AFFILIATING MEMBER

hereabouts had not been exaggerated, and were most agreeably impressed by the appearance of farms and farm homes. They were uniformly pleased with development of the State Teachers College here, noting the constructive work being done under the leadership of President U. S. Conn. Wayne's proverbial hospitality was relished, and none who came could feel other than that the welcome was genuine as well as generous.

Some one suggests that we must feel happy in our job. We feel things move along in orderly and progressive fashion we feel fairly comfortable. When, as frequently happens, something interferes with regularity and hinders development, we turn with anxiety for a remedy and an adjustment. Successful effort to bridge a big or little gulf—feverish while it lasts—is followed by sense of ease—not violent joy—which continues for a brief time or until some other obstacle appears to be overcome. The thing attained soon ceases to thrill, and we look about and ahead to attain the unattainable. We are not happy nor are we dejected, but we are measurably satisfied in the presence of action and progress. We think this is the feeling and experience of most men and women.

A woman contributing to a current magazine explains her preference for loneliness to living with married daughters and becoming subject to a household where she was welcomed, but in which she lacked freedom to do as she pleased. At one time she had a husband and three daughters. It is not explained how the husband disappeared from the circle. Anyway, the daughters married and the mother was left alone. She kept house, and in eating and sleeping, going and coming, she consulted no one and exactly suited her own inclinations. Among disadvantages, she found living alone made her disposed to selfishness. She had to guard against self-pity and against the temptation to bore people with trivialities. Perhaps she was not pressed by pecuniary necessity, but in any event a life of productive endeavor in some agreeable field would seem desirable for one who has few home responsibilities and who wishes to keep up interest in the affairs of the world.

Club Boys and Girls.
Omaha Bee-News: Again the boys and girls of the 4-H clubs have astonished their elders. Animals displayed by the young folks at the Omaha stock show are such as would command attention anywhere. These youthful stock raisers mean a great deal for the future of the industry. It is noteworthy that they leave nothing to chance. When engaged in raising the animals on whom they hope to win a prize, they are extremely careful to note all that enters into their problem. At the end they can tell what rations were fed and which gave best results, and the cost of the pounds of meat added to the animal. Such information is basic in the feeding of stock for market. On the exact knowledge so obtained depends the difference between profit and loss. The old Texan's query, "What's time to a hawg?" has been answered in a most practical way. Time may not mean much to a hog, but it does mean quite a bit to the owner who is feeding many head, preparing them for market and naturally looking for the best possible price. So these boys and girls are not only gaining for themselves information that will be priceless when they come to take up the business of life, but they are showing the way to the men and women already engaged in the business. The 4-H clubs are doing a work that can scarcely be overvalued.

A Worthy Suggestion.
"But peace is not a static thing. To maintain peace is as dynamic in its requirements as is the conduct of war. We can not say 'let there be peace' and go about other business." President Hoover's Armistice day address. Those who know the horror of war, those who were of an age to comprehend the cost and sacrifice it entails, are not causes of concern to men like President Hoover who are working for the scrapping of all wars. There is little prospect of a war at present. It is the future that must be guarded. How to guard against wars when few know how terrible they are is the problem facing farsighted statesmen.

The president sees two roads to that end. There is the League of Nations which exists in Europe. We have refused to travel by that route. "We are," the president said, "confident that at least in the western hemisphere public opinion will suffice to check violence. This is the road we propose to travel."

But "until such time as nations can build the agencies of pacific settlement on stronger foundations; until fear, the most dangerous of all national emotions, has proved groundless by long proof of international honesty" Mr. Hoover is content to remain adequately prepared. Proper defense requires military strength relative to that of other nations. He is ready to go the limit, reducing this strength. It cannot, in fairness to taxpayers, be too low.

The president has a further suggestion to make. As food administrator during the war he made a study of the problem. He would make food ships free of any interference in times of war, place them on the same footing as hospital ships. In the first place protection of the overseas or imported supplies has been the most impelling causes of increasing naval armaments and military alliances.

PROSPERITY.
Probably no one feels so prosperous that he can afford to relax effort and lie down. No one would, if he could, feel warranted in declaring a perpetual holiday. But conditions appear encouraging, even though the supply of cash does not always match up with immediate demand. Of first importance, crops have been all that anyone could desire. Every crop from pumpkins to corn has made large and satisfactory return to the grower. Corn which is now being gathered and housed, scores an average in Wayne county far above that for the state. While all crops may not be turned in to cash at once, they materially aid in easing up conditions, furnishing a powerful force for credit and leading a reassuring prospect. Building operations in Wayne have been brisk and substantial, and more are planned. Farmers are doing considerable improving, and many will feel justified in doing more when their crops are safely out of the fields. With plenty as the rule, there is ample ground for confidence and good feeling.

The president's suggestion would eliminate this cause. Moreover, the suggestion has a humane background typical of the man originating the thought. "The time has come," he said, "when we should remove starvation, of women and children from the weapons of warfare. The president's suggestion deserves careful consideration on the part of every world power. The United States is putting its huge shoulders to the wheel of peace. The administration had courted favor throughout the Americas. Good will is a powerful deterrent of war. The movement cannot stop now. The country must push on. By making the president's plan a reality another score can be chalked up for peace.

Market Report.

Furnished by Steele, Siman & Co., Sioux City Stock Yards.
The cattle market started off with declines this week, owing largely to increased receipts and rather narrow demands. The hog market held up well and the lamb trade showed advances. The 13 leading public markets of the country received 165,000 cattle on the first two days of the week, 19,000 more than the same days of the previous week. Western ranges produced the increase. Yearlings and light weight corn fed steers were in fairly good demand and the market ruled mostly steady for the two days. However, medium and weight grades and all weights showing only a little corn, moved slowly at weak to a quarter lower prices. Shippers were small buyers, leaving the bulk of the cattle in the hands of the big packers. Reports were bearish from the dressed beef trade at eastern consuming centers and this caused bearishness in the cattle market. Bulk of the grain feds sold at $12.00 to 13.50 with occasional sales to $14.40 and no choice kinds were included to bring above $15.00. Plain warmed up grades sold down to $10.50 and under. Practically no grass steers were taken by the packers again this week.

Corn fed cows and heifers ruled steady to a quarter lower with the yearling heifers escaping the loss. Heifers topped at $13.25 with choice grades quoted higher. Short feds sold mostly from $12.25 down. A few dry lot cows brought $8.50 to 9.50. Grass butcher stock ruled weak to a quarter lower with most grades showing the big end of the decline. Most of the heifers sold at $8.00 to 9.50 with a few around $10.00. Bulk of the grass cows cashed at $6.25 to 8.00 with choice kinds higher. Bulk of the canners and cutters sold at $5.00 to 6.00 with old shells down to $4.50. Bulls carried a weak undertone. Bulk of the medium native grades sold downward from $8.00 and rangers went at $7.00 down. Veals remained about steady with the top at $13.00 for selected light weights. Stockers and feeders were in slow demand and sellers peddled at weak to a quarter lower prices. Inquiry from the country probably will not be heavy this week and the increased supplies caused dealers to operate slowly. Most of the stockers and feeders brought $8.50 to 10.50 with choice light weights at $11.00 to 11.50. A few calves ranged higher. Common lots ranged down to $7.00 and under. A few heifers sold at $7.00 to 10.00 and cows under $7.00. Hog receipts amounted to 236,500 head at the 13 main markets on Monday and Tuesday, 20,000 more than the same days last week and 33,000 short of the number received the same days a year ago. The market carried a fairly good undertone on the first two days and prices held a firm basis, compared with the close of the previous week. Shippers were small buyers but packers needed the short local receipts. On the second session, the top was $9.00. Bulk of the desirable butchers of all weights sold at $8.75 to 8.90 with plain grades ranging down to $8.25. A few mixed loads sold at $8.10 to 8.35 with bulk of the sows at $7.75 to 8.00 and top at $8.10. Stags brought $7.25 to 7.75, mostly. Choice pigs topped at $8.50. Sheep receipts totaled 146,500 at the 13 principal markets on the first two days of the week, a slight increase over a week ago. A big increase was noted on Monday and a corresponding decrease on Tuesday. Fat lambs topped at $12.50 and clipper at $11.75. Fat ewes sold from $5.50 down. Feeding lambs brought $12.25 down and feeding ewes from $4.50 down.

Chicago thinks that 1929 will establish a new record of bomb explosions. That certainly ought to make it a boom year.—Boston Transcript.

PEACE.

President Hoover spoke in behalf of peace at the Armistice day observance in Washington City. He pointed out that this country is ready to reduce armaments to the lowest level consistent with safety, earnestly inviting nations to join in a program that will insure future freedom from the horrors of war. As the president suggests, the cause of peace needs as much dynamic force as the requirements of war. For the permanent establishment of peace, he stresses as more important than diplomacy and treaties, more important than courts of arbitration and the machinery of war, the spirit of good will, inculcating the principle of fairness, inspiring confidence and lifting nations out of the morass of selfish hate would seem the surest safeguard of peace. The president emphasized the fact that millions of American voices are raised in opposition to war preparations beyond those needed for adequate defense. He might well have suggested as a power for peace a law conscripting everything and everybody in the eventuality of armed conflict. If every nation would reach that point as a public policy there would be no breaches that could not be repaired by friendly agreement, and the world would save millions in men and treasure.
