commencement play, the college dramatics class has attempted something out of the ordinary. This non-sectarian Biblical drama is highly dramatic and moving in both content and structure.

The curtain rings up on the court of the Temple of Isis at Karnak as dawn comes stealing over the river. The second scene is in the throne room in the palace at Karnak, and the final scene is in the Hebrew quarters on the bank of the Nile.

All the costumes and the setting for the play have been designed and fashioned by members of the dramatics class under the supervision of Miss Florence Drake, director, after several weeks of concentrated study.

"Pharaoh's Daughter" promises to be one of the most colorful plays that has ever been staged by the dramatics class. During the second act, six maidens, dressed in lovely patterns, sway gracefully in dance as Miriam sings "The Song of the Nile." The languid motions of their bodies and the undulations of the beautifully colored veils which they carry, are reminiscent of the fascinating beauty of slowly moving waters. The Pasadena Star-News has this to say of "Pharaoh's Daughter" after it had made its premiere at the Pasadena Play House: "The idea of reconstructing the life of the first great Hebrew prophet and leader in the years between infancy and full manhood, was a daring one. The Moses of the Daw drama is young, gorgeous, princely—the adored son of the reigning queen of Egypt, the desired lover toward whom is raised more than one pair of languishing feminine eyes."

The play is always poignant in its appeal to the emotions and its thoroughly human for all its stateliness. For years many have thrilled to the story of the babe who was saved from death by maternal strategy, adopted into the royal family of an alien race, instructed in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and who was eventually to become the deliverer of his own people. The climax at the end of second act is finely imagined and highly executed.

Mellon SURRENDER of the United States attorney-general to the judgment of the Pittsburgh grand jury in finding nothing to warrant action against Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, "seems the willingness of a man who has picked up something hot," as one publication suggests.

The objection to Mellon seems to have been largely based on the fact that he was rich. Success in handling the large, financial affairs of his own business undoubtedly made him a desirable superintendent head of the United States exchequer.

Speaking of the connection between the prosecution and politics, the Christian Science Monitor refers to Attorney-General Cummings' action in this way:

"Perhaps it is unfortunate that the general public has heard more of Mr. Cummings as a member and former chairman of the democratic national committee than as a legal light. But it would be still more unfortunate if the public should have reason to suspect that justice was being subordinated to politics in the department that exalts the name of justice."

Blackeye to KIDNAPING has been given an encouraging backset this week. Finding both the stolen child in Arizona and the kidnaped man in California with the latter's three confessed abductors in the penitentiary, and with no ransom paid in either case, inspires new hope.

The cruel treatment dealt out to the little Arizona girl shocks the sensibilities of merciful people. Kidnapers must get rid of conscience before becoming kidnapers, and evidently not a modicum of conscience remained to interfere with the way the Arizona crime was planned and carried out.

The retired Los Angeles broker came out more fortunately. He was uninjured, his kidnapers admitted their guilt and have begun serving life sentences in the penitentiary. The result will tend to put a crimp in the sordid ambition of nethermost human elements to prey on unsuspecting victims.

The Tax BURDEN DAVID Lawrence writes of mounting costs of government in the course of recovery experiments, and he expresses alarm over the amount of tax money to be exacted by growing federal obligations.

"Such a day of reckoning should be welcomed as the true inauguration day of a new deal in America's fiscal affairs."

Speaking of nature and the AAA in the matter of limiting crops, the Omaha World Herald gives the latter preference. As explained, nature is more ruthless, not caring a picayune whether it ruins crop prospects or not.

Garet Garrett points out that democracy and capitalism which are inseparable, are evidences of individual strength and that both must go up or down together.

On second thought, the Pulitzer prize winning editorial of Editor E. P. Chase who characterizes reckless spending as the route taken by American money to get out of circulation, did not go far enough according to some editorial writers.

1-2 teaspoon paprika

Soak the gelatin in cold water 5 minutes. Add the chicken stock and stir until gelatin dissolves. Cool and allow to thicken a little. Add rest of ingredients and pour into a ring mold. Cool until stiff. Unmold on lettuce and place a dish of mayonnaise in the center of the ring.

Broiled Shrimps.

You can prepare these in advance and pop them into the oven the last minute for broiling. Take a quantity of fresh or canned shrimps and roll each in bacon and fasten with a tooth pick—just a few minutes before serving put them under the broiler until the bacon is crisp.

Tomatoes Stuffed with Caviar.

Choose small ripe tomatoes and hollow out the centers. Mix caviar with chopped egg whites and fill centers. Serve on a platter garnished with water cress. With the above dishes serve potato chips, radishes, giant ripe onions and spring onions and small Parker House rolls. These can be heated at the last minute.

New Vegetable Dishes.

Here are some delicious new ways of serving familiar vegetables—try them out and increase your reputation as a cook.

Vegetable Salad.

Cook separately and dice 2 beets, 2 carrots, 2 turnips. Mix lightly and add 1 cup cooked lima beans or peas. Toss in a dressing made of 2 tablespoons melted butter blended with 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 teaspoon chopped parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Line a salad bowl with lettuce and heap the salad mixture in a mound.

Cauliflower Souffle.

To 1 cup of white sauce made with milk or cauliflower water add 4 egg yolks beaten until thick and 1 cup cooked cauliflower cut in tiny pieces. Cool and fold in 4 egg whites beaten stiff. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. Serve at once.

Onions French Style.

Use small white onions, cooking them whole or the large Spanish or Bermuda variety cut in rings. Cover with boiling water, let stand for half an hour, then drain, place in a double boiler and dot with butter. Cook gently till tender. Season and serve.

Southern Peas and Onions.

Clean and cut the tops off a bunch of young onions. Split the onions lengthwise and add 1 slice of bacon and 1 cup fresh green peas. Add 3-4 cup boiling water and boil till the onions and peas are tender. Add more water if necessary. Remove the bacon, season to taste with salt and pepper. The liquid should be cooked almost away. A white sauce may be added to this recipe if you desire a creamed dish.

Stuffed Green Peppers.

2 green peppers
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup of milk
1-3 cup cheese
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon chopped onion

Tomatoes on the Half Shell.

Have large, firm, meaty tomatoes, cut them crosswise without peeling, then brush the cut surface with melted butter, sprinkle with chopped green pepper and parsley and a little onion. Bake in a hot oven till tender and the tops nicely browned.

Potato Custard.

Pare and grate four white potatoes into a quart of milk. Beat four eggs and add three-quarters of a cup of granulated sugar beating it all the while. Stir in half a teaspoon of salt, cinnamon and a quarter of a teaspoon of grated nutmeg and the grated rind of half a lemon. When well mixed turn into the milk, mix thoroughly, then pour into a buttered baking dish or custard cups set in a shallow pan partly filled with lukewarm water. Place in a moderate oven and bake till the custards are set and a knife inserted in the center comes out clean and dry. Cool and top with whipped cream just before serving.

Pecan Pie.

A pie in name only.
3 eggs
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup sugar
1 cup graham cracker crumbs
1-2 cup pecan meats
Separate eggs and beat the yolks until lemon-colored, adding baking powder and sugar gradually. Then stir in crumbs and mix in chopped pecan meats (other nuts may be used) and fold in stiffly beaten whites. Spread on deep pie plate and bake at 350° for 20 minutes. When cool, cut in pie wedges and serve with sweetened whipped cream. Be sure pan is deep enough to allow the mixture to rise. Serves six to eight.

Fruit Salad.

Put 1 beaten egg in double boiler, add 2 tablespoons pure vinegar and 2 tablespoons sugar and stir constantly till thick and smooth. Cool and fold in 1-2 cup whipped cream and 1 cup white cherries, cup pineapple, 1 cup marshmallows and 1 orange. Place in a mold and set in refrigerator (not in freezing compartment). Let stand several hours. Serve in nests of crisp lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise or whipped cream.

Fresh Relishes.

1. Select small young onions, remove the shoots and the green tops to within two inches of the bulb; shred the bulb with four lengthwise cuts and place the onions in cold water to crisp.
2. To make radish roses, clean the radishes, leaving on a small green leaf for a handle. Cut off the root ends. Slice the red sides from the root end up with five cuts to form petals. Place in ice water to blossom.
3. To make cucumber sticks, peel long cucumbers and cut in eighths, lengthwise. Cut these in halves and crisp in cold water.

Winside Autobiographies Contain Many Interesting Bits Of News

A great deal, or a very little, can happen in one's first 12 or 13 years. It all depends upon the viewpoint. Certain it is that youngsters of the present day get a pretty good start on living by the time they are finishing grade school—they are entering into things with a zest which belongs to the more formative years, and later is replaced by cool reason and diminished enjoyment. A glance over autobiographies written by eighth graders in Miss Gladys Mettleson's room at Winside school gives one interesting sidelights on this new generation of ours, and brings to light many interesting facts about folks we all know.

Donald and Pearl Jugel decorated their autobiographies with cunning baby pictures taken in a highly ornate wicker chair—much more charming than bancroft. Donald gives a fair near Bancroft as his birthplace. His most vivid memories are of visiting an uncle's ranch at Fairfax, S. D., riding horses and driving home the cows. Donald likes fishing and enjoys "making all his hobbies, and hoping best of things with his hands," which has landed him the ambition to be a contracting engineer when he grows up. His sister, Pearl, weighed just 2 1/4 pounds at birth, but she's a healthy lass now. Pearl was also born near Bancroft. One day her mother left Pearl and Earl in the house alone and the youngsters found a supply of eggs in the pantry. When Mrs. Richard Jugel returned little Pearl was sitting in the middle of the floor while her brother was industriously breaking eggs over her head. What Mrs. Jugel did is not recorded. In 1920 Earl died and was buried in Bancroft cemetery. The Jugels have lived in Winside since 1928. Pearl recalls an eventful trip to Bonesteel, S. D., in 1927, when Niobrara Falls and a petrified rock cave were visited, and the visitors walked over Twin Buttes and found these covered with thick grass, flowers, cactus and marked by numerous rock caves. Pearl plans to wear the stiff, starched uniform of a nurse when she is a bit older.

Native Winsider.

Betty Witte is a native of Winside, no dispute, for she was born on a farm just to the east. She tells of going to Grand Island for Decoration day and her great grandmother returning home with them. During her visit the great grandmother lost her wedding ring and promised a quarter to Betty if she found it. One can well believe that Betty made an exhaustive hunt, but the great grandmother found it herself in the yard. Betty took county examinations this year and passed every one so she got a dime.

Shirley Loeb sack was also born at Winside, in her grandmother's house. She tells of attending a rodeo at Winner, S. D., on Fourth of July when thrilling races and fireworks were seen—but most vivid impression on the small girl was made by swarms of mosquitoes which swayed away on the merry-makers. She also remembers a trip to Yankton, S. D., when the peonies were a-bloom, and the state hospital was visited. A trip to Elmfield brought view of the river banks, devil's nest and maiden's leap. One side of the maiden's leap was liberally carved with names, and they saw a Winside man's name scratched there. Following an old Indian trail they reached the Niobrara river and found safety and swift. Shirley won out in the local spelling contest and went to Wayne contest, placing second.

Burns Fence Posts.

A round-faced, smiling babe with snowy white embroidered dress has the same expression as the tall Lester Gottsch of today. Lester was born near Winside. He admits to being a very fat baby, gaining two pounds every week and soon tipping the scales at 25. Lester has a fondness for fishing. He also has a fondness for breaking farm machines and tools, according to his own admission. Recently he burned along the farm fence line to clear it of thistles and burned the thistles well enough, but took the fence posts too. All of which called for new posts and plenty of labor.

Margaret Miller was born to the Wilson Millers near Carroll, and according to her family, "didn't do anything cute or funny," which is most disappointing when one is writing a life history. She visited school with her brothers several times before starting in earnest, and candidly states that she liked school when she couldn't go, but when she had to go, she didn't.

Says Theo Witte, whose smiling snapshot tops her booklet, "Up to the present time my life has been rather uneventful." She was born to the Jesse Wittes at Winside city. While her father traveled for a brush company, Mrs. Witte and Theo accompanied him on many trips. After her father became postmaster the post office held great fascination for the small girl and she vividly recollects being tied to the leg of the sorting table when her mother left her in Mr. Witte's care, and she was interested in traveling out to the street. When 5 years old, Theo visited in Omaha and was taken out to Fort Crook and Bellevue to see the ferry boats on the Missouri. After eating lunch the little girl spied ferry boats chugging up the river and a woman loaned her "spy glasses" so she could see them close. And now she looks and looked and looked, trying to spot the fairies which were certain to be on board! While attending school in another town, she had a teacher named Miss Evans who "reminded her of people in Uncle Tom's Cabin" but she doesn't tell which one! Theo placed second in local declamatory contest and was sent to the Wayne competition last year. Again this year she placed second in declamatory and went to Wayne, this being decidedly worthwhile for she "got some new friends out of the contest from Wayne and Laurel."

The blonde head of Mildred Christensen greets one from her booklet. Born in Winside, Mildred spent only two years there before going to Minnesota to live until ten. Camping at Malac's lake for a Fourth of July, the Christensens slept out in the open tents and cooked their meals on a stone. The lake was huge. One day they spied Indians playing ball and their squaws sitting about with paposes strapped on their backs. The squaws chewed tobacco. When the white folks threw in money, the Indians would dance their tribal dances, and once they made Helen Louise Christensen do the Charleston for them.

Pilger was Twila Ruth Katz's birthplace, and she later lived at Norfolk, then came on to Winside. One day, little Twila and Bob Siman decided to have a parade—Bob wore Twila's dress and she put on his suit. It was lots of fun till it came time to trade back, then they couldn't get Bob's dress off

A WORD OF KINDNESS

When you hear a hard luck story
Pray keep it to yourself -
Or if you hear a bit of scandal
Just put it on the shelf.

If perchance you have a message
That would bring the blush of shame
To a weary work-worn brother—
That would snitch his honest name—

Then forget it—do it quickly—
Nor ever let such thought
From your mouth be torn asunder
Or from your soul be wrought.

But if perchance a word of kindness
You may have a chance to give,
Say it now and say it quickly
That it may the longer live.

Here's real Economy!

"I have driven my 1934 Pontiac 6116 miles. I want to inform you how well-satisfied I am with it. It has speed, power, comfort, acceleration, smoothness, roadability, and ease of handling. From an economy standpoint it may interest you to know I enjoy about seventeen miles to the gallon. I drive fast most all the time and the car is still too new to tell what the final gas mileage consumption will be. You will recall that I was going to buy a Six but am glad I didn't, for I can see that this car will be just as economical to drive."
