South America Charms Visitor
With Its Tropical Luxuriance

New Instructor at College Tells of Conditions in Sao Paulo, Brazilian State. "Tropical growth is so luxuriant," says Mrs. Mary Thornbridge Honey, new English instructor at the college, "that no one need want for food in Brazil." She described with enthusiasm the delights of the warm climate, and readily available and reasonably priced fruits and vegetables in the South American state in which she lived for a year and a half. Mrs. Honey has come to the college as an instructor in English to succeed Miss Teagler, who is studying for an advanced degree. Bananas at two cents a dozen, oranges at five cents a dozen, and other fresh fruits selling at equally low prices were among points which Mrs. Honey mentioned with a glow of appreciation. Canned fruits imported from the United States, she pointed out, sell at prices which range from 80c to a dollar for an ordinary can. Because fresh fruits are so abundant, she explained, eating fruits do not flourish in Brazil, and the imported preserved goods is very expensive as a result. Among the poorer people, she noted, Mrs. Honey saw a lot of leas in Sao Paulo is the rice and beans combination, similar to that so popular among Porto Ricans. Bananas are abundant, cheap, and sold by almost everyone, and form another staple in the diet. Looking in the homes of a few of the very poor is done by servants. Conditions in South America are such that the employment of a servant is possible in families of middle class status and income. Mentions Newspapers. South American newspapers seemed to Mrs. Honey to be marvellous of efficiency and service. The paper with which she was most familiar, Estado de Sao Paulo, has a wire service which enables it to give its readers complete review of world news, while the news is new, she added. This paper published a regular edition on Sunday, no larger than the usual paper, but takes a vacation on Monday, when no editions are made up. Page make-up of South American newspapers, she related, follows the American style rather than European. Once a week, Estado de Sao Paulo has a retrospective section filled with very fine pictures. Papers in Rio de Janeiro are printed in several different languages, although the chief language may be said to be Portuguese, the language of the newspapers, the business life, and the school system. Have Normal Schools. In each state there is a different school system, although in general schools are conducted on the two-semester plan as ours are. The year is the opposite of ours, however, as the seasons are reversed. The elementary schools take care of the younger children, and above the elementary department are the gymnasiums, which correspond to our high schools. The normal schools, in which teachers are trained, are of high school grade. Above the gymnasiums are the schools of college grade. There is nothing in the South American college system to compare with our general arts and science courses, but there are the professional colleges of law, medicine, agriculture, and engineering. While she was in Brazil, Mrs. Honey tutored in English. Mrs. Honey explained that a land of many languages, for it is a melting pot of many nations. People living in South America are far more often bilingual than we are who live in the United States. French, Italian, Spanish, English, and Portuguese are heard, as well as German, and other languages. Houses in the interior of the continent, where Mrs. Honey lived, are largely of stucco, which has been whitewashed. The roofs are of red tile, made from the soil, which is red. This soil is of the type from which bricks, tile, and practical pottery may be made, and work with it forms one of the common native industries. Furniture is often made of mahogany, rosewood, or some of the tropical hardwoods, which are very beautiful. Native carving is found sometimes, and is especially effective in the fine woods which are available. Impressed With Country. Asked what impressed her most in a country which is known for its glamor, Mrs. Honey replied readily that the beauty of the tropics, the loveliness of the rolling country, with its luxuriant growth had impressed her greatly. The people are kind, she added, and have a graciousness of bearing and manner which is incomparable. Their fine manners are charming, and their social ease is without pretense. While Brazil is older and larger than the United States, we find few, who know anything about its past, or even its present. Mrs. Honey, who returned from the

Trapping Good
As An Industry
In This State

In ordinary years trapping along Nebraska streams derives a revenue of a million dollars a year. Due to the decline in the price of furs during the period of depression the industry has slumped. The animals are here but the price for their pelts is so low that the trapping of the smaller animals does not pay as it did. Hired help for bearing animals of Nebraska are: Muskrat, mink, skunk, racoon, badger, beaver and coyote. Occasionally a bobcat is taken. Marten, wolverine, otter and lynx earlier inhabited Nebraska, but they are now nearly extinct. Muskrats are the principal source of fur in this state. They live in bank or brush houses on water courses and the lake districts. They occur in largest numbers in the sandhill lakes where they are trapped by ranchmen or on a royalty basis by trappers. The annual royalty income from this source may amount to $1,000,000 or more for a single season. The southern mink is trapped all over Nebraska. Because minks prey on muskrats they are considered a detriment to the fur business of Nebraska. Three varieties of skunks are found in this state, the spotted civit cat, the narrow-striped, and the broad-striped. They are found in tribes and brush land. Racoons are trapped for their fur and for their meat. They are a rather common animal in Nebraska. The beaver have retreated mostly to the northern and western counties. A few years ago these animals were plentiful along the Niobrara and Dismal rivers. About eight years ago the legislature, on report that the beaver were doing much damage to trees and irrigation ditches, declared an open season on beaver and their number has rapidly declined. Now's the time the pancake batter makes a hit whenever it comes to the plate. -Weston Leader. Midget golf, suggests a doctor, will not help people who play games in order to keep slim. But in that game as it happens, the whole object is to get round as quickly as possible. -The Humorist.

Wayne Is Winner
In Croton Game

Second Team Loses to Wakefield By Close Score Friday—May Play Deal and Dumb. Wayne high school basketball team met Croton Friday evening here and Wayne won by a score of 21 to 9. Wayne and Wakefield second teams met and Wakefield won by 12 to 9. Wayne's lineup in the first game was as follows: Hendrickson and Mellor, forwards; Brown, center; and Berry and Bressler, guards. Downing went in for Mellor for a time. Downing had his chin cut in the West Point game last week and was unable to be in the lineup long. Sund was unable to play because of illness. Berry was high point man with a record of 7. In the second team game Wayne's starting lineup was Ross and Wamberg at forward, Hughes at center and Kemp and Porterfield at guard. Edge went in for Ross, and Moses for Wamberg. Randolph plays here next Monday. An effort is being made to arrange a game here between the Omaha school for deaf and dumb and Wayne. The Omaha team has played 32 games of two years and has not been defeated. They won from West Point recently in one of their games. The contest will probably be here February 23.

Rites Conducted
At Twin Falls

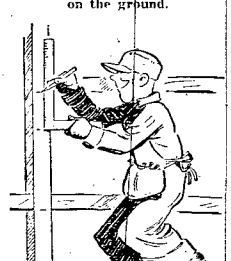

Masonic rites were conducted at Twin Falls, Idaho, January 31 for Theodore Durig, former Wayne resident, who died in Los Angeles January 27, aged 71 years. Mr. Durig was born September 26, 1859, in Belmont county, Ohio. He came to Wayne in the late eighties to engage in the mercantile business, being associated with Carl Fuchner and Herman Henney in the German store. He moved to Long Pine and lived there a few years, moving to Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1917. He had been an extensive land owner in Idaho. Besides his wife deceased leaves five sons, Glenn and Orvis Durig of Twin Falls, C. W. Durig of Dietrich Ray Durig of Los Angeles, and Lawrence Durig of San Francisco. Mrs. Durig and Lawrence Durig accompanied the body of deceased from California to Idaho. Ray Durig of Los Angeles, was the only son unable to be present for the funeral.

Business Meeting
Of Country Club

William Beckenhauer and J. C. Nuss Are Retained Directors—Reports Are Good. Wayne Country club, at its business meeting last Thursday evening following dinner at the L. O. O. F. hall, re-elected J. C. Nuss and William Beckenhauer directors for terms of three years. The directors will meet in a few days to select officers, determine fees and transact other business for the season. Besides Mr. Nuss and Mr. Beckenhauer the directors of the club are F. L. Blair, Prof. W. C. Hunter, Carl Wright, C. H. Hendrickson and A. B. Cahart. Officers the past year were: A. B. Cahart, president; Dean H. Hahn, vice president; and J. C. Nuss, secretary-treasurer. Reports of various committees of the club were given last Thursday and showed 165 on the membership. Finance are in better shape than in any year of the club's history. Last season the club started with a deficit of $390 and the treasury now shows a balance of $485. Golf fees were $25 and social fees $12.50 last year and 20 golf and 53 social members were added the past season.
