ADOPT BUDGET FOR CITY NEEDS

Curb Pump Ordinance Will Be Revisited And Taken Up Next Session.

Appropriation ordinance providing funds to operate the city during the fiscal year beginning May 1, 1934, was passed by city council at Tuesday evening's meeting, and totals $162,400.

Distribution of the funds is as follows: From light fund for purpose of operating, maintaining and extending the electric light plant, $38,000; from general fund for general purposes, $15,000; from sewer fund for maintaining and repairing sewers, $1,200; from park fund to maintain parks, $2,000; from general fund to repair, maintain and improve streets and alleys, $10,000; from library fund to maintain library, $3,000; from bonds fund to pay interest and create sinking fund for payment of bonds, $30,000; from fire fund for maintaining fire department and purchasing equipment, $2,000; from water fund to operate, maintain and improve water works, $12,000; from municipal highway fund to improve and repair roads leading to the city, $1,200; from amusement fund to establish and maintain musical organizations of the city, $2,000; from municipal auditorium fund to purchase lot and erect a new auditorium, $45,000.

Fred Ellis was chosen from among 23 applicants to succeed Everett Hogewald in taking care of the city dump. This pays $40 monthly.

Ordinance No. 379, providing for elimination of all curb pumps, was voted down and the city attorney instructed to draft a new ordinance which would provide for a time limit of six months to a year before ruling goes into effect. As proposed Tuesday evening, the ordinance would remove curb pumps and any vending from the streets at once. It designated that all space between the lot line and curb line is sidewalk space and shall not be used for any private commercial vending or for the displaying of any merchandise, wares or movable signs, of any description. Show cases, display cases containing goods, wares and merchandise of any nature and projecting beyond the lot line and into sidewalk space, are prohibited.

Provision was made that when a building was being erected or remodeled, in case of fire or storm, an emergency permit be declared by the council and permission granted to use the sidewalk space for a period not exceeding 30 days. Violation of the ordinance would mean a fine of not over $100. Council agreed that if the ordinance as drafted, were to go into effect at once, it would mean hardships to men having curb pump properties under lease. If the ordinance did not go into effect for six months or a year, those operating pumps would have ample time to make new arrangements and to complete their leases. The revised ordinance will be taken up next meeting.

A large delegation of gas dealers was present, represented by Attorney H. E. Sيمان. W. C. Coryell was the only operator of a curb pump attending. Permit to move the house on lot purchased for the telephone company's new building, was granted to Wilbur Spahr who had bought the building. He will place it on his property at Sixth and Window streets, sharing lot with the house occupied by Albert Berry.

All councilmen were present, also Mayor Martin Ringer, City Clerk Walter Bressler, and City Attorney J. E. Brittain.

UNEMPLOYED FOR WAYNE COUNTY IS SHOWN BY RECORD

TAKING figures from the national reemployment headquarters at Norfolk, the Daily News of that city reports that Wayne county has a total of 1,102 persons—946 men and 156 women—listed as unemployed. The record shows 323 farmers and 216 farm hands unemployed. These individuals constitute nearly one-half of the total, and idle acres, following the government's reduction plan, may be the explanation. Manifestly, fewer men are needed to farm fewer acres. The list reports out of work 269 who are adapted to construction work. Unemployed Wayne county persons in other lines are listed as follows: Commercial, 8 men and 36 women; domestic, 3 men and 101 women; professional, 16 men and 19 women; transportation, 70 men; trade, 11 men; miscellaneous, 11 men. Nineteen are listed without expressing aptitude for anything in particular. Wayne county towns have reported unemployed as follows: Wayne, 319 men, 79 women; Altona, 3 men; Carroll, 184 men, 39 women; Sholes, 23 men; Winside, 232 men, 31 women; Hoskins, 45 men, 6 women.

EXPERT BABSON'S OPTIMISM HELPED BY RECENT RAINS

ALWAYS optimistic, Roger W. Babson, expert economist, reported the first of the week that business was ten per cent above a year ago and twenty per cent below normal. He mentions the southern states as more prosperous than other sections, due no doubt to the distribution of funds in carrying out the federal cotton reduction program. Retailers in the north will agree with Babson that business is better—especially since the rain—that it was a year ago, and collections have improved. People buy more liberally, but more carefully, and they are fast developing the habit of paying cash and avoiding burdensome obligations. Until the drought was broken last week by soaking rains, people in the stricken area could not smile with Babson nor could they follow the economy sage in feeling happy over the prospect. But since nature has come to the rescue and has put new life into vegetation, they will be inclined to share Babson's optimism. Corn is creeping out of the ground, pastures and hay lands are being revived, and even small grain, not long ago considered hopeless, is said to give considerable promise. Good crops are necessary to enliven spirits and inspire confidence.

Rulings Are Made On Contract Land

Fodder Corn Can Not Be Planted On Acres Out Of Production.

As many misunderstand the use of contracted acres... Agricultural Agent C. H. Liggett explains that corn, alfalfa, sorgho, Grotaria, Pteris, Legari, all the milos and all the kafirs cannot be planted on contracted farm acres.

The hog numbers are reduced a small percentage to bring the total figures for the county in line with quotas. If a man turned in figures for 100 acres of corn and 100 head of hogs as his base, his benefit payments would be about $200 on corn and $375 on hogs for the reduction of 20 to 30 percent on corn and 25 percent on hogs marketed.

In the state drought relief work, Mr. Liggett has word that purchase of cattle would be made for relief of farmers who have no feed to carry them. Condemned animals would bring $12 for 2-year-olds and over, $10 for year-olds and $4 for younger stuff. Edible animals would bring $13 to $20 for 2-year-olds, 11 to $16 for yearlings and $5 to $8 for younger ones.

Tugwell Is Questioned PROF. Rexford G. Tugwell, former Columbia professor, was the central figure in a senate hearing this week incident to his confirmation as undersecretary of agriculture. More time was given to trying to find out his ideas of government than to learn his knowledge or experience in regard to agriculture. He admitted that he knew something about farming, but disclaimed any desire to saddle on this country the "blueprint" planning enforced in Russia.

The professor's attention was called to a speech he made in 1931 when he said "fundamental changes of attitude, new disciplines, revised legal structures, unaccustomed limitations on activity" are necessary if planning is to be followed. Tugwell explained that he was not in favor of planning that conformed to the Russian blueprint, but believed in the steps taken by the Washington administration. Speaking of "explosive possibilities," quoted from his speech of 1931, Tugwell said he thought "the situation in 1931 had explosive possibilities." He added: "The government was not doing enough to meet its problems." The professor will perhaps remember that the administration in 1931 was overwhelmed by opposition within and without the party in power, and that there was a deliberate attempt to discredit and defeat every constructive measure undertaken.

Prof. Tugwell is apparently modifying his socialistic tendencies, doubtless finding out from his one year's experience in public service that planning that would work in Russia would not work here.

Nature IN a speech at Bismark, S. D., recently, Secretary Wallace made plain his opinion of nature's administration of the weather, alluding to it as crude and ruthless. Faulty as human methods may be, pointed out the secretary, they are ahead of nature's, and he might have strengthened his position of superiority by calling attention to the comparative experience of each—nature's running back beyond memory of Adam and man's covering only about a year. Fully to appreciate the contrast between the achievements of nature and those of the agricultural department at Washington one must understand that nature got its start ages ago and has kept going ever since, whereas this latest superseding crop-regulating instrumentality has been functioning but a brief twelvemonth. Secretary Wallace accepts nature's old-fashioned crudity—surprising lack of finesse—as ground not only to reduce production when advisable, but to store surpluses for use when shortages prove inevitable. The way nature has bungled lately leads the secretary to be well pleased with his department's role in measuring out production according to needs. He sees duties multiplied to encompass more than reduction. They mean taking over the business of nature in the matter of crop regulation—sometimes curtailment, sometimes conservation.

Middle COURSE WILLIAM Allen White, noted Emporia, Kansas, editor, addressing the graduating class of the University of Kansas, said we must either choose between two tyrannies—plutocrats or politicians—or renew the old battle for freedom. White evidently means that in order to preserve traditional American liberties we must lean neither too far to the left nor too far to the right. White was graduated from the high school of El Dorado, Kansas, in 1884, and sweeping memory through the intervening half century, he emphasized tasks ahead with this stimulating—if not rosy—conclusion: "We have dumped at the portals of your life one of the most elaborate, metallic scrapheaps the history of civilization has recorded. Take it from the class of 1884 with our felicitous condolences."

In criticizing administration policies there is a disposition to separate the president from responsibility. In pointing out weakness in a government experiment or in the mental twist of one of the professorial satellites, it is deemed polite to detach the president and get him out of the way of having his dignity disturbed or his feelings hurt. As a matter of fact, however, he appointed the federal administrators and endorsed the policies which they have carried out. Thus, how long can kindly imagination screen the chief executive's judgment when criticisms touching administration experiments are offered?

The Fairbury News quotes Prof. Tugwell as expressing surprise that anyone did not realize that "something more than an ordinary presidential election took place in 1932," and then the News, referring to the usual party pledge of tax reduction and of simplified government, wants the professor to clarify his statement—make plain what the intention was in 1932 or is now. In view of party platforms, how could people know they were voting for a series of experiments, all of them hugely expensive, and some of them further gumming up private affairs, already considerably gummed up by the economic paralysis?

Garet Garrett says socialism is the foundation of communism, fascism and nazism. As the ideals of socialism gain approval, the mailed fist of a Stalin or Mussolini or Hitler comes along and takes over the show. Thus, despotic leaders have the practical plans which visionary socialists lack, and they turn the Utopia of which socialists dream, into a system of conscienceless force. Socialists start with pleasing theories and wind up bearing yokes as intolerable as any fastened to the necks of the serfs of the middle ages.

Almost hackneyed is the excuse that government experiments should be accepted in the absence of better policies. But a sick patient wouldn't be dosed with a variety of conflicting remedies in the hope of speeding recovery. The patient wouldn't be required to continue the same medicine if more harm than good were apparent. In truth, the patient might make greater haste in recapturing health by discarding all artificial restoratives and letting nature take its course and do the healing.

Reorganization of the units of the republican party is sensibly following the middle course in economic thought. Mossbackism that closes eyes to progress, and radicalism that treats fundamentals with dangerous license find equal resistance in the adoption of sound and forward-looking principles. Stripped of barnacles and safeguarded against quackery, the reconstructed party should be made to deserve confidence and win leadership.

We have tried in vain to reconcile painted lips and painted fingernails—restricted to girls—and the little hirsute collection allowed to spring up under the nose—restricted to boys—with ideas of comeliness and good sense. Our reaction of abhorrence rather than delight may be due to tardy progress in appreciation of the best in style.

Government representatives should not be held responsible for the orders which they are required to follow. They are acting as agents and have no choice in the matter of handling instructions.

A World-Herald representative braving a visit to Omaha's nudist camp on the Elkhorn river, reports that the nudists wear clothes. Then why are they called nudists?

A Research Conclusion. Lincoln Journal: A Northwestern university professor of psychology makes it known that children do not like fairy tales, thus differing greatly from adults, whom the professor says do like such tales. And discussing likes and dislikes a confession may be wrung from at least one adult that he values fairy tales at a higher rate than he does an educator who says children do not like them. And this valuation is arrived at after conveying one flock, his own children, thru the fairy story age, watching their enjoyment, reactions and talents in imagination, and observing adults before, at the same time, and in the interim between children and grandchildren. That adult is now watching grandchildren in the joy time of life, hearing fairy stories read, reading the stories themselves and inventing bigger and better stories than adult authors ever wrote.

One is inclined to wonder how some men can make careful, searching investigations, following the approved technique of survey experts and arrive at conclusions so palpably insupportable. Only the child, touched lightly as yet by doubt, with powers of analysis and critical examination yet undeveloped, can enjoy the fantasies and miracles that stand out in exalted colors in the pictures of a make believe world. The doubting adult may enjoy the art of the author but to enjoy the stories themselves as he did in childhood requires too much forgetfulness of the real.

Errors in Corn-Hog Statements. Omaha Journal-Stockman: Officials of the AAA are delaying corn-hog bonus payments to Nebraska farmers on the ground that these farmers, in their sworn statements of hog production, have reported a million more hogs than were actually produced. Condescendingly the officials say these errors may have been attributable to poor bookkeeping by farmers. One of the chief errors, declare the officials, is that farmers include pigs farrowing before December 1, 1931, which were marketed with the 1931 spring pigs, in computing their yearly production.

Another is that farmers who purchase feeder pigs include these in their production, whereas the AAA regulations specify only pigs farrowed and raised on the farm during the two-year period may be used in figuring the base production.

The third common error is that hold-over animals, such as brood sows, are marketed with the next year's crop and are improperly included in the basic figures. Farmers must acknowledge that they are poor bookkeepers, in fact most of them keep no books at all, so that it is almost impossible to make anything like accurate, detailed replies to long and complicated questionnaires contained in the contract. As one farmer put it, "a Philadelphia lawyer couldn't understand the thing."

There's another angle to the case. Government experts have not always been entirely reliable in their farm production figures. Isn't it just possible that the experts have been wrong and the farmers telling the truth about their grain acreage and their hog production?

OPINIONS. People wield more influence in the things they say than they think they do. A man sometimes talks just to keep up a conversation, expressing an opinion based on hastily and indifferently reached conclusions. One may appraise a fellow's caliber or work with but superficial consideration, and yet his idea may have far-reaching and determining influence. One should exercise greatest care in offering an opinion if another's future is involved. It is easy to condemn in a general way and to inciteable harm. It is just as easy to find good qualities, and thus make pathways smoother and loads easier. Often a faulty opinion is ventured as a guess to cover lack of facts and to make a pretense of wisdom. It is best to guard the tongue's capers—avoid pronouncing judgment without proof. If one has an unfavorable opinion whose expression serves no good purpose it ought to be kept out of circulation.

in the attainments of their children. First essentials are acquired in the grades of the rural schools, and these essentials supply the foundation for future knowledge and experience. We congratulate these young persons, and urge them to build steadily on the foundation which they have laid. Trained intelligence counts in whatever one undertakes, and it is a possession which cannot be lost through careless speculation. Let the worthy pride of parents inspire their children to go on and on in the acquisition of knowledge—in the preparation to live more useful and more contented lives.

Receive Figures On County Quota

Wayne county corn-hog quotas received from Lincoln are quite satisfactory to the county allotment committee, Agricultural Agent C. H. Liggett reports. The average hog numbers turned in by farmers on their contracts amounted to 95,932 and this number was reduced by the state board of review to 88,636. This means it will be necessary for the allotment committee to remove from farmers two-year figures 14,596 head. While this may sound like a considerable amount of hogs, Mr. Liggett states, it only means a reduction of $27,380 in the benefit payments or 47.4 percent. The amount of the benefit payments to be received by Wayne county after reductions have been made is $544,321.50.

PENALIZING TRIETH.

The growing tendency to profit from the other fellow's industry is not confined to fat monopolists who are able and disposed to turn popular demand to advantage, but is evident in the habits of many improvident individuals who, with pride further crushed by experiences of the depression, look to society for support without thought of their own responsibilities. It seems wickedly unfair for the person who has trimmed sails to accommodate the dispersed economic winds, and who has redoubled efforts and lengthened hours to meet emergencies, to be the victim of a'er-do-wells who make showy gestures for jobs if they are fairly certain they can't get them. The great middle class, struggling to preserve comparatively small possessions, suffers most from the depression's buffeting storms. While the rich man has enough left to steer clear of the rocks and to make another start if necessary, the 'er-do-well never has had an inclination more than just to get by from day to day, leaning as much as possible on the middle class, and learning to accept charity as an acceptable by-product of the depression—an excuse to declare a moratorium on work and shift life's obligations to other shoulders. On the middle class, often driven to wit's ends to solve its own problems, and carry its own burdens, is saddled the task of helping many who have cultivated dependence, and whose idea of a successful career is to live without work, without responsibility and without being bothered by moments of anxious thinking.

Young Democrats To Have Organization

Wayne county young democrats met in J. E. Brittain's office on Thursday evening and perfected a permanent organization, electing Lennie Burnham as chairman, Gerald Steinbaugh, college student from Madison, was named vice-chairman, and Vernon Cassell, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Brittain spoke on the purpose of the organization. Bi-monthly meetings of a political and social nature will be held, the first to be next Monday evening, June 18, in Mr. Brittain's office. Membership is open to all democrats between ages of 16 and 35 and purpose is to direct democratic voters intelligently and give them a political foundation. Interests will center in state and national politics, not in the county.

D. A. R. Bridal Parade Brings To Light The Modes Of Past 50 Years

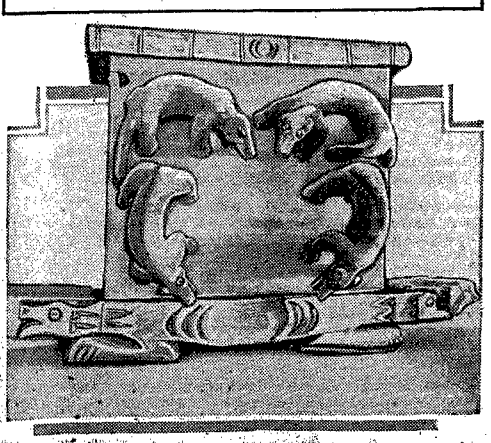

Brides of other years shook their nuptial raiment out of its tissue wrappings and rose leaves, or hunted among the dark recesses of attic or storeroom to seek out long-discarded garments from among their moth-baited packings, and donned these for the D. A. R. guest day at Hotel Stratton on Saturday afternoon. Opening the program, Miss Charles Brown, read "The Old Time Wedding Day," accompanied on piano by Miss Marian Seymour. Mrs. A. F. Davis sang "O Promise Me" with her daughter, Miss Kathryn Lou, accompanying. Miss Davis also played for the bridal gown parade, as the models filed slowly before a background of white flowers and tall white tapers in silver holders. A white wool dress which belonged to Mrs. W. A. K. Neely's touseau and modeled by Miss Lillian Mae Penhollow, opened the fashion parade. It boasted a built-in bustle and had closely fitted bodice which buttoned down the front from high neck. The bustle back had full draperies and was generously trimmed with pleating. Mrs. Neely was married in 1881.

Next came Mrs. J. G. Mines modeling a dainty white lansdowne wedding frock with mutton-leg sleeves, tight-fitting bodice, deep scalloped hem and train. A soft flounce of white chiffon was at throat. Mrs. Mines was married at Wheatland, Iowa, at her parental home in the year 1892. Mrs. E. W. Huse's was first worn in 1896, when as Miss Mae Fisher, she took the nuptial vows at Wymore. Miss Miriam Huse modeled it. The gown is of white satin with full gored skirt, with quite modern type puffed sleeves of white chiffon and high neck. When Mrs. Huse wore it in 1896, she carried bouquet of cream roses, her hair was twisted into a "psycho" knot with a pompadour in front. Mrs. Harry Tidrick's wedding gown, worn in 1897, was modeled by Mrs. Al. Book. The tannish fabric was fashioned into the tight-fitting bodice of the time, with huge mutton-leg sleeves and a flowered silk front. Mrs. Tidrick was married at her home near Wayne. Not only Mrs. Woodward J. Jones' wedding dress but the cutaway coat and trousers which Mr. Jones wore on that eventful day, were in the fashion parade. Mrs. Paul Siman wore the white chiffon gown made over taffeta, with high neck and long sleeves and a sweeping train. Not so very different from the fashions of the past winter. Miss Peggy Morris with her height and her severely-combed hair, was the groom. Mrs. H. J. Felber's gown of transparent ribbon silk, a soft cream tone, just fitted her daughter, Miss Evelyn, who made an attractive picture in the snug-bodied frock with graceful train. The Felber wedding took place in Wayne in 1902. The late Mrs. Rollie Ley's wedding gown, dating from 1902, was modeled by her daughter, Miss Josephine. It was cream color with draped front, long train, and generously flounced. The champagne color silk made over blue taffeta was worn by Mrs. H. E. Craven at her marriage in Fullerton in 1904. It was made in Bowling Green, Ky., and was richly pleated and tucked. Mrs. Rollie Ley modeled the frock. Mrs. Edna Davis wore her own frock—white silk lace faggoted together, with three soft flounces at the bottom, and moulded over taffeta silk. The skirt ended in a train. A striking feature of the frock was large bunches of grapes embroidered at intervals in white silk. The Davis wedding took place at the bride's home of an evening in 1906, only a few friends being present, and others coming for the reception which followed. As the couple left the altar, little Marion Surber pulled ribbons which released a shower of rose petals in their path, from a large white wedding bell overhead.

In contrast to the full-skirted, basue-waisted frocks which preceded hers, Mrs. William VonSeggern's gown gave a very slenderizing effect with its straight-down skirt and close bodice. The white frock had high waist with elbow sleeves—another innovation as the others had long sleeves—and diagonal insert of white lace across front of skirt and down back. There was a long train, too. Mrs. VonSeggern wore the dress in 1911. With little Marilyn Stratton as train-bearer, Mrs. E. O. Stratton marched in with bridal step, wearing Mrs. R. W. Casper's wedding gown. Soft white lace over the shoulders, with satin train caught at back of neck by sparkling white beads. Its date was 1916. Of the same year but quite a different mode was Mrs. A. T. Cavanaugh's tailored blue velvet suit,

THAT recently anthropologists of the Canadian Government unearthed in British Columbia what is believed to be the last Indian tomb of its kind that will ever be discovered. It is the work of some member of the Musqueam tribe of which only fifty members remain. Elaborately carved, the relic takes the form of a wooden sepulchre mounted on a boat-like platform about eight feet long. The carving, which is shown above, was made from a solid piece of cedar about eighteen inches thick and three feet square, and was probably hewn out with an adze. The exact date of this type of tomb is known. It is in the Government Museum at Ottawa where the new discovery has also been placed.

with mink trim, which she wore for her wedding at the Wm. Orr home. The two-piece suit with its fingertip jacket was more in contrast to the present mode than the wedding gowns from the '90's, from which our 1934 mode was borrowed. With this, Mrs. Cavanaugh wore a merry widow hat—remember them? Mrs. Jessie Reynolds modeled the suit. Mrs. C. A. Orr's gown, which she wore herself, was of white net tucked and filled, made over a shorter underskirt. It was worn in 1917. Mrs. Don Miller came next, wearing Mrs. W. H. Neely's white georgette wedding gown, beaded in outline, and topped with a huge white crepe hat with white ostrich trim and straw under-brim. The size was quite in keeping with today's mode, but the crown fuller. Mrs. Neely's wedding was in 1919. Very lovely was Mrs. Paul Harrington's white gown and veil which she planned in 1921. The white dress, not very long, was topped by a lace and tulle cap veil which framed the face and fell to bottom of the dress in soft folds. With this she wore the very pointed white shippers and lace-embroidered white hose which made up her wedding costume. The Harrington wedding took place at the Wood Jones home one afternoon. Miss Ruth Jones was the bride's attendant and Don Cunningham was best man. Little Elizabeth Morrison from Kansas City, was flower girl. Very formal and gracious was the gown Mrs. C. R. Chinn wore at University Place Methodist church in 1923, this being a double wedding. (Continued on Page Seven)

Camping Proves Of Special Benefit To Young Folks

Over seven thousand camps run by recreational organizations, private owners and the U. S. department of agriculture will open this summer for the use of millions of girls and boys who want and need to spend their vacations in the open.

Among them will be one which can rightfully claim to be the ancestor of the camp movement as we know it now.

Fifty years ago, when America was emerging from a depression much like the one that is dying now, a Brooklyn business man, named Sumner Francis Dudley, took six boys into the woods near Orange Lake, New York, because he thought a spell of life in the open would improve them spiritually.

He was building better than he knew for the bodies as well as the souls of millions yet unborn.

Three generations of city life are as much as the human nervous system can stand, according to a high authority who notes that man has improved everything on earth but himself and that only camping now checks his tendency toward degeneration.

How the comforting creature, bred in the softness of mechanized life, has learned in its own interests to come, to terms with untamed nature, is the story embedded in the history of modern camping.

At first only those to whom life was real and earnest were brave enough to face the discomforts and dangers of the woods. It is strange to note that in the seventies and eighties American parents, still so close historically to a pioneer tradition, were extremely nervous about letting their children live out-of-doors.

Wasn't it dangerous? Could it be healthy? Who were these camp counselors? Could one trust them? There was something to be said for the parents. The counselors were safe, morally speaking, without doubt, but in the matter of camp standards they were scarcely sane—from the modern standpoint.

But American fathers and mothers were persuaded. They let their boys in small numbers brave the terrors of the woods, but their daughters! That was out of the question. Some girls were already getting their outings in a house opened in 1874 by the Y. W. C. A. and known as Sea Rest at Asbury Park, N. J.

Here self-dependent young women of respectable character could board for $11.00 for two weeks. Hundreds flocked to it, but only a few stockinged feet touched the ocean. The air, except at night, was considered sufficient camping experience for the girls.

Meantime the men were being heroes. They were sleeping in ponchos on the cold, cold ground of a tent's earthen floor, digging trenches around the tent to deflect incipient floods, and bringing along their equipment in strong boxes weighing hundreds of pounds and containing, among other things, cast iron skillets and stoves. That was in the eighties.

It was the twentieth century before some slybarites ventured to suggest that board platforms for the tents and cots of sway-back canvas might be preferable to a poncho on the cold ground. The hardy of limb and heart decided them, but they won out. Comfort in camp ceased to be a sign of degeneracy. In the second decade of the century it was safe for the girls to take to the wilds. The Boy Scouts had been founded, and even the most timid parent could no longer think of camping as unsafe or unsound.

ly evaporated. The big tent gave place to the little one, and army discipline to family life. The girl scouts began to live in units, usually of twenty-four, and never of more than thirty-two, and these were subdivided into groups of eight, each with its own set of tents scattered through the woods and each with its own open-air kitchen. Holding no more than four, tents had wooden floors, and each was fitted up according to the tastes and talents of its inhabitants.

Morning exercises were abandoned, inspections became informal. Competition was discouraged, the granting of cups and ribbons ended. Rest hours became compulsory. Bugle calls became less frequent. Nature study, handicraft, informal singing round campfires, impromptu plays and hikes—of such instead of marching and drilling was the new day's program composed.

And the change was symbolized in the style. A charming sage-green uniform replaced the khaki, and the different troops and patrols identified themselves by colored scarves. The voluminous bloomers narrowed to shorts, and the girls could scamper over the hillsides without being entangled by every bramble or jutting rock. The long-brimmed midgy of the war days became the short-sleeved blouse, and the stockings dwindled to a comfortable ankle.

Instead of the nervous little girl who fainted at sight of a snake, shrieked at a mouse, and shrunk from a bug, there is today the self-dependent girl scout who knows the best cure for snake-bites, who may have a pet mouse in her pocket, and who is as happy in a camp as her little mother was homesick, who above all has learned to laugh and love the outdoors, not because it is wholesome to sleep under the stars, but because it is fun when you do it with friends.

Scandinavian Foods Famous In World

Along with the Scandinavian colonists, who followed in the wake of the Viking ships across the North Atlantic, came the food habits of that part of the world. Naturally what they were accustomed to eat and even how it was cooked reflected conditions back home.

Being sea-faring people and close to the world's greatest fisheries in the world, of course much of their food came from the sea. Also coming from cold northern countries where the growing season is short and where fields are often small and stony, they had a wholesome respect for all food produced from the land. Whether their skill in cookery developed from the need to be thrifty, or from some inborn appreciation of good food, who can say? Anyway Scandinavian food is famous the world over.

Here in the United States we have adopted so many of the Scandinavian ways of making simple food appetizing that we have long since forgotten their source and call them American. Also the newcomers on their part were quick to try the vegetables, fruits, cereals, and meats strange to them. But here and here, luckily, some families still serve distinctive Norwegian, Swedish and Danish dishes.

Norwegians excel in the cooking of fish, as is to be expected of the people from a small country with a 12,000-mile coast line. Cod, haddock, halibut, salmon, herring and mackerel from the sea, and trout and other small fish from the mountain streams and lakes, are an important part of the daily menu. Boiling, or rather simmering in water below the boiling point, is perhaps the favorite way of cooking fish. As an example of how tradition sometimes checks up with scientific discovery, it is interesting to find that old Norse recipes emphasize cooking fish at moderate temperature, exactly what modern science shows is the best way to cook protein foods. For moderate temperature keeps the protein of fish, meat, eggs and cheese tender, while intense heat tends to make it tough.

With this plain cooked fish and boiled potatoes are served melted butter often with lemon juice or chopped parsley added, or any one of a great variety of well-seasoned sauces. But the reputation of many a Norwegian cook rests on her fish-pudding, which in the old country requires hours of hand labor. With modern mechanical devices, though, fish pudding can be prepared in short order. The start of fish pudding is fresh haddock ground and pounded almost to a smooth paste. Then the fish is mixed with eggs and milk, and salt and a few grains of grated nutmeg are added for seasoning. The mixture is then poured into a mold, steamed or baked slowly until it becomes firm, and turned out on a hot platter and served with melted butter or cream sauce. Other popular dishes are fish omelet, fish balls, fish cakes, fish soup and especially in winter, lutefisk—dried codfish soaked in a solution of lime and soda for a week and then freshened for days before cooking.

Of all the fish products from Scandinavia cod-liver oil has perhaps the greatest nutritional value. Long before vitamins were discovered Scandinavian people were extracting the oil from cod-livers, using it themselves, and giving it to their children. Also the fishermen who sailed their little boats far north of the Arctic circle never lost a chance to feast on the fresh fish livers from their catch. "Can't it be cod-liver or what?" you will say, "they were getting vitamin D to give them over the long winter with their lamps lit."

Such are the directions, over and over again. That explains, probably, why some people do not like cabbage, and many abominate the odor which pervades the house when cabbage is cooked in the old, long-time way. But if you cook cabbage five, ten, or fifteen minutes only, instead of hours, those complaints will be disposed of. Delicate flavor, delicate texture, and no "cabbage odor" at all in the house are the results of short-time cooking. More important still, by short-time cooking you prevent the loss of food value that comes from long cooking of the foods which, like cabbage, are rich in vitamin C.

There is much to be learned, however, from the old-world ways of serving cabbage, even if they did cook it to death. We steam or boil and butter it, we cream it and scallop it, we use it in slaw hot and cold, and in salads. But there are other ways we might copy—especially from Germany, Scandinavia, Russia and the Near East. For example:

The Russian dish called tsche is a beef stew with cabbage, onions, leeks, a parsnip, and sour cream. Look at the recipe to see how tempting that is.

There is the German steamed cabbage, which combines deliciously with meat. This is seasoned first with vinegar, and later with a little fresh cream, or top milk. Then there is German fried sauerkraut—fried in fat in which some onions have been browned. Cooked macaroni is added to this savory dish.

Or there is cabbage with sausage—the sausages fried and arranged on a hot platter with chopped cabbage which has been cooked for 6 minutes in a little fat. There is cabbage scalloped with bread crumbs and cheese; or cabbage and carrots in a lamb stew; or sweet and sour cabbage (red or white), which is cooked with sour apples and seasoned with brown sugar and vinegar. Or there is filled cabbage, which is the cabbage head with the center taken out and replaced with stuffing, then the whole stuffed cabbage baked in the oven.

In the near East, and elsewhere in Europe, they make cabbage rolls, which are sometimes called stuffed cabbage, although really each separate leaf is first wilted and then folded around a mixture of chopped meat and bread crumbs, or meat and rice, or maybe rice and raisins. These rolls are then cooked, perhaps in a baking dish with a little water and served with gravy, or perhaps in well-seasoned tomato juice.

Dutch salad, like other raw cabbage dishes, is highly recommended by nutritionists because of the high vitamin value of the cabbage leaves before they are cooked. (Raw cabbage is interchangeable with tomatoes and oranges for its vitamin C content.) Dutch salad is shredded cabbage sprinkled with crisp bits of fried bacon or salt pork. Over this pour a dressing of the pork fat, vinegar, salt, pepper, and dry mustard.

Borrowing from Old World recipes for cooking cabbage, and changing the cooking time to correspond with modern principles of vegetable cookery, the Bureau of Home Economics suggests the following somewhat "different" ways of serving this cheapest of the leafy vegetables.

German Steamed Cabbage. 2 quarts shredded cabbage 1 teaspoon salt 1-4 cup vinegar 1-4 cup sweet cream or top milk Sauté the cabbage until just tender (about 15 minutes). Add salt and vinegar and when cool add the cream and serve. Or serve hot if preferred. Sour cream may be used instead of the vinegar and sweet cream.

Filled Cabbage. 1 large cabbage 2 cups dry bread crumbs 2 tablespoons bacon or salt-pork drippings 1 large onion, chopped fine 1 pound ground beef Seasonings (pepper, salt, nutmeg, parsley, sage) Scrop out the center of the cabbage head, and parboil the shell for about 10 minutes in a cheesecloth bag to keep the leaves in shape for refilling. Chop the center part fine as for slaw. Brown the chopped onion in the bacon or salt pork drippings, add the ground beef, chopped cabbage and breadcrumbs, and stir until heated. Add the seasonings and put the mixture back into the cabbage shell. Bake, uncovered, in a pan or baking dish with a little water until the cabbage is just tender.

The old-world recipes call for 2 eggs in the stuffing, but these may well be omitted. The seasonings, of course, may be varied according to taste.

Tscho (Russian). 2 pounds beef brisket cut in small cubes 3 points water 1 medium-sized cabbage, chopped 2 onions, sliced 2 leeks, sliced 1 parsnip, sliced 1 tablespoon flour 1-4 cup sour cream Salt and pepper Cook the meat in the 3 points of water until it is almost done, then add the vegetables and cook until all are tender. Mix the sour cream and the flour, add some of the hot liquid and stir until smooth, then add to the stew. Season to taste (buttwheat preferred) are often served with tscho.

Belgian Hot Cabbage. 2 sticks cinnamon Salt and pepper 1-2 teaspoon cloves 1 onion, sliced thin 1 bay leaf 2 cups water 3 tablespoons pork drippings 5 or 6 firm, tart apples peeled and cut in quarters 1 medium-sized red cabbage, sliced thin 2 tablespoons vinegar 2 tablespoons sugar Put the seasonings in the water, add the apples and then the cabbage. Cook until just tender, add the vinegar and sugar. Cook about one minute more. The appearance of this dish is better when hard winter apples are used. Summer apples, as a rule, cook up too much.

Chocolate Drop Cookies. (Mrs. R. B. Jones, Stanton) 1 cup brown sugar 1-2 cup melted butter 2 squares chocolate melted 1 egg 1-8 cup milk 1-2 cups flour 1-4 teaspoon soda 1 teaspoon baking powder 1-2 cup chopped nuts 1 cup chopped dates if wished Drop by spoonfuls on butter baking sheet and bake 15 minutes in hot oven (375°). Use chocolate icing.

Hamburger Patties. (Mrs. R. B. Jones, Stanton) 1-2 pounds hamburger 1-2 cup washed rice, uncooked Little chopped onion Salt and pepper Make balls size of a walnut. Put in casserole and cover with canned tomatoes or tomato soup and bake 1 to 1-1/2 hours.

Little Cocoa Cake. (Mrs. R. B. Jones, Stanton) 1 egg Add 4 tablespoons cocoa to 1 cup sugar Add 4 tablespoons melted shortening Sift together 1-2 cups flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon soda and 1-2 teaspoon baking powder, and add to cocoa mixture, alternately with 1-2 cup sour milk and 1-4 cup boiling water. Beat until smooth with rotary egg beater, making thin batter. Bake in layers or paper cases in moderate oven.

FOR THE ICING—cream 3/4 cups butter and 1 egg yolk. Add 1 tablespoon cocoa to 1-2 cups confectioner's sugar. Add 1 tablespoon hot water or hot coffee. Combine all. Add cream till right consistency to spread. This is moist and soothing icing.

Lemon Velvet Ice Cream. (Mrs. R. B. Jones, Stanton) Juice of four lemons 4 cups sugar Let stand over-night. Add 1 quart cream and put all in gallon freezer, then fill up freezer with milk and freeze.

Butterscotch Cookies. (Mrs. R. B. Jones, Stanton) 1-2 cups butter 2 cups brown sugar 2 eggs 3 cups flour 1-2 teaspoons baking powder 1-2 cup chopped nuts Mix together, making into long roll and put into ice box. Cut off and bake as needed.

Pinwheel Cookies. (Mrs. R. B. Jones, Stanton) 1-2 cup sugar 1-2 cup fat 3 tablespoons milk 1-2 cups flour 1-2 teaspoons baking powder 1-2 teaspoon vanilla 1-8 teaspoon salt Divide batter into two parts. Add 1 square melted chocolate to half. Roll the other half out flat and put chocolate layer on top. Then roll up like jelly roll. Put in ice box to chill overnight. Cut off and bake in quick oven.

Crescent Rolls. (Mrs. R. B. Jones, Stanton) Warm 1 cup cream and dissolve in 1 yeast cake. Add 1 tablespoon sugar and let stand. Combine 1-2 cup lard, 3 eggs or 5 egg yolks and 1 teaspoon salt. Add 4 cups flour. Flavor with lemon extract. This will be a stiff dough—work into ball, place in cloth sack and tie loosely so that dough can expand. Drop sack into a pan of cold water and let stand for three hours. Cut strips about 3 inches long, roll in dish of sugar, and shape into crescents. Bake in moderate oven at once for about 15 minutes.

World Events Belgium, plunged into sorrow three months ago by death of King Albert, rejoiced last Thursday at the birth of his grandson who will be named Albert.

President Roosevelt directed his aides Thursday to proceed at once with a vast, drought relief program involving $25 million dollars which he will recommend to congress this week. Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, was put in charge of what the president regards as one of the most serious disasters ever to hit this country. Hopkins, in conference with the president, reported that the affected area involved 10 million persons in at least 15 states.

Presbyterian Church. (Rev. P. A. Our services next Sunday are at the following hours: Sunday school, 10 a. m.; morning worship, 11; C. E. services, 6:30 p. m. The Missionary society met at the church Wednesday afternoon. As announced last Sunday, the high school group is planning an ice cream social to pay in part the expenses of these delegates. The pastor would urge the members of the church to give the young people their patronage. The social will be announced so that you will know time and place.

Antennae Blown Down! AGAIN we have to go without our weekly story from Arthur Abele in Little America. A new and serious crack in the ice on which this Antarctic village is situated has caused the Admiral to set up a new camp three-quarters of a mile in back of Little America and everybody has been busy, day and night, moving sufficient supplies there to last the 58 men on the ice one year, in case an emergency occurs at Little America.

The real trouble now is not that the weather is not cold enough to freeze the ice. The temperatures are ranging from 30 to 40 degrees below zero. The weather, however, moved so much of the ice out of the bay that it allowed the waves and currents from the Ross Sea to act with greater violence against and under the Ross Barrier and the Bay Ice.

Date Restriction Is Off In Dixon

Date restrictions have been removed for the planting of fodder corn and grain sorghums on killed-out oats, barley and wheat land, Dixon county Agent Greth M. Dunn of Ponca states. This means that fodder corn and grain sorghums can be planted at any time on any land except contracted acres. This information is contrary to previous releases, Mr. Dunn advises.

Under the new ruling contracted acres in the corn-hog or wheat reduction program may be used as follows: For pasture until July 1; to cut second year sweet clover for hay; planting of forage crops such as black amber or red amber cane, sudan grass, early sumac, Kansas orange, lecti red, honey, gooseneck, sourless, denton, red, X, colman, collier, McLean, folger, sapling, planter and waconia amber.

Corn or grain sorghums cannot be planted on contracted acres. Grain sorghums have been previously classified as atlas sorgo, Feterrita, Grohoma, Legari and all the milos and kafirs. These changes have been made necessary, Mr. Dunn says, because of the drought situation.

Back To Grasses Is New Objective

"Back to Grasses," now the objective of farmers of millions of culture. Grass in this sense means States, needs a little explanation, according to crop specialists in the United States department of agriculture. Grass in this sense means legumes as well, and these are in most cases forage crops.

Grass, to the average person, connotes only plants in which the leaves are narrow and spear-shaped blades. When speaking of pasture land farmers usually refer to land in grass sod year after year. In the west they mean the native grasses.

"Back to grass" means more grasses and legumes in semipermanent pastures and hay land, or in crop rotations of 2 to 5 years. It means in many cases using better soil for pastures. "Only pastureland" is a phrase common in the middle west especially, when referring to land too poor and too rough for plow land.

Grasses and legumes grown on soils as good as those used for grain crops, says the department specialist, often will return greater net profit to the livestock farmer than grains on similar soil.

Stanton Forfeits FERA Fund Rights

Failure of Stanton county to sign the agreement to make levies of 193 mills for relief to be administered by the FERA setup, and to use a quarter of gasoline tax revenue for highway work using persons of relief, has caused that county to be dropped from federal rolls. Henceforth, Stanton will carry on its own relief without aid of government funds. J. F. McGarthy who had supervision of FERA activities in Wayne and Stanton counties, now has only the one charge, in addition to drought relief in Stanton, Cuming and Wayne counties.

About 65 are included on the FERA payroll for Wayne county at present, the men working on No. 113 highway and its spur.

L. E. Way of Lincoln, has replaced J. M. Anderson as rehabilitation director, having charge of Wayne and several other counties.

Many Are Placed. L. C. Gildersteeve has word that 12,257 men and women have been placed on public works employment during May. Another 7,174 have been placed in private industry.

IF YOU THINK CREAM SEPARATOR DISCS HAVE A SOFT SNAP, JUST REMEMBER THESE FACTS:

That is another important reason why International Harvester now uses tough, close-grained, strong STAINLESS STEEL DISCS in McCormick-Deering Cream Separators.

COURAGE There's a fearless strength in the artist's work. His strokes are sure and true - With swift short stabs he paints away In red and green and blue. Nor does he care what the world may think Of the picture he would paint; He seeks to express himself alone And he works without complaint. He laughs at the critics who dare to talk And yawns a bit as they chant; His ears are deaf to the sordid mobs - Again he laughs as they rant. Aye, the artist's effort is his alone - Critics must come to his door; He hears them rave and rant and tear Yet knows they'll ask for more. And he is the proof that courage alone Is above the critic's ban - He is the proof that courage alone Is the balance of power of man. Franklin Lee Stevenson

Battle Creek Teacher Has Unique Record Of Service In Classroom

Few are there of this generation in Battle Creek who haven't at one time or another, called Miss Mollie Taylor "Teacher." For this interesting woman, now a summer student at Wayne State Teachers college, has spent the past 35 years of her 42-year teaching career guiding the growing minds and disciplining the active little bodies of Battle Creek public school pupils. "Fortunate children," you'd say after chatting with her—there's something about Miss Taylor which inspires confidence—you like her sense of humor—you like her characteristic face with its combed-back greying hair. You feel that the young folks of Battle Creek are getting a good start on this business of living.

Miss Taylor was born in a one-room log cabin with a loft back in Virginia. Along came a big flood and the family had to trouble in so on a frame house up on the hill. In the year 1883 the Taylors came to Nebraska, settling at Battle Creek and later going to Meadow Grove for a time before coming back to make permanent home in their first settlement.

Forty-two years ago this spring—it must have been 1892—Miss Mollie was completing eighth grade at the two-room schoolhouse in Meadow Grove. Her teacher was Will Whitley and he was a good one, says his ex-pupil. Said he to Miss Mollie and her friends, "There's going to be a teachers' examination at Tilden tomorrow—you'd better take it." Such a thing had never occurred to Miss Mollie but next day found her seated in a lumber wagon, jogging over to Tilden. And she received 98 in the examination on theory and art of teaching! Not because she had ever studied this, but because she had learned much from Mr. Whitley's methods, and just used common sense in answering the questions.

Armed with her certificate, which was secured by just writing for it in those days, she set out to get a school, and taught that spring for the three-months' term at Ray school near Battle Creek. Those were the days when school year was divided into two or three parts, and often a different teacher was employed for each. Miss Taylor taught the spring term and then the fall, each three months long, then was employed for two-months' winter term in another school. For this first school work she was paid $25 per month for the three months—payable at the close! Her board and room came to $21 for the term, or $7 each month.

Do you recall those early-day schoolhouses? A one-room school, usually, with double or triple desks, well worn, a sheet iron stove in center around which the little folks huddled when they braved the drifts and sleet of winter to trudge the several miles schoolward. Each bought his or her own books. There were usually a few maps furnished, but seldom a dictionary. If you attended just such a school some-time in your early career, you'll recall the screeching and the scratching as slate pencil traversed slate—and what a bedlam would break loose when a whole roomful of young "scholars" attacked their problems under the firm leadership of the "schoolma'am. Not much planned study of those schools of the 90's, nor character-building programs nor intelligence tests. Teacher assigned a chapter or two, the kiddies read and recited on it, and they assimilated quite a heap of knowledge in the process. Witness our several leaders who got their education in the rural schools!

After teaching three years in the country, Miss Taylor went to Fremont normal school to complete the teachers' course, and among her instructors was a teacher of mathematics, U. S. Conn, who needs no introduction to you readers. There were many changes in educational requirements in the 42 years Miss Taylor has been teaching. At first, one merely took examinations and wrote for a certificate. Later there were new rulings—reading circle, the "five essentials" and the like. Experience must be supplemented with regular study. At least six summers have found Miss Taylor enrolled at Wayne college, taking the classes which will help her most in guiding young folks and meeting with understanding those dozens of children who come under her charge every year. At Battle Creek she's taught every grade but kindergarten and first. One year her fourth graders gave a farewell party for her, and imagine their surprise to find next fall that she was to be their teacher in fifth grade.

She's taught practically every business man in Battle Creek during her 38 years there, and for many years back she has taught side by side with young women who were former pupils. Two of those ex-students are down here for summer work now—Miss Elizabeth Roemer and Miss Ruth Martin. Her students have gone off to the Philippines to teach, and to Europe. There's one, a great big fellow with an active mind, who has won considerable glory as a writer. You'll remember Lynn Montross who with his wife, wrote "Cap and Gown" and other ultra collegiate stories? He's scored as poet, too, and his wife is well-known in things literary. Lynn was an extremely intelligent lad—his mother had been a very successful teacher and was an accomplished musician. His grandmother, the late Mrs. Quivey of Pierce, also wrote poetry.

Dr. Gould Wickey of Washington, D. C., executive secretary of the board of education of the United Lutheran Church of America, spoke Saturday to radio listeners. "The Lutheran church," he said, "is associated closely with the American continent. Before first colonies were settled, a Lutheran pastor had visited the shores of America in 1619. In 1623 a permanent settlement came from Holland to Manhattan island, and in 1638 a Swedish Lutheran colony settled on the banks of the Delaware. A German Lutheran colony settled on the Hudson in 1708. Lutherans have," the speaker added, "been thus closely associated with the founding, development and extension of America.

"Lutherans number 80 millions the world over," Mr. Wickey stated, "equal to the combined total of all Protestant faiths. The Evangelical division, which met in Wayne, has membership of 1,500,000, embracing one-third of the Lutherans in this country. This," Dr. Wickey continued, "is the only branch dating back of the Revolution." The speaker complimented the high type of ministers in the synod.

"Evangelical Lutherans believe and hold to the Bible as the inspired word of God," Dr. Wickey continued. "They believe that man is saved by faith in God. Biblical in doctrine, reverent in worship and loyal in spirit, the Lutherans proclaim their faith," Dr. Wickey concluded.

In Accident Thursday. The passenger train leaving Sioux City Thursday morning struck a stalled car near the city. Leo Derby was seriously hurt and his son and daughter were slightly injured. The accident delayed the train's arrival in Wayne.
