Cooling Device In Gay Theatre

New System Is Installed By E. E. Galley—Has Best Sound Apparatus Available.

Improvements in the quality of entertainment provided in small town show houses have kept step with the improvements made in all such entertainments in recent years, but Wayne citizens have a right to be very particular in the selection of entertainment available in their own city. Not only are the shows themselves entertaining but the very best system of sound recording and film projection is employed and recently a substantial improvement in the means of ventilating has been introduced into the Gay theatre.

It is customary for movie palaces today to advertise their polar temperatures in the summertime, but few of the patrons who enjoy this coolness have any better idea of how it is produced than they have of the means by which the projection of the film upon the screen is accomplished. The ventilation system just installed in the Gay theatre equals nature's own system of reducing temperatures by evaporation, and even improves upon it because it can be made available at any time. At ordinary running speed this machine enables a complete change of air in the auditorium every three minutes, but this speed can be increased so that the air is completely changed every minute.

Outside air is drawn into the theatre by gigantic blowers. It is then carried through a spray of water and a series of plates which eliminate the water from the air which is blown directly into the auditorium. Meanwhile the air has been cooled ten to fifteen degrees by the evaporation of water. This air is forced directly into the auditorium from what would, in other circumstances, be the orchestra pit, and is carried through the theatre and out at the back so that there is no recirculation.

Western Electric, the system of sound recording used at the Gay theatre, is generally recognized as the best system available today. Two complete sets of batteries have been installed so that they can be alternated for recharging, and so that the two projecting machines can be used at the same time to eliminate the breaks caused by the change of reels. These projecting machines are also equipped to take care of either a sound on film or a sound on disc picture.

When a picture carries its sound directly on the film, a narrow strip at the edge of the film regulates the kind of sound registered on the screen. The light which passes through this narrow strip in the film to the photo electric cell sets up a small current which is then amplified in the sound on head attachment on the projector. This current is carried by wire to the amplifier in the projection room and is then sent by another wire to the large horn behind the perforated screen on the stage, and is heard by the audience as music or speaking. The sound does not then come directly from the screen, but through the screen from a loud speaker placed behind it. The sound strip on such a film is so arranged that it will pass over the sound aperture in the sound attachment so that the light which sets up the current in the photo electric cell is completely controlled through this tiny aperture.

Sound on disc films are arranged so that the sound part of the picture, and the actual motion are separated. In other words a special phonographic disc accompanies an ordinary silent picture. By starting the two at exactly the same time the sound is made to correspond to the motion of the picture on a large sound board being sufficient for each reel. Specially designed boxes and packing are used in transporting both the films and the records. When each theater has finished with a particular film it is shipped back to the film exchange in Omaha from whence it is sent to other theaters, but no direct exchange of films between theaters is practiced.

Famous Comedy Coming To Gay

May Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks together for the first time in an all-talking, all-singing, film version of William Shakespeare's ever modern comedy "Taming of the Shrew" which comes to the Gay theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. This uproarious rough-house comedy has been exciting the world with laughter for 300 years.

It unfolds the cyclonic romance of Katherine the Shrew and Petruchio the Shrew, of how she was wooed, wedded and bedded, and the house rid of her, and of how, subsequently, the "Devil's Dam" was made over into a meek mouse, to an accompaniment of the craziest love-making in the whole history of literature. As Katherine the cut-up, and as Petruchio, the swashbuckler, Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks have found their most brilliant roles, and their co-appearance, for the first time, in this dazzling comedy, marks an event of unparalleled importance to everyone, offering as it does, the finest in motion picture entertainment. You'll enthuse about it for weeks.

Professor: "Wise men hesitate, fools are certain." Student: "Are you sure?" Professor: "I am certain." We're building hay-racks now. Leave your orders with us. You'll get them in a hurry. When old summer comes to bat. We have to buy a new straw hat. We make window screens any size, any shape. They're reinforced on the corners with nonbreakable steel angles. Always square. No pins to rot out. Bring in your measurements. The new overhead Baker's garage and is now in place. That makes a very handy door for any garage, be it big or little. We feel highly complimented that our competitors copy our methods, our merchandise, etc., but we hardly know what to say when they copy and use our slogan. A number of years ago we adopted the slogan, "Anything to build anything with." We didn't copyright it. maybe we should have. If it's original you're welcome to it. This week we got in a car load of Omega steel posts. It drives straight, drives easily and can not be bent in actual use. Ask to see it. NOW READ IT AGAIN! Cider must be very hard to sell. American fence. It has many imitators. And our price is as low as the price for the substitutes. Then you better have the genuine American. In driving through the hail district over around Creighton and Plainview, one can't help noticing the good wood single roofs were so severely damaged while roofs covered with the diamond point roofing put on quite liberally in this vicinity during the past three years were invariably total wrecks. In our judgment, aside from asbestos, there is no shingle so dependable as high grade cedar. The price is only $3.00. That "all things come to him who waits" is an exploded theory. In this day and age, the man who makes progress is the one who gets out in the open and meets them more than half way. "EVERYTHING TO BUILD ANYTHING WITH"

Train Schedule In Effect Sunday

Change of train schedule on the C. St. P. M. & O. granted the company last week by the state railway commission, went into effect Sunday. Though service is reduced some on the Sioux City, Norfolk and Sioux City-Omaha lines, it is estimated that the branches will receive better service.

The company will save nearly $100,000 a year in operation costs. Substitution of gas-electric for steam and reduction of service between Sioux City and Omaha will reduce expenses about $65,000.

Two trains will be operated between Sioux City and Norfolk each day excepting Sunday when one will be operated on each line. Morning trains are added on the Bloomfield and Crofton branches, making two trips each way daily on these lines. One train each way on the branches is operated on Sunday.

HINTS for your BRIDGE PARTY

BRIDGE HAS A STORY TO TELL

By MARSHALL KENNEDY

Despite the front-page news reports of mayhem, murder and matrimonial rifts caused by tramping a partner's ace, and despite the entrance of bridge jokes along with Mr. Charles Merz' Ford jokes, into American folklore, auction bridge is a noble game with a noble history.

Unlike poker and pinochle, both excellent in their own ways, bridge is a Social Register, and has been since its inception. Unlike that fine old pastime casino, bridge is rarely anything but an adult's game.

Yet, withal, it is the most democratic of indoor sports. No less than two and a quarter million hands are dealt daily in America alone. A minor statistician estimated that, throughout the world, at any one moment, four hundred thousand persons are saying, "What's trump?" Bridge is played in every known language although a husband's more or less friendly reprimand to his wife sounds the same in all languages.

The Oldest Pack.
To begin at one of several possible beginnings, the first deck of cards was made in about 900 A. D. The oldest pack extant dates back to 900 A. D. in the kingdom of Visnupur, India. They were used during the reign of the little remembered Akila kings, who, for all the 120 cards in their deck, probably wondered who was hiding the ace.

The birthplace of cards is believed to have been Hindostan. The best packs of Hindostanese cards still in existence reveal eight or ten suits, with markings that do not in the least resemble those of cards now in use. These ancient packs, and as a consequence, the early European packs contained no queen, as the orientals were inclined to disparage the importance of women, especially in a game which, like chess, was founded upon the elements of warfare.

Contribution to Progress.
From Hindostan, cards spread eastward to China, where they were first stamped from wooden blocks. This employment of wood-engraving for the manufacture of cards is said to have nourished and kept alive an art that eventually led to printing from movable type, one of mankind's greatest boons to progress. Even the sternest critic would acknowledge such a debt to playing cards.

Westward, cards traveled through Persia, Arabia, the Mesopotamia region and Palestine. By about the end of the twelfth century after the Ottoman invasion of Turkey, they established themselves in Europe. In France and Italy, a gallant spirit introduced the queen into the pack.

Cards for Isuane King.
Crington, a courtier of Charles IX, rearranged and designed a pack of cards with which he might entertain the sovereign during his royal spells of insanity. It was about 1392 therefore, that the modern pack originated. It contained fiftytwo cards (number of weeks in the year), 365 dots (number of days in a year) (number of seasons) and thirteen cards to the suit (number of lunar months).

The first English cards in America probably arrived on the ship with the settlers at Jamestown, Virginia, in 1607. Actually, the first cards used in America were brought to Santa Fe, New Mexico, and St. Augustine, Florida by the ever-gambling Spanish soldiers.

Origin of Whist.
Whist, the grandparent of present-day auction bridge, originated in England some time after the dawn of the seventeenth century. The name, "Whist" was selected because of the game's requiring extreme silence.

The origin of bridge, first called "Biritch" or "Russian Bridge," may be assigned, not to Russia, but to Greece, where it was played fifty years ago. One day in 1894, Lord Brougham, lately returned from Cairo, went to the Portland club, London's whist headquarters for a game. When it was his deal, he neglected to turn up a trump card. He was reminded. He said, "I am very sorry, but I thought I was playing bridge." His companion said, "Bridge? What is that?" "What a pity you do not know it," he replied, "It is the finest card game ever invented." The four men completed their rubber; then strenuously urged, Lord Brougham demonstrated the new game. It proved to be love at first sight. From that day, the Portland club adopted bridge as its own.

Bridge Takes Hold.
Thence, it extended its fascination to other men's clubs. Until, finally, it became the national card game of Britain. In 1901 or 1902, the ladies discovered "what a delightful field of amusement and speculation was open to them." Who could have predicted that women were one day to dominate the game and permit men to "sit in" on a deal or two, only as a concession?

For ten years, bridge thrived. Then it retired in favor of the youngster, auction bridge, invented and named by three Englishmen in India who were lost for want of a bridge "fourth" and conceived the ingenious notion of "bidding." By 1908, auction bridge had transformed the card playing habits of England and America.

Here is a uniquely interesting hand that arose in a recent match and which will attract even the mildest player. Peculiarly, though a grand slam is easily possible in diamonds, the hand was played in spades by North, with East naturally leading the King of Clubs. North, viewing his dummy and realizing the sure slam that had been sacrificed by failure to announce diamonds on South's part, cleverly played his cards to achieve the same result in Spades. It is not as simple as first appears. But a slam in Spades is possible with the lead of a club!

Bridge Freaks

Idealists! Aren't we all? In every field of human activity, there seems to be a perfect goal towards which wistful eyes are wont to stray. In bridge, it is the hand that contains thirteen cards of one suit. Calculations reveal that the individual's chances of cornering thirteen spades, or even thirteen meagre clubs, are about six hundred and fifty billion to one. And yet...

A Colorado woman held thirteen hearts, bid seven hearts, but was topped by a bid of seven spades. Her opponent held only twelve spades, but accomplished a grand slam. Tears were dropped for the thirteen broken hearts.

New York also boasts a woman who held thirteen hearts, secured the bid at six hearts, was doubled, but, because of the excitement, neglected to redouble.

A Pennsylvania auditor drew thirteen spades in the club car of a railway train, and did not know what to bid. Twenty bridge experts gave him varying advice. In desperation, he bid four spades and swept the board.

Ah! But in Missouri, a hardware dealer dealt himself a perfect hand in hearts. Seeing that his cards were "all red," and without sorting them or inspecting them closely, he bid one diamond. "Just to get the game started," the other three players passed.

Four Michigan women, at a Wednesday afternoon bridge party, received four perfect suit hands. Naturally, thirteen spades won the bid. The cards had been regularly shuffled, cut and dealt. There were eighteen witnesses to this strangest of strange events. Moreover, when the deal was dealt out, it was even the most incredible word of four ladies who played bridge on Wednesday afternoon in Michigan?

North plays the hand with Spades trump—East leads the King of Clubs—North and South to make a grand slam against any defense thereafter.

The King of Clubs led by East on which North discards the Jack of Diamonds in Dummy and takes with the Ace in his hand, West following with a small club.

North then plays the ten of clubs, East covering and South trumping.

North returns to his hand with a Spade and leads his remaining Club, again trumping in South's hand.

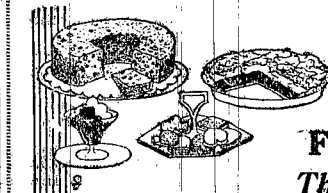

Now North leads the Queen of Diamonds from the dummy, all hands following. This leaves only the Ace and King of Diamonds and one spade in dummy, declarer having trumped clubs twice and lead trump once. In his own hand he still has three high trumps. Thus he returns to his hand with trump and leads the Ace and King of trumps, discarding the Ace and King of Diamonds from South leaving nothing but high diamonds in his own hand.

A rare and unusual distribution creates this "freak hand" and calls for equally unusual ingeniousness in the play.

Gains 10 Pounds Feels Better Than In Years

St. Louis City Man Enthusiastic About New Medicine—Five Bottles Brought Health.

MR. PERD A. DAILEY

"I suffered for five years with stomach trouble and a general run down condition," said Mr. Fred A. Dailey, 514 West Sixth street, St. Louis City. "I had little appetite and such food as I was able to eat soured in my stomach. I had attacks of indigestion that were frequent and severe. Finally I began to lose weight and strength and I realized that some thing had to be done. I tried many medicines and treatments without finding any relief."

"Fortunately, a friend recommended Konjola to me at this time. I can never express my appreciation for all this great medicine did for me. Although it has been over a month since I finished my fifth bottle of Konjola, not a single ailment of mine has returned. My appetite has greatly improved and, best of all, my food agrees with me. Indigestion and sour stomach are things of the past. I have gained ten pounds and feel better than I have in years."
