made by Judge Stewart this week. So he ruled in the matter of the Citizens State Bank of Winside, finding due Walter Spindler, plaintiff for district 79 the amount of $437.35 and due Mr. Reeg district 51 the amount of $370.75. These are to be paid before general depositors, the judge stated. Attorney for the state banking department excepted which gives right to appeal.

In the matter of the Carroll State Bank, insolvent, the court also ruled that the village claim of $4,886.51 is preferred and is entitled to payment in full before general depositors are paid. M. S. Linn and H. C. Bartels appeared for the village. The state department again excepted. In the Carroll bank case the receiver was also ordered to pay to Gus Paulsen a dividend which is being withheld.

Case charging Harold Nelson with chicken theft and the case charging Floyd Richardson with harboring a criminal were dismissed by the county attorney for lack of evidence.

In the automobile damage action filed by Earl Fahrenholz against William Deck, attorney asked medical examination of defendant and the court appointed the Campbell clinic at Norfolk to make such examination and report at another court session. Action to keep peace, filed against Wm. R. Mitchell, was dismissed on showing of the county attorney. In equity case of Anna Hovendick against John Gabler, trial was continued until later this fall.

Other transactions of the court included rulings on motions. No divorce actions were heard.

Second Article

HERBERT Hoover's second article on government business appeared last week in the Saturday Evening Post. The former president said no system of government can be part regimentation and part free; part dictatorship and part democracy.

Speaking of the difference between cooperation and bureaucracy, he says: 'Our American civilization is based upon the maximum of free will in an ordered Liberty. Aside from the very philosophy of Liberty, the practicalities are that when free men come together in economic life they pool a wealth of practical experience and conscientious responsibility.'

Commenting on our explanation of a few weeks ago, touching our decision not to run for congress, Frank O. Edgecombe, in his Geneva Signal, endorses our candidacy which didn't materialize, indicating what the country lost by the blow-up of our incipient ambition.

Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, an old-fashioned democrat with old-fashioned ideas about the constitution and preservation of human liberties, was the speaker on constitution day at the fair in Chicago, and he arraigned New Deal experiments with withering verbal fire.

This brief closing paragraph is stimulating: 'The spark of liberty in the mind and spirit of man cannot be long extinguished; it will break into flames that will destroy every coercion which seeks to limit it.'

The American Constitution

THIS is constitution week, and that fundamental document has been explained and discussed by students everywhere. The wisdom of the framers is not questioned by those who would wreck it in spots to suit modern convenience.

The constitution was written to safeguard individual liberties at the time and to anticipate popular needs for a long time in the future. It has been changed a number of times in the regular way to meet new demands.

Constitution week should teach people the inviolability of the document, and if it is to be changed it should be done at the instance of the voice of the people. Might as well set aside the country's laws or abrogate the Ten Commandments as to twist or violate the constitution because it does not comply with the notions of individuals hoisted into temporary power.

Maine Result

ACCORDING to David Lawrence, President Roosevelt wrote a very nice and encouraging letter to Governor Louis J. Brann of Maine, concerning the prospect of a federal award of $50,000,000 for development of the Bay of Fundy into a power project.

in his campaign in behalf of himself and other New Deal candidates. The president said a considerable amount of government funds was available for public works, indicating that the Bay of Fundy plan would be easy if certain requirements were met. Lawrence said the governor boasted during the campaign that he had already received 198 millions of dollars for his state from the federal government, and then in addition he dangled before voters the fifty-million-dollar Bay of Fundy power prospect as a clincher, and it proved enough of one to win an unexpected proportion of the public offices.

The Omaha Journal-Stockman calls attention to the government's gigantic plans to feed the needy during the coming winter. Great stores of food are being gathered for the purpose, and the result will both supply the hungry and absorb surpluses. Says the Journal-Stockman: 'We fed our own and other soldiers just as freely during the World war. Why not now feed the victims of an economic disaster just as freely and generously? There may be flaws in the economic end of the program that will sooner or later show up to plague us but there can be little merited criticism of our elaborate relief program.'

Arthur Brisbane points out advantages accruing to cotton growers in South America through curtailed production in the United States. The representative of an English firm purchasing cotton in Brazil says production has been doubled, and will be still further increased, that unemployment has been reduced and all lines of industry stimulated. The Englishman is quoted as saying that if the curtailed production policy continues in this country another year the main cotton market will be permanently lodged in South America.

Commenting on our explanation of a few weeks ago, touching our decision not to run for congress, Frank O. Edgecombe, in his Geneva Signal, endorses our candidacy which didn't materialize, indicating what the country lost by the blow-up of our incipient ambition. Editor Edgecombe is the only editor in the state who had the courage to come out for us—a fact which only strengthens our high opinion of his fortitude and wisdom.

Editor W. F. Cram, Jeffersonian democrat of Fairbury, says that inasmuch as there is a demand to place the force of the state behind the NRA, he will not permit his newspaper to support any candidate for governor, lieutenant governor or member of the legislature who will not openly pledge himself to oppose a state NRA law.

Using Wheat Substitutes.

Omaha Journal-Stockman: In milling circles there is considerable alarm over the steadily advancing price of wheat flour and the steadily declining consumption of this common, everyday article of food. The Department of Commerce calls attention to the fact that production of wheat flour during the latter half of 1933 and of 1934 to date has been decidedly below the average of recent years.

Millers give a variety of reasons for this decrease in consumption. First, of course, is the advance in the price due to the processing tax on wheat and the higher cost of milling on account of the NRA code. The public is using less flour in the homes than ever and depending more and more on the bakeries for their bread and pie, cake and cookies and the baker complain that they are unable to pass the increased costs along to consumers.

The public is turning to wheat substitutes even more generally than they did in war times. Wheat bread is no longer the real staff of life and the comparatively low prices of corn, rice, potatoes and other acceptable substitutes for wheat in recent months have been responsible for the increasing use of these foods! People do not like the idea of taxing foods, especially when cheaper foods are available.

Ostensibly these processing taxes are supposed to be paid by consumers for the benefit of producers but experience is demonstrating that the theory does not always work.

To Be Good Natured.

Lincoln Journal: Upton Sinclair says he is going to learn to be good natured. As this is necessary to successful politics Mr. Sinclair will probably make a sincere effort. He has been looking on the dark side of things so long that it will be difficult. If he succeeds, it will be because he finds it necessary. Smiling may do him good. It may change the color of things from dark blue to something akin to rose tints. And that will be worth more to Sinclair and to those who associate with him than the governorship of California. So if Sinclair becomes companionate and pleasant he will win, whether the election goes as he hopes or not. The real test of his ability to smile might come on election night if his enemies triumph.

JUST AN EXCUSE.

Assassination of Archduke Ferdinand twenty years ago was the spark that started the world conflagration—the world war that cost millions of lives and billions of dollars. Not only did the war precipitate tremendous waste of lives and treasure, entailing untold human miseries, but the world's orderly processes were so disrupted and its business and market balances were so wrecked that we are still engaged in trying to recover from the consequences. But killing of the archduke was just an excuse. European countries were eyeing one another suspiciously—ready to thrash over grievances on the battle field. If the archduke's death hadn't furnished the excuse, some other pretext would have been found. But for the folly of the war, the world has paid dearly, and is still paying. Instead of making the world safe for democracy, the giant conflict made it safe for nearly every other form of government that men could conceive.

clearly and constructively? Must a fellow have read Blackstone and have a few rules of court procedure tucked away in his cranial anatomy in order to feel the pulsations of constituents, know what they want and need and look out for their welfare in the councils of the nation?

Query as to Schooling. Mr. Shields wants to know where Stefan was educated. Does that matter since he is not likely to be associated with the Phds in the administration's inner circles? Isn't it more important to know he will measure up to the task in intelligence and judgment as his training and experience would indicate? No one asked Abe Lincoln where he attended school. No one requested him to show his college degree to see if he had the necessary qualifications to emancipate the slaves and lead the country out of civil war. The quality of his immortal Gettysburg speech was not judged by the place or time he devoted to acquiring an education.

Away from the Microphone. Appearance of the republican candidate at county fairs and at other public gatherings is a sufficient refutation of the charge that he would show off to a disadvantage away from a microphone. Not only have ovations testified to his popularity, but his talks and personality have intensified it.

Touching the New Deal. Mr. Shields seems solicitous over the variety of Stefan's politics. He thinks he may endorse part or all of the New Deal, or be against part or all of it, but in any event that he ought to be defeated. We feel sure that many Jeffersonian democrats who have watched repudiation of nearly every plank in the last national democratic platform will join republicans in the position that the more Stefan criticises certain variegates of the New Deal, the stronger will they be disposed to urge his election to succeed the present incumbent whose fault lies in his smug acceptance of all administration policies. The reason offered for his reelection is the very reason a majority will be persuaded to swing to the other fellow.

Plan For Convention. Executive committee of the State Teachers' association, district No. 3, met in Norfolk Saturday to arrange for the district meeting in that city October 26 and 27.

Car Keys Stolen. While William VonSeggern, Jr. was attending Wayne county fair last Thursday evening, auto keys were taken from the pocket of his car.

IN THE EAST. A New Jersey man told a wild story of wild western cattle, so that terror filled thought of luring them into the east to be fed and fattened. The New Jersey fellow said a six-foot fence didn't mean anything to a western cow, and that the damage she could do would soon turn profit to loss. Owners of eastern pasture lands leased at $1 per cow per month must be prepared to take care of the cattle and be responsible for any damage done. It is said New Hampshire and Vermont refused to be hosts to western cattle, but easterners have concluded that if the New Jersey man's idea of western cattle is correct, no fences will hold them and that they will roam and forage at will, disregarding the boundaries of states and the wishes of the populace. Also easterners have the notion that a western cow is such a mountain of bones, spending so much energy scaling fences and performing other gymnastics, that she couldn't be fattened within the scheduled period. Easterners seem still to see dimly in understanding the west. If they could but attend the west's annual county fairs and inspect the fine specimens of live stock on display, they would be able to arrive at the facts and express more rational opinions.

New Fall Crop Of Wild Greens

In the fall and winter, what do you use for greens? Especially if you live on a farm in the middle and mountain west, what can you use for greens this fall and winter?

The answer to this question, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. department of Agriculture, is a special one this year. There have been rains at last in the drouth areas, and there have been rains in many other places, too...

One such weed is "pusley" more correctly purslane, which is a wild relative of that bright little flower that grew in your grandmother's garden, portulaca.

Serve it simply with butter or bacon fat. And then, to make sure of a supply of greens for winter, can some of the pusley. The commercial canners, as well as the Bureau of Home Economics, have been trying out canned "pusley" and they say it is good.

For another kind of wild greens now, there is lambquarters. Like pusley this weed too has sprung up after the rains. Perhaps you call it grossfoot, or possibly pigweed. All these names are used for this same plant, which botanists call Chenopodium album.

According to Miss Miriam Birds-eye, nutritionist of the extension service, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, redroot which grows almost everywhere except in the extreme north, is not much used in the Middle West so far, but it should now come into its own.

She suggests using it both for broth and as greens. "Use the young tender tips (not those with well developed flower spikes) and strip the leaves from the tougher stems. Wash well, and cook in a small quantity of boiling salted water for 3 to 5 minutes. Drain off the water for bouillon. Chop the leaves lightly and season them with salt and butter or bacon fat. You will enjoy their bright green color, as well as their tenderness and flavor.

Miss Birds-eye, who is now in the west, reports some interesting facts about the resourcefulness of the housewives in the drouth regions. Some of them, in Minnesota particularly, have been using young alfalfa shoots as greens...

You need green foods, and if the regular supply has failed, it is very necessary to look about for others. The late rains have come in time to help out with this problem. So don't overlook the possibilities among the edible weeds. Use them as long as they last, and if your winter supply of green foods is not provided for in some other way, put up some of these wild greens in cans.

Pick over the greens, discarding any imperfect leaves and tough, fibrous stems. Wash carefully in running water or through a number of waters, lifting the greens out each time and making sure all the sand is washed out. Steam or heat the greens in a covered vessel until completely wilted, adding in the latter case just enough water to prevent burning. Pack boiling hot into the containers, taking care that the material is not packed too solidly and that there is sufficient liquid to cover, adding boiling water if necessary. Add 1 teaspoon salt to each quart. Process immediately in a steam pressure cooker, at 15 pounds pressure or 250° F., quart glass jars for 65 minutes, and No. 2 tin cans for 55 minutes. Greens should not be canned in No. 3 tin cans, because of the difficulty of heat penetration.

Farms Incomes 1934 vs. 1933. Omaha Journal Stockman: Farmers' purchasing power seems to be a matter of much controversy among the economists. The department of agriculture has been diligently deluging the country with propaganda to the effect that benefit payments under the wheat, corn and hog programs more than offset the drought losses and of the departmental propaganda is being ground out in Washington that has aroused more or less suspicion and for this reason the analysis by the Alexander Hamilton Institute, an unbiased and generally reliable financial authority, is of considerable interest just now: "Cash income from farm products marketed in July was lower than a year ago for the third consecutive month," declares the Institute's survey. "It totaled $467,000,000 last year as against $480,000,000 last year, a decrease of 2.7 per cent. This year, however, the farmers were helped by benefit payments from the government, amounting to $81,000,000, whereas in July last year, there were no benefit payments. These payments more than offset the decrease in income from marketings and the farmers' total income this year was $568,000,000 as against $480,000,000 last year, an increase of 3.8 per cent.

"This increase in farm income, however, was not sufficient to offset the 14.0 per cent rise in the prices of goods which the farmers buy." Consequently, while their income in July was 3.8 per cent higher than a year ago, their purchasing power was 8.9 per cent lower. "The showing for the first seven months of this year was more favorable than for July alone. While cash income from farm marketings was lower in July and in the two previous months than a year ago, this decrease was more than offset by a sharp gain during the first four months of the year. In addition, the farmers received $180,000,000 in benefit payments where last year they received no such payments. Consequently, the farmers' total income for the first seven months amounted to $3,074,000,000 this year as against $2,512,000,000 last year, an increase of 22.3 per cent. This gain was more than sufficient to offset the rise in the prices of goods which the farmers buy, amounting to 17.5 per cent for the first seven months this year as compared with the same period last year. The farmer's purchasing power for this period was thus 4.1 per cent higher than a year ago."

Naturally farmers as well as others are much confused by the conflicting statements as to farm income and farm purchasing power under existing conditions. On the whole, however, it would look as if higher prices for farm products and the benefit payments by the government would largely make up for the heavy crop losses during 1934 but it seems to be one of those problems that each farmer and stock grower must figure out for himself.

Wayne Instructor On Research Staff Of Big Factories

Assemble line is a purely American innovation, says Dr. James E. Brock of Marion, Ind., who came to Wayne this month as temporary head of the physical science department at Wayne State Teachers college.

Dr. Brock's knowledge of commercial engineering has been gained through wide experience. He is a native of Indiana, educated at University of Indiana, at University of Wisconsin and Columbia university.

At Firestone plant he was in charge of all heat control instruments for curing of tires, watching temperatures of the huge vats. Monthly there were from 3,000 to 4,000 thermometers to be checked over.

The Household Utilities factory had a production line as long as the Science building, with women standing shoulder to shoulder assembling radios.

The Indiana Truck company started its assembly line with a few iron bolts, brought in parts by crane and trays and ran the truck out at far end under its own power.

The large firms used to go to big engineering schools a few years ago and employ their future staff members as juniors, taking them into the plants right after graduation.

Dr. and Mrs. Brock and their two sons, James K. and George William, are occupying the Mrs. S. R. Theobald house. The two boys attend College High school.

Newspaper Tells Memorable Story Of Assassination

"Extra. Death of the President, Secretary Seward Dagerret in His Bed but not Mortally Wounded. Intense Excitement in Washington. Jeff. Davis at Danville. His Latest Appeal to His Deluded Followers. Sherman—His Army Moving." So read the headlines on a prized copy of the New York Herald for Saturday, April 30, 1865, which is property of Rev. M. C. Hoovers of Wayne.

The night before President Lincoln had been shot while sitting in his private box at Ford's theatre with Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Harris and Major Rathburn. The assassin suddenly entered the box, shot the president, then leaped upon the stage, brandishing a large dagger or knife, and made his escape through rear of the theatre after shouting "Sic Semper Tyrannis!"

The capitol city was thrown into intense excitement. Rumors were magnified until nearly every member of the cabinet was reported killed.

A well-dressed man forced his way into Secretary Seward's house that same evening and stabbed the cabinet officer, also cutting his son. Neither attack was fatal. Skimming the headlines we realize that it was a nation in turmoil which had lost its leader.

Richmond, rebel capitol, was evacuated by the southern troops and a sad affair it must have been. The troops, already sensing ultimate defeat, left the city unprotected. Mobs broke into stores, burned most of Main street and the mills. Street fighting ensued.

Upsetting news from other countries, too—Brazilians were in possession of Montevideo. New Orleans cotton market quoted cotton at 42c a pound.

FAIR NOTES

Sauntering down machinery row, one finds some very practical models of the machinery family holding open house—tractors, corn shellers, windmills, wagons, separators, in fact, all kinds of farm machinery.

Midway was a miniature Enchanted Island to youngsters on Thursday for scarcely a one but clutched tightly in his palm a goodly number of free ride tickets.

The 4-H baby beves numbered 64 from the Wayne, Hoskins and Winside clubs, and included some quite well finished animals, a few showing excellent gains.

Fine arts section reported 90 entries for prizes, and 24 exhibits, totalling 114 in all. Mrs. Fred Blair and Mrs. W. A. Hiscox were in charge and they report a better department than last year.

Two big hog barns, well filled. A few less than last year, according to W. H. Neely, the superintendent, but a better showing. Nicely finished animals when one considers the lack of corn crop.

Not many horses in the horse barn, excepting the seven huge Clydesdales which made up the Omaha Stock Yards team.

The domestic products section was a tempting place, particularly just before mealtime. Cakes, cookies, breads and pies in profusion, colorful cans of fruits and vegetables.

More 4-H sewing club entries than ever before, says Mrs. E. W. Huse. Three clubs taking part—sending their carefully-stitched, carefully pressed garments, including laundry bags, dresses, slips, holders, aprons and handkerchiefs.

One Wayne resident must have thought that the Indians had come to take back some of the land so many pessimists are now suggesting.

Wayne carried off the school exhibit honors, Carroll came second, Winside third, Hoskins fourth, and Sholes, fifth.

Some clever pieces here, too. Carroll had a most complete and "definite" exhibit. Melvin Harmer constructed the sturdy log cabin outside school house.

Altona parochial school was represented with four attractive bird-houses, inviting to birds.

Hoskins public school's collection of woods growing in Wayne county, and of wild flowers was noteworthy. Also the wood-work, gilded glass and snow-work.

A nice collection of hand-made rugs—crocheted, hooked and woven—some from old sweaters, others from silk scraps or silk stockings. Two minked rugs were there for supper.

scouring robes... an embroidered scarf in rich purples and greens, done by Mrs. Carl Bertson back home in Sweden.

Five times as many apples as last year, reports D. Hall who is superintendent of horticultural exhibits. Big increase in cut flowers, with extra nice asters in varying purples and pinks.

Did you note the peanut plants? Looks like quite a "goober" crop. Green kohlrabi, purple kohlrabi, cabbage-like vegetables of Swedish origin.

The 4-H pigs occupied a good-sized tent... they grunted away the hours, showing no interest whatever in visitors.

The sharp "clink" of horseshoe connecting with the stake, directed followers of "barnyard golf" to the horseshoe contest.

The Omaha Stock Yards team held open house throughout the fair, and hundreds of folks streamed through the barn to see the big fellows.

Business meeting of Degree of Honor was held last Thursday evening with Mrs. L. E. Panabaker. The chapter meets in October with Mrs. Panabaker and a committee will serve.

Mrs. Blaine Ellis. Mrs. Blaine Ellis entertained Apron club last Thursday. Mrs. W. J. Evans was a guest.

Here and There Club. Members of Here and There club met last Thursday with Mrs. Eathy Lutz.

Young People's Class. Young People's Bible Study class met Friday evening with Miss Charlotte Ziegler.

Advertising for Frouble. Nebraska Farmer: A government taxer, in the employ of the NRA, recently gave the following statement to daily papers in Lincoln:

"After three months work and observation, I've come to the conclusion that some matters, neither settled nor explained, must be given publicity. No employee need fear registering a complaint where it is justified. Ample protection will be given and he will not lose his job."

Evidently business was getting a little slack, so this young man in order to continue a job for himself, invites employees who now have jobs to equal on their employers.

Wayne Training school had a Latin project showing much thought and labor. Dressed dolls in clothing of the early Romans, jyre harp, chariot model, soap figures.

Rural exhibits showed some excellent work being done by teachers and their charges. "I must have my own and use them every day" the title of a poster with handkerchief, soap, tooth brush and paste, comb, file, wash cloth and towel attached.
