Rare Attainment In Twenty Years

One of Very Few Great Achievements in Annals of Piano, Developed Past Quarter Century.

TRIUMPHS OF HADDORFF

Some of the Elements of Industry and Skill by Which a Western Piano Has Attained to Great Distinction.

It is a somewhat remarkable fact that not more than two great names have developed in the piano industry within the past quarter century. All of the other "immortals" among the American pianos have existed for a much longer period of time. And there is no one posted in piano attainment, from its creative side, who will deny to the Haddorff its right to be named as one of the two.

This is said, of course, without any disparagement of the many thoroughly good representatives of the popular class of instruments which have been established within the past score years. But the Haddorff has not only made for itself a place among the artistic pianos, but it has succeeded in passing, in the higher attainments by which fine pianos are recognized, a number of older ones the fame of which had been established when the industry at Rockford was founded.

Heart of the Haddorff.

Today there is a country-wide acceptance of the Haddorff piano as an instrument in which the elements of real distinction exist. The name it bears is recognized as that of an acoustician and tone-expert whose work has been done, quietly and progressively, until there is, perhaps, no other actively engaged in piano manufacture who stands higher as a developer of refinement in the science of timbre, or tone color, than C. A. Haddorff.

When in 1901 Mr. Haddorff was called to the industry, when newly established, which bears his name he had ambitions and he was encouraged to exercise them at whatever cost of time or money. He made a good start with the Haddorff, but, as time passed, the results of his never-satisfied efforts reported to the trade and musical public increasing proof of his advanced ideas, and his name at last took its place with those of earlier victors over the secrets of sound control and power.

Triumph of Tone.

The later products of the Haddorff Piano Co. are above and beyond the criticism which has always followed the appearance of pianos of original scales or special designs. The Haddorff small grand is a triumph in tone production which challenges all of the theories concerning the requisite length of string which was so long advocated by piano experts.

There is a quality of tone in the Haddorff which may almost be called peculiar to that instrument. It is an appealing quality, in which there is no trace or slightest suggestion of unevenness or of overtones. The scale is so equalized that the most acute musical ear can detect no "break," and there is no possibility, apparently, of so forcing the dynamic attack as to create any strident or metallic effect.

It was a very long time before any piano, however great, could be entirely freed from the ill effects of "forcing," and even highly expert piano makers have declared that no instrument could ever be made to withstand the powerful attacks of some of the artists of tours de force. The Haddorff is thus credited with having attained the unattainable.—Reprinted from Presto Times. 141

"TALKIES"

One of the world's finest pianos, the HADDORFF, is used exclusively by the Universal Picture Corporation in making their talking pictures.

Price, $880.00

(Generally sold by other dealers for $1,375.00)

The style A is a small grand, five and one-half feet in length. In many homes and in the studios of many teachers and professional musicians there is not the space for a large piano, and yet, the highest order of musical perfection and sound construction are required. The Haddorff style A grand has been designed and built for this particular niche among fine pianos. It has, of course, a distinguished tone, with all the Haddorff characteristics of tone color, sweetness, resonance and power. In action and touch it ranks with the best. At every point in design and construction it has received that minute attention to detail which is necessary to perfection. It is a piano for the critical lover of perfect tone and touch, and it is believed that no one has ever produced a finer instrument in this size.

Haddorff pianos are prized for their tone, which is as outstanding as the voice of a prima donna or the tone of a great violin. The artistic origin of the Haddorff tone and the process by which it is built into the Haddorff piano are explained in the booklet, "Haddorff, the story of a True Piano," which should be read by every prospective purchaser.

The construction of every Haddorff piano is on a par with its tone. It is just the means used to produce the tone and to produce it permanently. Haddorff materials are uniformly of the best. Haddorff workmen are skilled in their trades. Haddorff cabinet work and finish are of the highest character.

Every Haddorff piano can be depended upon for artistic perfection of tone and touch and for years of service.

Please consider the first statement I made: "Haddorff, one of the world's finest pianos."

Fear of Storms

Dr. A. L. Bixby: Minnesota can boast more violent wind storms than Nebraska or the Dakotas, yet a paper published in a village of more than a thousand souls, in Martin county, declared there isn't a "cyclone" cave in town. Tornado is the word that should have been used, as the first name describes a storm of wide range and moderate severity, while a tornado is one of those funnel-shaped affairs which appears and disappears rather mysteriously, but upsets everything in its narrow path. Major Arthur M. Nelson of the Sentinel, in response to the warning cry of his contemporary, says that "people who live in constant fear of storms, disease, hell fire and what not, have a painful and sorry existence in this vale of tears; that fear sucks out all the joy and usefulness of living." He advises people to build their houses as solid as need be and then trust in the Lord and take things as they come. It is a true philosophy of life. As a child we suffered thru fear of storms of wind and lightning. Now a nightly visitation of that sort acts as a soporific. It is better than medicine.

O, ye who tremble at the crash Of thunder in the night, Or try to dodge the lightning's flash, Your conscience isn't right, Who fears the lightning or the wind, Sometime, somehow, somehow, Has sinned.

Awakened by the thunder's growl, The tempest's angry roar, I softly murmur, 'let'r howl! And go to sleep once more.

A conscience free from guilt and sin, Whatever fate decrees, you win.

Billy Sunday on a Wild, Wild Ride

An old friend in a new pose is pictured here. When Billy Sunday, noted evangelist, visited Los Angeles, he was introduced to the famous "wild wooden horse" of the equally famous Los Angeles Breakfast Club. And here's Rev. Sunday giving an imitation of "Ride 'em, Cowboy" for the cameraman.

Sends First Wine Grapes to East

Perhaps, one of these days, easterners who read this will be eating some of the grapes which are in this car pretty Betty Stockton is sealing up. She had the honor of putting on the leaden seal on a carload of fresh California wine grapes, a bunch of which she is holding in her hand, which broke all records for early shipment to the east from California.

Sioux Chief Gives Curtis Peace Pipe

Pictured here are Chief Red Tomahawk, chieftain of all the fighting Sioux and said to be the slayer of Sitting Bull, who led in the massacre of Custer's band, and Vice President Curtis. Chief Red Tomahawk visited Washington recently and presented the vice president with a peace pipe in behalf of his tribe.

The signing of the declaration of Independence, according to the historic painting that hangs in Washington.

ALTHOUGH Americans observe July Fourth as the date of signing of the Declaration of Independence, there still rages an academic warfare, based on the claim that the famous document was not signed on July 4, 1776. It is a myth, say many historians, that the document was signed on that date. But they admit, it is a myth so firmly established in the mind of the American public that it would be foolhardy to attempt to correct it. The exact date which dispensers claim the famous document was signed is Aug. 2, 1776. And they offer rather convincing proof. They say the error concerning the signing of the American Magna Charta began more than 100 years ago when one of the original signers wrote to another, stating that the document had not been signed on July 4, 1776. Since then, every July Fourth receives the claim that the birth of the most precious document in American history is celebrated on the wrong date. On one side of the argument are historians who base their conclusions on the fact that John Adams and Thomas Jefferson left writings which said that July Fourth was the date on which the signing of the Declaration took place. Aligned against them are such historians as Foret, Bancroft and Webster, who offer, as one of the strongest points of their argument, the statement of Thomas McKean, one of the original signers, that he did not attach his signature to the document until five years after its adoption. History reveals that only the names of John Hancock, president of the Continental Congress, and Charles Thomson, its secretary, were read into the first publications of the document. Other names appeared later. Adams, who trusted to his memory, said "the final

Another Meddler. Lincoln Journal: Congressman Howard is not the only member of congress who has rushed in where angels fear to tread with respect to railroad rates. It develops that a few weeks ago, at the instance of Senator Wheeler, the senate addressed an inquiry to the interstate commerce commission as to why the wheat growers of the United States were not given the same low transportation rates by the railroads of this country as the railroads of Canada provide for the wheat growers of the dominion. The resolution went even farther. It wanted to know why similar discriminations were made as between the two countries on agricultural products generally, and suggested that the commission interest itself on behalf of the farmer and secure a similar schedule of rates in this country for the carrying to market of what he grows.

It is perfectly all right for a woman to want to hold on to her youth, but she should not do it while he is driving—Louisville Times. rates on the Canadian railroads are materially lower than on American railroads but the reason is that in Canada the government, in exchange for low rates on wheat, gives the railroads a substantial exemption from taxation. It is also pointed out that a government-owned railroad which does not have to earn anything carries a large portion of the tonnage. The inquiry also develops the fact that if the Wheeler demand were carried into effect livestock rates in this country would have to be increased, because today they are lower than the rates in Canada. Howard wanted export grain rates, put on the same level as export steel products rates, which would have required an increase in grain rates. Wheeler and Howard didn't mean to, of course, but what they asked for would be to penalize the American farmer.

With Lithe Curves Fashionable, Belts at Waistline Increase in Popularity

BY HARRIET

WAISTLINES are mounting as the summer days lengthen. Belts are on far more garments than they were earlier in the season.

At left, a Delph blue georgette outfit features a tight belt at normal waistline; at right, a belted effect with scarf that enables wearer to dispense with a coat and yet look "dressed."

Curves in Style Again. For curves are in again. Not that any woman should figure on gaining weight for that reason.

Full skirts come as another summer gift. The gored skirt is new and is used to advantage in some checked, plaided or striped materials.

For the street, however, long sleeves are much better taste than the sleeveless garment, unless one wears a coat.

The frock is made with a tight crepe satin. The long scarf, belt at waistline, a fitted skirt yoke and groups of shirring holding the fullness of the skirt in.

Two Neat Outfits. For the race, a day's shopping, a morning bridge or any other daytime street wear, I suggest a Delph blue georgette with groups of bolka dots embroidered in self-color and in cream scattered through the material.

Both the blouse and the skirt of the frock is made of the satin blue horsehair braid hat, with a single brilliant ornament.
