Visitor in Wayne Tells Of Academy

Master Sergeant C. Sullivan is enthusiastic about West Point training.

Enthusiasm for West Point is characteristic among those who are familiar with the famous army academy, but Master Sergeant C. Sullivan, who is visiting at the C. O. Mitchell home here, gives one a taste of the real military flavor of the life at the "Point."

"Enlisting in the army in April, 1902, 'through curiosity,' as he says, he has been in the service ever since. For the past twelve years he has been stationed at West Point.

Fifty miles up the Hudson from New York city where the wide sweep and curve of the river offset the low hills are the forbidding old gray stone buildings and the wide parade ground of the army training school. For most people the 1,200 cadets in their crisp uniforms make up the bulk of the personnel at the "Point" and the 1,500 regular army men stationed there are almost unknown, but these 1,500 men are the ones who train the cadets, play in the band, assist with the athletics and perform other essential duties.

Master sergeant is the highest non-commissioned rank in the army and is a position of considerable responsibility. In his first years at the "Point" Sergeant Sullivan drilled cadets, but he is now a trainer in sports and gymnastics. The boys are very sociable and interested in their sports work according to Sergeant Sullivan and the season for each sport passes so quickly that the trainers are constantly meeting cadets.

"Every cadet in the corps," says Sergeant Sullivan, "must engage in some sport all the time. From 6 in the morning until 6:30 at night all cadets are doing something. At 6 they start in with setting-up exercises and from then on are kept busy with classes, sports, athletics and various kinds of drill work.

"West Point is the only place a boy is paid to go to school," Sergeant Sullivan chuckled, "and it is a wonderful place for a boy who wants to make something of himself. July 1 is the date that the plebes enter the corps, and two months of training make a big difference in their whole appearance." The three Sullivan boys expect to try for the "Point" when they are older.

Sergeant Sullivan is trainer only for the boys on the varsity squads and does not have anything to do with the intramural squads of cadets who have company competition, but he is very well acquainted with such famous stars as Cagle and Murrell. Cagle was popular among the cadets in addition to being the center of attraction on the football team for a number of years. The victory over the Cornhusker team two seasons ago seemed to delight the sergeant a great deal. "I have never seen such a big bunch of men in my life before," he declared. He mentioned the two-hundred pound quarter, Reb. Russell, and the tall Munna, a brother of the prize-fighter. "None of them could have weighed under 185 pounds," he insisted. The army lost many of its best players this year and will have a new coach next year. Major Sasse, who replaces Coach "Biff" Jones, Association with army sports has given Sergeant Sullivan a rare opportunity for seeing the biggest college football teams in the country in action, as well as some of the most famous stars.

In addition to service at West Point Sergeant Sullivan has had interesting experience in foreign service. With Company H and the second battalion of engineers he spent thirteen months in Cuba in 1906 and 1907 and from 1909 to 1912 he was in the Philippines. While in the Philippines he was engaged in a topographical survey which took him all over the island of Luzon, the largest and most northern island in the group as well as the seat of the capitol, Manila. The survey kept the men so busy that except during the rainy season they were never in one place for more than ten days at a time. Natives, known as "foo-foos," were used as guides in the work.

"Manila is a nice city, but the rest of the island is nothing but jungle and rice and sugar cane fields," says Sergeant Sullivan. "The natives eat fish and rice all the time."

On the way home from the islands the ship the troops were on stopped in Japan and also at a Japanese coaling station where the women coaled the ship. Small baskets of coal were loaded by the men and were given to the first in a long line of women who passed it up to the ship just like machine-work. At another place a volcano in eruption was witnessed by the sergeant, who describes it as a very unusual experience.

Honolulu justly deserves the description "the flower-garden of the Pacific" thinks Sergeant Sullivan. The leper island near Honolulu, however, where it is said that the disease can be cured in six months did not interest him so much. "I don't want to go there," he said.

In Cuba, when he had been there only a week, the sergeant experienced the worst cyclone known for years. Fifteen thou-

Florida Visitor Tells Of Miami

Joseph R. Byerly Says There Is No Finer Scenery Than A View of Wayne.

Though it's "Junetune in Miami," the year around, as the slogan for the city goes, Joseph R. Byerly, brother of Mrs. O. R. Bowen and Miss Virginia Byerly, who has been visiting at the Prof. Bowen home the past week, says he is not tempted to give up his affection for Nebraska after a year's residence in the Florida city.

"There is no finer piece of scenery in the United States than the view one has of Wayne at the top of the last hill coming in from the south," he says. He also prides the vista of cultivated fields on the road to Waverfield.

Miami represents one of the most tremendous real estate developments in the world, according to Mr. Byerly. Not only is the coast of Florida from Jacksonville to Miami, a distance of 369 miles, one of the finest stretches of beach in the world, but where the coast did not suit the wealthy people who patronized the Florida resorts, islands have been dredged from the ocean and whole colonies of houses built on them. Whenever there is a demand for island home sites a new island may be built in the sea, a large number of such islands having been developed at Miami.

Beaches and a delightful climate form the principal attraction in Florida. The beaches have been crowded with resorts and hotels, many of the hotels being built directly on the beach with private accommodations for guests. There are numerous playground resorts as well as race tracks and dog tracks which have known an unusual boom in the past few years. The beach from Jacksonville to Miami is so wide that a paved road extends the whole length of the coast, though the beach varies from a few feet to several miles in width.

Beaches in Florida have also been arranged to accommodate some very fine airports. Miami claims three very excellent airports, one of which is headquarters for the Pan-American route, and another of which is operated by the New York-Buenos Aires lines. Most of the large planes at Miami are land planes, though a few hydroplanes for the traffic to the West Indies are seen. Hydroplanes are equipped with boat-like shoes instead of wheels. Land planes are supposed to last for at least forty-eight hours in the water in case of a forced landing. The land planes are used exclusively in the South American trade.

Architecture in Miami is largely Spanish in style but in many of the specially developed residence areas there are sections devoted exclusively to Dutch, French or English architecture. In these sections all the homes are built to represent French or English cottages of the homes typical in the Netherlands. Downtown buildings are almost completely Spanish in style, most of the buildings being built with arcades. Though the tendency is to spread out there are some twenty-story structures.

Miami has a permanent or summer population of about 150,000, and in the winter from January to March this mounts to 600,000. Aside from the big tourist trade in the winter months, which is estimated at $100,000,000 there is no particular industry on which the city depends. During the summer months, though the climate is never very disagreeable and though it is always cool at nights, most of the hotels and homes of wealthy northerners are boarded up. The big orchards of oranges and grapefruit are not as far south as Miami, but there are many orange and grapefruit trees in the region. The farming done is usually winter farming or truck gardening.

Streets in Miami are lined with palm trees, the royal and coconut palms being most common. Oleander trees and hibiscus bushes are also common, and the vine known as the Bougainvillea, which is a mass of blooms nine months in the year and which is trimmed constantly just as a hedge is clipped, is one of the show sights in Miami. In the newer residential districts the streets are not only palm lined, but parkways in the middle have also been built up with palm trees planted in them.

Storms in Miami are no more frequent than on any other part of the coast. The storm which brought such damage about a year ago claimed such widespread interest chiefly because several million dollars worth of buildings had just been completed there and because hundreds of thousands of people all over the country had taken a chance in the land speculation and were interested in the property damage as a result. Most of the tornadoes in that area originate over the sea and many of them expend their energy before they reach the coast. For ten days in advance of a particular storm the weather bureau sends out warnings. Accurate records of the progress of these storms are reported frequently each day.

Miami claims an excellent school system and a good college, the Miami University, which was established about four years ago by means of private donations, though it is supported by the municipality. There are about 900 students in the university which is situated at the famous suburb of Miami, Coral Gables.

Wayne Represented At Student Meeting

At the annual summer joint conference of student Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. groups in the Rocky Mountain area, held June 15 to 16 in Estes Park, Colo., 350 students from colleges in Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Montana, Utah and New Mexico were present. Three girls, Miss Dorothy Smith of Pender, Miss Mary Bills of Omaha, and Miss Jane Barrett of Newman Grove, represented the Wayne State Teachers College at the conference. About thirty-five students from the University of Nebraska were present and other colleges in Nebraska were also represented. Rev. W. E. Braisted was the only Wayne pastor at the conference.

Association camp is high in the Rockies and is well equipped with assembly and dining hall dormitories and cottages for guests. Excursions to many of the most scenic parts of the park were included in the program of activities enjoyed by the students at the conference.

Conference brought many fine leaders for personal conferences, round table discussions and platform addresses. Among the finest of these were Rev. Henry Pitt VanDusen of Union Theological Seminary, New York, Kirby Page, world traveler and writer on international social and economic questions who had just returned from a year in Europe and Asia, Miss Margaret Quayle of New York, a psychology specialist, and Dr. Earl of Denver, a specialist in psycho-ethical relations. Field observations of both associations and student secretaries in many of the larger colleges in the areas were also present to assist with the program.

Service Is Held For Mrs. Hansen

Funeral services were conducted June 25 at the Creighton Methodist church for Mrs. Andrew Hansen, Creighton woman who died Monday morning last week while visiting in the Carl Pedersen home near Carroll. Dr. Earl E. Bowen of Norfolk, had charge of rites.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansen came to Carroll Sunday last week to visit. The latter was taken suddenly ill Monday morning and died in a short time.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Anna M. Jensen, was born in Denmark December 16, 1860. She came to America in 1888 and was married to Andrew Hansen at Wayne July 18, 1888. Two sons and two daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hansen. The two sons were drowned in 1909. The daughters are Mrs. John Andersen of Vining, Minn., and Mrs. Joe Flack of Creighton. There is one grandchild. Mrs. Hansen leaves two brothers in Denmark.

Results of Census

York Republican: The faking of the decennial census has a greater effect on public life than most citizens suspect. Salaries of several of the county officials hinge upon the population. Seward county where the population of the county fell slightly below 16,000 the taxpayers dodged an increase of salaries for county judge and sheriff and the creation of a new office there, register of deeds. Financially the county is ahead about $2000 a year by reason of the fact that the population did not pass 16,000, and of course the officers, who hoped for and were denied an increase feel that a sad mistake was made in not counting a few more hundred citizens.

The question is not whether man descended from the monkey, but what he is going to quit descending. —Louisville Times.

And now Mr. Grundy probably includes even Pennsylvania among the backward states. —New York Evening Post.

Our Guest Room

Out-of-town people attending funerals in this city, or accompanying bodies here for burial, often prefer to remain near the loved one rather than in a commercial hotel or in a home distracted by grief. For their accommodation we have provided a guest room in our establishment. It has all the comforts of a hotel room, with the privacy and seclusion so desirable at such a time. This service is offered free of charge to those using our establishment.

Early Days in Wayne County

From the Wayne Herald for July 18, 1912:
Dr. W. C. Wightman left for Long Beach, Calif.

The Walthill Indian ball team played a game at Carroll.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Jones in July, 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kate left for their new home in Bloomington, Ill.

Mrs. T. J. Welky of Colfax, Wash., was visiting with her sister, Mrs. M. S. Davies.

Miss Edna Neely left for Denver, Colo., to spend part of the summer visiting friends there.

A burglar entered the Presbyterian parsonage, but took nothing but some food in the kitchen.

The Norfolk Daily News reported that $1,200 was to be spent in improving the road between Norfolk and Hoskins.

Pres. and Mrs. U. S. Conn returned from Chicago where they attended the meeting of the National Teacher's association.

Mrs. Eva Weyrauch left for her home in San Francisco, Calif., after an extended visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Taylor.

Miss Amanda Bassman of Jefferson, Mo., who had been visiting at the J. D. Luersens home southeast of town, returned to her home.

A special train on the Bloomfield line carried a large number of railway employees to a conference with higher officials in Omaha.

Mrs. James Britton returned from Minneapolis, Minn., where she had spent two months visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alex Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wimers of Pasadena, Calif., arrived to spend the summer at the home of Mrs. Wimers' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Biegler.

Notice was given to water users that water for sprinkling and wetting of lawns could be used only between the hours of 7 and 9 a. m., and 5 and 8 p. m.

C. L. Culler, who had resigned as railway clerk to accept a school position in Glasgow, Mont., left with Mrs. Culler for Iowa and Wisconsin where they planned to visit before going to Montana.

Miss Mary Gorman of Wayne, and Henry Wittner of Douglas, Wash., were married in the German Lutheran church July 12, 1912. They took a short wedding trip to Illinois before going to Washington.

Mayor and Mrs. J. H. Kate returned from a visit in several towns in Iowa. Mayor Kate reported that many towns the size of Wayne are paving business streets, and thinks that Wayne should make a start in this direction.

Nebraska State Volunteer Fireman's association announced that over $3,500 in prizes would be given to the winner of the many exciting contests which were held for the tournament to be played in Norfolk at the end of the month.

Ernest Samuelson of northeast of Wayne, broke a leg when he jumped from a buggy after the team started to run away. His right leg was badly crushed when it caught in one of the wheels so he was taken to a Sioux City hospital for surgical attention.

A joint concert was presented on the lawn of the Presbyterian church by Professor Alexander's boys' band, and Herbert Lessman's country band. Young people at the church served ice cream and cake to nearly 350 people. The lawn was decorated with electric lights.

While Clyde Oman's automobile was being cleaned in the Pfeils and Johnson garage a match was lighted to inspect the work. Instantly gasoline used in the cleaning ignited and a serious blaze was threatened for a moment, but the fire was extinguished by means of a laprobe.

Charles Sebring of Plainfield, N. J., visited his cousin, Dr. W. B. Vail. Mr. Sebring had attended the republic convention in Chicago and had purchased the flags used in the gold room at the Congress hotel, the Taft headquarters there. He planned to use the flags to decorate his auditorium in Plainfield.

The building committee of the library board reported that $3,000 had been secured from the Carnegie fund to apply to the new structure. The committee also reported that the building would be completed and ready for use in October. Officers of the board were elected as follows: Dr. G. J. Green, president; Mrs. C. A. Chace, vice-president; Dr. T. B. Hecker, secretary.

Books Accessioned At City Library

New fiction in the Wayne city library shows a substantial variety even though popular mystery novels predominate the selection. Work of some authors who have had no other work placed in this library is included with that of some older and more experienced writers.

"The Door," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, first attracted attention when it appeared as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post and it has since ranked among the best sellers of the year. It is a mystery novel with plenty of delineation of character, as well as excitement and humor, by the author of that other thriller "The Circular Staircase."

"The Rich Young Man," by G. M. Attenborough, is a story of Samela, a modern Cinderella, and her unappreciative family. The scene for the story is laid in a quaint old English village with a historic castle nearby.

"King's Favorite," by Sir Phillip Gibbs, is the love story of Robert Carr and Lady Essex. In the reigns of the Stuart kings Carr was the Earl of Somerset and his affair with the lovely Lady Essex was so prominent that its record is left in the state papers of the time, from which source the famous English novelist secured his material.

"The Days of Her Life," by Wallace Irwin, tells of Emma Beecher, who was brought up in a mining camp and later become a gambler's bride. Description of San Francisco in the '80's and '90's is excellent. Wallace Irwin first achieved fame with the "Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum" writer, while he was a newspaper man in California. More recently "Letters from a Japanese Schoolboy" has added to his fame.

"Young Man of Manhattan," by Katharine Brush, is another best seller which first appeared in serial in the Post. Miss Brush is herself a newspaper woman and she has given an unusually vivid picture of the lives of two young people in the newspaper game in New York. "Young Man of Manhattan" has been adapted both for the stage and the movies.

"October's Child," by Donald Joseph, is the chronicle of a boy's growth to manhood in an old Southern family home.

"Empty Villa," by Jessie Louise Rickard, is a mystery sequel to the "Baccarat Club" and again involves the machinations of Sir Ulick Lawson, the unscrupulous head of this criminal group.

"The Patient in Room 18," by Mignon Good Eberhart, is a mystery novel which brings an entirely new atmosphere into the setting for a mystery. The hospital, with its surgical instruments, hypodermic syringes and ether, adds considerably to the gruesome and suspense which have made this story top the ranks as a best seller. Mrs. Eberhart is a Nebraska author who was educated in University Place, and who is living at the present time in Valentine with her engineer husband. This is her first novel. A second, "While the Patient Slept" was recently awarded the Scotland Yards prize of $5,000 for being the best mystery novel of the year 1929 and both books were included in Doubleday, Doran's book of the month Crime Club.

"Red Aces" is by Edgar Wallace, a seasoned writer of mysteries. In this, Mr. J. G. Reeder is the detective. He is an inoffensive old man who carries an umbrella and never raises his voice, but his presence brings terror to the hearts of the crooks he meets because he has a criminal mind himself and is consequently always just a few jumps ahead of the crooks he is pursuing.

"My Life and Work" is written by Henry Ford in collaboration with Samuel Crowther. Because of the impersonal objective attitude Ford takes toward his life the book has the effect of intimate conversation. One critic described it as a guidebook of sound business principles and another said of it, "The curious reader may discover with some astonishment the key with which Mr. Ford unlocked the door of the House of Success."

"The Best Plays of 1928-29," by Burns Mantle, includes also the Yearbook of the Drama in America. Annually since 1922-23 this theatrical critic has selected the ten most representative plays and placed them in a category to gether with the casts in the most important presentations and the biographies of the members of the casts.

"Murder off Broadway," by Leonard Falkner, is a first novel. Mr. Falkner is a New York newspaper man aged 29 years and during the past five years has had about a hundred short stories printed. In the "Murder off Broadway" he presents the intrigue of the bright night way and creates a new detective role for John Ballinger, who proceeds to untangle the knots by subjective analysis. Mr. Falkner's method is similar to that of S. S. VanDine.

"Best English Detective Stories of 1929" is the second omnibus edition of its kind including varied stories by the most popular and ingenious mystery writers in England. E. Phillips Oppenheim, J. S. Fletcher, Maurice LeBlanc, G. K. Chesterton, Stephen Phillips, Agatha Christie, H. DeVere Stacpole, H. M. Richardson, and Martin Cumberland are among those whose work is used in the collection.

"Splendor of God" is by the prominent Iowa writer, Mrs. Honore Willie Morrow. It is a biographical novel concerning the lives of the first Baptist missionaries in India. Ann and Adoniram Judson and describes many of the trials experienced by those two who established the church in Rangoon which is still used.

"The Man Who Lost Himself" is by Osbert Sitwell, another new writer. Set in Spain the story describes the fatal consequences of a disastrous love affair on the mind of a young and brilliant poet. "Before the Bombardment" is the first novel by Mr. Sitwell.

"The Asking Price" by Helen Hull, tells of a young man's strong but losing fight to keep alive his poetical instincts against the determined opposition of a practical and clever wife. The quiet college town makes a good background for the story in which the professor is finally developed by his wife into a "good provider" and a respected young professor. Helen Hull was born and educated in Michigan and at Chicago University. For three years she taught in Wellesley College and she is now in Columbia as assistant professor of English.

have, it is human nature to want to work it."

While this advice was intended for gang chieftains, it might well be heeded by nations. A military machine bears a close resemblance to a gang machine in that, once it has reached its height of power and splendor, and is superior to all neighboring machines, there is always someone who wants to try it.

There is no doubt that the United States could build the most powerful army and navy in the world. And there are those who want to do that thing. But, once built, and our ships steaming proudly over the seven seas and our armed men roaming over the land and all our territories, we would soon develop a false sense of bravado. Being the biggest, and justly proud of ourselves, we would be inclined to swagger unduly. And slights, fancied or real, would grow in importance, we would want to make other nations realize our position, and trouble would ensue.

The gang adviser might have added that eventually, the machine being expanded at an ever increasing rate, it will run away with its leader. Nations have had trouble controlling their machines. Military machines have run away with powerful governments.

Of course, the gangster did not take the advice offered. He had started and to stop was impossible. Nations are not in this predicament.

State Confession On Anniversary

Rev. H. A. Teckhaus Writes of Historic Significance of Augsburg Document.

The Augsburg Confession, a concise statement of the plan of salvation as given in the Old and New Testaments, is commemorated throughout the Lutheran church on its anniversary. In the following paragraphs Rev. H. A. Teckhaus presents the historic meaning of the Confession. It is just 400 years in 1930 since the Augsburg Confession came into existence. It was presented in the afternoon of June 25, 1530, by Dr. C. Beyer in behalf of the Evangelicals of Germany to the Emperor Charles the fifth and the Diet at Augsburg. The meeting place was the bishop's palace. The corridor and the windows were crowded when the Saxon Chancellor read the German version. After the reading a German and a Latin copy were handed to the Emperor and both were kept, thus being lost to the Lutheran Confessors. The Reformation movement had been under way for thirteen years. Since the Diet at Worms in 1521, Luther had been under the ban of the empire, but enough German princes favored him to prevent the enforcement of the Edict of Worms. Changes in accord with the ideas of the Reformer went forward rapidly, especially after the famous recess at the Diet at Spire in 1529, and the emperor, then at peace with France and the Pope, called a Diet to convene at Augsburg, to consider, among other things, the religious questions. Elector John of Saxony ordered Luther, Melancthon and others to meet at Torgau and prepare a summary of the Protestant faith to be presented at the Diet. Using this summary and the so-called Schwabach and the Marburg Articles of 1529, in the preparation of which Luther had taken a journey to Augsburg, prepared an "Apology" (as the Augsburg Confession was first called). This document was revised with the full approval of Luther, who, being under the ban, remained behind at Coburg. Luther does not shine at Augsburg like the hero of Worms. And yet what an heroic figure moves within the walls of the castle Coburg. He regarded it not as his personal battle. It was God's battle for truth. In his naive way he prayed, telling God it was His cause and that it was up to Him to gain the victory. Thus we are told by Luther's secretary, Veit Dietrich. The Augsburg Confession contains a clear and concise statement of the plan of salvation as given in the Old and New Testaments. After the Ecumenical Creeds of the early centuries there is no confessional document of such wide and lasting importance as this confession delivered at Augsburg. It became the source of the confessions of the Anglican church as well as the Wesleyan church. It emphasizes the essential fundamentals of Christian faith: Salvation by grace, through faith in Christ Jesus, without the deeds of the Law. Immediately after his return from Augsburg, Melancthon began an official publication of the confession, since he had all the material at hand from which the final copies for delivery had been made. It appeared about the beginning of May, 1531, in Latin and German. Thus the good news spread rapidly throughout Germany and soon beyond its boundary lines. In Denmark and Norway and Iceland it was accepted. In Sweden and Finland, in the Baltic provinces, in Poland, in parts of Bohemia and Moravia, in lower Austria, in parts of Hungary. Even upon England the Augustana exerted its influence as was mentioned already. The Articles of 1536 are largely based upon it, and the Thirty-nine Articles of 1562 are closely related to it. In the seventeenth century the Augustana came to America. The Lutheran pastors who came from Holland and Sweden taught the Augsburg confession. This holds true also of the German pastors who have come over. When Justus Falkner began his work in 1703 on the Hudson, he requested the members of the "Christian Protestant congregations adhering to the Unaltered Augsburg Confession" to rally around it. When Muhlenberg and others organized the Pennsylvania Ministerium, they did not adopt any confessional paragraphs because it was self-evident to them that the Augustana and the other symbols of the Lutheran church were the basis of their doctrine. Today there is no longer any Lutheran synod in this country that does not confess the Augustana. But the influence of the Augustana extended also to South America. The Lutheran churches and missions in Africa, in Asia, in Australia and in New Guinea find in the Augustana their symbol. Thus the world's historic meaning of the Augustana stands clearly before us: From Augsburg the Confession spread into all countries; the relatively small band of confessors at the Diet at Augsburg has become an immense host that numbers 80,000,000 today. This fact should make the confession and the place where it originated only the dearer to us.

Back To Health Gives Credit To New Konjola Cedar Rapids Lady Was Ill For Years-Had Remarkable Experience With Famed Medicine.

MRS. ANDREW CAPERONIS "For several years I suffered dreadfully from stomach and bowel troubles," said Mrs. Andrew Caperonis, 1007 South Third street, West, Cedar Rapids. "I had little or no appetite and what I forced myself to eat caused pain and misery. I was restless and unable to sleep. Constipation caused my system to become filled with poisons and I was miserable all the time. I tried a good many medicines but none of them gave me more than temporary relief."

"A friend praised Konjola so highly that I gave this medicine a trial. Almost immediately my food began to digest better and my bowel action became more natural. I could feel myself gaining strength. Today, after taking four bottles, I feel better than I have for years. Our home will never be without Konjola and I wish others to know what this medicine did for me."

Konjola is that kind of a medicine, quick and thorough. It is at its best in stubborn cases and even infants can take it. From six to eight bottles are recommended as a complete treatment. Konjola is sold in Wayne, Nebraska, at Feiber's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Spring Pig Crop Is Slightly Less

Lincoln, Neb., June 26: The spring pig crop is slightly less for Nebraska, the cornbelt states, and the country as a whole, says the state and federal division of agricultural statistics. Farmers plan for a slightly larger fall pig crop. This information is based on the pig survey made in co-operation with the post office department and rural carriers.

The Nebraska spring pig crop is 93.6 percent of last spring. The number of sows farrowing is 93.7 percent of a year ago. The average number of pigs per litter was slightly higher due to the unusually favorable season for farrowing. Nebraska farmers plan to breed 21.6 percent more sows for fall farrowing than a year ago. The cornbelt states have 97.1 percent, as many pigs, as a year ago.

The straw was damp and tough. The combine engine lost speed and power. The work went along slowly and was not well done. Apparently the combine engine was not equal to the work. Then someone suggested NEW Red Crown Ethyl.

What a difference this distinctly finer gasoline made. It kept that combine motor at full speed and power. The tractor was speeded up and acres more of clean-threshed wheat were handled that day. NEW Red Crown Ethyl will tell any combine operator how to get a bigger day's work out of his machine—just as it daily proves to drivers of passenger cars, trucks and tractors that for economical operation and superior performance—there is no substitute for NEW Red Crown Ethyl.
