

African Field Holds Interest

Young Missionary Writes Letters to American Friends Here From Territory.

Gerald A. Dahlquist who is in mission work in Bougouni, French West Africa, has written several interesting letters to his parents regarding his field. Miss Laura E. Lyons, former teacher of Mr. Dahlquist in Golden Gleam school fourteen miles northwest of Wayne, has compiled excerpts from the letters as follows:

From a letter written in Bougouni January 30 of this year, there is an account of certain Sundanese festivals which the missionary found interesting. He says: "There are many people here in Bougouni these days. The governor of all the French colonies is to be here to-morrow, so the natives have come from many of the smaller villages to celebrate. They are having a wild time this evening, beating their so-called drums, and dancing. We went over about 5 o'clock to watch them. One man was beating a drum, and another, with a mask, and wild-looking costume was dancing and doing some funny stunts."

"It is easy to get all the food we want. The market is just a few rods away, and everything is very cheap. We can buy meat every day, and chicken twice a week if we wish. We have to eat potatoes almost every day. Reed has a good garden started, and we have had lettuce a few times. It is very dry here, so the garden has to be watered every day. There seems, however, to be an abundance of water here. We filter our drinking water, which is good."

Describes Small Villages. Small villages along the route are described in a letter written nine days later, on January 29. Mr. Dahlquist says: "As I rode on the train from Dakar, the port where I landed, to Bamako, I saw many, many small villages along the way, and between Bamako and Bougouni there are many more."

"We have been sending our letters with truck drivers, but this one I am sending by the mail carrier, so it will not leave Bamako until a week from Friday. They are taking off the old roof on the house to-day, so we will get into the new one in about two weeks. There are 30 native boys working on it. As soon as they get the roof on, the ladies will move down here, and we will move back to Bamako. Last Wednesday we were invited up to the commandant building to see the French governor, and had the honor of shaking hands with him."

Makes Language Study. A later letter, written February 4, describes the missionary's troubles in mastering the new language. "I surely have a time with this language, the words are not so hard to pronounce, but they are changed around so queerly when used in sentences. The adjective always comes after the word which it modifies, as does the preposition. For instance, they say 'house in for in the house.' One is obliged to forget the English, and remember the other form. The natives appear to speak very rapidly, and to run their words together in such a way that it is very difficult to catch the words. I am able to speak a few words to the boys who work around here, though. Forty native boys have come to work on the roof. It is quite interesting to see a roof put on this way. Our main rooms are of mud-brick, then, on top of these walls, there are pillars, and at each pillar, there will be built up to a peak. The building has around it a veranda, extending a few feet from the regular walls. On the edge of the veranda, there are pillars first, then timbers are placed all around on the pillars, both on the walls and all around the veranda pillars. Next they put on water-palm sticks up and down, as rafters. These sticks they tie with bark. Last of all the natives sew grass on the top. "During these two months, it has been clear, sunny weather, with very few clouds, but at night it gets cool, and, by morning, chilly. I can hardly realize that at home it is perhaps below zero. They tell me that the cool weather is almost over, and that soon it will be hot, even at night."

Discusses Missionary Situation. After his return to Bamako, Mr. Dahlquist wrote, February 21, a letter which discusses the missionary situation. "We are planning, he tells in this communication, 'to have a two days' conference and prayer together, then next week the two young ladies will move down there. Mr. Reed will go there, too, to help the girls get settled, and to finish making the screen doors. We like it better here in Bamako. It is a smaller place, so it is much more quiet, and the people are more friendly."

On our independence day, the missionary wrote another message to his friends in America, saying: "It is not very sultry here, although at times it is a little depressing because of the rain. It is quite cool most of the nights, especially after big rains, and not very hot in the day times. These are the rainy months. 'Some boys come around almost every day to visit and to sell eggs and other things. We can get three eggs for a franc, which is about four and one-half cents. 'There are cows here, so we buy fresh milk every morning, but it always has to be boiled in order to make it safe. We do not have oranges now. Our orange tree began to bear, but something got at the roots, and destroyed it. The missionaries of the Alliance mission brought us a big sack of oranges recently when they passed through here. We used them in making marmalade."

Gives Marmalade Recipe. The recipe for the marmalade describes the missionaries' method of preparing this delicacy. "Mr. Reed has his own way of making the marmalade, which is by grinding the pulp and skins, and cooking it with the juice and water. I have tried to make it, also. "It is very interesting to go into the homes of the natives, and to see how they prepare their food. They usually pour all of their meal in a big, heavy bowl, out of a large log. Then they cook it on open fires, either out in the courts, but usually in their houses. Their houses are made of mud, although there are some mud-huts which have roofs of straw. The plain mud houses have flat roofs with mud on top, and drainage spouts of tin, which are designed to carry away the water. "We have a great deal of trouble with some white ants of the termite variety. They eat into the wood, and destroy it. They cannot do much damage in this house, because the walls are made of stone which has been plastered with lime and sand. However, the termites get into the door casings, and they have destroyed several boards before we noticed it. In the Bougouni house we cannot have any furniture close to the walls, because they build little mud bridges from the walls to the furniture. I am enclosing a film of the house. There are three rooms in it, all of about the same size. The walls are painted, and have a border about two feet from the ceiling. It is made of corrugated iron sheets laid on heavy wood bolsters, about four by eight. We have no stove like at home, just fire places built of mud-brick. These are square holes big enough so that small kettles may be put down in the fire, and big ones can stand on top. We burn charcoal, which is prepared in nearby furnaces where they burn wood. We have electric lights, but a big rain just came up, so the lights went out.

"Thank you for the flower-seeds. I shall try to find some place in which to plant them. "The natives enjoy watching me work in the field. An old lady came by when I was planting corn. She greeted me, and asked me if I were working and then she laughed. "I wish you could have seen the garb worn by the bride at a native wedding which I attended recently. To complete the picture, she wore a red handkerchief tied around her head. The groom was attired in a white man's khaki suit."

Enjoys Summer Weather. The last letter in the series was written July 13, when our summer season was in full swing. Mr. Dahlquist appeared to be enjoying Africa, for he wrote on that date: "Everything looks green and pretty now, for the rainy season is here. "We three men went out into the country last evening on our bicycles. I have my new one now. It was level near the road, but a little distance back it was rough, and the big cliffs looked almost like mountains. "We have magazines and papers coming from the home land now," says Mr. Dahlquist in the last excerpt from this letter, indicating that this material is very welcome in the mission field."

Local Boy Wins Tennis Tourney Wayne Boy Couples With Glenn Davis To Get Tourney Trophy.

Coming out a victor over Glenn Davis of Norfolk in the singles played as finale to the northeast Nebraska tennis tourney at Norfolk, Leo McMurry of Wayne made himself champion in this region. Four sets were played on Sunday afternoon, ending 6-4; 6-2; 7-5; and 6-2 with the long end of the scores on McMurry's side. Spectators reported close competition, steady, even playing, with little that was spectacular. McMurry's first championship displaces Davis, a younger star, whose opening plays were promising and showed finish. Leo McMurry of Wayne and Glenn Davis of Norfolk, coupled Thursday afternoon against Floyd Seder and Lawrence "Spike" Malm, ended victors in the contest for the doubles title. The five-set match was played on the Athletic park courts as a part of the northeast Nebraska tourney, the first played since 1928, when the meet was held in Fremont. Set scores stood at 4-5, 7-5, 2-6, 6-3. Although McMurry and Davis were scheduled to play the final round to decide the singles championship Thursday afternoon, it was decided, because of the heat, to delay this fray until Sunday. Entries in the match, which began on Sunday last, numbered about thirty, as arrangements were made on very short notice. Mr. McMurry, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McMurry, was the past season a member of the tennis team at the Iowa State college, Ames. Glenn Davis, with whom he was coupled, was in 1927 and 1928 a member of the University of Nebraska tennis team. Try a Wayne Herald Want Ad.

Splendid Views Found Pleasing

Hornets Enjoy Seeing Big Fruit Orchards, Tough Timber in Northwest.

Wilderness rugged scenery than was observed anywhere else in the course of a transcontinental motor trip was enjoyed along the Caribou trail on the Fraser river in British Columbia by Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Horney who arrived home Friday after an absence of more than a month. Although Glacier and Yellowstone national parks presented many gorgeous scenes, the Hornets found the mountainous timber country along the Fraser river more primitively appealing than any other. "Part of the scenery was straight up, and part of it was straight down," said Mr. Horney, describing the heights along which the Caribou trail runs. Heavily timbered in fir, pine, cedar, birch and maple trees of good size, the British Columbia country offered many good subjects for picture-taking. The Hornets enjoyed taking pictures of bits of scenery which appealed especially to them. Snaps Bear and Cubs. One of the most interesting pictures in the collection is a snapshot of a bear and her three cubs, which Mr. Horney took in Yellowstone National park. Mr. and Mrs. Horney left Wayne July 6 for Seattle, Wash., the home of their daughter, Mrs. A. L. Monken, and her husband. They arrived in Seattle twelve days after leaving home, making the journey with a minimum of difficulty. Roads they found in a generally good condition, for the weather was dry. Dust was troublesome on the return journey, which was made in twelve days, also. Although the purpose of the trip was to visit Mr. and Mrs. Monken, the Hornets stopped at various points of interest along the way, leaving a fortnight for the stay in Seattle. Places visited included towns in Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia. Excessively hot weather going and coming made the trip a little less pleasant than it would have been had the temperature been lower, but, in general, Mr. and Mrs. Horney found traveling comfortable. Cool weather on the coast seemed especially delightful to them after the hot, dusty air of the inland towns. See Big Fruit Crops. In general, stated Mr. Horney, crops between Nebraska and the coast states were in poor condition because of the drought and heat, although the fruit in Washington, Oregon and British Columbia presented a most flourishing appearance. Small fruits, such as plums of several varieties, and cherries, including the famous Royal Anne variety, are producing the usual excellent crop this season. Peaches were coming on, and apple orchards in the northwest gave evidences of a good harvest to be ready in the fall. Big black cherries and other fruits familiar to this part of the country only in a canned or preserved state, were seen at frequent intervals growing in large, well-tended orchards. Mr. and Mrs. Horney returned home most enthusiastic over the northwest.

Big Sales Events Draw Purchasers

Buying crowds filled the stores and streets last well-advertised fire sale, and carefully-heralded specials in other stores made the day especially attractive to purchasers. As early at 6:30 in the morning, crowds were beginning to assemble, awaiting the opening of doors, and the beginning of a real bargain day. Cars lined the streets, and persons who thronged the sidewalks were loaded down with bundles and packages which gave the lie to the pessimist's story that the people of the community are to be restricted sadly in their buying power this autumn. Friday's crowds, which were up to, if not in excess of some Saturday crowds, gave no appearance of being stricken with drought-induced poverty. On Saturday afternoon, the usual marketing crowds came to town, and Saturday evening the streets were thronged again. Crop enthusiasts are beginning to be successful in convincing pessimists of the ability of this country to produce a good living for those who live here. Patrons like Friday's and Saturday's have money in their pockets, but they are not content to let it stay there when news of important sales events reaches them.

Case in Court Follows Dance

Man Is Rendered Unconscious By Blow—Other County Court Cases of Week.

A dance in Hoskins Saturday night resulted in filing of a charge of intoxication against Elmer LaCroix of Carroll, when he and three other young men engaged in a scrap. LaCroix is alleged to have struck Harold Murphy of Wayne, on the head with a bottle and the latter was rendered unconscious for a time. LaCroix was brought to Wayne and pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of intoxication. He was fined $30, which he paid.

John Evers, Winside, pleaded guilty in Wayne county court Saturday to charge of intoxication. He was given a jail sentence of thirty days.

Herbert Schwindt and William Deck, Hoskins, each pleaded guilty in the county court here Friday to charges of assault growing out of a threshing machine dispute. Each paid a fine of $5 and costs.

Chelsea Thompson, Wayne, is serving time in Wayne county jail on charges of intoxication and possession of liquor. A week ago Monday he bought a half gallon of whiskey which was found in his possession when he was taken in hand by authorities after having become intoxicated. He pleaded guilty to the two charges. He was given a thirty-day term in jail on the intoxication count, with a diet of bread and water excepting for one meal each day. On the charge of possession he was given sixty days in jail on bread and water excepting for one meal each day, and the sheriff was to each day, and the sheriff was to collect employment for him, collect the wages he earns and give the same to support the family.

Pat Brown pleaded guilty in county court last week to a charge of trying to pass a worthless check. He had $80 which he squandered when he came to Wayne. He wanted more and

Geo. Noakes Takes Family On Trip

Travelers Visit Relatives in Idaho; Make Three-Day Stop in Park.

Heavy rains all through the state of Wyoming and for a three-day period in Yellowstone National park were reported on their return home Thursday last by Mr. and Mrs. George Noakes, Miss Maryan, and Miss Marjorie, who had enjoyed a fortnight's motor trip into Idaho. The Noakes family left two weeks ago for Ashton, Idaho, where they visited Mrs. Noakes' mother, Mrs. Mary Brooks, and her brother, John Brooks. Returning home, they stopped for three days in Yellowstone park, which they had visited on another vacation trip. Showers fell all three of the days set aside for the visit to the park, which was a great disappointment to Mr. and Mrs. Noakes. They remembered the park as it had appeared in fair weather, and found the rainy-day view of the canyon and falls somewhat less gorgeous. Geyser eruptions and other natural phenomena they found as interesting as ever. A most unpleasant feature was the fact that the tourists got a good drenching at every venture out of the car. On Tuesday, when the Noakes party traveled through Wyoming, more rain fell, and the roads were at some points, very slippery. In general, however, said Mr. Noakes, the roads were very good, and evidences of road improvement were to be observed everywhere. Observe Good Crops. Crops in the west were observed to be in good condition, considering the seriousness of the drought situation. Range lands in western Nebraska, and in parts of Wyoming, were green and fresh-looking after the rains. Cattle were said to be fat and in good condition. Although all cornfields show the effects of the dry season, Mr. Noakes states, the Nebraska corn, with the exception of some fields, and a general condition of firing along the highways and fences, is in a fair way to make a good crop. Mr. and Mrs. Noakes took quite a number of pictures along the way, and are waiting with interest to see how many of them come up to the original scenery. PRIMARIES OVER

The primaries being over and candidates of the two parties being in the field, voters will have more than two months to reach conclusions. Senator Norris was an easy winner for the republican nomination to succeed himself, but as comfortable sledding in the primary does not necessarily mean equal ease in the subsequent election, the senator will have to stir himself when he reaches the last grade. But he has been elected so often as the candidate of a party whose policies and administration leaders he has regularly opposed that he may be able to do so again.

The senator's opponent in November will be former Senator G. M. Hitchcock, publisher of the Omaha World-Herald, and a man of outstanding qualities of statesmanship. Mr. Hitchcock's father was a republican and at one time a member of the United States senate. The present Mr. Hitchcock's reasons for abandoning the noble pathway of his father are not very sound, even if excusable, but his previous service in the senate leads one to conclude that campaign faldral and the burning of political red fire do not influence him in performing official duties or in shaping his public record.

As between Norris and Hitchcock, voters who believe in the soundness of the Hoover policies, will naturally support the one who is least against the administration—the one who will be the more constructive and helpful in promoting the welfare of American people. As fate issues, the doubt which was effectively broken this week, is out of the race.

HEADWAY.

A letter from Mrs. M. A. Phillips, for many years principal of the Wayne high school, now teaching in Omaha, states that she recently returned from a visit to the land of her childhood in Missouri, and that she was profoundly impressed by the difference between farm conditions now and those which prevailed when she lived there as a girl. She mentions that farms are equipped with electric lighting and power plants and have the advantage of every modern convenience. The tall candle, then the oil lamp and now turning a switch and causing a flood of light—thanks to Edison—and other changes in keeping with progress form a sharp contrast with the old days, as noted by Mrs. Phillips. Farm conditions have been vastly improved everywhere. Besides modern conveniences in all farm buildings, automobiles and hard-surfaced roads have facilitated reaching markets and taking advantage of attractions in large centers. Bumping over rough roads in lumber wagons, selling produce after a tedious journey to the nearest market and other hardships incident to the old days on the farm are happily over.

Speaking of crops in Missouri following the long spell of torrid weather, Mrs. Phillips says: "Crops in Missouri were far more discouraging than those in Nebraska—pastures brown and dead, corn curling and forming very few ears; all kinds of hay short, and on many farms water becoming scarce."

Republicans who went into the democratic column to help the democrats make their nominations, and democrats who did the same thing to assist the republicans, would modify violation of the intention of the primary law by sticking to primary preferences in the November election. But to help shape the personnel of an opposing party ticket and then reverse action to tear it down and encompass its defeat is a course of procedure that the authors and makers of the primary did not have in mind.

A proposed question as to whether one should be allowed to inherit a fortune when he is young or wait until he has become old was discussed recently. The temptation on the part of a youth who has suddenly come into possession of unearned riches, to lie down and smother initiative through indifference and inaction, was pointed out as a reason why large gifts should be withheld until one becomes old, toothless and tottering. On the other hand, if a young person has the right ambition, he will employ his inheritance in the developing of an enterprise that is so useful to society that it swells capital and adds to the satisfaction of living. We think the inheritance of a fortune would not be considered inadvisable at any age, and the older one gets, the stronger he is likely to feel the need of an unearned prop.

Sunday's World-Herald devoted a page to expressions of opinion from some of Omaha's leading citizens in regard to the best place to raise boys—in the large city or in the small town. A majority of the opinions favored the small town. An educator, reared in a small town, said he would vote for the city first, the farm second and the small town last. He pointed out that the advantages for work and education were greater in the big city, with less idleness to devote to mischief and with law enforcement more impersonal and more effective. The size of the city and the size of the small town under consideration, would have to be defined to support judgment. We would be inclined to give first place to the farm where there is plenty of wholesome employment, and where, with good roads and automobiles, every city advantage is made quickly and easily available. How a town like Wayne ranks, we do not know, though, as a matter of fact, it has nearly every advantage and few of the objections pointed out in the large centers.

The Universal Draft.

Sloux City Journal. Mrs. Mary Macrae, national president of the American legion auxiliary, has emphasized an influence wielded by the universal draft that a good many persons may have overlooked. Its direct bearing upon opposition to war. Mrs. Macrae declared that "the mere writing of this law on our statute books would go farther to remove the likelihood of war than all the peace plans, conferences and similar movements which are now drawing such attention."

The nation in putting responsibility of defense or victory upon all citizens alike automatically would create mass resistance to conflict. That would mean that others besides men physically strong and possessed of youth could be called upon to fight their country's battles. It would not mean that they had to shoulder arms and go into action on the field of battle as soldiers. But it would mean compulsory service of a kind that would be expensive to the individual.

Until now it has been the commonly accepted idea that in time of war stalwart young men should go to the front and bear the brunt of conflict. In the world war soldiers were killed or maimed or broken in health while others remained behind and accumulated wealth. But if wealth were drafted along with labor and every other element that could contribute to the cause, the vote against war would be unanimous.

Menace To Wheat Is Being Studied

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 19.—The Hessian fly, menace to wheat, is under observation in Nebraska. To prevent a recurrence of the damage wrought this spring, the state agricultural college has established an observation station on the farm of Edward Pankonin, two miles south of Weeping Water. Here extension agents will determine the "fly-safe" date for winter seeding by counting the flies that emerge each day from the Purpurium stage, commonly known as the "flaxseed" stage. Warm and moist days will hasten the fly along, while cool days will delay the day of plowing, college experts say. Hessian fly damage this year was largely localized in central Nebraska.

Three Injured Near Verdigre

State Miniature Will Be Feature

A feature of the 1930 Nebraska state fair is the immense topographical map of Nebraska that has been built in agriculture hall. It is a sort of moving picture of the industry of Nebraska. In brief relief it shows the contour of the surface of the state. The rivers run with water. The railroad trains are in constant motion. Trucks take their way through the state, hauling the excess products of Nebraska to less fortunate sections.

On the map appears many of the towns and cities of the state. Places of historic interest are shown in smaller size but faithful to the original. The diversified resources of the state are skillfully portrayed.

The map is 44 feet long and 22 feet wide and is both an interesting and beautiful exhibit.

Happy Chick News

Have you ever heard the old song, "My wife has gone to the country?" Well, Pete, the editor of Happy Chick News, has gone to Stanton. We loaded up a six-pen hog house and a Happy Chick 9x12 Brooder House with a Simplex Brooder stove and Pete went to the Stanton fair. If you go down to the fair look him up. You will find him on the main drag busy talking ready-made houses, and he will be glad to see you.

Speaking about fairs, I wonder if the general public knows just how much work there is connected with getting the fairs ready to open. Work has already begun here at Wayne for the fair next month. Phil Dammie is busy in our shop now making pens for the hog display. We are busy cutting the lumber for him and Phil puts it into a form and nails them together. Boy, he is working some, too, don't forget that. Rollie Eey spends every minute that he can from the bank planning a couple of new buildings that he wants put out there, while Homer Scaoe and his crew are getting ready to run a lot of concrete next week. It looks like a big fair this year with the number of entries already way in advance of other years. H. J. Miner and Harry Craven are spending about all their time on fair business. When we see all these fellows so busy three weeks ahead it looks like a lot of us should volunteer to help. We can all give the fair our moral and financial support anyway; we will enjoy it more if we do.

A woman, arriving in this country after a short trip to Europe, was asked the usual questions by the customs officials at the landing port. "Anything to declare, madam?"

"No," she replied, "nothing."

"Then, madam," said the official, "may I take it that the fur tail I see hanging down under your coat is your own?"

The rains of the last few days have shown up a lot of roof leaks. How about your roof? We have just unloaded a car of the 5x Saginaw, vertical grain shingles. There are none better. Each bundle is labeled and fully guaranteed.

Sold a six-pen hog house for delivery, next week, way down on the reservation south of Emerson. The party said he had heard of our house and he wanted to see it. Now he owns one.

Charles Wax of Hartington, brought his truck in for a new body Tuesday. He was mighty pleased that we could get it out for him by that night.

We are unloading a lot of mighty good coal for the winter trade. Coal is cash this winter. Coal is cash at the mines, freight is cash and unloading is cash, so we will have to sell for cash. Not many yards are storing summer coal on account of the money involved. Coal may be scarce this winter when the rush comes on that account. It reminds of the old adage that ends—

"But on the other hand we find

The wise ones take no chance;

They fill their bins while summer's here,

And let Old Winter prance."

Everybody seems to be cheered up since the rains. We notice the traveling men are a lot popper than they were three weeks ago. They seem to enjoy the mud roads for a change.

After the Stanton fair comes the West Point fair. We have already been down there and set up a 16x24 chicken house, complete with roosts, nests, feeders. In fact, it's all ready to turn the hens in. It's some house. It is the same house as our 9x12, just stretched out, the same as we can do to your 9x12 house.

This is the Happy Chick Brooder House factory, Wayne, Nebraska. Stanton "Eyer's", signing off until next week.

School In Wayne Will Open Soon

High School Pupils Will Register Friday and Saturday of Next Week for Term.

All pupils in Wayne high school or those who are planning to attend for the first time should register on August 30 and 31. Registration will commence at 9:00 a. m. and continue until 5 p. m. As far as possible it is suggested that freshmen and sophomores register on Friday and juniors and seniors on Saturday. In case it is impossible to register on the day stated, allowance will be made for registration on the other.

All the pupils in school last spring registered at that time, but it will be necessary to register them definitely a second time and pass out their entrance cards.

Furthermore, there will be some changes made on practically all cards since the schedule has been changed as subjects have been eliminated as well as added to the curriculum in making out the schedule for the coming year.

The school would appreciate parents' checking very carefully the course which their pupils are taking. In case of any question or doubt feel free to consult the principal or superintendent. All are urged to do this.

Employment In Industries Showing Improvement In Pacific States.

Variety Resources

Cultivation Is Developed to Big Scale in Oregon, Accord- ing to Visitors.

Business and employment conditions in the Pacific northwest are about normal, according to George J. Church of Redmond, Wash., who with his wife and son, William Loomis, visited the past ten days here with Mrs. Church's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Crockett.

Lumber camps, saw mills and paper mills are operating with a reduced force, but this is customary in the fall of the year. Foreign demand for these products has fallen off and reduced operation somewhat. Berry and fruit industries have been operating normally.

Berry Industry Big.

Berry cultivation is one of the principal industries of the northwest, Mr. Church states. Berry farms vary in size from three to fifty acres. Mr. Church has one of twenty-five acres near Woodburn, Ore. This is in the world's largest berry region, thirty-four miles south of Portland and eighteen miles north of Salem.

Loganberries, raspberries, strawberries, evergreen berries and gooseberries are the principal berry crops raised. Large factories in each city can many of these for domestic and for foreign consumption. Packing plants also send large shipments of fresh berries to eastern markets and to foreign countries.

The evergreen berry, a wild blackberry which is not under cultivation, is fast gaining popularity. This berry until recently grew only on the mountains in dense thickets. Persons used to go to the mountains at this season and camp until they had picked and canned the quantity they wished to use. The berry is like a blackberry only considerably larger. The crop may be picked from a bush one day and the branches will be filled with berries the following day. Such profuse bearing makes the large production and the rapid growth makes berries of excellent quality. When canned they are sold in the east under the name of blackberries. The evergreens produce from one and a half to three tons of berries per acre in the season, and the producer receives 5c and 6c a pound for them.

Loganberries yield well in the northwest also. They sell for 6 1/2c a pound. The raspberries sell for 7c and 8c a pound. Gooseberries bring about the same.

Need Special Care.

Strawberries have to be "babied" in cultivation, Mr. Church says. When properly cared for they produce from one to three tons per acre in the season and return for $140 a ton. Work on ten acres for large production, Mr. Church asserts, is about the same as work on a quarter section in this state. The industry keeps employees busy throughout the year. Winter care of plants is very important. A farmer usually has two or three kinds of berries on one farm so that the work varies and is distributed through the seasons.

Strawberries are planted in check rows about three feet apart, just as corn in this vicinity. This is to allow careful cultivation. The plants are not allowed to spread, the runners being cut off. Roots of plants grow so deep and spread so far that the ground can be cultivated only near the surface, and it is tilled often to bring moisture up from the subsoil for the plants. An irrigation is necessary. An experiment is being tried by the government in the laying of tile beneath the surface and filling this with water. Moisture goes through the tile walls and the roots grow toward this source for it. A more even supply of water is thus assured.

Strawberry hills must be kept clean, Mr. Church says, to make the plants bear to capacity. As the ground never freezes hard in the winter all life in the ground lives through. Weeds in the hills rob the strawberry plant of moisture and mineral matter and thus lower production. Some gardeners have the weeds hoed down. This is not the best way, however, Mr. Church says, for the roots are still there to reduce activity of the berry plant. The original cost of having the weeds pulled from the hills is some more but the results are most lasting, and one is certain that the plant will not be harmed by the weed root. The space between rows is hoed with success if the hoeing is not so deep as to cut roots. Other berry plants are cultivated by team and machine.

Each fall after strawberries are through bearing, tops of the plants are cut off. This is most successfully done by hand. Machines are available for this work but the mower is likely to catch a fiber and pull the strawberry plant loose, breaking some of the roots. This harms the plant.

Produce New Variety.

The Marshall strawberry is a new variety which is being developed now. Larger and more juicy than the regular strawberry, it is not easily shipped and not easily canned. Growers two years ago conceived the idea of freezing these berries. This method of canning preserves the berry and provides fresh fruit at all seasons of the year. A large market for this product is being created. The Marshall berry makes good preserves.

Berry and fruit crops are contracted by canneries or farmers' associations before the season opens. One can realize more by selling to these concerns than by trying to market his crop alone.

Pickers Are Professional.

Persons who engage in berry cultivation usually make rounds of coast from south to north just as grain harvesters do in the middle west. Families go to Arizona and California to pick oranges and other fruit. They then work northward with advance of the season. Apples, berries, peaches and cherries are picked in Oregon. The apple crop in the Hood river valley then draws the pickers, and afterward they go to Idaho for prune harvest. It is then time to go south again and resume the order. Parents and children all engage in picking, many camping on their journey. Some city families go to the berry and fruit fields for the harvest also.

Truck gardening is a good-sized industry in the northwest, especially near Seattle and other larger cities. Mostly Japs operate these gardens. Head lettuce and celery are the principal crops grown. Much is sold locally but large shipments are made to eastern and foreign markets. Tomatoes are also grown extensively.

Start Nut Raising.

Raising of English walnuts is becoming an important industry in Oregon. Groves were planted about ten years ago and they are just beginning to bear. The nuts are of better quality than those raised in California, Mr. Church says. Most of the groves are south and west of Salem, Ore. The crop has been so successfully started that the acreages are being increased and soon the product will be one of importance in the northwest. Filberts are also being raised. These did not do well for a time and it was found that a male tree was needed. After this

FAIR PLANTS OF NEBRASKA WORTH ABOVE MILLION

SEVENTY-NINE out of 93 counties of Nebraska have county fairs. All but a few are permanent fair owning grounds and buildings. A total of 2,488 acres of land is contained in these fair grounds which have a real estate value of $758,766.35. The buildings are worth $387,150.00. The total investment is more than a million dollars.

The county boards appropriated last year for county fair purposes $183,706.51, but $132,827.48 came back to the people in the shape of premiums. All but nine fairs made a charge at the gate which totaled $230,968.19. Receipts from all sources amounted to $659,251.34. Total expenditures were $604,326.32.

These figures throw considerable light on the question, do county fairs pay? From the standpoint of figures the answer is, they do. Only fifteen fairs reported a loss last year and the losses totaled $9,330.75. The rest reported a profit and the profits totaled $64,255.77.

The greatest fair of them all, Nebraska State Fair, has become one of the big eight-day shows of the nation. Last year it topped all eight-day fairs in attendance.

The state fair really began in territorial days. Robert W. Furnas introduced a bill in the territorial council to create a fair board. It carried, and the first fair was held at Nebraska City in 1859. Nebraska as a territory was then only five years old. The first fair was a financial failure. Nine years later a second fair was held at Brownville and from that time on the state show has been held every year. It is an unqualified success financially and as a state builder.

was planted the others produced well.

Flax at Penitentiary.

Flax cultivation is developing in Oregon. The government imported eighty bushels of flax seed from Scotland and Holland as an experiment. The past year the crops increased to 1,800 acres and next year the planting will be 3,000 acres. The project is managed by the state and state penitentiary labor is used. Fiber must be twenty-seven inches long before it is used for weaving. That which is not of this length is threshed and the seed used for replanting or sold on the commercial market. Some of the flax is pulled by hand and other by machine. The machine does the work of twenty-five men. If the field is weedy the machine does not operate well. The cost of pulling by machine is about $15 an acre and by hand it is $20 to $35.

Wheat is grown to considerable extent in eastern Oregon and the yield was good this year. The crop is produced in alternate years, every other year the ground being summer fallowed. The grain brings more than twice the return per acre the westerners find by this method.

Many Wild Horses.

Wild horses have become so numerous in the mountains of the northwest that marketing of them has led to new industries. The meat is canned and sent to eastern markets and also abroad, especially to England and Germany for consumption. Persons who have overcome prejudice against horse meat have a liking for it. Large glue factories have been established to utilize the horse hoofs. Many who have fat horses that are too old for work take them to the horse market and trade for some of the wild ones which have been broken. The horse market started when the wild animals became so numerous that they came down to farms and destroyed crops.

Many sheep are on graze in the mountains in the northwest. Deer and bear are numerous in the mountains, and birds and fish are plentiful. Pheasants are so numerous that they are becoming a nuisance. They and the meadow larks and robins cause considerable loss in berry fields.

Chicken raising furnishes work for many near the cities. Many dressed fowls and eggs are sent east. Seattle sent ninety cars of eggs out one week.

Many Lumber Mills.

The Pacific northwest with its mammoth fir trees furnishes one of the largest fields for lumbering in the world. Trees are cut at camps and sawed into lumber and shingles at the mills. In many instances the mills are on rivers down which the logs are floated from camps farther up stream. Large rafts, hooked together like freight train cars, may be seen carrying logs to mills, a tug pulling the train of rafts.

Foreign demand for lumber has fallen off this summer, reflecting depression in building in the orient. Domestic demand naturally falls somewhat this time of year, Mr. Church says. The two situations have lessened operation of the camps and mills for a period in order that all may have work some plants work men in shifts a few days each week, and others operate to capacity for four or five days each week.

Paper mills have also cut down operation in the same way as saw-mills for a few weeks. They will return to full capacity in about two weeks, Mr. Church is informed.

Fires Recruit In Loss.

Fires cause big loss in the forests of the northwest. As rain does not fall from about the first of June until September, things become dry. Fires start from carelessly thrown cigarettes, from lightning and from camp fires of tourists. Such fires rage through the forests each summer and destroy more timber than is cut for lumber. The government has rangers who spend their time watching the forests and putting out fires which they detect for distances of twenty-five miles by use of powerful glasses. Chemicals are successfully used on small fires but a large forest blaze is too terrific a force to be halted in this manner. The most effective way of fighting such a blaze is to fell trees a distance ahead of the fire, trying to keep the blaze from jumping the open space.

Laws Are Strict.

Fire laws are very strict in Oregon. No traveler and no farmer or other person is allowed to start a fire unless given a permit by the government. Such permit is obtained at official headquarters in Salem. Good reasons must be given before such permission is granted and then care is enforced. If a farmer wishes to destroy some weeds on his place he must get a permit. If a ranger discovers a camp fire miles away he reaches the spot in short order on his motorcycle. One not having permit is subject to fine. The government is now enlisting airplanes in the fire scouting service. This method has proved more effective than most others in locating the forest blaze at its start.

In spite of the care exercised fires rage through the timber each summer. So dense is the smoke that the atmosphere in the northwest is smoky most of the season. Seldom does it clear so that one can see great distances.

Seattle is developing faster than other large cities of the country, Mr. Church says. Its vast resources and its easy contact with shipping to the orient and to Alaska aid its growth. One of the largest navy yards is located at Bremerton, just across the sound from Seattle. An enormous government plant at Seattle is building airplanes for the army and navy service.

Mr. Church and family live in Redmond which is about fourteen miles from Seattle business center. Mr. Church instructs in commercial department of the Redmond high school. He and his family went to Woodburn, Ore., to look after berry harvest on their acreage and then drove to Nebraska, arriving in Wayne last week Monday. They left yesterday on their return west.

Roads are excellent in western states. They are fair through Wyoming and much better in Nebraska than they found them on their last visit here.

The Churches like the northwest. The weather is always cool in the summer and the winters are not very cold. Winter is the rainy season. Snow falls but never stays long.

Eight people suffered broken arms in attempting to crank their cars. Five drivers turned in too sharply in front of cars they were passing causing accidents which severely injured five persons.

Blinding lights caused fifteen injuries and one death. Eighteen reckless drivers were responsible for eighteen injuries and two deaths.

The killing of Jack Zuta, alleged brothel keeper and gunman, marked Chicago's fiftieth gangland death since January 1, 1930. Great daily newspapers all over America carried the story in glaring headlines.

The population of Nebraska is about 1-3 that of Chicago and in the same time we have killed 3 1/2 times that number of people by motor vehicle accidents and 10 times that number by all types of accidents. Based on respective populations in the two localities, a peace-loving Nebraska citizen is 10 1/2 times as apt to be killed by a motor vehicle accident or 30 times as apt to be snuffed out by some other type of accident as is a citizen of Chicago to be "blown up by pineapples" or "taken for a ride."

Governor Weaver by proclaiming a safety week and undertaking a drive against accidents in Nebraska has picked out a bigger job than that facing the Chicago crime commission.

Corn Outlook In State Good

Statisticians Say Crop Conditions Are Better in Nebraska Than Figured.

Lincoln, Neb.: Nebraska crops are in much better condition than the average corn belt state, says A. E. Anderson, agricultural statistician. The production of small grain crops is far above the average. Due to the large acreage of corn and the fact that two-thirds of the state has prospects ranging from fair to very good, and hay crops that exceed the average, it appears that Nebraska will be in a better financial condition as a result of the widespread drought than would have been possible had prospects been uniformly good throughout the country.

The corn prospects in Nebraska are now favorable for a fairly large production, while the corn for the country as a whole has been reduced heavily. The July 1 stocks of old corn in Nebraska were nearly 50,000,000 bushels. If the Nebraska corn crop materializes as it now appears, Nebraska will not only have sufficient corn for her needs, but will have a surplus for other states.

Nebraska has a good potato crop. While the early planted farm crop is excellent the late planted farm crop is poor. The early commercial crop has been making record yields. The late commercial crop of western Nebraska is very promising. The estimate for the country as a whole is 372,557,000 bushels, which is a sufficiently low production to command very good prices.

Large Hay Crops.

Tame hay crop is slightly above the average. The supply for the country as a whole is considerably below the average. There should be a good demand from other states for Nebraska's surplus of tame hay at fairly satisfactory prices. The wild hay crop is above the average, while the supply for the country as a whole is about the average. Nebraska has large areas of hay flats in the sandhill section that could be harvested and furnish a surplus of wild hay if lower freight rates could be obtained and the price justified its harvesting and marketing.

With the possible exception of the two southern tiers of counties and the two northern tiers of eastern Nebraska, farmers will not have to sacrifice their livestock at present depressed prices, even in the drought stricken areas which had a splendid small grain crop and a fairly good hay crop there is ample corn for forage and ensilage to maintain all the cattle. The reduced crop production for the country as a whole is likely to result in more or less substantial prices of small grain crops of which Nebraska has a surplus.

The same is true for hay crops. It is possible also that many sections of the country will be forced to market cattle and brooding hogs that normally would be retained. Nebraska is in a position to maintain her breeding stock as far as the feed and grain supply is concerned.

Keep Breeding Stock.

The spring pig crop for the country as a whole has been reduced 6 percent. The present supply of pork in storage is not large. If a large number of breed sows are forced to market this fall and the spring pig crop further reduced on account of shortage of corn in some sections, there may be a marked reduction in the pork supply beginning in the fall of 1931 which might command high prices especially if the present business depression improves by that time. It is possible also that the reduction of the dairy products may be carried to such an extent that the demand a year from now might result in a substantial increase in butterfat prices. Nebraska is in a fair position to profit by any such increase in prices by maintaining her breeding stock instead of being compelled to sell the same on a depressed market.

Reduced freight rates on corn will be necessary for these sections of the state that have a very poor crop to assist them to maintain their livestock. A little financial help will be of benefit to those districts where drought did severe injury. Furthermore, reduced freight rates will enable Nebraska farmers to market a larger surplus of alfalfa hay into those districts that are short, as well as to market larger quantities of wild hay which are available for harvest in sandhill counties, providing the price justifies harvesting and marketing.

Intentions of cattle feeders indicated a considerable decrease in the cattle feeding business this winter. It is possible there may be a shortage of fat cattle early next year, and this might prove to be a good year for cattle feeders. The same might be said for sheep feeders. It seems reasonable that if the feeding operations are reduced as early plans indicate, and with the short supply of grain which may reduce feeding in many states, the supply of finished cattle and sheep might be short enough to bring satisfactory prices even under depressed business conditions.

"To say the least, the present condition of corn and feed supply in Nebraska and the country over offers considerable material for thought for Nebraska farmers in planning ahead for the future," Anderson says. "No one can foretell conditions accurately. But conditions point to improvement in the agricultural situation within a year, especially if the business depression is improved by that time, and the expected reduction in livestock supply takes place. Nebraska farmers are in a position to maintain the livestock supply and to take advantage of better prices which present conditions indicate may take place in a year or so. With a little help in the way of reduced freight rates and some financial aid, and a little planning ahead in the light of statistical facts on agriculture, it appears that from present and future conditions, Nebraska farmers may look forward to considerably better conditions within a year and possibly sooner."

WHEN PLUCK COUNTS MOST

(Sent out by the N. C. Leary Co., Omaha)

Said the little red rooster, "Gosh all henlock! things are tough."

When nightfall found him supperless, he growled in accents rough.

Seems that worms are getting scarcer, and I cannot find enough.

"I'm hungry as a owl can be. Conditions sure are tough."

What's become of all those fat ones is a mystery to me;

He turned then to the little red hen and said, "It's worse with you."

There were thousands through that rainy spell but now where can they be?"

For you're not only hungry but you must be tired too.

The little red hen heard him, didn't grumble or complain.

I rested while I watched for worms, so I feel fairly perk.

She had gone through lots of dry spells, she had lived through floods of rain:

But, how are you? Without worms too? And after all that work?"

So she flew up on the grindstone, and she gave her claws a whet.

The little red hen hopped to her perch and dropped her eyes to sleep.

As she said, "I've never seen the time there were no worms to get."

And murmured in a drowsy tone, "Young man, hear this and weep,

She picked a new and undug spot; the earth was hard and firm,

I'm full of worms, and happy, for I've dined both long and well."

The little rooster jeered, "New ground! That's no place for a worm."

The worms are there, as always but I had to dig like hell!"

The little red hen just spread her feet, she dug both fast and free,

Oh, here and there, red roosters still are holding sales positions.

"I must go to the worms," she said, "the worms won't come to me."

They cannot do much business now, because of poor donations.

The rooster vainly spent his day, through habit, by the ways

But soon as things get right again, they'll sell a hundred firms."

Where fat worms have passed in squads, back in the rainy days.

Meanwhile the little red hens are out, and gobbling up the worms.

home at Nucla, Mrs. Jacques had an opportunity to inspect a large vanadium mine near that place. Ores which come from the mine include vanadium, uranium and radium. Vanadium, which is especially important as a product at this point, is used in the refining of the steel from which razor blades and other fine steel objects are made.

Mrs. Jacques was able to bring home with her a piece of the vanadium ore, as well as a specimen of the gold and silver pyrites, which is quite attractive.

Colorado good roads impressed Mrs. Jacques almost as much as the unusually beautiful scenery. Striking examples are the sky-line drive around Grande Mesa; and the million-dollar drive, six miles of road blasted out of the rock at a cost of one million dollars.

Cool weather predominated while Mrs. Jacques sojourned in Colorado, and the daily showers were most refreshing after the muggy weather which was in full swing when she left Nebraska. Mrs. Jacques arrived home Thursday last, having motored the first 110 miles of her journey from Nucla. Her impressions of the mountains west of Denver, are most delightful.

Mrs. Jacques Has Entertaining Trip

Vacationer Finds Cooler Weather in Colorado Mountain Towns.

Journeying by narrow-gauge railroad, and forty-five miles by motor-stage, Mrs. R. H. Jacques arrived three weeks ago at the home of her sister, Mrs. B. R. Pierce, who lives in Nucla, Colo. Nucla, says Mrs. Jacques, whose first visit to this section it was, is no bigger than its name.

From Denver, by the way of Salida, and Montrose, Colo., to Nucla includes much scenery that is unusually beautiful, as well as many points of interest such as mines of various kinds.

Just outside of Colorado Springs, for example, lie the du Pont powder works, so large that they involve a real town. Between Salida and Gunnerson, Colo., is the famous Marshall Pass, over 10,000 feet high, and in the midst of exquisite mountain scenery. Seldom above the lower slopes, covered with silver spruce, and quaking aspens, fascinated Mrs. Jacques, fresh from the warm prairies of Nebraska.

Enjoys Royal Gorge.

Between Pueblo and Salida, the Royal Gorge, cut by the Arkansas river, flowing between steep walls of salmon-colored rock presented additional scenes of grandeur. Mrs. Jacques stated that the train-journey between the perpendicular walls of this canyon consumed a period of at least one and one-half hours.

Although the current of the Arkansas river is entirely too swift to make the stream of any use for navigation, the waters are utilized in extensive irrigation projects. The flat lands outside of Canyon City, stated Mrs. Jacques, are covered with truck-garden plots, all irrigated. Delicious vegetables for market and shipping are raised here.

Beaver building their dams across smaller streams near Gunnerson, groups of deer seen in the woods were among interesting things to be observed in this vicinity.

A. G. Howard bought the Juhlin stock of boots and shoes.

A daughter was born August 6, 1890, to Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Relyea.

Excavating for the Wayne National Bank's new building has been started.

Thermometers here registered 102 August 6, 1890. A good rain here has insured a bumper corn crop.

A son of M. B. Hughes was rendered unconscious when he fell from a dray which was passing over a crossing.

A hail storm visited the southeastern edge of Dakota county. It is reported that stones weighing two pounds were picked up at Sioux Falls.

One of Mr. Wimmel's sons of LaPorte came near losing the sight of one eye when in striking a match, a piece flew from the head and struck him in the member.

An elocution contest for a silver medal will be held here. The following take part: Elsie Merriman, Pearl Sewell, Fannie Bruner, Dell Cook, Frank Nangle and Mary Henry.

The movement of cattle from the burned-out section to the southwest has begun in earnest. Three long trains of range cattle went through Wayne on the U. P. to Sioux City.

The railway company has decided to put on a special stock train between Wayne and Omaha, making three round trips a week. It will gather up the stock at the stations along the line.

Expresses Thanks For County Vote

He writes the Herald August 14 as follows: "I want all my friends in Wayne county to know how much I appreciate the wonderful vote in that territory. Big Dixon Co. Fair Is All Set To Go

Band Concerts, Comedy Acts, Races Couple With Shows Of Fall Products.

Dixon county's fair, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, August 27, 28, and 29 at Concord, is strictly the people's own fall festival says Roy Johnson, secretary of the organization. Exhibits of farm products raised by the people of the county, and arranged by them for display; entertainments and attractions planned for their enjoyment, and activities that will interest and instruct, are features of the three big days.

Wednesday, the first day, will be devoted almost entirely to taking care of the entries, and making the general preparations for the fair itself.

During Thursday, the second day of the celebration, the judges will start placing and awarding the premiums—a task that will continue throughout the whole day. Although the gates will be open from 8 o'clock on, the judges will not begin their work until 9 o'clock, and the doors of the departments and exhibits will not be opened to the public until 11:30.

Feature Concord Band.
 Featured especially throughout the fair will be the Concord Owl band, which will play for the first time Thursday at 12:45. The band will play again at 6 o'clock Thursday evening, at 12:45 on Friday, again at 6 o'clock on that day, and in a special entertainment at 7:30 in the evening. This group, under Director Shackelford, has worked up a feature repertoire for fair week.

Three distinct sets of free acts have been contracted for, and these will show several times each day on the grounds. Comedy stunts, acrobatic features, and Gladys Lee in a sensational "loop the loop" are included.

The Hazel McOwen Stock company will present a play each night during the week of the fair.

Plan Racing Program.
 A racing program for the last two days has been arranged. The one specification is that all horses must be owned in Wayne, Cedar, and Dixon counties since the first of April. Prizes are offered in half mile running race, five furlong running race, relay race, harness race, Shetland pony race, colt harness race, and consolation race. Races have been spaced in such a way that everyone can see all the races.

Exhibits will be placed before noon Thursday in order that interested spectators may have ample time to see all the showings of county-raised grains, corn, fruits, flowers, as well as stock.

To Parade Stock.
 Stock winning the grand prizes will be paraded on the fair grounds at 1 o'clock Friday. Decisions of the judges on cattle, and stock will be made early with this feature of the program in mind. It is expected by officials that animals on display at this time will be among the choicest in this section.

An elaborate exhibit of rather unusual nature has been prepared by the members of the girls' 4-H clubs. This showing will carry out the health idea which is one of the four paramount principles of the organization over the states.

School children under twelve years of age will be admitted to the fair free of charge, and will have, thus, an opportunity of seeing all the educational features of the celebration. A complete table of admissions is included with the program on this page.
 Melis will be served on the grounds by the women of the Methodist Ladies' Aid in Dixon.

Promote Fast Games.
 Faster and better ball games than ever are promised by those in charge of the ball game program for this year's fair. Ponca will meet Newcastle at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. Friday's baseball game will feature the Sioux City Stock Yards team versus the Cherokee Indians. E. J. Lelley of Sioux City will be the umpire.

Diamond ball, a popular new form of amusement, will be played at 4:30 Thursday afternoon by teams from Allen and Wakefield. Every effort has been put forth by members of the fair board to make this year's observance of the harvest season a bigger affair than ever before. With the pick-up in the agricultural situation which has followed the timely showers of the past fortnight, the people of Concord are sure they will welcome fair-goers in their usual numbers.

Survey Is Made On Trout Rearing

O'Neill, Neb.—G. H. Nicholls, field man of the game, forestation and parks commission, Lincoln, is covering northern Nebraska, making a survey of springs and trout streams for the commission. Mr. Nicholls, asked to define the objective of the survey, said:

"There are numerous never failing springs that flow from 25 to 250 gallons a minute and that can be made to supply batteries of trout rearing ponds.

"In Colorado, where every trout-raised table size must be fed artificially, private trout farmers are making handsome profits. Here we have a never failing supply of small, shrimp and insect food. Instead of poisoning hoppers and risking the destruction of game and song birds, why not have a few million rainbow trout growing and fattening on the pecks? A mechanical grasshopper catcher is as easily constructed as a blue grass seed harvester."

Konjola Lets Railroader Go Back To Work

Victim Sought In Vain For Escape From Rheumatism Before He Found This Modern Medicine.

MR. JOHN RICHOFF
What encouragement for all who suffer is to be found in the grateful words of those who have put Konjola to the test! Can anyone wonder that Mr. John Richoff, 401 Third street, northeast Mason City, Iowa, is enthusiastic about this new and different medicine. Read this statement:
"Eight weeks ago I suffered an attack of rheumatism in my right shoulder. How I suffered! I spent $60 seeking relief in vain. For three weeks I was in bed. A friend in the railroad shops recommended Konjola. I have taken four bottles and am in fine shape, able to work, eat and sleep. I am 42 years of age but feel like I did when in my teens. I am recommending Konjola every chance I get for it is surely a wonderful medicine."
Isn't that the kind of medicine you want? It means much to suffering humanity to know that seven million bottles of Konjola were used in two years.
Konjola is sold in Wayne, Nebraska, at Felber's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.
