Addresses Club Here On Friday

Prof. G. W. Costerisan Speaks to Women on Education for Home Membership.

School Is An Aid

Success as a Child and as a Life Partner Should Be Made Possible in Family.

Prof. G. W. Costerisan addressed the Wayne Women's club Friday at the F. S. Berry home on "Education for Worthy Home Membership." This was one of the objectives outlined by the National Educational association for Education week, which opened on November 11.

The 1929 program of the association, stated Prof. Costerisan, is built about seven cardinal objectives as follows: Education for faithful citizenship, education for worthy home membership, education for mastery of tools, techniques and spirit of learning; education for vocational and economic effectiveness, education for health and safety, education for wise use of leisure and education for ethical character.

Activities of the club this year are centered about the home, and for this reason, Prof. Costerisan chose for discussion the topic dealing with this phase of education. The national Congress of Parents and Teachers believes that the ideal home should emphasize eight factors. The congress says the ideal home should be: Economically sound, mechanically convenient, mentally stimulating, artistically satisfying, socially responsible, spiritually inspiring, founded on mutual affection and respect, and a place of unselfish love and service.

Prof. Costerisan showed how the school can help the home to qualify in each of the eight factors. In economic soundness, education provided in school aids in increasing earnings in after years. The school, made convenient, is helping homemakers to arrange their quarters in convenient fashion. To make the home mentally stimulating, the school teaches use of books and libraries and the ideal of life-long learning. All teaching of art in schools gives fundamentals of form, color that add beauty to the home. The school concerns itself with all children and thus puts all on the same level, helping make the home socially responsible. Right, force of law, good will and high ideals are taught in schools and these carry into homes. Self respect and respect for others, emphasized in school, helps build affection and respect in the home. Cooperative enterprises, training for follow-up as well as leadership, as given in socialized relations in the modern school, make for unselfishness and service in the home.

John M. Brewer, director of vocational guidance in Harvard university, says that guidance for home membership should consist in making possible success as a child in the home and success as a life partner. Success for the child in the home should consist of the following: Eating and sleeping properly, aiding in dressing and caring for himself with less frequent supervision; aiding in household duties, contributing to the family by productive work, cooperation in planning and thinking and expressions of kindness; and articulating home membership with activities in school, citizenship, vocation and recreation.

Success as a life partner should consist of: Developing a normal, healthy and long-continued acquaintance as a basis for friendships; winning the vocational efficiency necessary for the economic basis of the home, choosing a life partner, establishing a home and learning the cooperation to maintain it successfully and developing and building the home through cooperative relationship called marriage.

In summarizing Prof. Costerisan advised: Set your health standards high and improve your habits daily as modern life demands a strong body and a sound mind; magnify your home as the center of a life that is happy, useful and unselfish; know how to observe, to study, to think, to plan, to judge and to act; find your talents and train them; do something daily to make your community cleaner, quieter, more beautiful and better governed; let your daily play be a source of joy and strength, a balance wheel for your work; and search for the highest values and build your life according to the best patterns.

AGRICULTURE IN THIS COUNTY IS WONDER TO MANY

In studying Wayne county's corn exhibit at the Diamond Jubilee in Omaha recently, some people, unfamiliar with north Nebraska, were amazed at the superiority of the product, having always held the belief that this county was too far north and too frosty to mature the crop. The surprise of such people over the advanced and favorable state of agriculture here is no greater than our surprise that people anywhere in Nebraska are so benighted. We do not want to say that Wayne county is the best corn growing county in the state, but there is none better, none more certain to carry a big yield to triumphant maturity. We feel that modesty should keep us from saying that Wayne county has the most intelligent and progressive farmers in the world, but we do say that none anywhere reflect more pronouncedly the good qualities suggested. Exhibits at the state fair and at other state-wide shows like the Diamond Jubilee are most desirable in revealing facts not generally known. Strangers who visit Wayne county for the first time, are often surprised. More should be persuaded to come and see what the county's agriculture is doing.

College Team Wins In Game

Wayne Defeats Chadron Here Saturday In Closing Contest of This Season.

Second In State

Local Men Tie With Omaha in Conference Ranking—Chadron and Peru First.

Wayne State Teachers College football team defeated Chadron college team here Saturday in the closing game of the season, the score being 7 to 0. Wayne and Omaha university tie for second place in the state college conference, and Chadron and Peru tie for first.

In the Saturday contest, Wayne outplayed the Chadron team most of the time. The local men had the better of the punting in the first quarter. A Chadron fumble in the second quarter gave Wayne the ball on the visitor's 20-yard line. Wayne lost the ball on downs, but Newton of Wayne, broke through on the next play to block a punt and ran with the ball for a touchdown. Schwartz kicked for the extra point.

McKinley, Jensen and Dennis starred for Wayne. Buckingham was outstanding on the Chadron team.

In a preliminary game Saturday the college high school met Pilger and the visitors won by 12 to 7. This was the closing game for the Wayne team.

A stranger by name of Peterson, fined in county court last week on charges of possession of liquor and intoxication, paid his fines Tuesday and was released from the county jail.

Gives Address At Convention

Dean H. H. Hahn Speaks to Women of Stanton County at Pilger Last Friday.

Character Making

Stresses Importance of Proper Surroundings in Moral Training.

In addressing the Stanton county federation of women's clubs at the annual convention in Pilger last Friday, Dean H. H. Hahn of Wayne, considered the subject of "Character Education." He stated that building character is a cooperative enterprise in which a number of social agencies participate and share responsibility. Of these agencies the home, the play group and the neighborhood lay the foundation of character. It is in the face-to-face relationship of these institutions that the development of moral traits is initiated.

Of the three agencies mentioned, the home exerts by far the greater influence upon character and must therefore be charged with the primary responsibility of getting children started in life. The years the child spends in the home before he comes in contact with the outside world are the most important for character training. During these years he sees everything, hears everything and shares everything in his little world. Through imitation, not through heredity, does he become an exact copy of the other members of the family.

Next to the home in importance comes the play group. Hour for hour playmates have even a greater influence upon one another than have the members of the family. In proof of this statement are the manners, language, ideas, emotions and attitudes which children bring from the playground into their homes. Parents must be forgiven for selecting their children's associates or playmates.

The neighborhood, of the three primary groups, exerts the least influence upon children, and yet it can be made a strong factor in character training. The neighborhood in which all neighbors appreciate moral values and are interested in the moral welfare of children sufficiently to cooperate with one another in making right behavior satisfying and wrong conduct annoying, has a wholesome influence upon the character of its children.

It may be said, therefore, that the moral training which children receive in the home, on the playground and in the neighborhood constitute the foundation of their character. At the door of these three institutions lies the primary responsibility of character education.

The moral traits, initiated in the primary groups, must be extended and sublimated in order that children may be trained for larger citizenship. This duty rests upon the large social groups such as the school, the business and industrial life, the church, the press, the state, the nation and even the world at large. Of these the school is preeminently the most influential in character education. Its responsibility is two-fold: First, to remedy the shortcomings of the training which children receive in the primary social groups; and second, to extend the moral traits developed there so that they will function properly in large-group relationships.

In the new field of character education the school is earnestly experimenting to find an effective technique. In Nebraska and elsewhere it is suggested that the schools attempt to develop character synthetically, that is develop moral traits separately one at a time. For example, someone analyzing the character complex, recommended that the schools spend two weeks on the development of each trait. Synthetic teaching has been tried in a number of fields and in each it has been abandoned because of failure. It is doubtful whether it will be successful in the field of moral education.

Life situations are usually so complex that all moral traits, like health traits, develop together. One does not attempt to develop health synthetically by putting one health element at a time into the complex. All that is necessary is to provide hygienic conditions of living and health attends, more often than not unconsciously, to all concerned. So it is with moral character. Provide zestful and wholesome social living for children and proper development of character will attend. This is especially true when the social living is organized by the school and other institutions for the purpose of character development, and children are guided in these social situations by those who love them and have skill in leading them.

REPUBLICAN AT WEST POINT IS 59 YEARS OF AGE

THE West Point Republican is 59 years old, having just entered its sixtieth volume. What a story of ambition, struggle and achievement its files must tell! It is probable that worthy newspaper was started with the town and therefore that it denotes the age of the town. E. M. Von Seggern, now and for a long time editor and publisher of the Republican, calls attention to the vision of the first settlers who, like all first settlers, anticipated the development of a great manufacturing center. The editor sweeps the richly endowed surrounding area with an approving eye and concludes that the dream of the pioneers had been more than realized—not in factory smoke and factory laboring groups, but in prosperity and cultural advantages made possible by extraordinary agricultural wealth. West Point has developed steadily and substantially and through the years the Republican, faithfully recording events and safeguarding and promoting the public's best interests, has been closely linked with the history of the community. Wayne county had few settlements when West Point was started, and Wayne was raw prairie for ten years following that early date.

Speaks Monday To Kiwanians

Prof. J. Q. Owen Addresses Wayne Group on the Proper Attitude Toward Life.

No Demand To Win

World Asks Only That One Play the Man in All Things, Having the Right Outlook.

"Your attitude toward life is the most important thing about you," asserted Prof. J. Q. Owen in addressing Wayne Kiwanians following their Monday luncheon at Hotel Stratton Monday. "You can make it what it should be as the promoter of the welfare of others and as a source of the most durable personal satisfaction by right cultivation."

A man's attitude, stated Prof. Owen, is more important than the result obtained. He cited several examples to substantiate this statement. One of these was that in a battle a small number of men with the determination to win are more to be feared by opponents than a large number with disconcerted attitudes.

"It is better to find a man happy than to find a five-pound note," the speaker quoted. He explained that a happy attitude of person one meets is of more value in stimulating one to endeavor than the finding of money.

"We live in a world of appreciation," Prof. Owen stated, "and the two-fold obligation is to live a blameless life and to pass on the torch of progress." To meet and develop the first, the speaker asserted, one must have a sense of responsibility, a desire to serve the day and age and a belief in life. To measure up to the second one must establish a home, make it the center of right influence and train the future generation to live courageously, without complaining, honorably, without infringing on rights of others, and appreciatively, enjoying the best there is.

Prof. Owen told of a Mr. Lannithorne who, through years of paying penalty in prison, though this way through a conviction that in courage alone is to be found security and the power to endure. He developed unselfishness, courage, nobility and poise.

"The world asks not that we win. It demands only that we play the man in all things." Custer lost at the Little Big Horn, Wilson at Paris, Brown at Harper's Ferry, Nathan Hale failed to get general information he sought; and Captain Scott failed to return from the south pole. Yet each is a model of courage, endurance and noble living that shall not be forgotten.

Prof. Owen urged that each cultivate the proper attitude toward life, developing courage, unselfishness and poise.

"Why Bring That Up"

THE KNOT-HOLE
No. 25. Wayne, Neb., Thursday, Nov. 28, 1929 Vol. 4

One of the most tragic spectacles in a small town is a little group of live-wires trying to push the community load, while the other ninetenths ride and drag their feet.

Beautiful oak floors may now be had at very reasonable cost. The winter time is an especially good time to get this work done. Carpenters have more leisure than during the rush of spring and summer. Think it over. Ask us for estimates of the cost.

Doctors in Paris are vacillating on the arms again rather than on the legs. The scars, we suppose, are becoming too noticeable.

Nothing draws a crowd quicker here in Wayne than an automobile collision. Ever notice?

The editor put in last week at Rochester going through the clinic. That's an interesting place. They found it necessary for the editor to go back and spend three or four weeks with them, so if you do not find the Knot Hole in the Herald in the meantime you will know it is not because we did not want to write it up, but because we can't.

It may not be amiss to remind you that it is just as hard to get high quality in coal at low prices as in all other forms of merchandise. However, there is no better authority on coal values, be they high or low, than a conscientious man who has merchandised coal for twenty-five consecutive years or so. He is the man who should be consulted for fuel values. If you had a sore tooth, you'd go to the dentist. In matters of finance, you'd consult your banker. You wouldn't feel safe riding on a fast train pulled by a locomotive manned by a fellow who got his experience telling the world how to do things, but who had made a failure of everything he ever undertook to do for himself. Neither should your coal problems be entrusted to anyone who does not have an intimate knowledge of the coal business.

There's a girl in this town who says there's nothing she hates worse than throwing away letters. Well, it has said some girls to keep them.

Speaking of coal, we have a lump coal at $10.00 that not only has a lot of heat in it, but it will not break up and fall apart in your bin after you get it. It is worth every dollar you spend for it.

Making a screen door into a storm door is such a simple matter. A few feet of storm door paper, or glass cloth, five or six lath and a couple dozen shingle nails and everything can be made as cozy as with an expensive storm door. Ever try it?

Saddest event of the month—A Scotchman attending the funeral of a man who owed him ten dollars.

Uncle Ab says there is one nice thing about castor oil, it can't be mistaken for gin.

The percentage of families that formerly had an income nineteen hundred dollars and lived on eighteen hundred is now probably duplicated by the number with an income of eighteen hundred; who live on nineteen hundred.

We believe you'll like the service rendered by our truck. The driver is instructed to be very careful about your property and not to leave spilled coal lying around for you to pick after he has left your place.

It's sometimes a short work from the broom stick.

In traveling, a story becomes so rapidly enlarged and colored that it does not go far before its originator cannot recognize it.

The death of Georges Clemenceau, war-time premier of France, at the age of 88 years, marks the passing of a distinguished world figure. His positive mind and tempestuous public career doubtless led to his reputation as the best loved and most hated man in France. His intense public activities and giant responsibilities for over fifty years cause one to marvel at his remarkable longevity.

Warning is issued that Georgia oysters, imbued with the spirit of the old south, are natural-born fighters. The story is told that a duck, nosing around carelessly, had its face bitten off by an oyster, and that a raccoon, promading along the beach, had one of its feet crushed. Georgia oysters, knowing what has been happening to their antecedents for many years, will stand for no fooling.

The average office holder suffers the pain of being unable to express a conflicting opinion and of being shy about helping a friend for fear of the possibility of arousing opposition. If any reward comes to an office holder it is not independence of expression or of delightful peace of mind. We would advise people who are serenely employed, to avoid office holding as long as there are those who have the time and inclination to be sacrificed.

Mild weather this week has facilitated corn husking, and great quantities have been gathered. Some farmers have finished, and others are pushing for the goal with all possible haste. If the elements remain passably friendly for another week or two, none will be in the field, and then attention may be turned to other activities. The size of the crop has prolonged the husking job, though thickly set ears and uniformity of stalks have made picking comparatively easy.

For one who is too cheerful, too optimistic, too highly excited safely to be at large unattended, we would recommend a modifier in the way of conversation with a chronic knocker and crepe hanger. He will advise that everybody

SOUND.

Opinions that basic soundness exists in business and industrial conditions in this country are expressed by many executive heads of industries, quoted by the Christian Science Monitor. Assurance is given that there is no ground for alarm. It is pointed out that automobile production so far exceeded normal during the first nine months of 1929 that a slump was reasonably expected as the year drew to a close. Mounting activity in the automobile industry is confidently predicted for 1930. In manufacturing lines generally no uneasiness is felt. Demand for products has shown little recession, and investigation fails to reveal any ground to fear future consequences. The opinion is expressed that credits released from the Wall street collapse of a few weeks ago will serve the country better by being diverted to productive channels. The president is acting in behalf of stability. He has asked the governor of each state to stimulate rather than retard public improvements in order to keep up employment and put money into circulation. Responses have been in harmony with the executive's suggestion, and the promise is for full recovery of activity in any line that has been inclined to slow up. It seems to be the general belief that next year will be extraordinary. Certainly territory like northeast Nebraska, with a year of unexampled crops as a basis, ought to ride a high tide of prosperity.

and everything is bad and getting worse. He will say that business is poor and getting poorer, that collections are slow if not impossible, and that people are shiftless and indifferent. He will propose no solution and offer no hope. And he will evidence profoundest comfort over his success in disseminating gloom. If a course of this treatment doesn't take some of the cockiness out of the most cocky, cure is impossible.

While the president appeals for the freedom of the seas and the safety of hospital ships and women and children in case of war, along comes a magazine contributor who explains results of his investigation of death-dealing implements. Powers of destruction have been multiplied many times over since the World war. Unions nations in conflict politely refrain from employing airplanes and poisoned gas in ways now made possible, there would not be enough left to patch and start over. The way to insure freedom of everything and everybody is to struggle as hard to arbitrate and insure peace as to struggle in the event of hostilities. And as often pointed out, one strong argument for peace would be to have written into law a provision for the conscription of everything and everybody in case of war.

Congress adjourned for a week's recess with members still discussing the tariff. Long-winded speeches dealing with different tariff schedules, all in more or less conflict and calculated to arouse the approval of constituents back home, would seem less effective in arriving at a satisfactory solution of the problem than a quiet and thoughtful—if possible—study of the question, granting concessions in the interest of general fairness. If congress would burn less red fire and make less noise it could reach destinations in the consideration of public policies in less time, with more nearly equal justice and with less disturbance to the popular peace of mind. When congress resumes next week, we hope members will modify party politics and sectional demands, and make a determined effort for sound progress that will really merit approval and establish appreciable ground for the salaries which they receive.

Business

Sioux City Journal: There has been a strong recovery of public confidence in the weeks that have followed the first disastrous market in the New York stock market. The situation today as affects general business is, thanks to the intervention of the Hoover administration, entirely favorable. The eager response of industrial leaders, rail executives and others to the lead taken by President Hoover made a favorable impression from the first, but now with definite plans in the making confidence is steadily growing stronger.

There is to be expansion in various directions. The railroads will undertake more ambitious programs in 1930 than in many years. There will be considerable construction, calling for larger pay rolls and heavier shipments of steel and other materials. Meanwhile it is indicated that highway construction in various states will be heavier than usual next year and that public works in cities throughout the country will be undertaken. The total of road construction, including street paving, is expected to cost some $2,000,000,000 for the twelvemonth period.

The effort of the Hoover administration shared by the leaders now is to stimulate business ac-

THANKSGIVING.

As contrasted with the circumstances which prompted the first Thanksgiving day, people have much to inspire gratitude. In his proclamation the president emphasizes prevalence of peace and plenty, and the improved spirit of cooperation and good will in the world of industry. Science has accomplished wonders in the enrichment of life's experience. It has increased knowledge and made living easier and more healthful, multiplying comforts and advancing longevity. The thing now considered a task or a hardship would have been accepted as a relief from inconvenience and hard drudgery by the Pilgrim fathers. The Pilgrims swelled with gratitude over meagreness that would now be derided as an intolerable burden. We have received much, and we expect more and more, and sometimes we complain bitterly over failure to make the material headway which we think we deserve. Of more importance than large accumulations of worldly goods are habits of right thinking and right living—freedom from envy and hatefulness—closer accord with the supernatural source to which we turn with grateful acknowledgment, thereby receiving spiritual strength and the basis for a happy outlook.

Improved Type Of Auto Battery

GREATER STARTING POWER IN COLD WEATHER.

There is practically just one period when the motorist has starting troubles and that is in cold weather. This is because the efficiency of storage batteries falls off 50 percent at zero temperature, and at the same time the power to crank the engine increases many fold. The improved Vesta Battery is one of the most marked improvements in battery building during the past decade. It is supreme in cold weather performance. It provides the three great essential battery qualities, these being higher voltage, (quicker starting) greater capacity and in no way sacrificing the long life which is so characteristic of Vesta batteries.

The increased efficiency of the Vesta Battery enables it to deliver more punch and quicker turnover, assuring a more rapid start in the coldest weather. This improved battery, coupled with exclusive Vesta Isolator feature, which locks the plates apart minimizing short circuiting (the cause of 75 percent of battery breakdowns) insures motorists the most efficient and the longest possible service from this battery.

Farms Free From Fatality List

Agriculture in Nebraska Reports No Deaths From Accidents During Two Weeks.

Accident statistics for Nebraska compiled by the Nebraska Press association and the rehabilitation division of the state department of vocational education, for two-week period ending November 19, 1929:

Table with columns: No. Acci., Total, Accidents, Dth, Inj, Cas. Rows include Motor acci., Other acci., Emp. agri., Emp. ind., Home acci., Total.

Of the 220 persons injured, 18 were permanently disabled. Gunshot accidents resulted in three deaths, four disabilities and five other injuries.

Football resulted in five serious injuries. Nine out of 25 pedestrians struck by cars were children. This is a substantial improvement over the last report but the ratio of children injured in this manner is still too high.

Motor accident report for period ending November 19, 1929:

Table with columns: Acci, Dths, Inj. Rows include Skids, slippery streets, Skids in loose gravel, Tire blows out, Mech. defects, Losses control, Speed, Passing car struck, car passed, Passing car struck, oncoming car, Ditched by passing car, Collision, Struck obstruction, Struck pedestrian, Struck bicycle, Driver asleep, Blinding lights, Railroad crossing, Miscellaneous.

Total 109 12 123. Motor vehicle accidents, their fatalities and injuries for the last two weeks dropped 33 per cent. While the total is dropping, a new cause common to winter months is creeping in.

Skids on slippery streets and highways caused six accidents and were probably responsible for several of the 22 collisions.

What about this for a winter's driving slogan: "Watch your speedometer and your brakes."

General summary for twenty-eight weeks:

Table with columns: Inj, Dis, Dth, Total. Rows include Motor acci., Pub. acci., Emp. agri., Emp. ind., Home acci., Total.

Agriculture has made a record. There has not been a single fatality recorded against it in the last two weeks. This is the first time since the study was started that a general classification has not suffered a single fatality.

You farmers keep out of gas engine belts, don't jump on pitch forks, keep your mitts out of corn shredders and watch your step in general and you probably will still be alive another two weeks.

Now let's see all other industries equal this record.

Hold Campaign To Aid Health

Miss Pearl E. Sewell is in charge of Christmas Seal Drive in the Schools.

For the purpose of raising funds for promoting health, the Nebraska Tuberculosis association, as for many years past, plans to conduct a sale of Christmas seals through the schools, starting Friday after Thanksgiving.

The 1929 seal depicts a proclaimer of the important tidings that health is the best insurance for happiness. Miss Pearl E. Sewell, county superintendent, has charge locally of the sale of seals.

The story of the Christmas seal is the story of a dream come true and the name of the man who conceived it deserves to be recorded among the humanitarians of the age. It was in 1903 that Einar Hoelbell, then an obscure postal clerk in Denmark, conceived the idea of selling Christmas stamps to relieve the suffering of tuberculosis patients.

Copenhagen needed a hospital for tubercular children and Hoelbell was daily cancelling thousands of postage stamps on holiday greeting cards. Why, he reasoned, should not this flood of mail sent out in the spirit of "peace on earth, good will to men" do a trifle service? Could each massive not carry a much needed Christmas gift to the sick?

Hoelbell enlisted the cooperation of the Danish royal family and influential officials and in 1904 the first nation-wide tuberculosis Christmas seal sale was held. A hearty partnership was formed between the American Red Cross and the National Tuberculosis association, which lasted for ten years. In 1920 the partnership was dissolved and the Christmas seal appeared for the first time with only a double barred cross.

Fifty percent of the proceeds of the Christmas seal sale in each county will be used for health work in the county and the remainder is used for state-wide health work. The money on hand this year in Wayne county was used to pay a physician for health examinations in all of the rural schools. A state law requires such health examination each year, to be given by a physician or by teachers.

The seals sell for 1c each. A double-barred pin will be given each child who sells twenty-five seals, and a health game to each child selling 100. Two Wilson volleyball balls will be given, one to the room in the town school and the other to the rural school selling the most seals, per capita school enrollment. In addition every room selling 1,000 seals will be awarded a copy of the book, "Healthland," or a wall fixture containing 250 drinking cups.

It is estimated that 100,000 people die each year in the United States from tuberculosis. The death rate has been decreased fifty-one percent in the past twenty years by proper care. The health fund has helped thousands of children to form good health habits, has helped secure the passage of many important health measures by legislation, has drafted the physical education law, has distributed over one million health pamphlets, has helped fight animal tuberculosis, has furnished nurses for school inspection, has conducted dental surveys, has helped county clinics and has promoted nutrition work in schools.

Gets Interview With Noted Man

Bernard Pollard Talks to John McCormack and Writes for Stanford Daily.

In spite of the fact that John McCormack, famous singer, declared he was too busy to be interviewed, Bernard Pollard of Wayne, student at Leland Stanford university in Palo Alto, Calif., secured a few words with the noted man and wrote an interview which appeared in the Stanford Daily November 22. McCormack gave his concert on Sunday last week. Bernard learned that the singer never gave interviews on concert days so he visited the hotel at which McCormack stayed the following day. Twice he was informed that the singer was not in the hotel. When a throng of reporters and others were waiting in the hotel lobby to see McCormack, Bernard was first to spy him on the elevator. He rushed to him and asked to speak with him a few minutes; McCormack said he was too busy; and Bernard insisted that he answer a few questions and the following is what he wrote:

"Believe it or not, John McCormack finds it more thrilling to sing before an inanimate microphone than to an enthusiastic audience."

"One has only to realize the true significance of the 'mike' to experience this greater thrill, something akin to stage-fright, which every radio and 'talkie' performer has felt," stated the famous tenor in a recent interview.

"The microphone frightens him with the responsibility of pleasing uncounted millions of theatregoers, who will form their opinions on what the instrument relays. If he is failing to 'get across' to his unseen audience he does not know in time to alter his performance to please them. His double has undone him."

Different Thrill. "The thrill of a personal appearance is different. It is intimate and inspirational. An enthusiastic audience striving to express its admiration and love in so many ways helps the performer. Their faces are barometers by which he may gauge his performance."

John McCormack was born in Athlone, Ireland, in 1884. In 1907 he made his debut as Turlough in "Cavalleria Rusticana" at Covent Garden. He became an American citizen in 1919 and two years later was decorated by H. H. Benedict XV with the commandership of the Order of St. Gregory and also of the Holy Sepulchre. In 1924 he was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor and the last year was elevated to the papal peerage by H. H. Pius XI.

All Family Sang. McCormack stated emphatically that his recent debut in the movies was not to be regarded as a belief in the decline of the concert platform in public esteem. The moving picture, the legitimate stage and the concert platform all have their places, he said. Improvement in any one of these does not involve demotion of the other two. On the other hand, all are promoted by the advancement of one. This is true of all progress, he believes.

"I have never truly realized that there is anything especially remarkable about my voice," McCormack answered when asked how early he was himself aware of his great gift. "I have sung as long as I can remember. All of my family sing, to their opinion, as well as I do. None of us can understand why I was chosen to make the name of McCormack mean something in music."

"Theoretically talent may be a limitation; practically, it is not. With hard work and proper guidance any degree of innate ability may be developed to almost any height. There is no limit to what an individual can do for himself."

Hotel Held Up. Fremont, Neb., Nov. 21.—Two men held up four employes of the Pathfinder hotel at 3:30 a. m. today and after rifling the safe and cash drawer escaped. The loss had not been completely checked early today, but William Dressel, owner, said he believed it would amount to about $300 in cash and possibly some negotiable paper.

After rifling the place, the robbers forced their victims into the engine room in the basement and fled. It is believed they had a car and an accomplice waiting outside.

Tells Of Summer Spent In Sweden

Miss Edna Swanson of Laurel, Writes Interesting Account of Old Country Visit.

In a letter to Miss Genevieve Craig of Wayne, Miss Edna Swanson of Laurel, who spent the summer in Sweden with her father, Louis Swanson, gives an account of her trip.

"We left Sioux City May 8 and sailed for Sweden May 11 on the boat, Kungsholm. The boat was very fine. It was 608 feet long, 78 feet wide with a displacement of 26,700. Everything was as nice and clean as one could wish. The meals were good and we were served coffee every afternoon. The weather was grand going over and the boat rocked very little. We landed at Gothenberg on May 20, this being second Pingst which is celebrated in Sweden. There were several hundreds of people congregated on the dock when the boat arrived. There were 1,300 people on the boat going over.

Queer Road Rules.

"We took the train from Gothenberg to Linderod and from there we took a taxi to the home of my cousins. The first thing that seemed queer to me was in keeping to the left side of the road. It seemed to me that we would run into every one we met. The roads were very narrow and crooked. However, the highways were wide although the longest distance of straight road there was about two of our English miles.

"Our relatives were quite surprised to see us. We made our home with my Aunt Hanna in Tollarp, Skone. She is keeping house for Per Anderson. She has one daughter, Harro. Father has one sister living in Hjaras, Wanas, and we spent part of the time with her. This was father's third visit in Sweden since coming to America but his first in the summer.

Learns To Like Sweden.

"I couldn't quite explain the feeling and what I thought when I first saw the old country. One thing, I felt that I would be ready to return to America within a month, but the more I saw of Sweden, the better I liked it. My worst difficulty was to speak the Swedish continually. My relatives were surprised to know that I could speak it so well, having been born in this country. They seemed to understand me quite well.

"I didn't see any corn raised in Sweden. Oats, wheat and rye are raised and also beets, which are used for feeding to cattle. The farmers, as a rule, milk several cows. They keep very few hogs. There were usually one or two horses kept for working in the fields, machinery not being so large. There were as many women working in the fields as men.

"The climate in Sweden is wonderful during the summer months. The summer seems more like our spring and fall. It did not seem at all warm to us. The sun did not seem so bright and hot there and women never wear hats or sunbonnets when working out of doors.

Dress Not Unlike Americans.

"People of Sweden dress much as we do, except for the wooden shoes, which all wear while working. The buildings in Skone are all built together, forming a square. There were no lawns or yards. In the front there is usually a garden and here will be found plenty of flowers.

"Prices for commodities there were about the same as here. Wages are not as high so there is more of a chance for success here than in Sweden.

Cars Not Common.

"Cars are not as common as here. There are lots of motorcycles and bicycles. These are as common as are cars in America. I said that to my cousin and she wondered how there was a place for them all if there were so many. We hired a car and chauffeur for a week and motored to Gothenberg. We went through Linderod, Horby, Eslov, Landsdrona, Halsingborg, Angelholm, Halmstad, Varberg, and Kungbacka. From Gothenberg we went to Gislaved, Smaland, where we spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Karl Johnson, parents of my brother-in-law. We then went to Stockholm for a few days. We visited the National Historical Museum building, the Skansen, or park of wild animals, the Slottet, or court house. We returned to Tollarp and went through the following cities: Sodertalje, Nykoping, Vaggeryd, Kolingaryd, Varnamo, Markoryd and Hassleholm.

"In August we spent a week in Smaland with the Karl Johnson family. While there we went to Mjo Vastergoland to see the folks of Ernest Carlson. We saw some wonderful scenery that day. We also visited friends in Gommara, Gallaryd and Smaland. I had the pleasure of taking pictures of the places where both my father and mother were born, the same houses still standing.

Serve American Dinner.

"On Sunday, July 28, we served an American dinner for fifty of our friends and relatives at the home of Per Anderson in Tollarp. They all seemed to enjoy the meal very much, the cooking not being so different, but the way of serving unusual. In Sweden the coffee is served first; then the table is cleared and a "sandwich" table of cold meats, etc., is served. Then this is cleared away and the potatoes and hot meats are served alone. This is then cleared away and a dessert of pudding is served. After the dessert coffee is again served on a cleared table. I could not bake a pie for my dinner for there are no pie tins in all Sweden.

"We also had the opportunity of attending the wedding of my cousin Torsten Hachansson who was married June 22. The wedding lasted two days, as all big occasions do over there. It was a home wedding. A large charivari crowd came in the evening as the custom is in America.

Hear Rev. Gullson.

"We had the honor of hearing Rev. Gullson of Fremont, give a sermon in the Gualov church. He was in Sweden to take his mother back with him to America.

"I spent one week in Gards Koping with the parents of Karin Kjelkvist. That town is surrounded with pine trees as are most of the towns of Skone. Rocks and stones were not very scarce either to my notion.

"I brought with me from Sweden as a remembrance, a table cover embroidered with blue and gold on a black satin background. The colors are those of the Swedish flag.

Leave For America.

"The day we left for America our cousins went with us to Malmo, where we parted, they returning home at 6 in the afternoon. We took the train from Malmo at 9 p. m. for Gothenberg and sailed from there Saturday noon, September 21. It was very stormy in crossing the North Sea, but neither dad nor I was seasick. The majority of the people on the boat were sick. There were all sorts of amusing things to do on the boat so if one is feeling all right there are plenty of good times to be had. It wasn't much fun being on deck as waves were higher than a two-story house. The greatest distance we sailed in twentyfour hours was 457 miles. "We arrived in New York Monday, September 30. It took almost until noon for all of the people to get off from the boat although we arrived there at 9 a. m. "I had made up my mind never to cross the ocean but have changed about that for I certainly enjoyed it as well as my visit in Sweden."

Crow Bounty at Stanton.

Stanton, Neb., Nov. 21.—Stanton county commissioners, S. P. Petersen, Paul Kingsley and Carl Wochter, have placed a bounty of 10 cents on crows.

This crow bounty, an annual event in this county, is an important factor in suppressing crow production and in stimulating contests among hunters, each gun toter being desirous of first honor.

Says For Son's Death.

Lincoln, Neb.—Attorneys for the estate of Alis Belz, Stanton county, argued in the supreme court that it was not gross negligence for Belz to drive on a crossing when a Northwestern freight train had just passed. Belz was killed by an engine on a trial run, following about a block behind the train. The mother of Belz sued for $5,180, which the district court denied her.

Wealth That Does Not Fade.
York Republican: It was a Nebraska banker speaking: "No man who ever purchased good Nebraska land, and lived on it, ever went broke or lost a cent, because the price of land may fluctuate but the farming value is still there."

That statement is worthy of thoughtful consideration. The qualifying statement is illuminating: "And lived on it." That means the purchaser living on the land and living within its income.

Generally speaking, there are two types of farm owners. One takes what the farm readily gives, the other makes it yield what it ought to yield. The first named finds farming makes him a living. The second proves that farming can and does yield a profit.

After a speculative spree such as recently came to a sudden end, when the day-after headache has subsided and cold daylight shines on the scene, men know that their wealth is not in stocks and bonds, whose value is as uncertain as the caprices of April, but is good land that has productive value and sure returns for every one who intelligently sets about it to produce them.

Nebraska farm lands never looked better as solid wealth than they do today, because they are the substantial basis of a prosperity that will endure. Stocks may soar and tumble, leaving devastation in their wake. But good Nebraska land, purchased at its true value, never gave any owner-operators a day-after headache.

The large barn of Porter G. Sides, about four miles southwest of Dakota City, was destroyed by fire. One calf, all harness, hay and grain were destroyed. The barn was about 100 by 70 feet. Neighbors and firemen from Homer and Dakota City were unable to extinguish the fire. It is thought that a lantern left hanging in the barn was the cause of the blaze.

At a recent meeting of the Wausa improvement club it was voted to decorate the streets for Christmas this year, as in former years, placing one large tree, trimmed with electric lights and decorations, in the main intersection of the business streets and smaller trees in the flag pole sockets lining the sidewalks. An outdoor musical program with Santa Claus in evidence will be given some evening just before Christmas around the large tree.

For the second time in a week, fire fighters were called out Tuesday last week to help extinguish a fire, this time in the house in the south part of Allen recently purchased by Marion R. Lockwood. Remodeling of the house had been started in the kitchen preliminary to moving in. Mr. Lockwood left the house about noon, expecting to return with his wife later in the day. The fire was discovered before his return and put out with some little difficulty. The house, which was slightly damaged, was not protected by insurance.

The farmers of the Wausa community are now in the midst of the harvesting of the biggest crop of corn they have had for several years, and are in no mood to listen to any other kind of "farm relief" just at present, as their ears are all attuned to "bang board" music. A considerable part of the harvesting is being done by machine this year. The yield is reported to run from forty to sixty bushels per acre, the average being about fifty, according to reports, and the quality is excellent. Large numbers of stock cattle are being shipped in to turn a considerable portion of the corn crop into beef.

For the second time in two years the 57-mile branch of the Omaha railway between Sioux City and Wynot, Neb., became the center of controversy when the railroad company filed application Thursday with the Nebraska railway commission to discontinue two trains daily. At the present time the railway operates two trains from Sioux City to Wynot, leaving Sioux City at 9:05 o'clock in the morning and 5:05 o'clock in the afternoon and Wynot at 8:05 o'clock in the morning and 12:01 o'clock in the afternoon. The company asks to be permitted to discontinue both afternoon trains because of an operating loss of $30,000. The company contends that one train per day each way is sufficient to carry for the business and that in the last 10 months not over 325 cars of grain or livestock were hauled over the lines, whereas during the same period in 1925, 1,269 cars were hauled. The cost of operating the trains, has been $79,407 compared to the gross of $48,507.

Mrs. Nick Michaelis is confined to her bed with a dislocated knee, the result of a fall while working about the house.

Arthur Plantenberg suffered a broken bone in his left arm just above the wrist during a football game between the grade boys of St. Rose school and the grade boys of the public school.

Some excitement prevailed at the H. C. Hafner farm when

Charles Lyons was driving into the crib to unload his load of corn. Mr. Hafner happened to pass along by the team, a young mule and an old horse hitched together. The mule kicked Mr. Hafner three times, then the team ran away throwing Lyons off the load and throwing his arm out of joint at the elbow.

Among the Bees.
"He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the fivers: Bashan languisheth and Carmel, the flower of Lebanon, languisheth." Nahum 1:4.
Flowers are as old as creation itself and known all over the world. Many states and various nations have their state and national flowers.
In Nebraska we have the goldenrod, which can be found along the roadside no matter how dry the weather. Scotland has the thistle, Ireland, the Shamrock and France the lily. Throughout the state of Nebraska we have many different kinds of flowers, numbering into the hundreds. Along our low-lands we have the well-known milkweed. Down in the bottom lands or along road sides or in meadows, tiny seeds with their silken plumes are caught up by the wind and carried far and wide over the country side. They are the seed of the milkweed.
The milkweeds are a large family of plants common to the temperate and tropical zones of many parts of the world. North America has fifty-five recognized species. The plants are also known as butterfly weeds and silk weeds. The blossoms come in large half shaped clusters, the seeds being attached to the parachute in which they are carried by the wind. It is this silken attachment, that gives rise to the name silkweed.
Remarkable yields of honey are sometimes received from the milkweed. An average of 100 pounds per colony is often reported in bee magazines. Much has been said and written about the entangling of bees in the pollen masses. It frequently happens that bees have their legs caught in the mechanical device of these flowers and in their effort to get away carry the pollen pods with them.
Gibson, an English authority, tells us that beekeepers lose thousands of bees each year by having them caught in the flowers of the milkweed.—V. W. Binderup, president, Nebraska Honey Producers Association.

3 Glasses Water Help Constipation
One glass of water is not enough—take three glasses one hour before breakfast. Much better results are obtained by adding a teaspoon of simple glycerin, saline compound (known as Adierka) to each glass.
Adierka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes old waste matter you never thought was in your system. Stops gas and sour stomach in TEN minutes! Relieves constipation in two hours. Wayne, Felber's Pharmacy, in Wakefield at Long's Drug Store.

Harvest of Corn Progressing Here
Near zero weather of last week delayed corn picking in this vicinity for a few days. The slight trace of snow which fell last week has disappeared. With warmer weather the work was resumed Monday. Most of the crop will be out of the fields within a week or two.
Several farmers of the vicinity shelled overflow corn last week when the weather was cold. A few are shipping some of the new crop. Farmers Union sent two cars of corn to Kearney last week and have six cars bought for this week.
Many farmers are doubling up on work so as to rush the completion of picking. Retawich brothers have six teams in the field this week.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS
COLLEGE FOOTBALL ENTHUSIASTS MOURN AS HOST OF STAR PIGSKIN TOTERS SING THEIR SWAN SONG WITH THE CLOSE OF THE 1929 SEASON
BY PHILIP MARTIN
THE annual wall among football coaches, worshipping alumni and raccoon-coated undergraduates cased by the graduation of Old Siwash's great fullback or Michigan's All-America tackle has started once more as the final act of the 1929 football drama draws near and the grid prima donnas prepare to sing their swan songs, esse!
As usual, the coach, alumni and undergrads sing out in unison. "There'll never be another fullback like Homer Pile nor a tackle as good as Frank Holdam."
Year after year the wall is heard but just as certainly do the coaches develop a new idol on whom alumni and undergrads lay their bets and feast their eyes with the same admiration as was shown for the irresistible Pile or the unaltering Holdam. The season of 1929 has been no different than others in this respect. However, it does seem that a majority of the outstanding performers, especially the boys who carry the pigskin, bring their collegiate grid careers to a close this year.

"Red" Welch, gone, but not forgotten.

the Scarlet and Gray. Henceforth the lightning speed of Jack Elder, Notre Dame halfback, will be confined within the limited space of a yard-wide lane on the cinder path, never more to worry the football warrior, Detroit's sensational "ball carrier," Lloyd Brazil, whose work mainly has been responsible for the great record of Titan teams, will be known only as a memory after this season.

In the far west some great performers are listed among the retiring actors. Lud Prenturf of Stanford, Russ Saunders and Don Moses of Southern California, Bennie Lom and Roy Regels of California, and and up colorful careers.

With the passing of these athletes, who have provided headlines in the Sunday papers two and three years, we find a crop of sophomore talent ready and eager to bask in the spotlight. In some instances the youngsters showed rude manners, not even waiting for their elders to step aside voluntarily but grossly shoving them over to splash here and there on the sports pages.

Albie Booth, the Yale firecracker, was one and, judging by his performances this year, the toy bulldog will occupy the pedestal two more seasons. Alex Yencich of Purdue, Shipwreck Kelly of Kentucky, Walter Masters of Pennsylvania and Marshall Dutfield of Southern California were others to stand into the limelight. Other youths in their first season, "before the footlights," showed wonderful talent and gave promise of great things next year. Mousse Leonard of Vanderbilt, Pete Yanuski of Illinois, Barry Wood of Northwestern, Allen Holman, Wood of Harvard, Rusty Gill of Ohio State quarterback, whose eligibility was the source of much worry to the Western Conference, will bark "no signals" for another year.

11 percent in nine months is all the proof a person needs as to the essential soundness of the economic structure. When the full effect of the president's program is felt in a quickening of those industries that have been laggard, the miasma of doubt ought speedily to be cleared away.
Judging from the way they talk, many political bedfellows are also bunk-mates.—Norfolk Virginian Pilot.

Representative Edgar Howard of the Third district is having a lot of fun with the effete but wise easterners. He is showing them an ear of Nebraska corn that is exactly 24 inches long and perfectly formed and filled out. It was sent to him by the American Legion Post at Columbus. When asked if it is a genuine ear of corn he admits that perhaps a few grains have been glued on to replace some picked off by souvenir hunters. One New Englander offered Mr. Howard $25 for the ear, saying he wanted it for seed. And he is besieged by letters requesting him to inform the breathless world where some seed of that particular species of corn may be obtained. While visitors are thronging his office to look at the splendid ear, Mr. Howard maintains his usual poker face and answers all questions without really committing himself.

Rev. Jacob Zinnecker, 90, died at his home in Lincoln on Nov. 20. He served as a Methodist minister for nearly 70 years, and during the early years of his ministry in Ohio and Indiana was one of the circuit riders made famous by Edward Eggleston. He came to Nebraska in 1890 because of failing health—and then preached for 49 years.

The earliest settlement in Nebraska Territory was in and about Nebraska City, and about that section of the commonwealth which was a wonderful history and marvelous tradition. Recently the Nebraska City News-Press, the oldest newspaper in the state, celebrated its Diamond Jubilee by issuing a special edition that is of itself the most interesting history of that section of the state that has ever been compiled. It sets forth the early struggles of the pioneers and records the development of the state from the day, almost, of the arrival of the first white settler. And a goodly portion of that history was written by men and women who have lived through most of that three-quarters of a century in Nebraska.

Truly loyal Nebraskans will stand up for their state wherever they may happen to be. Last summer Euhler Metcalfe of Omaha was in California and attended a "Nebraska reunion" at Long Beach. Several hundred former Nebraskans were present, and all boasting for southern California instead of the state that enabled them to accumulate fortunes. Metcalfe argued for Nebraska, and finally one California booster said: "Why, do you know, Euhler, that last year southern California produced citrus fruits and agricultural products to the amount of $135,000,000?"

"Sure I know it," retorted Euhler. "And I know that in the same year Nebraska's corn crop alone was worth $40,000,000 more than southern California's output of citrus fruits and farm products."

And immediately thereafter the subject was changed.

Perhaps the shortest constitutional convention ever held in any state or territory was the one held in Nebraska in 1864. In January of that year the territorial legislature asked congress to pass an enabling act which would allow the governor of the territory to order an election of members to order a constitutional convention. Congress passed the act in April, and the election was held on June 6. The convention met on July 6, adjourned, and by a vote of 25 to 7 adjourned sine die. The convention was in session less than three hours. A majority of the delegates were opposed to statehood.

About Nebraska and Nebraskans Will M. Maupin.

Hastings settled the long standing police chief controversy by a referendum vote. On April 9, last, Mayor Davis appointed John Bramble, who had served several years as deputy sheriff, to be chief of police. The council unanimously refused to confirm. The mayor refused to make another appointment acting chief, putting in a salary claim every two weeks, the council just as regularly refusing to pay. After nearly seven months and a few days before a special election to vote on issuing $50,000 of bonds for a municipal airport, the mayor proposed leaving the Bramble matter to a vote of the people at the same time they voted on the bond proposition. The council agreed. Of the 5,800 eligible voters about 55 per cent 125, and Bramble won by about the same majority.

Bladen, Webster county, was established 43 years ago, shortly after the Nebraska City-Holdrege line of the Burlington was constructed. The first building in the new town was moved to the township from a neighboring farm and remodeled into a store building. Of late years it has been occupied as a cigar store and soft drink parlor. One night last week it took fire from an unknown source and was completely destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. August Ege of Beemer celebrated their 53rd wedding anniversary early in November. They have lived in Cumring county their entire married life.

Happy Though Married. Omaha World-Herald: Charles Evans Hughes never did anything more courageous as a statesman or politician than he did as a private citizen the other day when he spoke to the alumnae of seven women's colleges and, in an aside to the world at large, advised college boys to wed college girls as they make "the ideal wife." Advice on marriage is the riskiest kind to give or take. Here is an institution holding within it the essence of the greatest human happiness, but turning out to have also the greatest depths of misery. How shall one be happy when married is one of the most perplexing, and most important of all questions. Marriage is much harder these days than of old, but much, much more worth while. There weren't any problems of marriage in a day when the man was lord and master, when all the wife must do was to say yes and bear children; when happiness in marriage connoted only happiness of the man. When the modern world came along and revised this idea to the concept that happiness in marriage meant happiness for both husband and wife; when women then acquired a personality, individuality and rights of their own in the marriage state; then there came this talk of divorce and decaying institutions; and then came also, for almost the first time, the opportunity to attain the greatest happiness known to either man or woman in a marriage in which both are equals, each respecting the other, seeking the other's point of view; giving, not taking.

kind of a husband that the young man decides he is going to be. And for the girls, their happiness may not depend so much upon the kind of a man they select, as upon the type of wife they will be. Just like Mr. Hughes, even an editorial writer can become reckless and give advice on dangerous ground!

Ex-Composer Now Mends Dolls Rather Than Teach Music to Jazz Players

A FEW years ago Anton Dahl was a composer of note, author of three volumes on music and philosophy and undoubtedly a musical genius. Today he models and repairs dolls and children's playthings in Los Angeles because he would rather work "as a common laborer in a sewer ditch than teach an egotistical un-musical American student the greatest of all musical instruments, the piano."

In a little studio Dahl and his wife, herself formerly well known as an artist and sculptor, mold, create and repair dolls of all sorts and descriptions. Old rag dolls of childhood memories, dolls representing all the nations of the world and life-size images of legendary characters all take form and live anew.

"Although we specialize in the restoration of antiques and the playthings of childhood, no little repair that could gladden the heart of a child is turned away," says Dahl. "We are both very happy and feel our work really worth while because every time we mend a broken doll we really mend some little child's broken heart."

DAHL is very reticent when it comes to telling of the things that have made him well known in musical circles. He will talk about music, art, play his own compositions and any that one might want to hear; in fact, do everything to entertain. But talk about himself, he will not do.

"People are not at all interested in me," he says. He was born in Petrograd, Russia, 53 years ago, and there received his early piano training at the hands of Czar Nicholas' official pianist. He received his first official recognition from the czar when he was ordered to appear at court and perform for the nobility.

IN later years he became well known throughout Europe for his concert work, appearing in all the principal auditoriums. He came to America on a concert tour just before the outbreak of the World War and, after a few tours in this country, gave up public appearances to teach. Becoming dissatisfied with the American attitude and musical ideals, he quit that.

"American people are not interested in real music," he said. "Jazz is corrupting their finer ideals and talents. It is astonishing to see these popular performers, many who are below the standard of an amateur in their so-called profession, assuming an attitude of extreme importance. They often are pushed ahead of the genius and everything really artistic.

"The students are terrible. Real musical interpretation and appreciation is something which is inherited and people in this country have not developed the soul to appreciate art. I would rather give up my piano forever than hear it butchered every day by a well-meaning but hopeless musician."
