Plant Trees
 A movement now starting in Nebraska to reforest lands that have been stripped of trees, is given momentum by the unusual consumption of timber for fuel during the past season. A report says that wood for fuel, worth $2,000,000, has been burned in this state during the winter just drawing to a close. Most of the trees used for fuel were planted by the pioneers of Nebraska, and it is pointed out that a large part of the fuel harvest came from lands not suited for other crops. The wisdom of early settlers in dotting raw prairies with numerous groves should now be followed wherever practicable—wherever vacant stretches may be so utilized to advantage—by setting out young trees, so that coming generations may have the same privileges vouchsafed to the present generation.

A report says approximately five million forest trees are planted in Nebraska each year, with an annual loss of thirty per cent. According to careful figuring, this state is at present cutting twice as much wood as it is producing. In the United States the consumption of forest products is forty per cent greater than the total forest growth. Nebraska would in time be returned to the treeless prairies which pioneers found when they dug their first furrows and reared their first crude habitations.

Nebraska's first settlers found only growths of scraggy trees along streams. For fuel, for protection against storms, to minimize soil erosion, to beautify the landscape and to give comfort to inhabitants, tree planting was started as one of the first and chief essentials in the task of taming the frontier. Arbor day was founded at the instance of that foresighted patriot, J. Sterling Morton, and purposes of the day are more pressing felt this year than in any previous year in a long time. Thus, reforestation is encouraged with renewed intensity, greatest activity centering on the annual tree planting day which comes April 22. It is the hope that waste places will be planted to trees, that unused and often unsightly areas will be converted into wooded tracts in order that the same rich endowment of trees inherited by the present generation may be passed on to future inhabitants.

In late years Arbor day observance has often been restricted to lip service—a few songs, a speech and perhaps a prayer. But this year the exercise should yield more largely to the actual purpose of the day—just as many mental ebullitions as are deemed necessary, but, anyway, more tree planting.

Swinging To Higher Levels
 WE cannot instantly swing back to a high level of values. Improvement is encouraging, but time will be required to knit together broken threads in the economic fabric, start more wheels of industry and restore normal consumption and thus stimulate demand for commodities and labor. This program of recovery, after hitting bottom, which everyone has realized because he could feel it, has evidently begun, but progress is not likely to do any skyrocketing. It will take time. But steady—though slow—improvement will put new spirit into both rural and city populations, and agriculture and other lines will go forward with new zest. With expenses down, requirements in the way of earnings will be less. With fairer equality of values established, one will not be profiting at the sacrifice of another. An upward movement on a parity of values will encourage effort and promote good feeling, which latter is of utmost importance.

OMISSIONS

Late experience has impressed the fact that farm properties, though they have dropped to lowest values and have made small returns, are still the best and safest investment. Farms are coming back, and they will in due time be objects of liveliest demand. Though farm earnings are temporarily out of adjustment, where investment more secure, or life more independent?

With passing of hard piling much irritation should go. Family circles have often been disturbed by tense situations that involved making ends meet. When things didn't work out right it was convenient to try to fasten blame or responsibility on one another in the family group, whereas each was doing his best to economize and conserve, and usually interested with equal determination to get out of the bog of economic distress. It is unfortunate to act like a bear with a sore head anywhere, but especially so within the home circle where interests are mutual and where sympathies should be spontaneous and sincere. The period of bewilderment has been hard on nervous systems, but one should force himself to be at his best—in his most cheerful frame of mind—among those dependent on him and on whom he depends.

One Need Of The Hour
 RECONSTRUCTION that will be necessary as markets go up and business revives, in order to get society to running along smoothly and comfortably again, will be reconstruction of the spirit of responsibility. Many persons who have been hard up do not lack credit because they do not abuse it, because they manifest the best of intentions, neither side-step nor attempt bold repudiation. When conditions have been restored to normal it will not be fashionable to renounce an honest debt—to discharge an obligation with a triumphant wave of the hand. The time is coming when an unsettled account will not be flaunted indifferently—when one will not consider himself a creature of special fortune if he is execution proof.

During the past few years the popularity of being hard up has led to a sort of nonchalance on the part of some—an epidemic of insensibility to pride on which sterling character is built—a cool unconcern for credit on which confidence rests and around which business relationships are woven. When one dismisses an obligation as uncollectible, with no feeling of responsibility, he most seriously impairs his future. He forfeits confidence that is an asset of the utmost value. He surrenders self-respect that he needs to inspire courage—to inspire a feeling of social and business equality.

As a rule, the pioneer took pride in his word. He considered as good as his bond. He imparted highest ideas of responsibility to descendent stock, and through the years, pride in greating no obligation that he could not dissolve in some satisfactory way—perhaps through trade or mutual concession—at least bravely meet and finally dispose of—kept him aloof from unconscionable repudiation.

Weakness in handling a question involving credit and the future of character stability needs to be worked out of the social order. Fairness for the preservation of credit and for the preservation of conscience is one of the essentials in a reconstructed economic structure.

SAINTS.
 Friday was St. Patrick's day, and the green suggestive of the Emerald Isle appeared in profusion, and Lenten restrictions were relaxed for the day in memory of the good saint. We bow to memory of Ireland's patron saint with profound respect. We also have prominently in memory another saint whose birthday came on March 17. All others are saints no matter who they were, they were born—though they be rich or poor—in material things, known or obscure, living or departed. Motherhood thrums memory with precious gold, and is as eternal as the solar system—as eternal as cosmic forces. Motherhood is often hurt, often seems unwarded, but they lay down in the heart of every boy and girl, every man and woman, motherhood is enthroned, and awards an influence for good that no spirit of ugliness can destroy. To the memory of St. Patrick, to the memory of that mother whose natal day came on March 17, to all mothers everywhere we wish to express the sustaining reverence that everybody feels.

GAMBLING.
 The gambling instinct, which expects to get much for little, may be stimulated again by the Wall street report of an ascending securities market. Many comparatively small investors have lost in that way in the past. Also as the economic pendulum swings back, temptations will be offered to speculate in get-rich-quick schemes. Propositions will be urged to invest in things about which you know nothing and for the success of which you have to depend wholly on another's judgment. If one has money to invest, it is better to put it into something that you fully understand, something that has unquestioned value in the neighborhood with which you are familiar. Much better than saying good bye to dollars in the direction of a distant oil well or gold mine or foreign industry is to invest them in the thing that supports your community like a farm or a local business enterprise—something you can see and discuss or swap and otherwise help direct. Swift roads to large riches are too risky. The best investment—best because facts are most easily ascertained—is in your own home neighborhood, and to Wayne county investors, Wayne county lands offer the most attractive opportunities. A farm may not always pay fair interest. Its earnings are up and down, subject to demand. Subject to climate, but you know you've got it. You know it will not burn out or blow up. You know its value will not grow less, and that an upward swing, which is certain to come, will make it bring fair reward. Owning a farm is not a get-rich-quick investment, but it is a sound foundation for any estate.

They made rag doll testers and tested kernels from several ears of corn which were brought from homes. These dolls were then laid aside awhile and attention given to preparation of the seed beds. Americanism, to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to community, state and nation, to promote peace and good will and to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principle of justice, freedom and democracy."
 Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Oman sang for the musical part of Monday's broadcast.
 "Coinage by the United States began under the act of April 2, 1792, and the basis of the monetary system established by that act was the gold dollar, which was required to contain 24.75 grains of pure gold. The silver dollar was required to contain 371.25 grains of pure silver. Both gold and silver were made legal tender under double standard at a rate of 15 to 1. As the adopted ratio was not in exact harmony with world value, the act was changed June 28, 1834, and again by the act of January 18, 1837, under which coinage it is continued today.
 "All gold in the world amounts to 12 billion dollars. Of this amount the United States and France have over half. No other nation has as much as one billion dollars. The United States has four billions.
 "There are five kinds of paper money in circulation: Gold certificates, silver certificates, United States notes, national bank notes and federal reserve notes. The basis of each is different but, as a result of the government's policy, one class of currency is worth the same as each of the others. The United States government is back of each of them.
 "Another class or kind of money, not any particular issue of the government, but a part of all issues of the government, I will call other people's money. I refer to money that is deposited in the bank, both checking and certificates of deposit. This money is placed in the bank where it will become of much benefit and use to the community where the bank is established, to be taken care of scrupulously by the management of the bank and loaned out on ample security or the collateral, so that in time it can be collected by the bank for repayment to the depositor on presentation of his check.

Miss Marcelle Spier and Miss Lois McDougal sang Tuesday. Mrs. Doris Childs played accompaniment for the latter. Miss Elaine Winter played piano numbers.
Wednesdays Program.
 Dr. H. D. Griffin, who gave the address Wednesday, began by saying that "The American public school, with its equity of opportunity for all children of all of the people, has been the staunchest safeguard of our republican form of government and at the same time the outstanding achievement of the united American people. Through it we have enabled talents and abilities among the children of the people from every walk of life to receive opportunity of fulfillment.
 "Let us state emphatically and clearly that responsible, representative government has never, and can never, exist without a system of free public education; and that a system of free public education cannot exist among a people who do not prize their liberties.
 "I am asking you frankly to evaluate the services rendered you and yours by this free public educational system of ours because there are forces at work in our country who would curtail its functioning and limit opportunity to only those who can afford tuition. The methods of these anti-educational groups is extensive and clever. Do not be misled. Economy we must have, but no false economy. To take from children opportunities of health service, music, art, physical training, etc., is not economy. These are neglects, wastes of life and talent for which we would pay dearly."
 Prof. John R. Keith presented students in instrumental numbers Wednesday as follows: "March Militaire," by Schubert, saxophone ensemble, Ursula Wriedt, Robert Gulliver, Robert Lundak, Esther Pennington, John Austen and Ardel Kiefer; "Intermezzo," by Mascagni, violin solo, Miss Goldie Wendt, Mrs. Keith, accompanist; "Fragments from Stephen Foster," arranged by Gault, brass quartet, George Almond, Augustus Marek, Arvid Davis and Melvin Seymour; "Minuet," by Bolzoni, flute trio, Charles Ingham, Marjorie Roscoe and Ruth Dressler; "Souvires," by Gluck, and "Minuet," by Matteoson, violin quartet, Goldie Wendt, Helen Kern, Caroline Spangler and Esther Pennington. ADVANCE HEARING ON SUIT IN COURT

Sheriff Charges Winside Editor With Malicious Intent in Paper.

Trial of the libel suit of Sheriff Archie W. Stephens against Fritz Dimmel, publisher of the Winside Tribune, set for last Thursday in county court was continued until 10 o'clock Monday, March 27, on motion of the defendant.

Sheriff Stephens in four counts charged Dimmel with publication of malicious statements in the Winside Tribune.

The defendant moved to waive preliminary hearing, but Judge Cherry overruled the motion on the grounds that the charge as set forth in the complaint constituted only a misdemeanor. Had the paper in which the alleged statements were published circulated generally outside Wayne county then the charge of felony should have been made and the case taken into district court.

A second motion by the defendant for a change of venue was also overruled. Dimmel asked change of venue because he thought the sheriff, being an officer of the court, would cause the court to be prejudiced. Judge Cherry overruled this motion. The statutes of the state of Nebraska provide that a change of venue may not be asked for from a county court to a magistrate's court.

The demurrer of the defendant was also overruled. It was charged that the complaint did not show cause for action.

It was after this motion that the case was continued until March 27. Attorneys for the defendant are H. Hendrickson and H. E. Sidman. County attorney H. D. Addison is prosecuting attorney.

Relatives Write About Earthquake

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Panabaker received a letter from their daughter, Mrs. J. S. Liveringhouse of South Gate, Calif., written March 15, describing the earthquake which wrecked their store. Mr. and Mrs. Liveringhouse each has charge of a chain store. Excerpts from the letter follow:

"It was 3:55 when we heard a loud rumbling like thunder. Then things began to happen. When the building began to rock we knew it to be an earthquake. I was standing alone in the center of the store. Someone yelled earthquake and everyone rushed outside. I grabbed the arm of the girl who works in the vegetable department and we tried to get out.

"The floor was just bucking under our feet. Somehow we got out just as the electric fans came down. All the shelves fell. Our meat cases were broken wide open. The front of the store settled about two inches and the back went out. It was the only building in the block that did not collapse completely. Nine men were in a nearby building and not one was killed. In fact no one in the block was killed. Everyone that sees it says we must have had charmed lives.

"I cannot begin to describe what the store looked like. Everything was on the floor and broken wide open. But that was nothing to the terror that people had on the outside. People were fainting, crying, screaming and running around. Autos drove like mad. Evelyn (a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Liveringhouse) was at home. Our house was all torn up. Floor lamps turned over. The meat and all the supplies were blown into a corner. Five cats were home and you should have seen them make a speed run around the store. Jack's (Mr. Liveringhouse's store) was damaged but not as badly as mine. Will Hansen's store was completely wiped out. How he ever got out alive will always remain a mystery. He is very nervous after the quake.

"The quakes came every few minutes all night long. No one went to bed. It was so terrible. One can't explain what the quakes are like. Try to imagine standing when the ground is rolling just like waves on the ocean.

"Joe (son of Mr. and Mrs. Liveringhouse) had patrol duty in Long Beach the first night and he won't even talk about it. He had to lay on duty, not knowing whether or not we were alive. He came home on the run afterward and after he found we were all right he just wilted. He fell asleep and slept 18 hours. I don't know what Long Beach or Compton would have done without the army at such a time. All ships were pulled up as close to shore as possible and the wounded taken on board for treatment. All hospitals, of course, full. It was much worse than was announced on the radio.

"We are still having pretty hard shakes, enough to make tables and floor lamps sway and the house creak and moan. Well, our jobs are gone but we should not worry about that since we were not hurt."

Wayne Business Men and Women Evaluate The Herald Hook-Up

Each week-day morning, when the short clock hand points to eight and the long fellow straight downward, invisible waves of sound flash outward from the Wayne Herald office, and Wayne city is on the air. Thousands upon thousands of receiving sets pick the sound wave from out of the ether and bring to listening groups the story of forward-thinking Wayne, of her well-stocked stores, her amusement facilities, and her friendly people. For Wayne radio station is a messenger of good-will, an effective and competent ambassador whose commission is the establishment of friendly connections with this entire trade territory. For there are those who visualize Wayne as the dominant trading center of this northeastern territory. Large, roomy stores, well-stocked with not only price merchandise but also better lines for those who demand the finer things, and managed by friendly folk who take a genuine, healthy interest in their customers.

And now let's quizz a few of the local merchants as to their evaluation of "Wayne-on-the-air."

Mayor Martin Ringer thinks that the broadcasting hook-up makes Wayne "just a little more outstanding, and shows her progressive spirit and faith in the future." Almost everyone around here is listening into the morning broadcasts, Mr. Ringer believes, and he notes that his mother, who has not lived in Wayne for 20 years, tunes in regularly and heartily enjoys hearing almost-forgotten voices, and hearing news of old friends.

Charley Brown believes that the station has been the means of bringing many people here to trade who would otherwise have gone to other just as close towns. One family had the car out, ready to head for another town for the week's supplies when they heard the Wayne program, and came to Wayne instead.

"I think it is wonderful," says Russel Larson. "It's an awfully good way to reach people, and you get lots of people directly, too. I think it carries conviction. The Herald and radio are really the best advertising plan we have had yet."

"The radio is the best thing that ever came to Wayne," in the opinion of I. E. Ellis. "It boosts Wayne and puts it on the map, and here in this store I've had absolute proof of its effectiveness, for people have come in and asked for items advertised that morning. Many of them have been from neighboring towns, too."

"It's one of the best things this town could have," says L. W. McNatt, "for it affords everyone who participates in it the chance for personal contact with thousands of people. I've traced a good many sales directly to our radio broadcasts, especially on seasonal merchandise."

"Radio couples up mighty well with newspaper advertising," says Walter Pries, who prefers to use the two mediums together.

"It's a splendid thing for local merchants, and particularly for getting specials before the people," says Harold Dodge.

Radio has a wonderful future in the opinion of Fred Blair, who foresees very far-reaching results in a "Come to Wayne" campaign launched over the air. Mr. Blair would point out the beauties of Wayne, the fine schools, the splendid and numerous retail stores, the amusement possibilities and its friendliness, and when folks move, they'll think of Wayne and its educational and business advantages, and come here to locate. Mr. Blair favors bringing customers here by selling folks on the idea that this is a good place to meet their friends and to do their trading.

"Not only very effective, but very direct," says Don Larson of radio and its advertising possibilities. "It's the most direct medium possible, and we've had good results—people come in and ask for certain items we've mentioned, and we've added many new customers through our radio talks."

Don Cunningham, consistent broadcaster, believes that the radio reaches many people and he knows personally that local folks tune in, from his own contacts.

Joe Smolsky is a charter member of the Wayne radio fraternity for he and H. D. Addison purchased a radio in partnership at the very beginning of the Herald broadcasts, and listen in regularly. Mr. Smolsky believes the radio has great advertising possibilities.

Phil Briggs has confidence that the radio hook-up will stimulate business, and thinks that "if the national firms can profit by radio advertising, so can we."

Dr. U. S. Conn presented a plaque to Pilger, a basketball to Wakefield, and a trophy to Clarkson. In the championship match between Pilger and Wakefield, Pilger scored two field goals early. Wakefield made a free throw. The first quarter ended with the score 4 to 1 in favor of Pilger. Wakefield improved during the second quarter and brought the score to 9 to 6 in her favor at the half. Wakefield continued in the lead during the third quarter which ended 12 to 10 in favor of Wakefield. Pilger took the lead in the last quarter and held it to the end when the score was 18 to 12.

The Clarkson and Wayne game was a good one also, though the visitors gained a substantial lead toward the last, the final being 32 to 14. The teams sawed back and forth and the final score stood 20 for Wakefield and 19 for Wayne. The Pilger-Clarkson contest was not so close, Pilger winning by 32 to 15.

In second round of the meet results were as follows: Pilger defeated Walthill 41 to 15, Clarkson defeated Wisner, 39 to 28; Wayne defeated Allen, 16 to 12; and Wakefield defeated West Point, 25 to 17.

Field Inspector Announces Method Of Securing Funds For Agriculture

Farmers who apply for loans this year from the $90,000,000 fund authorized by congress for crop production loans, should refuse to pay any fees for help in the preparation of their loan applications. It was declared by C. E. Burnham, field inspector of the crop production loan office, stationed at Norfolk.

The law as enacted by congress this year specifically prohibits the charging of any fee for the preparation of the application. Mr. Burnham explains, and provides for fine or imprisonment or both, for any agent or agent guilty of assessing such a charge. Notarial fees, however, are still necessary, as are fees charged by the townships for recording of the loan, and for securing the records for prior liens.

Prospective borrowers need not write to Washington for application blanks but detailed information about the loans, Mr. Burnham said, but may get that material direct from him or from a member of the Wayne county committee.

The application blank this year requires a statement of the amount of the loan desired, the number of acres for which seed and fertilizer are to be purchased, the amount desired for seed, the amount desired for fuel and oil for tractors. The application also requires a statement of the amount of the loan which is to be used for making repairs of or for the purchase of other supplies. The sum total of these several items must not exceed the maximum rates per acre specified in the regulations.

A legal description of the land on which the crops are to be planted is also required, together with a statement of the acreage of crops grown by the applicant in 1932 and the yields obtained. The applicant is required to file a statement of seed and feed on hand at the time of applying for a loan.

To obtain the loan, the application blank stipulates, the applicant must agree to use the money loaned only for the purchase of supplies necessary for crop production in 1933 on the land described. Prospective borrowers must also state that they have neither the means nor the credit with which to secure these production supplies, and that unless the loan is granted, they will be unable to farm in 1933.

Sister Of Wayne Man Writes About Quake

Mrs. Frank Bierma of Los Angeles, Calif., sister of I. C. Hahlbeck of Wayne writes March 13 about the earthquake as follows:

"I was walking to the telephone when the lights went out. Our telephone is in a 30-foot hall and it just seemed as if the hall started to come to meet me. The floor seemed to wave right at me. Frank said I screamed twice. I just remember that I didn't know what to do with the telephone receiver. Finally I laid it down and started for the kitchen. Frank met me and took my hand and said, 'Don't be frightened.' Well, just that quickly it was over. I said, 'Turn out the gas so the house won't catch fire.' We didn't leave the kitchen.

"I'll never laugh at quakes again," I told Frank. Our house hasn't had a sign of a crack anywhere. Nothing was broken. Except for a slight crack in the plaster on the back porch we haven't any other marks in the house.

"About 90 rooms in our office buildings have to be replastered, outside from that our building is all o. k. and we are working as usual."

"There's no fun like work, says a millionaire. And unfortunately there is very little work like fun. Punch (London).

Forty-five Years of Live Stock Market Building

The Sioux City Live Stock Exchange

Organized in 1888 Incorporated in 1895

EXPECTED LEADERSHIP

The emergency has passed—banks are open—business at the Live Stock markets has again assumed the appearance and practice of normalcy—our patrons expected their central markets to stay open—They did stay open.

During the bank holiday, every commission firm at this market and every other central market, was commanded by their customers to take charge of their livestock marketing problems. The call was made and the expected leadership was furnished. There were Sunday meetings, night meetings, day meetings, all attended by every marketing interest which included commission firms, order buyers, traders, bankers, the Stockyards Company, packers, and the Department of Agriculture. These interests were faced with the absolute necessity of keeping the public markets open at any cost. The patrons were not disappointed. The high degree of confidence placed in the regularly established Live Stock markets, during the stress, is gratifying.

PEACE POSTER CONTEST ENDS

Design By Einer Berntson Chosen To Represent Wayne High School.

The peace poster designed by Einer Berntson was chosen to represent Wayne high school in the district contest sponsored by Federation of Women's clubs. Einer's poster was turned over to Mrs. J. G. W. Lewis, district chairman of art, for entrance in the contest, and will be on display during the annual convention of the clubs here March 28 and 29. The winning poster has a threatening war god traversing the earth, with hunger and unemployment in his wake, and bears the words "War Ruins; Peace Builds."

Miss Marian Marsh and W. A. Behl will accompany the local declamatory winners to Pilger March 22. Mavis Baker, Mildred Maloney, William Studley and James Davies will make the trip.

Damosch program for high school students was heard Friday. In preparation for the tournament opening, pep club sponsored a rally in assembly period Thursday, with Supt. H. R. Best and Gayle Childs speaking, and Ruby Rhoades giving a reading entitled "Jane." Marcela Weber was in charge of the program, and considerable enthusiasm was displayed throughout, especially in the yells. A second rally was arranged for Friday afternoon, to pep up the team for the Allen game that evening. Ruby and Ruth Rhoades were in charge.

Donald Baker entered the ninth grade Wednesday of last week.

Junior High Activities. First round of the "A" competition in junior high girls' basketball tournament was played off last week, with eighth graders defeating sixth grade squad by a 24 to 4 tally, which game proved much more heated and better-matched than the score indicates. Tuesday of last week, high school freshmen challenged eighth grade first team to a game, and the eighth graders triumphed to the tune of 22 to 16. A second game will be played off later.

Plans are going forward for the tri-school declamatory contest to be held at Wayne school March 24, Pender and Winside students coming to take part.

Seventh grade history class held its constitutional convention last week, and Mildred Ringer was elected chairman, filling the role of George Washington. Very heated debates took place between the students representing the various states and colonies, and the results would have been a constitution radically different from our own, had these Wayne delegates had their way. Eighth grade geography class is working out a new project on the conditions necessary for manufacturing, and each student had chosen a product of special interest for report. In mathematics eighth graders are studying installment buying and have been interviewing local car dealers to find out how the time-buying plan works out.

Among the Lower Grades. Fourth grade reading club met last week Thursday, with Marjorie Gildersleeve, president for the week, in charge. An original play by Wilma Heidenreich, entitled "Conversation About Books," was presented by Barbara Hook, Leonine Potras, Lila Westerhouse, Virginia Mesnard and Marjorie Gildersleeve. Book reports were given by following: Jack Carroll, "Billy Whiskers"; Ned Wade, "Dicky Delightful in Rainbow Land"; Robert Haas, "Ned, the Indian" and "The Scotch twins." Arline Ulrich read a story about a beaver and an otter, and drew a picture of the otter and told how it lives and what it dies. Edna Martens read the poem, "My Dog." President of the club for this week is Leroy Sund, with Bobby Dunn as vice-president. Fourth graders completed their clothing booklets on Thursday and made original cover designs for these.

Paul Peterson, third grader, celebrated his birthday last week on Wednesday by bringing pop corn balls for the children. The third graders are starting work on their spring project by reading spring-time stories and writing original stories. Mrs. Leonard Good substituted for Miss Hazel Reeve all week.

Advanced group in second grade has begun study of the new book, "Story Fun," the work of Dr. Ambrose L. Surrle, who recently visited Wayne. Miss Ruth Ross reports much interest in the health contest, and Dorothy Jean Casper is leading the class with the most
