and cuffs repeated the contrasting plain fabric. It is a thought to turn over in the mind when looking through the wardrobe. A plain, straightline frock can easily have a pleated peplum added to it and its stylishness doubled.

Flowers are ever a decorative note. New ones of lizard, scarlet, patent leather, or other colorful leather come in sets with belts and hatbands used very nicely. Flowers should be chosen very carefully. When just right they are lovely on costumes. But a wrong choice is poor taste indeed.

A Trim Fix
Suspenders are in again. A pleated skirt from last year used with a very trim fix when suspenders of the skirt's silk climb the shoulder of the blouse and cross in the back. Button them on with fancy buttons and you are fixed.

Reams could be written about the addition of a bow here and there. Obvious bows are never used as good as when they are merely ends of collars or cuffs and the naturally. To avoid a too ob-the latest costumes appearing on the ritziest street in America. One is a French Jersey suit in pale beige, with unusual trimmings in brown grosgrain ribbon simulating a skirt yoke, intricate cut and a pointed neckline. The long jacket has leopard skin facings, an idea for a smart woman to copy. The plain hat is bandied with the same. The second outfit shows the pleated motif in vogue this spring. A pleated peplum ends the overblouse, over a pleated skirt and a double jabot of pleated self-fabric adds its enriching note to the lovely green flax crepe frock. The black haku hat has a feather ornament.
