

Takes Popular Wayne Woman—Mystery Solved—Frank E. Nangle Returns to Scenes of Youth.

We may lose and regain material possessions, lose and regain earthly power, but we cannot lose and regain this side of eternity a charming, helpful life whose spirit has been borne away on the wings of inescapable death.

Novel Way to Subscribe. A few weeks ago we received a letter from an Omaha man who was a stranger to me, saying he had been reading a collection of editorials which had been from the Herald and that he wanted to subscribe for a year.

But our flights of imagination were all wrong, as the following explanatory and much appreciated letter from our Omaha friend shows:

"Omaha, Neb., July 23, 1934. Mr. E. W. Huse, Editor of the Wayne Herald, Wayne, Neb. Dear Sir: I am in receipt of yours of the 17th instant acknowledging receipt of $2 for copies of the Herald from July 1, 1933 to July 1, 1934, and stating therein that such subscription is new in your experience, and expressing your willingness to be assisted by a light bearer in your state of perplexity connected therewith.

"Such experience is new to me, also. Had it not been for the boastful nature of a certain booster of his home-town paper, you would still have to look forward to such an experience."

"Just as it was, the bet was made, the judges were selected, and last Saturday it was a unanimous opinion of the judges that your paper excelled the other paper in all respects, particularly in the department of the editorials carried.

"It is through no effort of mine that you have a most excellent newspaper, and permit me to congratulate you upon your achievement as editor and proprietor of the Wayne Herald.

Former Wayne Young Man. Frank E. Nangle with members of his family, furnished the program for last Saturday's broadcast from the Herald's studio, dates recollection of this section back to 1883 when his father cut loose from Pennsylvania and did not anchor until he had reached this land of promise.

"I thank you for sending me the above copies, and I trust that this explanation will prove satisfactory."

BURKE DEFENDS NRA POLICIES

Democratic Candidate Is Heard By Wayne Voters Tuesday Afternoon.

Warm defense of the Roosevelt program of recovery was sounded by Congressman Edward R. Burke, democratic candidate for U. S. senator, when he addressed Wayne democrats through portable radio address system at the bank corner Tuesday afternoon.

That farmers of the corn section of Nebraska are almost 100 percent behind the administration policies was the opening affirmation of the speaker, following his introduction by J. E. Brittain.

Without the federal road building program, there would be no new roads constructed in Nebraska, only present ones maintained. But the federal program set $12,000,000 to this state to build new highways and provide employment.

"The little difficulties in administration programs can be worked out," these won't offset the tremendous good which has come out of the NRA. Child labor and sweatshops have been wiped out, millions of idle are re-employed, hours of labor reduced. I believe thoroughly in the Roosevelt policies and think these have saved our country from some of the troubles now besetting our European friends.

In closing, Mr. Burke stated that because he had been in Washington since the start of the recovery program, he believed he would be candidate for senate who best understood the program and could be of most aid to the state in bringing home largest benefits possible.

Wayne College Is Honored By Part In Chicago Fair

Wayne State Teachers' college had the distinction of being the only teachers' college in the United States to take any part, musical or otherwise, in the Chicago Exposition of Progress. This is an authority of Joel Lay, musical director of the fair who was especially cordial to the Wayne ladies.

The quartet stayed in the Ross Hanks home in Evanston during their week and Miss Conn and Miss McDougal at a down-town hotel. The boys sang in Illinois host building several times, this being the only one with an air-cooled theatre. About 4,500 could be seated at one time. They also sang in the Horticultural building several times. Amphibians in the water carried the program over the water to horticultural grounds which are fully as large as Wayne college campus. At Social Science hall the quartet shared program with a Chicago men's chorus. At the Building of Religion, Mrs. Ruth Worrell, former Omaha woman who serves as director, was very cordial to the group. Clement Williamson sang at the Colonial village in native Indian dress, very effective. The quartet was presented with its own houses and replica of Mt. Vernon.

Throughout the week the Wayne folks were most courteously received and given warm praise by music critics. Miss Conn and Miss McDougal were presented with flowers and corsages. The first few days of their stay were extremely hot but Thursday brought a cooling change. Some of the villages are closing because attendance is lighter than the sponsors expected, due partly to shorter and markets lower than they have been in this year of 1934. Quite a change to modern advantages is noted in forty years, and Mr. Nangle who comes back to (Continued on Page Four)

BIGLEY'S RAVINE IS DEDICATED AS STATE'S NEW PARK

A CROWD gathered in Bigley's ravine near Ponca Tuesday afternoon to give the new state park an appropriate send-off. Governor Chas. W. Bryan spoke. Dedication of the park is the signal for improvements—the making of a naturally picturesque spot into a delightful pleasure resort. It was in Bigley's ravine back in the seventies that Prof. Jeremiah Perigoue, proprietor of a lime kiln, discovered the petrified bones of a prehistoric plesiosaurus. It was in the neighborhood that powerfully smelling lignite was mined and called coal. It was up the Missouri a few miles that Ionia volcano flamed and was finally extinguished by the lashing waters of the river. Bigley's ravine was considered years ago by local enthusiasts as the logical place for a railroad bridge. Nearest to that realization is a bridge to convey natural gas across the river, and since railroads have gone out of fashion in the neighborhood, the substitution is an acceptable one. No more suitable place in Nebraska for a state park could be found.

NOTICES COME IN THIS COUNTY

First Payment For Farmers Arrives At Court House On Wednesday.

Notices of acceptance of Wayne county corn-hog contracts have been received at office of Agricultural Agent G. H. Liggett this week and checks for 380 tenants and landowners arrived yesterday, the payment totaling $55,059.50. Notices were sent out and the checks will be distributed August 2 and 3 at Mr. Liggett's office. The other checks are expected to arrive within a few days in the order in which they were sent to Washington.

About 50 will be chosen in Wayne county to help check compliance. To date more than 100 have applied and persons may file up to Saturday night. The group to do the work will be chosen the first of the week. District meetings of agents and allotment committees will be held at the court house in Wayne next Tuesday when an extension man and engineer will be here to discuss the method of checking compliance.

Amount of rain will affect the checking. With rain there will be more work.

Conserve Feed. Immature corn has fair feeding value and should by all means be conserved for fall and winter use. Agricultural Agent G. H. Liggett today pointed out. Young growing grass plants are nearly always high in protein. Immature corn and sorgo placed in silos at the Nebraska college of agriculture and at Valentine in the past made a very good quality silage.

Dr. F. D. Keim, head of the agronomy department at the university of Nebraska, advised Mr. Liggett this week that it is best to wait in harvesting corn as long as there is any possible chance of the corn developing in the event of rainfall snow. When the corn fires and dries and begins to go down, it should be harvested. A grain binder, corn binder or similar machine can be used in cutting the corn. Sorghums will stand more firing than corn and should be left until the last minute for they will stage a real comeback when it rains.

Baker of South Sioux City, is stationed at Fort Sam Houston near where the couple will take an apartment.

Will Ask Commissioners To Assist With Highway Work To The East.

Wayne city council met Tuesday evening and turned its attention to street and road improvements. It was decided that if residents living on dirt streets were willing to furnish half of the gravel needed to gravel their streets, the city would be the other half and do the grading. Councilman Carl E. Wright was named to meet with the county commissioners to discuss graveling of a road out east of Wayne, the city to furnish part of the gravel.

YOUNG NORFOLK GOLFER WINNER OF GOLF CROWN

Seventy Enthusiasts Play In Successful Tourney First Of The Week.

FREMONT MAN RUNNER-UP

Don Wilcox, youthful Norfolk golfer, will wear the championship crown of Northeast Nebraska as result of his brilliant performance at the annual Northeast tournament held at Wayne country club Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Wilcox defeated N. Davies, Fremont, 8-7, in finals of the championship flight Tuesday. About 70 golfers entered the meet, representing 13 towns of Nebraska and Iowa. Hartington club sent the largest delegation, 9, and other clubs included were Cherokee and Sioux City, Iowa, Wakefield, Norfolk, Battle Creek, Creighton, Neligh, Wiltse, Stanton, Fremont, Omaha and Wayne. Norfolk extended invitation for the 1935 tournament through Jack Pickard, and this was accepted.

Qualifying scores were sent in prior to opening of the meet at 10 a. m. Sunday, and players played in proper flights. About 65 attended the banquet at country club house that evening. First and second rounds had been completed by that time, and semi-finals and finals in all but the championship flight were completed Monday. Championship finals finished up that afternoon.

The first 18 holes of the finals: Wilcox—5-3-5-4-5-3-4-4—36. Davies—5-3-5-4-5-4-5-4—39. 4-3-4-5-4-5-3-5-5—38-79. Afternoon play was as follows: Wilcox—5-3-5-4-5-4-4-4—37. Davies—5-3-5-5-5-3-5-4—41.

Next two holes Wilcox shot 5 and 3, and Davies, 6 and 4. Wilcox was victor. Play in the finals was slower and less spectacular than the preceding day. Davies lost out by inability to sink putts.

DEMOCRATS ARE SPEAKERS HERE

Congressman Howard Makes Warm Defense Of The Present Policies.

Congressman Edgar Howard, veteran orator from Columbus who is campaigning for re-election from Third district, addressed the Saturday night crowd from a truck platform on Main street, following Senator William B. Banning of Union, democratic candidate for governor. J. E. Brittain introduced the speakers.

Said Mr. Howard: "I am one of the poorest politicians in the world—I can fight for the other fellow but not for myself. I am always amazed at the great number of voters which pour in for me from this section."

Defending the "New Deal" from its denouncers, he stated that in President Roosevelt he beholds the most magnificent type of man he has ever known privileged to serve with—the man who went on the governmental battlefield on evening of an awful day and within short space of three months had inspired a confidence in the government which many feared would never come again."

He spoke cordially of Mr. Banning, his co-speaker and called Wayne county's candidate for governor's office also a "magnificent man."

"Let us pray for the health and life of our president, that these be preserved until he is able to lift this country out of this hideous depression. John Garner is the type which should be a pattern for every American boy! If anything should happen to our wonderful president, the country will go on just the same under the guidance of a man as fine and as brave."

Mr. Howard came out for payment of adjusted certificates in cash and also declared for the Frazier bill which proposed that the government re-finance any mortgage on any American farm at 1-1/2 percent interest.

Over 40 members were reported at that time.

FUNDS DISPERSED AT THIS TIME TO RELIEVE COUNTRY

We are glad the Carroll community has received a liberal dividend from the assets of the defunct bank of that place—a total of nearly $50,000—which will help very materially in lightening burdens during a pinching period. Also in a few days money from the corn-hog reduction program will be flowing into Wayne county, and this deserved compensation for sacrificing individual industry will bring relief at a time when economic conditions, aggravated by drouth, seem to be dragging anchor. The first of the week the Wayne county committee received approval from Washington of the first installment of contracts with receipts for use in dispersing funds, and according to reports, this money should be going into the hands of farmers by the time this newspaper goes to press. Other installments are expected to follow in quick succession, and thus in a short time the first government payment will be completed. Considering the earning capacity of the county in a normal period, the present cash distribution is not large, but carefully used to meet obligations and supply needs, it will be a source of genuine relief at this time.

SCOUT CAMPING IS IN PROGRESS

Trained Executive Is Here To Supervise Girls In Annual Outing.

The inherent love of outdoor life—hiking, camping, cooking over campfire and handicraft—is finding expression with girls who are attending scout camp at Amanda Smith cabin southeast of Wayne this week. Mrs. Florence McCarty, trained scout executive from Sioux City, has charge. Mrs. Willis Noakes is local girl scout council chairman, and T. S. Hook is chairman of camping.

Fifteen girls are registered in camp this week and a similar number will be here next week. In this week's group are Betty Helen Ellis, Marjorie Hook, Dorothy Liedtke, Barbara Felber, Ruth Lundberg, Larylia Whitmore, Joyce Miller, Evelyn Noakes, Lois Thompson, Ardath Johnson, Betty Wright, Geraldine Gambie, Evelyn Auker, Ethel Jean Olson and Alice Mae Foster.

Dorothy Hook and Mary Ella Pile, who are working for golden eagle awards are to be junior counselors, the former at camp this week and the latter next. Miss Margaret Mines is dietitian and Miss Helen Swanson is assistant to Mrs. McCarty.

The girls went to the cabin Monday morning and remain until Saturday evening. Camp for next week's group opens Monday morning. Only time during the week when visitors are allowed on the grounds is parents' night, Wednesday. Last evening a number of relatives and friends visited the camp and enjoyed the demonstration presented by the girls.

Each day's activities are well scheduled by Mrs. McCarty. Flag raising ceremony opens each day. Work, play and rest periods are regular, also wholesome meals. Each girl is assigned duties for which she is responsible.

Captains, Mrs. A. V. Teed and Mrs. Willard Wiltse, and Lieutenants, Mrs. H. J. Felber and Mrs. Faye Strahan, have been invited by Mrs. McCarty to spend a day at the camp, observing the work.

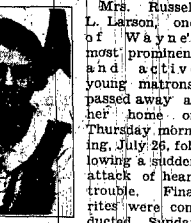

For favors extended the girls in preparing the camp and giving supplies, Mrs. Noakes wishes to thank parents of the scouts, also L. W. McNatt, O. G. Nelson, H. R. Best, L. F. Good, L. W. Vath, R. C. Hahlbeck, E. W. Huse, W. A. Hiscok, Joe Baker, Groceriesmen, meat market men and dairymen are dividing the time on taking supplies to camp.

Baby Beef Club Sponsors Picnic

YOUNG MATRON OF WAYNE DIES

Many Pay Tribute Sunday To Mrs. R. L. Larson At Wayne Church.

Mrs. Russell L. Larson, one of Wayne's most prominent and active young matrons, passed away at her home on Thursday morning, July 26, following a sudden attack of heart trouble. Final rites were conducted Sunday afternoon at 2:30 from Wayne Presbyterian church with Rev. P. A. Davies and the Beckenhauer service in charge. The church was crowded to capacity with friends who gathered to pay tribute to one who leaves an imperishable memory in their hearts. Eastern Star officers and members, whom she served this year as worthy matron, attended in a body. A wealth of flowers banked the altar. Miss Mildred McDees, with Mrs. H. A. Welch accompanying her on the organ, sang "A Perfect Day" at opening of the service and "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling" at the close. Committal followed at Greenwood cemetery.

When 11-year-old Margaret Larson awakened Thursday morning, about 10 o'clock she went to the room of her mother, which was adjoining hers. As Mrs. Larson was lying on the floor and did not respond to her call, Margaret told Miss Verona McNatt who immediately went to the Larson apartment and found Mrs. Larson beside the bed. Verona thought Mrs. Larson had fainted and summoned Mrs. L. W. McNatt, who hurried in and who realized she was lifeless. She had suffered a fatal heart attack and attempts to revive her were futile. Mrs. Larson was accustomed each morning about 6 o'clock to lower a window shade on the east. The shade was drawn so it is thought she was seized with the heart attack when she rose at that time. A doctor pronounced her death as having occurred about four hours earlier.

Mrs. Larson had had a weak heart for several years. Wednesday evening after the rain she slipped on the iron stairway leading from the Larson apartment and had fallen about four steps. She seemed weaker at the time but was able afterward to go about her usual duties in the store and home and spent the evening visiting with friends.

Mr. Larson, who had gone to Maple lake, Minn., to spend a few days was notified and he and Mr. McNatt hurried home, making the trip of about 350 miles by 6:30 Thursday evening.

Active in Wayne. Mrs. Larson's influence in civic and church circles of Wayne has been important. She was an active member of the Presbyterian church. As worthy matron of the Eastern Star lodge, vice president of the American Legion Auxiliary member of the executive committee of Wayne Republican club, member of the Monday club and of Wayne Business and Professional Women's club and in other capacities she had rendered invaluable service.

Lived at Randolph. Miss Vera Agnes Brenner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Brenner, was born at Randolph, Neb., February 3, 1896, and was thus aged 38 years, 5 months and 23 days. She was graduated from the high school at that place. Her marriage to Russell L. Larson took place at Wayne Presbyterian church on June 18, 1918, after which Mr. Larson went to serve in the World war and Mrs. Larson made her home at Randolph while waiting her companion's return.

WHENEVER something to the credit of the administration happens it is highly perfumed and handed to the president. Whenever something that soils the escutcheon of the New Deal appears, it is charged to General Johnson, Secretary Wallace, Postmaster General Farley, or to one or more of the administration's pedagogical satellites. This policy keeps the president intact for popular worship.

The Christian Science Monitor quotes from the president's June 28 radio speech in which he said: "The days of the seeking of mere party advantage through the misuse of public power are drawing to a close." Then the Monitor tells of the holding up of an appointment because of political objections by the postmaster general. This from the same speech is quoted: "We are increasingly demanding and getting devotion to the public service on the part of every member of the administration, high and low." The Monitor makes this concluding comment:

"But an executive order signed the very same day stripped 177 employees of the Soldiers' Home at Johnson City, Tennessee, of their civil service status, rendering them subject to removal to make way for job seekers whose devotion is chiefly to a political party.

"Perhaps it is too much to expect that any chief executive can obtain complete fulfillment of his ideals for public service in every office in the gigantic congeries of federal services. But the best friends of the administration know that its splendid plans can be carried out effectively only if these charged with the work are imbued with something of the morale which characterizes the British civil servants. What is more, the best friends of good government recognize that despite the president's good intentions and certain of his efforts, a new bureaucracy is being built in the United States which threatens not only to undermine the civil service, but to establish the spoils system on a new scale.

"If the president would not have the New Deal betrayed by spoilsmen, he must take more deliberate steps to see that the dealing is not in the hands of ward bosses and party placemen."

SELF-APPOINTED censors of the tenets of the democratic party assume that any office seeker sailing under the democratic banner, is not entitled to the support of his party if he is not one hundred per cent for the New Deal. Even though the New Deal has largely junked the original principles of the democratic party, substituting bureaucracy for democracy, a democrat is expected, like a chameleon, to adapt himself to the color scheme of the New Deal in its entirety if he expects to reap democratic votes. He must tear himself loose from accustomed moorings and swallow all the theories un-bottled and handed out from college laboratories in order to justify him in asking for a democratic nomination.

Time will tell whether a democrat who has not proved enough of a political acrobat to keep up with the New Deal, is less in accord with popular opinion than the democrat who, guided by the party label, has shouted "yes" and "amen" to everything without investigation or thought.

As an example, the democrat in rural communities of the middle west knows the NRA has operated to the disadvantage of the farm population, retarding rather than helping mid-western recovery, and despite the cries of New Deal bellwethers, we doubt if he would gain less party support by saying what he thinks. He is more regular as a democrat—more regular as a democratic candidate—more fully representative of Jeffersonian principles—than the fellow who chimes in with "me too" when a new or revamped theory appears for experimentation.

THE Saturday Evening Post emphasizes the importance of education, but does not concede that academic training qualifies one to handle successfully all branches of government. Post quotes Owen D. Young as saying that brainy research workers are not necessarily trained for application engineers. Says the Post in part:

"Brains are developed in more ways than by writing theses or making researches. It is indeed a new doctrine in this country that brains and training are solely the result and prerogative of university processes. A college education is a good start, but even with a professorship added on, it is too often nothing more.

"There are all kinds of brain trusters, some liberals and young intellectuals. Young are half baked; others are more mature. The government needs a sprinkling of them, for their services can be made very useful. But others have swelled heads, delusions of grandeur and self-righteousness. There is the type that feels called upon to write and speak with complete authority upon all subjects. From the rule by such men this country should pray to be delivered. For its direction it needs all the brains, all the talents, all the practical experience, all the mature wisdom that can be gathered together, and these are not the monopoly of any one small group of theorists."

SENATORIAL and congressional candidates are out in the hustings making speeches and extending acquaintance. Some wedded to the New Deal laud the prosperity that prevailed during the Wilson administration, neglecting to mention the war as the cause of the prosperity—neglecting to mention the billions piled up in costs that reacted in altitudinal taxes and finally in collapse of the economic fabric. Out of this state of collapse New Dealers are trying to lift the country by the same methods employed in spreading prosperity during the war—huge expenditures of money. A New Deal candidate joyfully points to reduced taxes and in the next breath to increased distribution of public funds, leading the average citizen who carries the burden, to wonder how taxes can keep on going down while expenses keep on going up. If indiscriminate idolization of the administration's policies of economy is not applesauce, what is?

We share the Sioux City Journal's suspicion that Europe has gone crazy. While some Europeans, still able to think logically, may look across the Atlantic and, contemplating the way we loaned them money, think we are headed in the same direction, we cannot help but conclude with the Journal that there is evidence of decadence in any position that opposes peace or orderly reconstruction along democratic lines. War clouds in Europe are certainly a crazy affront to civilization—to efforts for recovery and stabilization.

Both Karl Stefan of Norfolk, and Orville Chatt of Tekamah, republican and democratic candidates for congress respectively, were on the platform at the dedication of the Bigley ravine state park near Ponca Tuesday afternoon, and each spoke briefly. Both are young and alert, fine personalities, in tune with the times and conversant with the needs of the populace, and if both are nominated, the election of either will not cause any tears in the great Third district.

Another valuable kind of training that might well be included in school curriculums would be to teach students not to "pass the buck." Many elders have been so long engrossed in the habit that they may be regarded beyond reform. The young could learn to accept full responsibility and not try in a pinch to shift burdens to absent or defenseless individuals. Passing the blame on is a popular sport that does not augur for sturdy human qualities.

Donald Gallagher, Lincoln attorney out for the republican nomination for attorney general, says the entry of the United States into the world war was the "craziest and most unwarranted" thing in the nation's history, and that instead of saving the world for democracy, it saved it for the "greatest lot of tyrants in history," as witness developments in Europe since the conflict. This opinion sounds reasonable.

The half-inch of rain a week ago followed by cooler elements, refreshed the corn and relieved anxieties. Feelings go up and down in a fitful fashion with the weather during the growing season, but we usually arrive in the autumn with more production than we had expected.

Labor unions have the unpleasant habit of striking when employers and the public are least able to stand the inconvenience and cost. We hope they are about over the striking mania, and that they will give the country a chance to recover without this avoidable handicap.

If northeast Nebraska proves more fortunate than other parts of the state in crop production this year, it will respond to the call for help where it is needed. When sections of the north were out of luck a few years ago, the south Platte country came to the rescue.

Removing The Drouth Cattle. Omaha Journal-Stockman: Part of the Federal Emergency Relief administration's plan for taking care of the starving cattle on western ranges is to select those that are sufficiently well bred and sufficiently strong and ship them to greener pastures in the south. Such cattle are now going by the train load to Virginia, Maryland, Georgia, Arkansas and Mississippi. The theory is that these cattle will revive and fatten on southern pastures in a few months and can then be slaughtered and processed for food. Past experience, however, does not bear out this theory as it has never been found that northern or western bred cattle do well on southern ranges. They will certainly not pay for the added transportation costs although this is apparently a matter of minor consideration or importance at this time.

In the present emergency, in the face of the most disastrous and devastating drouth that has ever visited the country, there is little disposition on the part of anyone to criticize federal relief measures for the cattle growers or the cattle. Anything that can be done must be done quickly and the vigorous action of the government in buying up these starving cattle and getting them out of the country has much to commend it to the nation.

THE DRIFT. Ray Bert Westerfield, professor of political economy at Yale University, evidently does not belong to the group of theorists whose class-room formulas won't work in the field of practice. Writing under the caption, "Relief is Ruining My Town," Mr. Westerfield describes going to the old home town where the spirit of independent industry and saving used to prevail, but where now three-fourths of the people are "on relief" in one form or another. In the old days thrift was spurred by the popular disgrace associated with "going to the poor house", or with accepting charity in any way. After the lapse of days, with mounting paternalism, he found acceptance of charity did not involve embarrassment, but rather a question of discrimination—whether one fellow was able to get more aid than the other fellow. The spirit thence surrenders of spiritual forces that surmount difficulties and win goals. Mr. Westerfield urges an organized movement for thrift and independence as a way to save our civilization from decadence. "Doles may ameliorate wants and quiet agitation," he says, "but they foster rather than cure the basic disease." He would reinforce character to quit looking to the state for help. He would stop the drift to paternalism. The next step would be to communism. Then would follow destruction of institutions—the upsetting of the fundamentals in American life. Manifestly, Mr. Westerfield is not qualified to join the professional group in Washington.

Injured in Crash.

Pender, Neb., July 27.—Vernon Miserer of West Point, Neb., was injured seriously last night in an airplane crash about a mile north of here. He was brought to a Pender hospital, suffering from a brain concussion and cuts about the face and nose. The plane crashed in an oats field but his brother, William, who also was in the ship escaped injury. They had just taken off for West Point when the motor of the plane which was piloted by Vernon Miserer, began missing after it had reached a height of about 200 feet. The pilot attempted to land but the ship nosed down and crashed.

The plane is owned by Art Leisey of West Point. Miserer was removed to West Point by ambulance today.

PRYING SCIENCE.

Erying into the distant ether to make new discoveries is constantly the task of venturesome individuals. The expedition which sailed for the stratosphere from a point near Rapid City early Saturday, did not have the luck expected, but profiting by experience, the next trial will doubtless prove more successful, and little by little, facts about the universe will be added to the aggregate of human knowledge. Simultaneously, Mount Wilson observatory has been busy with its powerful instruments trying to find out more about neighboring planets. Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the observatory, reports that aside from the earth, Mars and Venus are the only ones so far believed to have possibilities for life. One disquieting discovery on Venus is the presence of a superabundance of carbon dioxide which is good for plants, but not for animals like the earth's variety, and so, if Venus is inhabited, its creatures must, like vegetation, thrive on an atmosphere that would paralyze the human organisms of this world. Mars is short of necessary oxygen, has little water-vapor and its temperatures race to beastly extremes. Altogether it would not seem well fitted to sustain the kind of life known here. Little Mercury is a collection of hot slag with no atmosphere or anything else to recommend it as a possible place of abode. Jupiter and Saturn are found over-dosed with ammonia and methane, the latter of which is a killing gas sometimes found in mines. So in this planetary group, there seems no conclusive proof of life outside of the earth, and if the earth is the only inhabited planet in this group, it is more important than we have often been led to believe. As to other and remotely situated groups, they are still more baffling to the speculations of science.

Vinegar We are selling the same fine grade of vinegar that we have handled in previous years. It is a fifty grain made from whole rice apples. It is also pasteurized and filtered. It is true that it costs a few cents more a gallon than the ordinary product. We believe that it is economy to buy this fine grade of vinegar to do your pickling with.

Fruits for Canning As usual you will find at this store nothing but the highest grade of fruits for canning. This week will see the beginning of the Washington peach crop on the market. Pears from that state are now at their best and we believe that it is time for canning this fine fruit. Colorado peaches will be marketed in August this year instead of September as they usually are. Plan now to use some of these fine fruits as no doubt prices on canned fruits will be somewhat higher this winter.

The young man pleaded guilty in county court at Center to charge of manslaughter. He was taken before the district judge Friday but not arraigned, being sent back to Knox county jail for further investigation. The judge was not satisfied with the confession, saying it did not constitute a legal plea of guilty to the charge.

In the confession, Mintken said he and his brother and Charley Olson drove to the Bloomfield camp on June 21 and had some alcohol. When John and Miss Lillian Clausen, 18, returned to the Mintken car, they found Ed. with a gash on his face. Asked about his injury, he said, "It's none of your business, I'll get that guy on the corner." The three started off, and soon stopped and fought, having been arguing because Ed. would "not leave the girl alone." They drove on, then fought again, with Ed. falling into the ditch, the others thinking he had "passed out." They took the unconscious man to a nearby farmhouse where he was soon pronounced dead.

Owing to an influenza paralysis epidemic in the county, with a few cases in Long Beach, the church schools closed. Miss Laura Lyons writes from Long Beach, Calif. "There were more than 1,000 cases, but comparatively few fatal. It seemed good to have the ban lifted and to get back on duty."

"Southern California conference convened in First Methodist church again this year and Bishop James C. Baker presided. The second day a slight tremor was felt, the first for about three months."

"It is surprising how much rehabilitation has been accomplished in Long Beach since the earthquake. The city hall is not completed yet, delayed perhaps by the recall of the council here and the federal loans. There are only two demolished churches yet unconstructed, though the congregations are rallying to the need."

"It was with great regret that we heard of the near drought and intense heat but are glad for the last good report from northeast Nebraska. We have had delightful days, and every night is cool enough for at least one blanket."

"Cheney Golde has been singing in First Methodist church choir for some time. He has an excellent bass voice and is a member of a double quartet. Mrs. May Chace Miller was escorted by her husband to a world tour. Mrs. E. W. Cullen and family and Myrtle Leary have moved much further out and Miss Leary has a good position now. I am still with the elderly sick lady. The fore part of May I represented our local Woman's Relief corps as first delegate and enjoyed that."

"National G. A. R. Commander Russell C. Martin of Los Angeles, National Relief Corps President Mae Lincoln of Aurora, Ill., and many other notables attended the Relief Corps meeting. The two were on President Roosevelt's special train a few days."

"I often wish I could hear your Wayne Herald radio programs, but must content myself with reading the news to me week to week."

"We are glad the strike is ended as it affected Long Beach and Los Angeles a great deal."

Casper Garden Is Fresh And Restful Spot This Summer

The Dr. R. W. Casper garden is a pleasant place in late afternoon or at an evening, particularly at close of a warm day when the closely-cropped green carpet and bright summer blossoms are refreshing and a happy contrast to the hot grey down-town sidewalks and streets. One approaches it by a flight of steps leading down to the grapevine arch. To right is a hollyhock group which a little earlier in the summer, was a mass of pink blossoms shading from pale to deep, rich tones, contrasting with white. Also Dorothy Jean's croquet grounds. The grassy plot to left is centered with a rock bird bath. Dr. Casper's own work, in center of the rose beds. To one side is an irregularly-shaped lily pool with white lilies on its surface, and to the rear, a wall of natural rocks giving a rustic appearance to the corner. White garden furniture invites one to relax and enjoy the quiet. Two years ago this garden was but a weed patch and it has required steady, hard work on Dr. Casper's part to convert it into such a livable and pleasant out-door room. Brilliant California poppies, pink foxgloves, warm golden glow, waxy gladioli and pastel bachelor's buttons flanked the flower beds and spread their fragrance and beauty over the spacious yard.

Girl Scouts Grow In Membership List

If the rate of increase in girl scout membership is any indication of improved business conditions throughout the country, prosperity has made that long anticipated turn around the corner. More than 11,000 new members joined the organization in the month of May, bringing the total active membership of the organization to 345,088. The accelerated rate of growth during the current year is shown by a comparison of registrations for the twelve months ending May 31, 1934, with those of the first five months of this year. The gain for the year was 26,746, of which 29,184 or over 80 per cent registered during the first five months of 1934.

Hoskins Veteran Receives Honors

Two medals for gallantry in action during the World war have recently been presented to Earl Wiseman of Hoskins. He received the George Washington purple heart a short time ago and his latest award is the Silver Cross citation. Mr. Wiseman was one of six young men then living at Ewing who enlisted at Norfolk on May 6, 1917. By Oct. 6 of the same year the group was in the front line trenches in France as members of the First division. After taking part in a number of offensives with the Americans Mr. Wiseman was wounded in the left knee by a sniper's bullet and was in the hospital for some time and did not return to active service. He served in the central American outposts in France, however, until he was sent home in July, 1919. His brother, Charles, was killed at Cantigny, in April, 1918, and only three of the original six from Ewing ever returned home.

No Schoolhouse—Visitor Recalls Classes Held In Churches And Stores

If you were one of those pigtailed, ginghamed schoolgirls or squirrel, towse-headed lads who got their schooling in the old Lutheran chapel or in the old town hall if you have intimate memories of the old American house and Honeck's restaurant—if you can recall a Main street of irregular wooden buildings and furrowed dirt streets—then you should have goggled together with Frank E. Nangle during his week here, for he, too, shared in those early experiences and has a warm spot in his heart for the pals and places of his boyhood.

You see, the Nangles—Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Nangle and five children, came to Wayne from Pennsylvania in the June of 1883, having stopped over a bit in Iowa en route. You'll remember George, now at Portland, Ore., Will, living in Norfolk, Mary, now Mrs. Eph Beckenhauer of Wayne, and Reba, now Mrs. T. T. Jones of this city. The Nangles bought a farm just south of Wayne, living in the house now occupied by the Mrs. Dora Meier family.

Young Frank grew up in the wholesome, friendly atmosphere of a mid-western town in the '80's and '90's, where life centered around the church, the school and music. Among his pals were Frank Miner, Bert Carpenter, Lem Mears, Frank Gaertner, Frank and Harry Gamble.

The Main street they sauntered down, to and from school, was merely two rows of none-too-permanent-looking wooden buildings, mostly one-story. The Boyd hotel was in operation, looking little different from now, and the American house stood at First and Main streets, occupying part of present site of the depot. A frame building housed a bank where the First National now stands. J. A. Lindley was selling real estate, and Chace, Neely & Co., was doing a good hardware business. Dick Honeck's restaurant, in middle of block between First and Second streets, was another center of activity.

They didn't have a schoolhouse at first—just "kept" school in the most convenient church or store building. Young Frank and his brothers and sisters got their schooling in the Lutheran chapel, later known as the Rayburn house, and the Baptist church which was on the corner just east of the old German store. Then, too, they attended school in the old town hall which loomed up imposing and spacious in those days, on site of the Beckenhauer building. The store building on Main street which later became the Phil Kohl drug store, was utilized for a schoolroom, also the old Presbyterian church which was replaced by the present structure. Miss Anna Davies—she's now Mrs. A. A. Welch of Wayne—was Frank Nangle's first teacher. Not much attention was given to highly-polished desks and benches, to intelligence tests and to special projects in those days—usually the hard pews or benches of the church were used—and wrote as best he could, balancing the slate or pad on his knee. The teacher was entirely on her own resources in finding ways to drill the three 'R's and their kindred into her resisting pupils.

Frank Nangle finished the professional teachers' course at Pil College in 1896 and next year started his career, trudging south over the hills morning and night to keep his trust with a few lads and lasses from the nearby farms. For three years he taught, first the Cunningham school four miles southeast, then Stallsmith school which is four miles to southwest. When he arrived in winter time there was a fire to build in a stove entirely innocent of warmth—there was brushing up to do, for your early-day teacher was his own janitor. For this he received $30 per month. Many a time it would be 15 to 20 below zero when the young teacher would start schoolward—at one time there were two long weeks when the thermometer did not reach up to zero day or night! But neither young Frank nor his fellow teachers considered themselves badly treated, victims of hardships—this was an era of hard work, lacking in comforts and luxuries, an age of creative building, rather than resting on the accomplishments of predecessors.

Wayne was always musical, says Mr. Nangle. When Prof. Ezerman came to the college about 1891 he built up keen appreciation of music, and oratorios, operas and concerts were numerous. The choral union came into being, 60 students and city folks taking part, and going to Norfolk at one time to sing for the Nebraska Teachers association. Always there were male quartets and other groups ready to sing for any social gatherings.

The Nangles disposed of part of their land to Frank Weber and another parcel to William Baumgartner. The last 80 was sold in 1903 and the family moved into Wayne city. Frank had left in 1899, going out to the western coast for six years in Leland Stanford university.

Since leaving Stanford, Mr. Nangle has been in business in various places, the past nine years as newspaper publisher. He sold his interests in the Lee County Times at Paw Paw, Ill., about a month ago. With Mrs. Nangle and their two daughters, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Rosemary, he left Sunday after visiting in the Jones and Beckenhauer homes for a week.

"Wayne has always been a high grade town," said the visitor, "due partly to the number of churches established here in early years, and partly to the culture which comes to a college center."

LAURELS

You can give a lad wealth and position,
You may place on his head a crown,
You may give him a reputation
And cry out his name up and down—
You may give him your valuable presents
And feed him with food that is rare,
Place a royal robe on his shoulders,
You may give him more than his share.
But all of these things are so worthless,
Just dress to be washed by the rain,
More likely to hurt than assist him—
You've robbed him and not offered gain.
You've robbed him of every endeavor
To build for himself a good name,
You have given him reputation
But you have never given him fame.
And it's not in your power to do so,
For fame comes but from within;
'Tis just the reward of ambition —
To dam it up is a sin.
And it's often so easy to do it
To a friend or a loving son —
But by him who finds the rare easy
Laurels are never won.

Tabor Reunion Of Interest To Wayne Folks Who Migrated From Eastern Iowa

If you belong to that rather large clan of folks who emigrated over from Mills, Pottawattamie or Fremont county in Iowa, and settled down in Wayne county, you'd have enjoyed being over at Tabor on the Fourth. The Tri-County Old Settlers' association had its 48th annual reunion then, and all the old-timers were back. Beneath the wrinkles and greying hair of many an elderly man or woman, you'd detected the face of some familiar neighbor or townsman. And you'd caught up on the intervening years since you set out westward, learned of the ups and downs of childhood pals, and found that a heap of happenings had taken place since last you met.

And the other home-comers would have been interested in hearing of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Norton; William Orr, Mrs. R. W. Ley, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Strahan, Mrs. June Conger, Mrs. John Larson, Mrs. H. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Jones, John Rime and Mrs. R. E. K. Mellor, all of whom once got the mail at Malvern or Tabor post office. Several have passed on—Mrs. Orr, H. S. Ringland, Mr. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Barrett, the parents of Miss Edith Barrett, Mrs. Rime and Mr. Mellor. Mr. Mellor once had a hardware store in Malvern, and Mr. Orr was in business at Tabor.

Lots of interesting folks back at the reunion. Rev. Peter Jacobs, now of Shenandoah, who used to preach at Malvern and Tabor, gave the address and introduced the special guests. Mrs. M. E. Boston of Malvern, was the oldest person present—she's the mother of the late Mrs. John Rime of Wayne. Turn way back to March 27, 1839, for her birth-date, and that means she was 95 years old last spring. She's sprightly yet. Her family moved to near site of Malvern when she was 17—1856 to be exact.

Mrs. Parmelia Delavan and Mrs. Margaret Delavan have been residents of Mills county over 80 years. The former was born down in Geny county, Mo., on October 25, 1851, and came up to Mills county, in 1882, spending the past 82 years in that vicinity. Her sister, Mrs. Margaret Delavan, was born northwest of Tabor on May 10, 1853. Both women recall seeing the box lodged in a tree which was said to contain body of Chief Waboussie.

Alfred T. Hardy, a Civil war veteran, belonged to that family which settled near Hillside—now a "dead city." He was born in Andrew county, Mo., and came to Fremont county in 1851 with his parents. During the war his company was sent to Devil's lake in Dakota to protect the whites against warring Indians. If you'd been at that reunion you could have questioned him about the buffalo herds he saw up on the plains—at times such large droves that the soldiers had to stop to let them pass.

The Starbuck family—remember—was represented by Elisha Starbuck, retired Glenwood attorney, who owns a 94 years, and is a Civil war veteran. His folks were quakers from Ohio, and he came to Osceola in 1856, enlisting and serving until end of the war.

T. H. Mead of Shenandoah, was 93 years old—his father was born before the United States came into being—eight days before peace treaty of the Revolutionary war

Dividend Paid In Carroll Bank

Checks for Forty Percent Are Paid Depositors On Saturday.

Dividend of 40 percent, amounting to $48,969, was paid depositors of the closed Carroll State bank on Saturday through the state banking department, the checks being sent out from State National bank of Wayne. Reconstruction Finance corporation loan on part of the bank's assets and collection provided the sum paid.

The bank, which closed about a year ago, paid a five percent dividend on the old trust last fall. And at that time all accounts under $10 were paid in full. The payment just received is the second dividend. Depositors will receive more at a later date.

Lutheran Picnic Is Well Attended

The St. Paul Lutheran picnic, held Sunday at the Julius Hinnerichs grove, was a big success from attendance and interest. About 200 attended the morning service at which Rev. C. E. Fredrickson spoke, and nearly 300 were present for the afternoon program which included playlets by the Bible class, choir singing, dialogues and recitations by the Sunday school. Women served picnic dinner. Men won from the women by one point in a kitenball game.

Tells Of Exciting Happenings In San Francisco Strike

A Wayne young woman who was in San Francisco during the recent strike trouble, writes interestingly of the situation which residents of the Golden Gate city faced, their transportation, deliveries and shipping cut off.

have been spending a lot of my time near the road listening to reports on the strike in San Francisco, so I decided that I must get a picture for myself, something to tell the grandchildren, in lieu of Indians. At South San Francisco there were crowds of men in the street, gathered at the corners to prevent any trucks from going through. They had overturned quite a number of trucks already, and sent others back. There were only three entrances to San Francisco and pickets at them all, so that the city is really beleaguered. The men were very slouchy looking and there were lots of children around—really just a mob action.

"Most of the gas stations were closed; all out of gas. The few which were still open had lots of cars gathered, filling up. The situation for gas was really very acute. The strikers were allowing only the hospitals to use it. Apartment owners were complaining that there wasn't enough fuel to heat and light. There were so many commuters who needed their cars that the situation was very serious.

"When I arrived at the city, it was very quiet at the station. And then I realized that there were no taxis around—they had struck early that morning. I forgot to wear walking shoes so I couldn't go down to the wharves, but the station was one of the other central places for the strikers. There were three armed policemen at each corner there, no exaggeration, making about 12 policemen to each intersection. Special servicemen in uniform were there in big cars to act as messengers and the like.

"The street cars were still running, but most of the conductors belong to the union, and they were ready to strike. Going up from the station we passed lots of warehouses, and they were locked tight as possible—not even the windows were open. There were lots of men hanging around in the streets—most of them, poor devils, were forced to strike, though they didn't want to.

"The streets were gaily decorated with flags for the Knights of Templar convention which ended today. Welcome, Sir Knight! and also their motto 'In Signo Vinco.' In the square in the center of the city was a huge temporary monument honoring the Knights, and every half hour from it there is an electrical transcription of 'Onward Christian Soldiers' which could be heard for blocks. Most startling: "But there was the weirdest atmosphere about the city. I couldn't understand, and then I realized. No taxis—everyone staying at home so they wouldn't be stranded when the street cars strike. No cars because there was no more gas. It was particularly noticeable at noon when the streets are usually crowded. The few people around were serious looking and the air quite tense, as if everyone was waiting for something to happen. The newsboys had extras out every few hours, reporting on the strike. The cooks were supposed to strike next day, and they might as well because the fresh meat and vegetables can last only three days or more, although they figure that the canned goods will last for a month. There had been a stampede of buyers at the food stores laying in supplies, but the department stores were very quiet.

"The butchers planned to strike next day. There were 2,500 longshoremen on strike and 100,000 today. The 1,000 taxmen quit today, although they will permit chauffeurs for hospital emergency use and for funerals. The national guards are patrolling—they allow the picketing of commercial traffic and will not interfere unless there is violence. All bridges are guarded against communists who are feared to cause terrorism. Pawnshops have been asked to close because of danger of looting. There is a move to bring relief to the strikers and thus prolong the strike.

"Rich men are greatly scared. In fact, they predicted an overthrow something like the Russian one, where the revolutionists got control of the lights, gas and telephones and thus had a bloodless revolution. Lots of people are getting out of the city. Of course the rich ones won't starve to death but their homes are in danger of any mob, if it is true that communists are agitating. That seems to be the general belief of the governing men. The garages are going to strike this week-end. A general strike is thought to be sure, though it doesn't seem possible to me."

Dixon County Farm News. Greth M. Dunn, County Agricultural Agent, Ponca, Nebraska.

In face of possible feed shortages, many farmers will no doubt be interested in the inexpensive trench silo.

Greth M. Dunn, county agricultural agent, advises farmers interested in this type of silo to make their plans early. Extension circular, "The Trench Silo," is available at the county agent's office in Ponca.

Immature corn is best harvested with a grain or corn binder. This fodder should be well cured before storing in barns or sheds. This young or immature corn should by all means, be cut for feed if weather conditions will not permit mature growth.

Dr. F. D. Klein, head of the agronomy department at the University of Nebraska, advises that harvesting immature corn should be delayed as long as possible. When it fires and dries and begins to go down, it should be harvested. Corn in this stage is nearly always high in protein and makes good feed.

Sorghums will stand more firing than corn and should be left until the last minute for they will stage a real comeback with rain.

Weeds on Contracted Acres. Many tenants and landlords find now that the contracted acres are veritable forests of sunflowers, cockleburrs and what-not. According to agreement in the corn-hog contract, the tenant must keep down excessive weed growth.

A heavy growth of weeds saps soil moisture and infests the land with more seed for next year. Adjoining farms are also infested in many cases, with an avalanche of weed seeds. In checking for compliance, tenants will be expected to have fulfilled the clause to control weeds on all contracted land.

Checking for Compliance. All farms under corn-hog contract, will be checked for fulfillment of contract. The acres will be measured by the supervisor for that district.

Hogs will be counted and record books inspected for completeness.

It is very important to have these books up to date when the inspector calls for them.

Prouth Relief for August. Only farmers with 10 units of livestock or less can obtain relief aid. All relief will now be on a work cash basis. Farmers with more than ten units of livestock need not apply. All relief must be put on a pure subsistence basis. If farmers are not out of feed it would no doubt be better to hold down, or below, ten units and try to carry what is left on their own responsibility.

Nebraska Cattle Sold. Fifty-two counties are now on the emergency relief list in Nebraska. Cattle are literally starving over more than one-half of the state.

Farmers wishing to buy good cattle should get in touch with the county agricultural agent at Ponca. Many farmers throughout the state must sell their purebred herds.

Corn Loans. The corn loan maturity date has been extended to September 1, according to latest news of the agricultural adjustment administration "News Digest."

Prompt settlement will be asked, however, on secured corn which is in poor condition or in cribs which do not offer adequate protection.

Get in touch with the nearest official corn sealer for up to date information on these loans.
