Wayne county corn promises to yield its usual excellent crop this season, providing farmers with a real reward for the hard work and discouragements of the spring period.

"Corn is good, and a short time ago was said to be two weeks ahead of last year's growth from this season," the report from the Grier farm, where the grain harvest was finished on 180 to 200 acres of grain in the middle of the week.

Harvest on 70 acres of the Epi Beckenauer land was finished Tuesday evening although the yield had not yet been determined.

"There was a good stand of grain," was the report from the Abram Gildersleeve farm Wednesday morning as harvesting operation were being continued.

Barley cutting on the E. L. Chester place was finished Tuesday evening when an excellent stand was described.

A fair yield of small grain was had on the Walford Carlson place so far this week, as the harvest continues.

Committee Praises Cooperation

Saturday's Heavy Showers Cause Postponement of Events Until Sunday Evening When Hundreds Gather for Final Performance Held At Fairgrounds Grandstand.

"We want the public to know," states Martin Ringer, head of the committee, "that we appreciate thoroughly the help of everyone who assisted in making a success of the Golden Jubilee and Homecoming."

"Financially, too," states Perry Theobald, treasurer of the jubilee committee, "the affair was a success. We are able to meet our bills, and if there are obligations still outstanding, we wish the bills would be presented at once."

The board of directors thanks everyone for work done toward the jubilee success. On the board of directors are: M. L. Ringer, Perry Theobald, E. W. Huse, George Anderson, D. S. Hook, Charles Carter, D. H. Cunningham, Charles Craven, J. J. Ahern, J. G. W. Lewis, Harry Craven and R. W. Ley.

Special thanks are due also, says the committee, to the C. St. P. & O. railroad, which brought the old-fashioned train and the modern Corn King to Wayne Saturday for a showing on the tracks here.

Wayne was patriotically decorated for the occasion of her anniversary. William Plummer of Sioux City, who came here before the date set for the jubilee, arranged flags and tri-colored streamers in the business district, giving the town the festive air which a Golden Jubilee and Homecoming deserved.

Henry Ley led the plans for the callithumpian parade, an amusing and entertaining feature of Friday morning, Saturday morning and Sunday evening. The morning parades were held on Main street at 11 in the morning, and the Sunday evening parade was held at the fairground.

"We are here to help Wayne to make her Golden Jubilee a success," stated Mrs. Nellie Dutton, head of the circus troupe, "and we are willing to make amends in any way for the performance which was spoiled by the rain Saturday. Members of the committee decided that, inasmuch as Saturday's heavy showers had prevented so many persons from seeing the thrilling high wire acts, the circus would be held here on Sunday."

The Glory That Faded

Autburn Herald: According to newspaper stories, James McKenzie, ninety years old, and the last known survivor of the historic battle between the Merrimac and the Monitor, during the Civil War, is in the Dixon county poor house near Ponca, Neb., awaiting death and burial in a grave that will soon be forgotten. McKenzie not only participated in this historic fight, but actually fired one of the two guns in the turret and every shot that he fired that day was a punctuation mark in American history. Due to government red tape, it appears to be impossible to get a pension for him. All his people are dead and there is nothing for him but the poor house and his memories of a glorious day when he helped win a splendid victory and to change the whole system of naval warfare. There is an old saying that republics are ungrateful, and sometimes we believe it is true. The ingratitude is not intentional, but a national trait

Richard Dix to Play 'Big Brother'

To realize two great burning ambitions within the space of a year is the good fortune of Richard Dix now starring in Radio Pictures' 'Young Donovan's Kid,' coming to the Gay theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 12, 13 and 14. Dix, the typical American, with fifteen years of stage and screen background, wanted a vehicle which would afford him the opportunity of exerting every ounce of his creative ability—a colorful, substantial story with a great dominating American idea behind it. This ambition he realized in 'Cimarron,' Edna Ferber's story of western empire-building. Dix read the novel a dozen times and fell under its spell. As a result Dix gave an inspired performance as Yancey Cravat. The other ambition, which was conceived several years ago when the actor read Rex Beach's 'Big Brother,' was to some day play the part of Jim Donovan in the story. His desire was also realized, and again Dix has covered himself with glory in the starkly dramatic part of a reformed man. He is supported in 'Young Donovan's Kid,' adaptation of Rex Beach's classic novel 'Big Brother,' by Jackie Cooper, clever little seven-year-old star of 'Skippy,' Jackie more than successfully makes the change from the light comedy characterization of 'Skippy' to the little waif who is entrusted to the care of a New York gangster. Other capable players in the supporting cast include Marion Kellaway, Frank Sheridan, Fred Kelsey and Boris Karloff. Fred Niblo directed.
