

Such is the Proposed but Perhaps Inevitable Discontinuance of Branch Railway Line

FIFTY-FIRST YEAR

WAYNE, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1932.

NUMBER FIFTY

ATTY. BERRY IS CLUB SPEAKER MONDAY NOON

Constitutional History Gives Government A New Viewpoint.

KIWANIANS TO DISTRICT Attorney F. S. Berry addressed fellow-Kiwanians at their Monday luncheon at Hotel Stratton.

Particularly did the speaker dwell on the relation of the constitution, as framed in an early day, to the law of today.

How Plans Changed. After the American Revolution, Attorney Berry showed, there were many, even as Alexander Hamilton, who favored a limited monarchy as the ideal form of government for the new United States.

During this post-war period of change, said the speaker, Washington showed his strength of character and steadfastness of purpose by clinging to a policy of forbearance.

Even in the constitutional convention, Attorney Berry showed, the opinions of the constituents were not consulted, for the delegates had their own very strong ideas of right and wrong.

The change has come about slowly, the speaker showed, in the beginning, the constitution delegated certain powers of government to the state, and certain powers were reserved to the central authority.

This change has brought about the development of a certain type of politician who finds that to vote against a certain political conviction of his constituents is greater treason than any other.

The representative of the people, thinks Attorney Berry, should not be so bound by them that he cannot do what he thinks is right.

Trustees Hold Meet. Kiwanis board of trustees met at the Carhart lumber offices Monday evening. Bills were read and approved, and some program plans were made.

Promote Religious Good Will

Here are the leading representatives of Jews, Catholics and Protestants who attended the first national conference to promote good will among the different religious sects and to combat inter-religious distrust and antagonism.

Outlook On Farm Forecast Bright

Agriculture Conditions Will Show Improvement Report Indicates.

Lincoln, Neb. Agricultural conditions are likely to show some improvement before the end of 1932, according to the Nebraska Agricultural Outlook, released by the College of Agriculture, University of Nebraska, although the outlook states definitely that the possibility of agriculture regaining pre-war purchasing power during 1932 is decidedly remote.

An increase in agricultural prosperity can come only from a change in the relationship now existing between the prices which farmers receive for the products and the prices that they pay for the commodities that they buy.

Among the forces which are listed as possible aids in improving the agricultural situation are the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Glass-Steagall amendment to the federal reserve act; the increasing the farmer's share of the consumer's dollar; and the shifting of the tax burden.

Wheat Carryover Burdensome. The summary of the detailed outlook statement is as follows: The burdensome carryover of wheat will doubtless keep wheat prices on a relatively low level for another year in spite of decreased acreage in the United States.

With normal weather conditions oats average will increase. Nebraska prices will be determined largely by the value of oats for livestock feed on Nebraska farms.

Providing Relief In Drouth Region

Norfolk News, March 18.—The Red Cross has arranged for the cracking of 710,000 bushels of wheat at Omaha, Sioux City and Norfolk for shipment into north Nebraska, according to word received at North Nebraska Drouth Relief headquarters from Albert Evans, Mitchell, S. D., relief director for South Dakota and Nebraska.

Some of this wheat was to start moving from Sioux City Friday, Mr. Evans telephoned to the headquarters, and most of it was to be shipped in 100 pound sacks.

The Red Cross has several carloads of seed potatoes in transit, Mr. Evans added, "to be delivered through the drouth area. Next week every needy family will be given six pounds of garden seed. Flour will be distributed about the first week in April."

The Red Cross director has called a meeting of all county Red Cross chairmen in north Nebraska which will be held at Hotel Norfolk on March 29. The chairmen will discuss the details of closing the relief work.

Mr. Evans says that the Red Cross hopes to close its work in north Nebraska during April and to leave with each needy family sufficient human food and livestock feed to last until their own crops become available.

Immediately after the rescue, the dog was treated to ward off pneumonia.

Presidential Year To Bring Out Vote

Do you know how the vote works? There seems to be more to it than a simple marking of the ballot in the booths on election day. The whole country has something to say about the choice of a president, first in the party nominations, in the national conventions, and second, at the election in November.

The people, thus, really elect the president, and the electoral college vote which is called for in the Constitution is made in accordance with the expressed wishes of the voters. Therefore the electoral college has ceased to be of significance.

The national committees of the political parties call the conventions and set the places of their meetings. Delegates, most of whom are chosen in the primary, gather to name the candidates. In some sections, the delegates are "instructed" by majority preference in the sections from which they come; although the modern view of the matter is that delegates should be able to deliberate at will.

The chairmen of the national committees act as campaign managers for the presidential nominees in the campaign which precedes election. Campaign activities, as everyone knows, become more and more exciting until the election is over, and the problems of the country are assigned for another four years.

Invite Parents To See Class Work

Miss Esther Dewitz, physical education instructor at the State Teachers College, announces that she will have an exhibition of pupils' work at the training school gymnasium this morning, Thursday, March 24. Mr. and Mrs. William Lihengood and family of Laurel, and George Butler of Orchard also accompanied the Wayne group.

Besides her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Prouse of Emerson, deceased leaves two brothers and three sisters. Miss Ellen Prouse, one of the sisters, is a student at Wayne Teachers College now and she went to Emerson for her sister's funeral.

Legion Works To Get Jobs For All

Equinoctial snowstorms have made spring seem rather distant, but the season is here, and the time for spring cleanups is not far distant. Help in cleaning up the lawn, raking the grass, taking coverings off the flower beds, and setting the place to rights for summer is available. The American Legion in its job-hunting capacity, will find labor for you at a rate far more reasonable than in the past.

Men who are being given jobs are deserving individuals who have been unable to find employment. They have registered with Paul Mines, who has kept a list of them and who will assign them to the work for which Wayne county people need them.

Job-seekers who have been unsuccessful in finding work of any kind are urged to list themselves with the American Legion, through Paul Mines. He will conduct a clearing house of positions and places where help is needed, thus helping to relieve the job hunters and to assist those who have work to do.

FIRST ROBINS INQUIRE WHERE IS SPRING'S REAL WEATHER.

A chilly-looking robin chirped and hopped about out neighbors hood the other day, inquiring where was his mistle spring weather. We hereby inform all who were impatient for the arrival of spring that the vernal equinox did not occur until Sunday, March 20. Come now, all spring flowers and other signs of the season!

After hearing several apparently sincere discussions of a new book, what a disillusionment to read the same copy one's friends read, and find some of the back pages of the volume yet uncut!

Last of the Blackbirds.

Henry Blackbird, 60, died Saturday night, March 22, on a farm near Decatur. He was the last living descendant of Chief Blackbird, about whom so many interesting legends cluster. For example, Chief Blackbird, who is still by the Indians to typify bravery, was buried astride his horse. His grave is at Blackbird Hill, near Decatur. Indians in the vicinity say that, on Halloween night, at the witching hour of midnight, a ghost appears in a ball of flame, then vanishes. Large parties organize on that night to spend the evening on the hill, waiting for the appearance of the ghost. Other legends, apparently, don't connect to the pages of history devoted to old New England.

Wayne housewives tell us they are beginning spring house-cleaning operations. There is something deeply and inexplicably satisfying about turning out the contents of all the dresser drawers, clearing up the closets and moving the furniture out of the house and back again. We suspect it is some atavistic expression of the spring migrations in which the race once indulged each year.

On Reading a Book. If you don't mind using the dictionary or introducing brand new ideas into your head, you'll enjoy reading John Cowper Powys book, "The Meaning of Culture." We have been intending to ask the librarian how many persons have been able to return the book without renewing it, for it's not such rapid reading! The author seems to define culture as the integration of all knowledge, reactions and activities toward the development of a personal philosophy. Thus, there can be culture without education, although education, through the development of knowledge, makes for greater richness of life, therefore adding to the whole from which the philosophy is developed. All of which is less confusing than it seems.

Desserts certainly aren't the most important part of the cuisine, are they? But ask any cook for a recipe, and nine chances out of ten, she'll tell you how to fix her favorite dessert. Any man will tell you, though, that buckwheat cakes, meat, potatoes and gravy are far more important. Just another difference of opinion, perhaps.

What would the divorce court business become if modern courts were invested with so much color pump and drama as was the courtroom depicted in Skinner's and Adams' portrayal of "The Merchant of Venice?" A judge in white and gold robes, petty clerks in cloaks of rose, and a pleading lawyer in garments of American beauty hue would lend excitement to say the least to any trial! And wouldn't the dressmakers like it? Robes for court room wear a specialty. A book of court room etiquette free with every robe ordered and sold here.

"Another war will get you, if you don't watch out!" is the cry that goes up from the camp of disarmament enthusiasts. Anyone who remembers World War days, and the relief which the Armistice brought will be glad to join whatever movement will free the world from any danger of war again.

Funeral Service For Frank LaCroix

Funeral services were conducted at the Beckenhauer parlors in Wayne Friday afternoon for Frank LaCroix, son of C. H. LaCroix of Randolph, who died Tuesday last week in Wayne. Rev. H. C. Cassey of the Methodist church, had charge of rites and interment was made in Greenwood cemetery where deceased's mother was buried in December, 1919.

Deceased was born in Wayne county October 15, 1912, and had lived in Wayne and Cedar counties.

Surviving the youth are his father, C. H. LaCroix of Randolph; two sisters, Mrs. Hazel Smith of Carroll and Miss Opal LaCroix at home, and six brothers, Harry of Lindy, Charles and Richard of Lead, S. D., Donald, Roy and Harvey of Randolph.

Perishable Things.

Dr. A. L. Bixby: "Fame is a vapor, honor an accident, riches take wings." What men were in the limelight forty years ago, particularly in the central west? James E. Weaver of Iowa, Senator Nelson of Minnesota, John J. Ingalls of Kansas, Jim Belford, the red headed rooster of the Rockies, William Jennings Bryan, John M. Thurston and Edward Rosewater of Nebraska—famous and furious for a season, but swiftly fading out of the picture with the passing of a contemporaneous generation. Then those in the limelight by accident, our very own McKelgan, Ken and Warwick Saunders, and the Colorado governor who threatened to wade in blood to the horses' bridles, and Jerry Simpson of Kansas who wore no socks, and Mary Ellen Lease whose voice disturbed the dead—all attaining distinction through the accident of an economic upset. Now look at Josiah V. Thompson of Uniontown, Pa. Twenty years ago he was rated as worth $70,000,000. His wealth has taken wings; his palatial home is a wreck. In life's decline he has nothing but the memories of a happier life, and his memory is as badly shot as his once colossal fortune.

Finds Conditions Fair In Denmark

J. A. Frydenlund Returns From Third Visit To His Home Land.

Conditions in Denmark are pretty good and are not affected so much by market fluctuations as in this country, observes J. A. Frydenlund, who arrived here last Thursday morning after spending five months with relatives in Kermeado, Denmark. Mr. Frydenlund came to this country 24 years ago, made his first trip back ten years ago and his second five years ago, his trip this year being his third return to his home land. Mr. Frydenlund will attend to his business affairs here and after that his future plans are not definite. While Mr. Frydenlund was in Denmark this time his only brother, William Frydenlund, was taken ill and died. Three sisters remain in Denmark.

People always have money in Denmark. The reason for this, Mr.

Frydenlund explains, is that those who are out of work are paid by the government a proportion of the salary they would receive if working. This plan makes government taxes high but it keeps money in circulation. A person who would receive 70 crowns if he were employed, receives 50 crowns from the government when he is not working. Some take advantage of the plan and dodge work. But most of the Danish people are good workers and careful spenders so that they can do better by working and saving.

The policy of paying the unemployed forces the government to levy heavy taxes and to borrow large sums of money. Meals in cafes and hotels are taxed 10 per cent, the person dining paying this fee to the government instead of practicing the "tipping" plan. Automobiles, gasoline, amusements and many other things carry special government taxes and the amounts vary according to a schedule established. The government owns the railroads and boats, which play between the islands which make up the country. The operation brings a deficit to the treasury but service is improved. Banks in Denmark are independent as in this country, Mr. Frydenlund said, the transportation being the main business operation thus operated.

Denmark, with its large and a half million people, is a rich country. Soil of the islands which comprise the territory, is very fertile and dairying is the principal industry. Farmers raise considerable amount of grass and some corn for feeding their stock but they import most of their corn. Butter and eggs are important products and these are marketed mainly in England, where they commanded a good price. The Danish quality butter has won highest favor. Prices for farm produce vary but in the main they are about the same as here, Mr. Frydenlund observes. Considerable manufacturing is done in Danish cities also.

Mr. Frydenlund went to Norway for a short trip while he was in Denmark. This required several hours of travel by boat. Conditions in Norway are not so good as in Denmark. Times are hard and taxes are heavy.

The trip to and from Denmark Mr. Frydenlund made on the Scandinavian-American line. This took him directly to Copenhagen. The ship on which he sailed could accommodate 1,500 passengers. On the way over last fall it carried 500 and on the return there were 400. Travel is light now. Early spring is the hardest time to travel by ship, Mr. Frydenlund said, for the ocean is rough. Storms are more numerous.

Sustains Injuries In Fall On Stairs

Joe Meister sustained a broken right collar bone and a deep scalp wound Friday morning when he caught one heel when coming down the stairs from his apartment over the Hachmeyer implement store and fell. Mr. Meister was about half way down the flight of stairs when the accident happened. The collar bone was set. Mr. Meister's scalp wound required four stitches to close. He was able to be about again Saturday.

Deer Spent Winter At Niobrara Park. Robert Cash, keeper of the Niobrara state park, reports that two wild deer have spent the winter in the reserve. They came last fall when severe weather began and stayed in thick underbrush along the Niobrara river throughout the winter months. The animals were not molested while they stayed in the game reserve. The deer left at the first sign of spring, just before the river ice broke. They went up the river and Mr. Cash thinks they were headed west where more deer are to be found.

Mr. Cash is a brother of Mrs. C. O. Mitchell and Miss Ada Cash of Wayne.

West Point Boys Make Television Set

West Point, Neb.—To have the distinction of bringing in clearly defined pictures on a kit form constructed television set is the thrill of three young West Point men. The set is owned by John and Joseph Rezac, 17-year-old twins. Verification from eastern stations says that this is the farthest point west that pictures have been clearly sent.

The Rezac twins have been interested in radio about three years and have been experimenting under the guidance of Warren Davee, West Point, who himself constructed a set about a year ago.

The twins are seniors in the Guardian Angels high school at West Point. Although mechanically inclined, the boys are also interested in music. John playing the saxophone and Joseph the violin, accompanied by their 14-year-old sister, Anna, on the piano.

Much of their leisure time has been spent experimenting with old radio sets. They have converted the basement of their home into a workshop in which they have spent many hours at their hobby.

John is the owner of a "ham" station, W2CR. He received his federal license about a year ago and both boys have learned and earned the Morse code certificate.

Both boys are earning reputations as radio repair men and through this means have been able to finance their own adventures into the mysteries of radio.

Joseph owns the television set. He sent for the essential parts, which came in kit form, and put it together himself. After the set was completed, he had difficulty in timing the set and so called in the expert assistance of Warren Davee, who after about three hours was successful in bringing in the first clear television picture in the Rezac home.

The boys have a den in which the radio, the amateur station, and the television set hold the places of honor.

Stations in the east are sending out pictures only in the experimental stage, lacking in detail, only faces and shoulders being visible. The answer to television research along the present lines is restricted by severe limitations, according to Davee. Davee, 25 years old, graduate of West Point high school, has won national fame through radio

Baby Beef Clubs Favored In State. Lincoln, Neb.—Baby Beef Club enrollments received in the state offices of the extension service at the Agricultural college here total 1,372 members in 52 counties, according to a summary made by Edward Janike, who has charge of baby beef and swine club projects for the extension service.

The total is a surprise to everyone, Janike says. Last year's total for the entire season was 1,437 members, 101 more than the number enrolled already this year. Members lived in 64 counties last year, which leads Janike to believe that more counties will be heard from in 1932. Membership in the 52 counties reporting is also likely to increase, he says.

Happy Chick Brooder House
CAPACITY 800 CHICKS

The 9x16 house is exactly like the 9x12 excepting it is four feet longer, has two more windows, two small doors in front for chicks to pass in and out, also has a walk door in each end. This house can be partitioned off for two batches of chicks of 400 each and can be easily heated with one brooder stove. Also can be used to keep several dozen pullets in for laying during the winter months.

We are distribution agents for the Simplex Brooder Stove and carry a complete line of parts at all times.
