Month Of June.

The driest and hottest June on ecord-has been followed by a July hat relieved the drouth; rains rarying from one-half to five in the shaving fallen Thursday, Fritals and Saturday over Nebraska, south Dakota and Iowa. Everything was given new life and properly the shaving relieve an inch. Precipitation at Omaha Friday and Saturday over Nebraska, south Dakota and Iowa. Everything was given new life and properly the shave are bright for another good season.

With the ground well soaked and a forecast for more rain, farmers and townspeople are truely state.

s are bright for another good on the southeast wind side and continued most of night in gentle manner, every southing the dry earth. At me the gauge bridgy morning ted seven tenths of an inch, side had one and five-eights est. Hoskins, almost two incited, fiftyfour hundredths of nich. There was no wind, no and no severe lighthing—just deal rain.

The word of the dry carth. At me the gauge bridgy morning the dry carth. At me the gauge bridgy morning the fit of the side had one and five-eights est. Hoskins, almost two incited, fiftyfour hundredths of nich. There was no wind, no and no severe lighthing—just deal rain.

The side of the Nebraska and townspeeple are truely grateful.

P. H. Stewart of the Nebraska agricultural college said the pain was of incatculable benefit to crops where it fell. Corn, hay and pastures will benefit especially. It fell slowly in many localities, permitting most of it to sink into the ground.

Today's HERE is something furnished for the scrap-book by the Christian Science Monitor, and if its suggestions were followed we would have a more friendly and more helpful world:

I will wait till tomorrow to whine about my woes; today I will sing my song.

I will wait till tomorrow to give up; to-and enjoy them.

will wait till tomorrow to get even the other fellow; today I will put in ime getting even with myself, will wait till tomorrow to worry about to over which I have no control; today oncentrate my efforts on things withy control.

will wait till tomorrow to fall down or ob; today I'll hold it down even if i like a mule,
will wait till tomorrow to read trash

ay I'll treat my mind to the best 'three is in the whole realm of literature.

I will wait till tomorrow to say the nr

I will wait till tomorrow to say the untind word; today I will say only the kindly und helpful things.

I will wait till tomorrow to act in such way that I shall make enemies; today I vill bend all my efforts toward making riends

friends.

I will wait till tomorrow to be niggardly; today I will give generously of myself and my means.

Tomorrow and I shall never meet, since each tomorrow, as it passes through the portals of time, becomes today. Hence all I need do is to live my best today, which does not seem so much of a task.

health, and that it is benefited materially by transferring thought from it to other interests.

Back To JULY is bringing northeast Ne Normal braska back to normal, ban-ishing fears caused by the grouth that started in May and stretched its blighting length through June. Another soaking rain fell Tuesday night following a few days of intense heat. Unfortunately nature often loosens from its grip elements of damage as well as of benefidence. Sometimes it exacts a toll of death in distributing its bounties. Tragedy sometimes follows wind and lightning. Rhin is frequently left in the wake of storm. It is hoped losses from wind, hall and lightning in Tuesday night's storm were modified by insurance. According to the rules of nature, the bitter must be taken with the growing corn further towards maturity.

In talking with Will Durant who is intimately conversant with world affairs and with the functioning of governments, we found he does not regard with approval government ownership and operation of industries and business. To nationalize private business would destroy competition and initiative, remove selection and weaken service. Everything in the hands of the government would wreck the great American privilege of shopping around. Mr. Durant thinks large interference with business on the part of the federal government would break down the spirit which built the United States. But acceptance of safely progressive steps in federal control of business would seem the best safeyard against surrender to a dangerous extreme.

While Postmaster-General James A. Farley has announced a more liberal policy in dealing with lottery advertising in American newspapers, British authorities have clamped down on such liberties among publications in England. There are harmful and harmless lotteries. The scheme that invites chances at so much per chance and results in a few winners among many losers, is manifestly bad. The lottery that involves no money to participate, but merely arouses interest would seem comparatively free from evil possibilities.

iso speaks of lack of amenities as more of handicing than poor health. He means hat persons should be courteous and sympathetic, that they should become convertant with subjects outside of accustomed rooves and be able to enter into discustomed one in an illuminating fashion. He many human wrecks have followed incivility and indifference. In regard to pealth, he evidently believes it will take past and will again this year prove itself second to none in the state. In view of the growing promise for a being dorn crop, we would suggest that the amulal state corn husking contest for 1933.
