CORN-HOG PLAN IS MADE CLEAR

Signing Meetings Planned To Begin In County Coming Week.

Corn-hog plan is being explained by G. H. Liggett this week at a series of meetings in Wayne county...

Signing of contracts will start the week of February 5. Mr. Liggett and assistants plan to spend two days in each precinct of Wayne county...

Farmers living in the north half of each precinct, sections one to 18, will sign up the first day, those in south half, sections 19 to 36...

Suprising Sales Results. Every farm sale held in this county has attracted a big crowd of show buyers...

Exemption on Hogs. Farmers who have farrowed an average of four or less litters of pigs in the last two years have been asking agricultural agents...

Story Suggests Needed Reform. Maxwell Anderson's story, "Both Your Houses," meaning the two branches of congress, probably exaggerates the facts...

Often Unwarranted Gloom. Often the fellow who is just getting by—just making ends meet—feels better than the one who has suffered some losses...

Crazy Fanatics. We sometimes read of the violence of religious fanatics who attribute to the deity commands that belong to the devil...

On Government Payrolls. The report that 8,000,000 men and women are now in the employ of the government indicates considerable ways yet to go to put the country's entire population on public payrolls.

Visit in Omaha. Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bressler, Jr. and family visited in the Dr. Russell Best home in Omaha Sunday.

Committee To Report Friday On State Options To Be Considered Soon.

According to R. S. Shields of Omaha, representing the U. S. department of commerce, who spoke to Wayne city council Tuesday evening, the government provides labor construction costs and 20 percent of materials...

The field must have runway of a half mile north and south and the same distance east and west. Two L-shaped fields were approved by Mr. Shields when he was here and these will be submitted to the department of aeronautics in Washington.

The port should be as close to the city as possible and preferably on gravelled highway. It must be fenced and have markers and wind cones. It is pointed out that the field can be grown to alfalfa and this crop will pay rent on the land, the city's share of the expense.

MODERN DEMANDS MORE THAN MATCH ECONOMY EFFORTS

NO MATTER how much one may retrench in personal habits to beat the depression, there are some expenses as inexorable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Taxes, insurance and public service charges, meeting enlarged demands, usually buck economy ideas off the track.

Modern homes with latest improvements cannot be managed as cheaply as the old-fashioned home. A kerosene lamp on a table in the center of the sitting room was considered sufficient in the old days. A wood-burning stove to heat the sitting room was only supplemented around the rest of the house waited for summer to thaw out. Cellars in winter and summer—sometimes the cooler depths of an open well—answered the purposes of refrigeration. On foot was the popular way to travel—not costly car upkeep. Contemplate the primitive customs of the old days—notably the period of the former major depression, 1893-1896—and one may understand the difficulties encountered in cutting the garment according to the cloth. People cannot, if they would, slip back into a rule of old inconveniences without wasting modern equipment, and thus extra cost is necessarily entailed. So, when one practices small economy in habits of eating and dressing, he is assaulted fore and aft by expenses incident to established modernity from which there is no escape.

Mrs. R. W. Ley, vice president, reported on supervision and distribution of garments. She stated that 230 yards of material have been given to needy of the county and thirty pairs of blankets. New garments distributed numbered 552 and used garments, 660. The chapter placed 175 pairs of shoes. Miscellaneous items distributed were 794. The Red Cross helped 63 families and 201 children. Mrs. Hattie McNitt is serving as distributing agent in place of the late Mrs. W. C. Fox, and Mrs. A. C. Thompson has charge of welfare relief in the county.

Anniversary Is Celebrated Here

Today Marks Sixth Year For McNatt Hardware Store in Wayne.

"It has always been our ambition to serve the public in a manner that will make people enjoy dealing with us, to benefit the community as well as ourselves," L. W. McNatt of the McNatt hardware in Wayne comments when questioned. Mr. McNatt is celebrating his sixth anniversary in Wayne, having come here from Lincoln February 1, 1928.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McNatt grew up on farms and "we'd be there yet if we had lived in as fine a farming section as Wayne county," Mr. McNatt adds. Drouth, hail and other handicaps which destroyed about two out of three years' crops in Oklahoma and Texas led Mr. McNatt to seek another business. "I wanted to sell something everyone needed," he continued, "so I began with soap. I thought if I could change to a greater variety of items I could sell more. Having looked through many hardware catalogues which contained so many useful things for every member of the family, I decided on the hardware business and have found this line just to my liking. It gives an opportunity for real service."

Mr. McNatt started to work for the Simmons hardware company in 1916 and continued until he entered service in the World War. He was stationed in the training department at Camp Pike, Little Rock, Ark., until the Armistice was signed and then returned to serve the Simmons company. In 1920 he started on the road for the firm, selling hardware supplies in south-east Nebraska with headquarters at Lincoln. And in 1928, deciding that he wanted to be with his family more and to have a business of his own, he bought the Wayne store which has grown and improved with Mr. McNatt in charge, ably assisted by Mrs. McNatt.

Last summer the McNatts bought their store building and remedied the second story into modern apartments for the family.

Mr. and Mrs. McNatt are active in benefiting the community. Mr. McNatt is serving on official board of the Methodist church. He is active in the Legion, Masonic lodge, Kiwanis club and Country club. Mrs. McNatt is also active in the church, Auxiliary and other groups. And the McNatts' two daughters and son are beginning to follow their parents' example of helping build their home community.

German Politics Is Interpreted

William Weiershouser Tells Kiwanians About The Hitler Government.

In The Air

A report in the radio department of Monday's Omaha Bee-News intimates the existence of a plot to gobble up a number of broadcasting stations, including WJAG, with which the Wayne Herald is connected by remote control, and establish a big, full-time station, perhaps at Kearney, to serve the area between Omaha and Denver. Whether with or without basis of fact, the suggestion of federal interference to remove a definitely valuable service is an affront to rural communities. Surveys show the high popularity of WJAG among farmers in north Nebraska. Farmers depend on WJAG for general and local news and for latest market reports and weather forecasts. Unquestionably of less local interest would be one big central station. Advantages to the rural population should be increased, not diminished. A policy that would strike down the farmer's favorite broadcasting station would seem as unfair as outlawing his telephone. The injustice will not happen, but the suggestion shows how some minds would monopolize facilities of the air if they could.

Farm Board

ON February 25, 1927, President Coolidge returned to congress without approval an act to establish a federal farm board, an institution that was subsequently authorized and established. In his message he said among other things:

"We must be careful in trying to help the farmer not to jeopardize the whole agricultural industry by subjecting it to the tyranny of bureaucratic regulation and control. That is what the present bill will do. But, aside from all this, no man can foresee what the effect on our economic life will be of disrupting the long-established and delicately adjusted channels of commerce. That it will be far-reaching is undeniable, nor is it beyond the range of possibility that the present bill, if enacted into law, will threaten the very basis of our national prosperity, through dislocation, the slowing up of industry, and the disruption of the farmer's home market, which absorbs 90 per cent of his products."

Times Better

WE have private advices that Lincoln is enjoying a large advance in prosperity. Mention is made that the automobile business is better than at any time in four years. The south Platte country generally is reported to have made big headway in recovery during the past few months. Much federal money for wheat reduction has sifted through that country, whereas comparatively little wheat is grown in this part of the state and accordingly little cash has circulated on that account. Besides, Wayne is chiefly a live stock feeding country and consequently the number taking advantage of federal corn loans is small compared with the number farther south. But with recovery permanently under way elsewhere in the state, it will in due time make itself felt here. We were the last to get into the depression, and it looks as though we would be the last to get out of it.

State Convention To Be Held In Wayne

Wayne D. A. R. chapter entertains about 400 women March 8 and 9 when the state convention will be held here. Mrs. Russell W. Magna of Washington, D. C., national regent, is to attend the convention which will be held at the Stratton hotel, Presbyterian church and college auditorium.

World Events

President Roosevelt asked congress for $50 million to continue emergency relief program.

A horde of 5,000 planes was urged for the army and navy by preparedness advocates at Washington.

America's 6,000 parties celebrating President Roosevelt's birthday of Tuesday, will net about two million dollars for benefit of crippled children.

The senate Saturday passed the bill to devalue the dollar and put two billion dollars to the task of protecting the foreign value of the nation's currency.

Three Russian balloonists were killed yesterday when trying to land balloons in which they went to 67,585 feet in the stratosphere, highest altitude record.

Dr. John Condon, 74, of New York, the Jastis in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, has returned to devote his lifetime and all his savings to trying to find to whom he gave the $50,000 ransom.

A Turkish newspaper today said emissaries of Samuil Inshul had offered the Turkish government $15,000,000 for use in the country's

Dollar Down

DEVALUATION of the American dollar down to around 60 cents, figured in terms of the present gold value, has been accomplished. Tuesday night the president signed a measure for the government to take title to all the nation's monetary gold. Devaluing the dollar increases local value of the country's gold stock from $4,011,000,000 to $7,219,800,000, leaving a margin of over $2,000,000,000. This margin will doubtless find plenty of uses. It is said this latest operation on the nation's finances will serve as an effective weapon in an impending money war with England. In short, the number of dollars in circulation may be increased by reducing the value and by maintaining the support of gold reserve which has a world market. In a similar manner a vendor of circus lemonade may increase his stock by pouring in more water.

Prof. Irving Fisher who evidently does not belong to the federal brain trust, believes that natural laws must be allowed to operate and human wants must be considered in trying to govern economic conditions. Quoting from the Lincoln Journal, touching the professor's logic: "He says that at most times there must be over or under production, over or under consumption, over or under spending, over or under saving, over or under investment, and so on down the list. It is as absurd," he says, to assume that perfect economic stabilization can be achieved at any time, as to contemplate a time when the great oceans will be without waves. The reason is that there are so many actual laws and physical agencies that are absolutely beyond human control and impossible even to predict or provide against."

Mayor LaGuardia of New York City, has caused to be revealed a lot of shameful mismanagement under the rule of Tammany. Even the penitentiary on Welfare island was found under the dominion of gangsters. "The betrayal of New York is the old story of corrupt alliance between politics and crime, made possible by the selfish indifference and mistaken tolerance of citizens," says one writer. Mayor LaGuardia promised to clean up New York if he were elected and he is making a good start. His course will be encouraged by right-thinking people everywhere, and other cities may be expected to profit by the courageous example.

According to reports from Lincoln, democratic and republican leaders are anxious to find out what Governor Bryan is going to do. The state's politicians would like to know whether he intends to file for the governorship again or run for United States senator. It is not suspected that he will retire. While the governor probably has a higher opinion of his political strength than anyone else, others seem to rate him of sufficient pulling power to influence any arrangements that may be in mind.

After getting into the habit of thinking lugubriously and practicing funeral dirges for a few years, some time is required to get back to a tenor of cheerful confidence. One becomes so used to seeing clouds with a bogey in each one that a considerable silver patch has to appear before happy thoughts are permitted to take possession. Whatever government experiments—some wise, some unwise—have done to help, the country is apparently swinging out of the depression which had run the usual course.

The Omaha Journal-Stockman says the government could withdraw from cultivation some millions of acres of marginal lands, and then if dispossessed settlers couldn't find employment in the cities, it could open up the idle tracts to settlement again.

LOOKING UP.

It is observed that a healthier condition in the live stock market has displaced a lot of gloom, dispersing blue devils of fear and giving rise to a better state of feeling. One live stock publication notes that while farmers who gather before the daily bulletin board of prices at stock yards are not prompted to issue shouts of joy, their faces are not so long as formerly, and their eyes have more of the old-time sparkle of confidence. The upward tendency, though not great, is encouraging, and a slow advance gives promise of greater permanency than a sudden, long upturn. The fact that people feel hopeful is reassuring. Another sign of improvement is found in the fact that more securities salesmen are journeying into the country to find prospects. And this reminds us that people should profit by past experience in making investments, putting money into nothing whose value is not absolutely established. Mining is all right for those who understand it, and drilling for oil has often returned millions, but the uninitiated in agricultural areas will do well to stick to the line they know. There is also a growing disposition to buy more of the things needed. And the time is fast approaching when it will require less courage to dig into one's sock or savings account to replenish one's wardrobe than to go about trying to keep together garments that are beginning to look like relics from King Tut's tomb. Signs of improvement are plentiful, and as the forward movement gets well under way, it may be expected to continue, slowly but steadily and surely.

Car Stolen Here Found At Winside

W. A. Stewart's car, taken from Main street in Wayne Tuesday evening about 10 o'clock, was located Wednesday morning by Sheriff A. W. Stephens and Marshall Stewart two miles west and a half mile south of Winside. The car had been driven considerably and the marshal's two guns were taken from it. Marshal Alex Gabler of Winside, followed the parties north of that city and exchanged shots with them, a couple bullets piercing the Stewart car. He afterward lost trace of them.

Legion To Meet.

American Legion meets next Wednesday at the court house. The chapter will be represented at the district meeting in South Sioux City March 14.

TRAVEL.

The first automobile was exhibited at the world's fair in Chicago in 1893. A slightly improved model was on the grounds of the Transmississippi exposition at Omaha in 1898. Promise of increasing speed from eight or ten miles an hour behind a horse to twenty miles an hour in a machine was thrilling. Development of the horseless vehicle as a practical means of travel was slow for several years. The first automobile—a noisy contraption—showed up in Wayne thirty years ago. It was owned by a doctor, and the way he scooted but and in at twice the speed customarily experienced "observed" caused astonishment and often terror. Frightened horses were hard to manage, threatening to demolish conveyances and injure travelers. People became so incensed over performance of the first automobile in Wayne county that a public meeting was held to express disapproval and recommend restraining or prohibitive action. Many believed the automobile was impractical and as a dangerous and passing amusement, it ought to be suppressed. Others were satisfied with the adoption of regulatory measures by the legislature. In a few years those who had protested, concluded that automobiles had come to stay, and they bought cars of their own. It was not long before the legislature passed laws to govern the new-fangled vehicles, and every session in thirty years has called for additional regulations to meet new hazards and reduce a mounting death rate. The evolution of the automobile has seen the half-hitch speed of twenty miles an hour raised to sixty, eighty and even ninety miles an hour. The greater the power of the automobile motor, the greater the speed and the greater the need for improved highways and improved cars. There have revolutionized travel. Passenger trains on main lines are trying to keep pace. Looking up, we find airplanes still further shortening distances and annihilating time. Truly, thirty years have wrought wonderful changes.

Care of Poultry Is Very Important

If practically any farmer will stop to figure the cost on his poultry from the time he bought or hatched his chicks until the time he sold his hens, including his brooding losses, his feed costs, and his various brooding costs, as balanced off against his cockered sales, his egg sales, and what his old hens brought him, he will know that for the past three years he has not made any money in poultry, says G. H. Liggett.

He can at least greatly reduce this loss and if enough farmers will follow his example, change his loss to a profit by reducing his numbers of poultry kept. This reduction should start by figuring the number of hens that he can house comfortably. He should have at least a foot and a half of roosting space for each hen, and if he expects to keep his hens housed, at least four feet of floor space for each hen housed. After he has determined the number of hens that he wished to keep in this manner, he should only figure to brood five chicks for each hen he expects to retain on the farm. This will mean a considerable reduction in number of chicks purchased or hatched and a reduction of cost there, and will also mean a reduction in brooding and chick feed costs.

He should also figure to brood his chicks early. This is a help in two ways. The cockerels and culled pullets will bring a better price and the earlier brooding will bring the pullets into production earlier and mean a longer cycle of production. Because of a smaller number of chicks the farmer will be able to do a better job of brooding and feeding, bringing his brooding to an earlier sale date, and his pullets to an earlier maturity, and the earlier a hen starts laying in the fall, the longer she will lay and therefore the more eggs per hen.

Finally the farmer should start culling the day he receives his chicks, culling out any weaklings or deformed chicks, and he should continue this culling, taking out an undesirable chick or pullet whenever it is noticed, and when he finally comes to the time to transfer the pullets to the laying house, he should retain only his very best hens for the winter. Remember that it takes a production of 140 eggs a year to make a hen a profitable farm fowl, and present farm average is only around 70 eggs per hen.

Cheese Important In Family Diet

To use plenty of cheese is one way to use more milk. It is true that cheese does not contain all the food values of milk, but it does contain most of them. And cheese will keep where milk will not. It can be used in ways that milk cannot.

These are points to keep in mind, says the bureau of home economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, especially if your food budget is a small one. They are one reason why the government is buying great quantities of cheese to distribute free to needy families. Government agents are now beginning to make these purchases with money allotted from relief appropriations, and the cheese they buy will be distributed by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration to State emergency relief administrations who will use it in their respective jurisdictions.

This will be whole-milk cheese, known commonly as "just" plain American cheese, though it is much like the English cheddar, and that name is used in the official definition under which the pure food law is applied. One stage of this cheesemaking process is called "cheddaring," after the English village of Cheddar where this kind of cheese has been made for more than a hundred years. Other kinds of cheese are made in this country, but not in such quantity as the American cheddar cheese. All this cheese distributed will be the processed kind and will be put up in half-pound packages.

"Cheese," the bureau of home economics reminds us, is not just something to season or flavor something else—cheese, or accessories. Whole-milk cheese is a substantial food in itself, good in a main dish on a meatless day, for example, because it contains many of the same food values as meat, and other values besides. It is rich in protein, fat, calcium, and phosphorus, and in vitamin A—in other words, it contains the chief food values of whole milk.

There are, however, certain things to remember about cheese, if you would enjoy it most. It is a very concentrated food, and too much of it should not be eaten at one time. It should be eaten with a meal with a fruit or vegetable of both. Whole-milk cheese is very rich in fat; therefore, it should be eaten with very little if any other fat.

Because cheese contains so much protein, it should be cooked at very high temperature. In fact, most cheese dishes should be baked over water, or in a very slow oven. The food value of cheese, as well as its flavor, makes it a valuable

Recipes.

Tomato Rabbit.

2 tablespoons butter or other fat
1-2 small onion, chopped
2 tablespoons flour
1-2 pound cheese, shaved thin
Salt and pepper
1 pint canned tomatoes

Cook the onions in the fat for a few minutes and stir in the flour. Gradually add the tomatoes and cook until the mixture thickens. Add the cheese, stir until it melts, and keep the heat very low. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and serve at once on crisp toast or crackers.

A quick way to make this rabbit is to use canned tomato soup, instead of the canned tomatoes which must be thickened. In this case brown the onion in a little fat, add the tomato soup, and when hot add the cheese. Stir until the cheese is melted and the mixture smooth. Use a 10-ounce can of soup to 3-4 pound of cheese, or more cheese if desired. This dish is often called "ringum diddy."

Scalloped Cabbage, Spaghetti and Cheese.

1 1/2 cup spaghetti broken in small pieces
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter or other fat
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 pound American cheese
1 quart shredded cabbage
1 cup buttered bread crumbs

Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water 20 minutes, and drain. Make a sauce of the flour, fat, milk and salt. Shave up the cheese, add to the hot sauce, and stir until melted. Put the cabbage, spaghetti, and sauce in a buttered baking dish in layers and cover the top with the buttered bread crumbs. Bake 20 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Movielites. It's another important week at the Gay theatre, for F. L. March has scheduled some outstanding features in pictures. "Only Yesterday" and "Havana Widows" are to be shown Friday and Saturday. "All of Me" Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, and "Jimmy and Sally" next week Wednesday and Thursday.

"Only Yesterday." "Havana Widows" February 1 and 2. When a picture presents a woman's soul it is great, when it bears a mother's soul it is tremendous; and when it bears the soul of a generation it is truly an epic of human emotion. Here is that picture, "Only Yesterday." Thrill with it. Laugh with it. Cry with it. This is a calvalade of American life as seen through the soul of a woman wronged in a great love.

"Only Yesterday" which is the crowning achievement of John M. Stahl, that master director of domestic problem plays, is a story which covers the exciting period between entrance of America into the World War and the stock market crash of November, 1929. Against this drama of American life is a love story which has never been equaled for sheer emotional quality on the screen.

Margaret Sullivan, John Boles, Edna May Oliver, Billie Burke, Benita Hume and Reginald Denny are stars.

An additional feature for Friday and Saturday is "Havana Widows." Here's a comedy that is a riot of laughs with fast action, snappy, peppy dialogue and smart snappings.

"All of Me." February 4, 5 and 6. A superlative four-star cast portraying a quartet of characters that match distinctive personalities, is a point whose value can't be exaggerated in favor of Paramount's "All of Me" to be shown at the Gay first of the week. Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March, George Raft and Helen Mack are the stars.

Based on the play, "Chrysalis," by Rose Albert Porter, the picture presents the highlights of four interesting lives, with Miss Hopkins portraying the main character, that of a society girl with wayward inclinations.

"Jimmy and Sally." February 7 and 8. Skilful, tuneful and delightful, that's "Jimmy and Sally" to be shown at the Gay next week. It is a highly diverting and entertaining comedy romance with music. And the story is ideally suited to James Dunn and Claire Trevor in this up-to-the-minute picture of the American tempo. The story describes the loves and sorrows of a typically American pair of love birds.

Wayne County Pioneer Reaches Eighty-fifth Birthday This Month

Even at its best, Wayne county above ground to his regret for dug-out shacks had some protection from the wind and cold. Every-thing froze solid as a brick in the shack after winter set in. The young man tried to get wallboard to seal up his abode, but credit was hard to find in those days. A homestead cost about $14 to acquire, then the settler had to live on it five years and improve the land before getting a patent to it. Mr. Bressler bought a yoke of oxen on credit, and used these to till his hard-packed ground. Of course he had never farmed before, neither had he driven oxen, but one learns many things when left alone on the prairie. Oxen didn't require grain as did horses, so the settlers found them invaluable during their first year on the homesteads before they raised a crop.

Two miles to the nearest settlers. The month after Mr. Bressler came, a young man named Oscar Munson was out breaking prairie with oxen on his neighboring homestead. Five Indians returning from the hunt came by the field and shot young Munson from behind, afterwards scalping him and taking the scalp back to their agency. The white man's law found them out and the five Indians were tried in Burt county and sent to the Lincoln penitentiary where they died. Mr. Bressler helped his neighbor friends to bury the unfortunate young chap and the government sent Lieutenant Delaney and about 20 soldiers to camp near the Munson homestead and protect the settlers for several months.

Nearest trading points were West Point, Fremont and Sioux City, but coming of the Northwestern railroad to Wigner opened up that town to the settlers. Five years Mr. Bressler remained alone on the Leslie precinct homestead, proved up on it and then went to LaPorte, the then county seat. He was elected county treasurer in 1877 and re-elected in 1879. This experience of handling a sparsely settled county's small funds must have interested young Mr. Bressler in things financial, for the next year found him and D. C. Patterson starting the first bank in Wayne county. It was called the Logan Valley bank and had Mr.

Cards were diversion for the evening. Mrs. George Langenberg, Dick Wiseman, Mrs. Oliver Stamm and Fred Brumels received prizes. The hostesses served a two course luncheon at the close of the evening.

Highland Community Club.

The Highland Community club met at the school house of district 60 Thursday evening. The program was as follows: Songs by the Highland male quartet; a play, "Not a Man in the House," by Mrs. Sam Reichert, Miss Gladys Reichert, Mrs. Chris Wiese and Mrs. Chris Peterson; instrumental selections by Oliver Kiesau and Lee Hall; vocal solo by Miss Margaret Strate; a song by Mrs. Steve Lieb, Mrs. Frank Langberg and Mr. Jaeger; a play, "He Didn't Propose," by Mrs. Fred Muehlmeier, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fenske, Herman Muehlmeier, Reuben Voelcks and Marian Walker; a vocal solo by Mrs. Rudolph Langenberg; a reading by Mrs. Sam Reichert; a song by the circle; and a piano solo by Miss Ruth Jochens. Mrs. Emil Swanson, Mrs. Steve Lieb and Mrs. Rudolph Langenberg served. The next meeting will be February 23 at the school.

Long Political Career.

Almost from the beginning of his residence in Wayne county, Mr. Bressler took a keen interest in local and state politics and held many important offices. In 1894 he was elected state senator from the district including Wayne, Pierce, Madison and Stanton counties. That was the year that a United States senator was to be elected by the state legislature and the campaign for state legislature was fought out on that line. John M. Thurston was republican candidate, and W. J. Bryan was the democratic choice. A strong Republican legislature had its way and Thurston was elected.

In 1896, Mr. Bressler was elected a delegate to the republican national convention at St. Louis which brought about the nomination of William McKinley, republican candidate for president. The convention which elected two delegates from this congressional district was held at Norfolk and Mr. Bressler was elected by acclamation, while several ballots were required to elect the other delegate. He has attended all republican national conventions since 1888, except in 1924 and 1932. President McKinley appointed him as a government director of the Union Pacific railway in the spring of 1897.

Waynettes will remember that the generously-treed Bressler park which serves Wayne as playground and picnic place, was the gift of Mr. Bressler, as was East park. Winside, too, benefited by his generosity for he deeded half of the Main street park to that city, also the high school block. He has always played an important role in civic affairs, serving as Wayne's mayor in 1910, and also as a member of the school board.

Greenwood cemetery is another thing of which the people of Wayne are justly proud. It has fine trees and shrubbery and the main driveways are paved. Mr. Bressler has been a member of the board since its organization in 1882, and is now president of the board, and he has the honor of having inaugurated the plan of a permanent fund, the interest on which will take care of all expenses for all time. This fund now amounts to more than $20,000, and when all the lots are sold, it will be double that amount. This fund is invested in high grade securities.

Recognizing the hardships which the present economic situation is working upon farmers, it is a well-known fact that Mr. Bressler has enabled at least a score of farmers to retain their lands and homes, just within the past 12 months, even though such action meant great sacrifice to himself. This was effected by inducing farmers on whose lands he held mortgages, to apply for and get loans from the Federal Land bank, whereupon he would release the larger mortgages which he held, allowing the land bank mortgage to take the place of his own. This means loss of more than 50 percent to him in many cases.

Family Close To Wayne.

Mr. Bressler's marriage to Miss Julia Fair of near Dakota City, took place at the Fair homestead in 1880, just after Wayne city had come into being. Six children were born. Maude, the eldest, is now Mrs. O. A. Harker, Jr., of Puryear, Tenn. George, the next child, died at age of two and one-half years. Ruth, now Mrs. A. T. Claycomb, lives just northeast of Wayne. Kate, Mrs. W. E. VonSeggern, also has remained in Wayne, as has John T. Bressler, Jr. Miss Dorothy Bressler is at home. Then there are 11 grandchildren, eight boys and six girls, and one great grandchild in the family group.

Ask Mr. Bressler if he is glad that Cuming county land was gobbed up before he arrived and that he had to come north to Wayne county. He'll tell you he is glad that he came to this county, and that he considers the people of this section fine in every way, and that he believes northeast Nebraska has the finest soil and climate in the world, and means it, too.

Pennsylvania is a great state, but Mr. Bressler's loyalty has attached itself to the state which has been his home the past 64 years. What other state has built a capitol building which will cost about 20 millions when all completed and furnished, and is entirely paid for? What other state has a two million dollar fund for care of its soldiers who served during the World War? And no other state, certainly, has a trust fund of about 15 millions produced by school lands received from the federal government. As a banker, Mr. Bressler is justly proud of his state's financial position. And as a citizen of this section since pioneering days, he is deeply grateful to the people of northeast Nebraska who have given him everything he has asked for politically.

Former College Student Tells Of The Colorful Life In Paris

Miss Barbara Spoerry, formerly a student at Wayne college, and a niece of Miss Margaret Schemel, has written more of her delightful letters from abroad, telling her experiences in France and Switzerland. Miss Spoerry is studying at the University of Lyons, France, having received a scholarship while at the University of Nebraska.

Before leaving for Lyons, Miss Spoerry spent some time in Paris studying at the Alliance, and here she begins her intensely human accounts of European life.

A visit to an old sewer which has been converted into a gathering place, is ably described by Miss Spoerry. "Have a liquor in a sewer," some one told me, and that is just about what it is. An old sewer which is part of the underground dungeon of Notre-Dame is fitted up with old tables, benches and lamps. You go down underground by a narrow, worn stairway, and arrive in a small room with slightly raised platform in one end. You sit on a hard wooden bench with your back against a cold stone wall, and eat brandied cherries while the show goes on continuously. The door-men, waiters and girls who sing and dance are all dressed in old-time costumes. Over your head will be hanging a murderous hatchet, relic of other days and other entertainments. Girls come out and sing old French songs, countless verses, and between each verse, the whole crowd joins in on the chorus. It is so informal and simple. To see these middle-aged, bespectacled patrons merging with the curious foreigners and the serious students, and all rocking back and forth to the merry and sad and haunting tunes—oh, it defies description! Before you leave, you go down one or two stairways and view the cold, damp, miserable cells of the old dungeons, and see the bones of prisoners who were buried alive in sealed tombs, or who were placed here and forgotten. Over there is a few rusty iron shackles on the floor, here a few holes in the wall that may once have represented something to some unfortunate and miserable soul; a few steps beyond you see a sort of well, at the bottom of which are the waters of the Seine, and above which men were hanged, and into which they were dropped, to be carried away by the loathsome water and eaten by the scavengers of the sub-sea. It is horrible and amazing to have it forced on your mind that such things actually do occur. You see upstairs a guillotine and when it cracks down unexpectedly for you, you nearly lost your head through sympathy.

"I had my hair washed and waved last week too, and I have never had so much attention in my life. The whole shop was working on me at one time or another, and such work! I asked for a shampoo and an 'ondulation' thinking that an ondulation sounded more like a wave than anything else on the program. They began drying it however with about six different instruments, and so I asked again if they understood that I wanted a wave also. 'Oh yes, and did I want perfume?' No I didn't think so, so they got out an iron or two and started in. I registered violent disapproval, and then was that I learned that all the time I had wanted a 'mise en plis.' By that time my hair was so dry that it was erect on all its little ends, so they absolutely soaked it in eau de Cologne, and gave me the cutest wave I've ever seen. I looked very fancy for about one evening, but the Cologne has long since lost its charm.

Visit to Fontainebleau.

"Sunday dawned bright and clear, and we headed for Fontainebleau, with a lunch box in our hands. We went through Melun, a very ancient little town, which was captured for the first time in 53 B. C. by Caesar, and I guess, has been recaptured by everyone capturing anything in France since that time. We walked for miles through the forest of Fontainebleau. All the kings of France have hunted here, and you don't have to stretch your imagination at all to see them in their bright coats come riding out of the woods with their hounds baying, the horns blowing, with gun in hand after poor little Reynard the fox.

The forest covers an area of about 42,000 acres. We had our lunch in the middle of the forest, on a carpet of pine needles and real moss. These mammoth trees all around, but yet not so close together, and some in their gorgeous autumn colors. The ground underneath looked as though it had been freshly swept, it was so clean and fresh, and the blue, blue sky above that you could glimpse in the thousand places between and through the branches. It is the most peaceful, stately place you can imagine. In the village there is an amazing tramway winding through the streets from station to station, with a car enclosed and one open area. The conductor has quite some task to navigate the street, owing to its narrowness and the sidewalk on either side, it goes by fits and violent starts, and when it sees a comrade coming, it actually leaps across the street. I have never been so shaken up, or so impressed. 'A man dropped his coat overboard and didn't discover it for several blocks, but the train stopped at least 20 minutes for him to recover it. People got off and

Some hundreds of years ago this was an island where the souls of men were led after death. In 709 A. D. St. Aubert had a vision of St. Michel and obeyed his orders in hollowing out a chapel in the rock. He named the island after the saint and it became a place of pilgrimage, later occupied as a monastery for Benedictine monks.

A Copper Kitchen.

The hotel where Miss Spoerry stayed at St. Michel had a huge kitchen, equipped with copper and a fireplace which extends to the ceiling, in which you might have room for a large dinner party. Copper pans, ranging from wash tub circumference on down, hang over one whole side of the kitchen, and polished to a degree that they catch and reflect every sparkle of light from the fire. A boy in uniform stands by a wooden table and whips (literally, if you please) the eggs to the most fascinating whip imaginable, all the time making a complete and perfect symphony of sound with the whipper and bowl, to which symphony it is difficult not to try to jig. Simultaneously the cook is heating the long-handled copper pan over the wood fire, and melting in its rosy depth is no less than half a pound of salted butter. When it is ready the lad dumps the mountains of foam he has made from a couple of eggs, into the hot butter, and the mixture sizzles away, being stirred a little all the time. It is browned on the under side, but soft and gooey on top, and when they slide it off on a platter, they fold the goo within the brown. If it cracks in the folding, it is no good (says they). I promise you, you have never yet eaten an omelette.

"When she left St. Michel, Miss Spoerry hung out of the back window all the way across the digue, watching the precious place disappear. I experienced the strangest sensation of its pursuing me. It seemed to get no smaller and actually looked like it was moving toward us. I thought I was losing my mind till my companion said, 'Does it look to you like it is coming right after us?' So then I felt much better.

"Yesterday word reached Paris of Germany's action at Geneva, and when the afternoon edition of the papers came out, it was sold in half an hour. What will it mean? After you have been here even for a short time, you are as concerned about every movement of France's neighbors as she is herself. It is such a tense matter. I believe that every one of them is scared to death. War? Surely it doesn't mean war, but it doesn't mean peace.

"I have been here a month in Paris, and it has been marvelous. You love the magnificent stretch of the Champs-Elysses, the gorgeous Place de la Concorde, the countless, beautiful buildings, parks and fountains, the people, the cafes, the dozens of bridges across the fascinating Seine, the tiny Cite with its St. Chapelle and its Notre Dame. You love the gardeners and those most secular directions; you love the aristocratic waiters who whip up appetites with such a flourish; you adore the congenial orchestra which will play anything in the world for you. In the daytime it is fascinating and interesting, and at night it is frightening yet gorgeous and breath-taking. No wonder there is only one Paris.

Museum Is Thrilling.

"The very thought of the Louvre gives me 'museum feet' and a misplaced pain. This castle was built in the 12th century and became a royal residence in the 14th when Charles V moved his treasury and library here. Louis XIII had fancy ideas and was going to quadruple the original dimensions. After him came Louis XIV, the 'grande monarchie' who was going strong when he thought of Versailles, and lost interest in everything but that. His successors preferred Versailles or the Tuilleries to the Louvre, and it wasn't till good old Napoleon came along, that work once more began on it. All these buildings taken together form the largest and most splendid palace in the world, covering and enclosing an area of about 49 acres. Practically the entire thing is devoted to museum and picture galleries. The Salle Rubens was taken at a breakneck speed over slippery floors. It contains paintings ordered by Marie de Medicis. Rubens made the pictures very large, an interesting combination of realism and allegory, telling the tale of her life.

"We visited the church of St. Germain and all the time I was laboring under the impression that I was to stand before the actual remains of James II. Imagine my consternation to discover that his brains were given to Scott's college, his heart to some convent, and what was left to the Benedictines at Paris. I was quite torn.

The Comedie Francaise, most famed of Parisian theatres, is small and endless galleries rise almost directly over the last. The seats are all upholstered in globular red velvet, and are arranged so close together that it is necessary to sit pigeon-toed to survive. Describing the 'les Halles centrales' or the big Parisian market, she writes: "All right along the little carts come in, loaded with their vegetables and fish and meat, jingling little bells. The drivers sleep the whole way and the little horses wend their ways through the familiar streets to the market place. The stalls are filled with big clean carcasses and the streets overflowing with carts and horses, men and vegetables. Carrots piled eight and ten feet high, and so symmetrically arranged that you gasp. Turnips and lettuce and onions and potatoes. It is beautiful! Blocks of them! Great squares of pumpkins, pyramids of potatoes, walls of green and white or orange, arranged in checkerboard fashion. From three to five in the morning is the best time to see it in all its freshness and activity, because the sales begin then and by eight, all must be cleared away. One should enter one of the little cafes and eat onion and cheese soup with all the vendors.

"We went to the Hotel des Invalides to see Napoleon's tomb, and got in on a celebration of some kind, where a lot of people were being decorated and whacked with swords, kissed on both cheeks and things which I know not. There were bands playing, and forty kinds of uniforms tripping around. The Hotel was begun by Louis XIV and covers 34 acres. It was destined for some 7,000 old and wounded soldiers, the very first of its kind. Now it is the seat of the military government of Paris.

"I attended a gorgeous fashion review at Lucien Lelong's. The salon is in gray. Mannequins appear on the stage at the end and walk up and down and around the large open space in the center of the room. How gorgeous they were—fur and satin and wool and cloth of gold."

And so ends the account of Parisian life—Miss Spoerry proceeds to Lyons to begin study at the University of Lyons.
