DAMAGE ACTIONS FILED IN COURT

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Wallace Who Were Hurt in Car Mishap Seek Sum.

Actions seeking damages from the Plymouth Motor Corporation, a corporation in Detroit, Mich., were filed in district court May 26 by Glenn Wallace and Kathryn Wallace, husband and wife, the former asking $12,500 and the latter $15,800 for injuries sustained in a car accident April 30, 1934, on highway No. 35 three and a half miles east of Wakefield.

Both petitioners state that the company's car, driven by H. C. Goodchild, and the Wallace machine collided on top of a hill. The Wallaces charge that defendant's representative, Mr. Goodchild, was negligent and careless in driving. They charge that he was on the wrong side of the road, that he was driving at an excessive speed, that the defendant's car was not under control, that defendant failed to observe condition of the highway, that he failed to observe rights of others and that he was careless.

Mr. Wallace, 45, claims he is permanently injured as his skull was fractured, vision of one eye impaired, his chest crushed, legs, arms and hands cut and bruised and his neck was wrenched and twisted. For his permanent injuries he asks $12,000. For doctor bills he asks $850, a total of $12,850.

Kathryn Wallace, 43, alleges that she is permanently injured. Her back was wrenched, twisted and broken, she was cut and bruised on the head, legs, arms and hands, one side and her chest were cut, and she is compelled to lie on her back for many weeks, she charges. For her injuries Mrs. Wallace seeks $15,000. She asks $600 for doctor and hospital bills and $200 for the car which was demolished. The total is $16,800.

C. H. Hendrickson is attorney for the plaintiffs.

YOUTH BOUND TO DISTRICT COURT IN MURDER CASE

Ronald Young Pleads Not Guilty To Charges In Death Of Girl.

WITNESSES ON STAND

Ronald Young will be tried in district court on charges of second degree murder and cutting with intent to kill, wound or maim. This ruled Judge J. M. Cherry of county court late Monday afternoon, following six hours of testimony and deliberation, during which details of the death and near-death of two college students were probed. In binding Ronald over for trial in connection with the death of Nancyann Alford, court ruled that it made no difference if Ronald actually killed the young woman, whether he aided and abetted her in suicide, or whether a suicide pact was carried out with Ronald aiding her. If he is guilty of any one of these acts, then he is guilty of the crime of murder.

Second degree murder carries sentence of 10 years to life, and cutting with intent to kill, wound or maim has one to 20 year penalty. Calm and emotionless, Ronald heard the court's ruling and marched from the court room in company with officials and his father, to be housed in county jail awaiting trial. This may be in June but there is probability that the trial will not take place till fall. Because one of the charges is murder, bail will not be permitted. Only persons accused of murder or treason are denied bail.

Ronald was represented by three attorneys, Fred S. Berry, H. E. Sieman and C. H. Hendrickson. County Attorney H. D. Addison prosecuted. Dr. L. B. Young was at his son's side, and Charles Reese Alford, Leon Alford and William Laurence Brown, the father, brother and husband of the dead girl, were seated across the room. By 10 o'clock that morning when court was called to order, the room was packed with witnesses and spectators. Throughout the long and hot session men and women stood in the entrance room straining to hear the testimony.

TWELVE HOUR DAY FOR ONE DOLLAR FURNISHED START

B. O. VonSeggern, an old-timer of northeast Nebraska, is like many others who cannot understand the incongruities of these times. When he was a young man he worked twelve hours for $1, and he was glad to get it. Besides, he was able to save some of his earnings. It is true that he did not have many luxuries, did not dress in costly fashion, nor did he do any joy riding. The Fourth of July and Christmas were the year's main attractions, and he enjoyed both in a modest and inexpensive way. While Mr. VonSeggern does not see the necessity in this day for the same energy and frugality which he and others of his youth practiced, he cannot reconcile a disposition to get something for little or nothing with the old-time rule of sink or swim, survive or perish, according to individual pluck. While he may not have enjoyed as many privileges as the youth of today, he builted securely and he has a good deal to show for his thrift.

GRISWOLD GIVES MEMORIAL TALK

Civil War Veterans Honored At Services Wednesday In Gay Theatre.

"Let us resolve to render the high type of service given by Civil war men and other veterans," urged Dwight Griswold of Gordon, former state Legion commander and candidate for governor, in addressing a good-sized audience on Memorial day at the Gay theatre.

"On this sacred occasion we pay tribute to men who made this nation great," the speaker continued. Heroes of 70 years ago, Grant and Sherman and their soldiers come to mind first on Memorial day. Only a few thousand remain. John L. Logan it was who suggested setting aside a day for honoring the departed. The army of good citizens at home, womanhood, suffered the same, Mr. Griswold added, and their part should not be forgotten. Memorial day should not be sad—pride for what those gone before have done. These soldiers have never let the American flag touch the ground. Because of them let us dedicate our lives to a greater service.

Based On Integrity

IN the course of answering charges against business, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of Westinghouse, said this: "A study of the basic quality of all enduring business will disclose that it is based on integrity." The country must have prosperous industries in order to assure employment, pay taxes and consume raw materials.

Henry L. Harriman, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, answering the complaint that sixty per cent of the wealth of the nation was owned by two per cent of its people, explained that in 1929, out of a "total of $85,000,000,000, $52,000,000,000 was distributed in the form of wages and salaries, $12,000,000,000 went to agriculture, $10,000,000,000 was distributed to professional men and to the millions of workers who are rendering various forms of personal service, and that only $11,000,000,000 was paid out or earned as a return on capital."

THE republicans declared a moratorium on party politics as soon as the presidential election was over in 1932, and gave attentive ears and helpful hands to proposed policies in the hope of speeding recovery.

Creosote Is Good In Controlling Bugs

The use of creosote or gas tar barrier has proved best for the control of chinch bugs, Wayne county farmers were reminded this week by Agricultural Agent G. H. Liggett.

In making the barrier to stop the bugs from entering the cornfields, a ridge should be thrown up with a plow, leaving a deep furrow on the side from which the bugs are coming. This is sometimes then dragged with a log. The surface should be smoothed to free it from clods and trash.

Very few bugs will cross the line of creosote, but in traveling along they will fall into the holes which should be kept well dusted to prevent the trapped bugs from crawling out.

It is evident that no earthly power can regulate agricultural production. Manufacturing may be increased or decreased according to demand, but production that depends on nature cannot be so handled.

Demand for Profits Is Basic. (Omaha Journal-Stockman) One recently promulgated theory that never got very far with thinking people is the claim that the desire for profits in industry, business and agriculture should be subordinated to the duty of taking care of the needy and looking after the interests of the community first.

The hope of profit is the incentive without which no one would risk capital. And if nothing were ventured in business, there would be nothing gained—no national or social gain, nothing but stagnation.

Under the new deal or the old deal, regardless of who is the President of the United States, you are your own dictator.

their liberality that makes possible the opportunity for visionaries to denounce them and demand the abolition of all profit.

The Drouth. Lincoln Journal: Secretary Wallace fears that drouth will cut the wheat crop sharply.

The widespread drouth is of no particular comfort to the producer even though it may mean higher prices. And it is certainly no comfort to the consumer under any circumstance.

The government and its various agencies have undertaken at great expense to limit production of farm products of all kinds so that the demand will force a favorable price.

The new day is dawning for you high school graduates. You may continue your education in college or strike out in life tomorrow.

The sun is shining on you young men and women today. What will you do? Where will you lead? Will you catch "The American Spirit"?

To us there is something especially appealing in the complaint of an ex-convict that he was persecuted by society even after he had reformed and settled down as a bootlegger.

Forty-fifth annual state convention of P. E. O. has drawn to a close this week many interesting personalities and women prominent in social, civic and political affairs of their communities. Within 65 short years this unique organization for women has grown to impressive numbers and to position of influence and distinction. The foundations of the sisterhood, numbering today about 52,000 women, were laid by a group of seven girls in the Iowa Wesleyan college at Mount Pleasant. Although a few "secret societies" for women had been in existence since 1851, the first national sorority was founded at I. C. at Monmouth, Ill., in 1867. Then came P. E. O. in 1869. In course of time, the college sorority came to be a Greek letter institution, and P. E. O. being unwilling to change its English letters to Greek and to confine its chapters to the campus, became a city institution. But, by birth and tradition, by its laws and policies, and by its type of membership, it is essentially a sorority. Years ago it was called "a sorority which had gone afire," and this definition well fits it today.

What motivated these seven young women to found this sorority? It was more than a social gesture—it was rebellion against the low standard required of women of their generation. Women of the early seventies and eighties were hampered by narrowing restrictions. They had no public liberty, no public influence. Here and there women who were strong minded enough to come out into the open and fight for their rights, but these were ignored and ridiculed. "Women's place is in the home" was the general opinion. Women were just being admitted to the colleges and an organization of women was almost unprecedented. In organizing P. E. O. these young women were pioneering in the truest sense of the word.

In forming their constitution and their ritual, these founders chose the star as their emblem, and the yellow marguerite as their flower. They exhibited their pins to schoolmates in an interesting way. Having heard that the other sorority, the I. C.'s, were going to march to chapel wearing blue calico dresses made after the same fashion, they hurried to fashion white calico aprons with a black star. On the bib was the shining P. E. O. star. Crowding into a little room near the chapel door, the seven girls stepped into chapel just ahead of their rivals and introduced their badge to classmates, and to the world.

The first B. I. L. party was given the second year following and was called a P. E. O. Sideral Soiree. Now husbands of P. E. O.'s share in many of the chapter social affairs. Seminars in Vogue. You've heard much of the "female seminaries" of the eighties when going east to school was a breath-taking adventure for a fortunate few. No modern bride approached the altar with greater preparation than the lass who prepared for seminary life. "Six of everything" was the usual rule, and the sewing woman would be called in, percale, a good stout weave, bought by the bolt, and lace, embroidered edging and rick rack braid selected. Tucks and feather-stitching were lavished upon the numerous white garments which made up the lingerie of the young lady of fashion. And how she would thrill to the nightgowns with enormous puffed sleeves to the wrists and dashing blue bows at the high collar. Then there were embroidered flannel petticoats, and perhaps a precious shining black taffeta underskirt, flounced to waist, to wear on special occasions when the everyday woollens were discarded. Probably our young lady longed for a bustle—one of crinoline and whale bone which waved as she walked, and collapsed gracefully when she sank carefully into a chair.

Two navy blue serges were correct for a girl in her teens, and these probably hung to the tops of her high button boots. An evening gown would be of chocolate brown cashmere with overskirt looped up behind, or maybe of green plaid poplin.

J. E. Brittain Gives Memorial Address
 J. E. Brittain, city attorney, was speaker at Kiwanis club Monday noon, taking patriotism as his subject. He emphasized the need of patriotism at present and advocated adherence towards our democratic form of government, warning against swinging to a "silver-shirt" dictatorship, "black shirt" or "red shirt" dictatorship, or any other form of absolute rule. He believes our democracy has given us much, and still has much to offer us—that it should be allowed to endure. The new deal should be recognized as an emergency measure said the speaker, and is equivalent to a war measure. In war times the president has extra powers, and this was fully as critical a period. These new deal innovations need not necessarily continue after the emergency is past.
 A. J. Hyatt and R. P. Williams, Wayne's only Civil war veterans, were guests of the club for the Memorial program. The two and Fred Blair sang "Marching Through Georgia" together, and Mr. Blair led the members in singing special patriotic songs.

 When three young folks were killed and two injured Tuesday afternoon in a gasoline explosion in Sioux City, Willard Witte of Wayne, who happened to be walking near scene of the accident, helped in placing two girls in ambulances and in removing bodies of two girls and a boy who were burned. The car in which the five students rode, crashed into a filling station pillar and burst into flames. Bonnie Thomas, Bert Smith and Meredith Hunter lost their lives. Wanda Long and Phyllis Nelson were injured. Mrs. Witte and baby went with Mr. Witte to visit Mrs. R. J. Reister and were not with him when he passed the scene.

Greater Charges Graduates
With Finding New And Sound Plan Of Life.

Clad in sombre, flowing robes and academic caps, 185 young men and women marched up campus hill Thursday morning to take formal leave of their college life, and to receive the farewell and the commendation of faculty assembled.

Forming in two long lines, the processions wound slowly up the Administration entrance, tuning to music after passing the college band and marching into the auditorium which was filled with spectators. Dr. U. S. Conn and Dean H. H. Hahn led the marchers, the faculty followed wearing robes with hoods denoting their degrees and diploma matters, four-year graduates were next, and two-year diploma candidates brought up the rear.

Faculty and guest speakers occupied the stage, and candidates took places in the center section reserved for them. Following an overture by the Little Symphony orchestra, directed by Prof. John R. Keith, Rev. H. C. Caspey delivered the invocation and a piano number was played by Prof. Albert G. Carlson. Dr. Conn introduced speaker of the day, C. Petrus Peterson of Lincoln, designating him as a man actively identified with the various interests of Nebraska for many years.

Mr. Peterson spoke with the ease of one accustomed to public address—his message was one of optimism and encouragement to the young folk before him.

"We're living in a critical period and it is not at all improbable that the graduates of Wayne State Teachers college in the year 2034 who go out into the fields of activity will place in the hands of their pupils history books written from the perspective of a century past, and these will open a new chapter with year 1933 or 1934. Perhaps, as the ages go by, pupils of history may even open a new book with this era. If so, it will be because in this period, human relationships are undergoing changes of vast importance. Those who now step forward into the ranks of activity, particularly into the field of education, will be called upon to assume great responsibility because of these changes.

"This is a time of great distrust, a time when many feel that everything is going into ruin. But as one reads history, he finds that there are periods of life on our planet which are glowing seasons, periods when the Almighty plows under the soil and leaves the landscape bleak and forlorn. But we who live here in an agricultural country know that this but heralds the springtime—that we can look forward to a new harvest.

"Only a few of us here have lived to witness before, these things which are now happening—and we can say with confidence that this is only an episode, such as we have known in earlier days." Here he quoted Lincoln's Bixby who derided Nebraska politician's pessimism with the following: "I cannot sing the old songs, my heart is full of we. But I can bow calamity from Hell to Broken Bow."

"Some of us feel this depression has come suddenly like thunder out of a clear sky. But this is not so. In our country we have approached this crisis during the past half century. We have two systems co-existing here in America, the political and the economic. Both have been set to work in the same space with the same people. As long as the majority is satisfied, economic conditions are not of interest, but when economic situation is upset, then we call upon our political system to right it, thus moulding our economics through politics.

FIFTY-FOURTH YEAR

giant mouthfuls of profit, have laid down and died. Others who do not require giant mouthfuls of profit but are content to nibble here and there and travel far and work hard, are thus able to survive and develop.

"But," said the speaker, "there is a problem deeper and more serious than the economic adjustment; it is to find in human life a motivating force as strong as that which motivated human life during the past century, but more worthy."

"I am facing a group whose prime activity will be to supply to the new generation a philosophy of living. If you, as teachers, play your part well you can implant into your life the philosophy that the meaning of human life is not economic but spiritual! If this is done, then we are justified in looking into the future with confidence.

"One cannot read history and not feel that there is an overruling force in the universe which shapes our destinies and is the plan back of all living. So it is impossible to believe that this young republic, with all its energies and ambitions is finishing its role on the stage and is ready to step behind the scenes. Rather, this young republic is called to step to the front of the stage, and all humanity is watching to see how it shall play its part.

"Here in this country, here in our own state in particular, we have a condition which has never before duplicated. As a boy I used to live near Osceola and we would drive about 40 miles from home and be in a German-speaking community, another drive and we'd be among Polish people, and then we'd strike a Bohemian settlement. Here we have the integration of a race of people which promises well for the future of our state. I love to think of the type which will result in future years. These Nebraskans of coming years may inherit the love of liberty which distinguishes the English, the spritely wit of the Irish, the frugality of the Scotch, the vicacity of the French, the German's search for truth, the Italian's love of music, and the inherent qualities of the Scandinavians who sing their love songs in minor key. These boys and girls of the future may well be young gods and goddesses, bright-eyed, clear-visioned, hopeful and strong. And their security depends upon the motivating force which will take place of the one we have discarded.

"Soldiers of life," he challenged his graduating listeners, "go forward into the struggle unafraid! There can be no serious obstacles to the young people you will have in your keeping if you are able to spread a sound philosophy of living. I cannot share the idea that this is a bad time to start living. I'm truly sorry for the boy or girl who started a career a few years earlier and shared in this toboggan. I congratulate you young folks in starting just at the right time. College graduates will be important factors in life of tomorrow—they will constitute the force which will avoid what otherwise might end in disaster."

Dr. Conn commented on the growing tendency among Wayne college students to work towards the four-year degree, in place of the two-year diploma. He announced the names of honor students, made up of the upper 10 percent of senior class, and including Hilda Wasserburger of Montrose, Marie Denkinger of Wayne, Harold Lebons of Lindsay, Nellie Toy of O'Neill, Zola Wilson of Wayne, Don Linn of Carroll, Tom Hilliard of Chicago, and Alice Molzahn of Hay Springs. The Pi Gamma Mu scholarship key awarded to junior with the highest average was presented to Ray Dover of Madison.

In his farewell to the graduates of 1934, Dr. Conn said: "Our thoughts go with you—you have good friends in our faculty, and you want you to feel that this is your educational home. Conditions are definitely better than a year ago. We note this in placing teachers, for teachers are not holding so definitely to positions. They are resigning to continue their studies and for other reasons, thus making room for you. You go with our best wishes and our confidence that you are sufficiently prepared for whatever work you ultimately undertake."

Following presentation of degrees and diplomas, benediction was given by Rev. W. G. Heidenreich.

College Alumni
Are In Reunion

Family Picnic Is Voted For Graduates At Next Year's Homecoming.

Wayne State Teachers College alumni banquet, Wednesday evening last week at the Presbyterian church, was attended by about 100 former students and faculty members. Guests were seated at three tables which were attractive with miniature May poles and irises.

After dinner served by women of the church, Burr Davis, president, welcomed the new class. He introduced Dr. U. S. Conn who extended greetings to alumni, expressing with that more had found it possible to attend. Conditions have kept some from returning, he added. Dr. Conn urged his listeners not to pile the worries to tomorrow—those of today for often those of tomorrow never happen. He told of a trip to the Canadian Rockies and described beauties of animal and plant life that may be seen. These beauties are still there for all who go to view them, he added. Thus it is with sights and values in literature. Each can get the good from them and still not deprive others of the full pleasure. Dr. Conn urged his listeners to turn attention to these higher things, leaving worries of tomorrow until tomorrow comes.

Miss Margaret Schemel, member of the class of 1914, spoke for the class graduating 20 years ago. She and Miss Ardath Conn were present from the class. Miss Schemel said that when she graduated she pledged loyalty and devotion to her alma mater and at each alumni reunion it is a pleasure to renew this pledge. She introduced a motion that next year's reunion be a family picnic for graduates and their families about second week in June, one from each class being appointed to promote attendance. The association voted to plan such a picnic for next year.

None were present from the class of 1924.

Hugo Srb of Dodge, senator and candidate for congress, spoke briefly and expressed appreciation at being present.

William Johnson of Clarkson, responded. He said that "the Wayne State Teachers College and thinks all alumni should be present."

The banquet adjourned in order that alumni might attend the college dramatics play.

Mr. Davis announced officers for next year to be: Miss Mary Kile, president; Donald Anderson, vice president; Miss Arlyn Nelson, secretary; and R. W. Ley, treasurer.

Mrs. Allis Follard of Wayne, gave Memorial Day message for the Wayne Herald radio broadcast Saturday as follows: Memorial day with its sad and sacred associations again is near. This annual flower-service, dedicated to the Grand Army of the Republic, and to the Spanish-American and World war veterans, sprang from the griefed heart of the nation when at the close of the Civil war, the loyal people of both the North and the South paid their tribute of love and respect to the soldier dead by strewing their graves with spring flowers. When another springtime comes, time in its rapid flight will have borne us on till we are 70 years from the close of that great struggle in which thousands of lives were sacrificed to save our country from dismemberment. Time has in a measure healed the sorrow that brought about the observance of Memorial day and left in its place a softened solemnity and pious veneration as each year we inscribe a line upon the book of national remembrance. When on the 30th day of May our grateful citizens make their pilgrimages to the cemetery-shrines of this broad land, there is no hint of war. We gaze in reverence and love at the few remaining veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic and resolve to honor them as long as the last survivor blesses the earth. And when, weary with the march of life, the last one has fallen by the wayside, we know that each succeeding generation on this beautiful day of memories will meet together in the hallowed past and hold communion with our holy dead. Time was when we saw quite a company of Civil war veterans marching in uniform each Memorial day. Now and then there was an empty sleeve or some other grim reminder of the war, but their hearts must have beaten high because of the honor shown them, for one could fancy they were boys again as they stepped to the lively music of a fife and drum corps made up of members of their own post, the same boys who left the plow, the forge, the loom, the shop, the office, the college,—even the sanctuary, to fight their country's battles,—to follow their country's flag. It is to honor such as these, the soldiers of our country's wars who did not hesitate to abandon cherished life-plans when called upon to defend our free institutions, that we observe Memorial day. This unique holiday,—a holiday in the truest sense,—teaches a lesson in patriotism that is without a parallel. Each generation of American youth is thrilled by the solemn music, the rhythmic tramping of feet, the rustling of flags and the services at the soldiers' graves. What American boy of yesterday does not cherish as one of his earliest memories the spectacle of aging war-veterans marching in faded uniforms to cemeteries where flags and bright wreaths set apart the resting place of heroes? Everything combined to make those memories endure. There was the spell of band music and the sharp staccato of rifle volleys fired in the last salute, the clear notes of the bugle sounding "taps," the tribute of speakers testifying that the dead have not died in vain,—and the hush of prayer. There was also the spell of the magic interlude of the seasons—the golden interval between spring and summer when trees and plants are wonderful in leaf and blossom, and the soft wind wafts the scent of warm earth and the perfume of flowers. Wherever he may have lived in boyhood, every American has in his soul something that was born in it or a long past Memorial day, something which responds now as soldiers march again, and bands play—and makes him doff his hat as the flag goes by. And so Memorial day will continue its appeal as the years pass: It has been called the Easter of American patriotism. It is a day when thoughts of sordid care recede and American citizens dismiss apprehensions for the future. One is conscious of receiving a direct benefit from a proper observance of the day. It brings a realization that no heroic sacrifice is ever lost.

that the characters of men are molded and inspired by what their fathers have done; that, treasured up in American souls are all the unconscious influences of the great names of our country's history,—from Plymouth Rock to Bunker Hill,—from Gettysburg to Santiago and the Argonne. American citizens of today can best show their gratitude for these sacrifices so valiantly made by pre-empting their free institutions and by striving earnestly to serve humanity by solving the social and economic problems of our day, always endeavoring to implant in the minds of our youth the ideal of universal peace and the firm conviction that the main-springs of life are spiritual and not material. This can best be done through the public schools. Popular education sustains the Republic. Books are better than bayonets. Truth is mightier than the sword. The strongest fortresses are the school houses. The mightiest standing army in the world is the great host of American school children. Out in the world tomorrow, they will think for themselves, govern themselves, and how to no sceptre except the sceptre of truth. Let us not only teach our boys and girls the facts of American history but let us inspire them with the spirit of American institutions and with the realization that it is a high honor to be able to say "I am an American Citizen."

Better THAN YOU CLAIMED. "Your claims for it were very modest," writes Harold R. Boles of Davenport, Iowa, about his 1934 Pontiac Eight Sedan. Mr. Boles is but one of hundreds who have written their praises of the new Pontiac Eight. Read what others say: The City of Seattle, Department of Public Works. I have never owned a car that handles easier than any other car I have owned. The economy of operation of the Pontiac is something I believe it to be the most economical car I have ever owned.
