SOME UNFINISHED BUSINESS PASSED ON TO NEW YEAR

WAYNE and vicinity did not see all their prospects of a year ago realized during 1934, though gratifying headway was made in some building operations, and it is expected delayed improvements will appear during the forthcoming year. The proposed municipal auditorium was expected to materialize during the year, but one obstacle after another postponed construction until it will now have to be passed over to 1935 as unfinished business. Delays have proved expensive as well as annoying, but the improvement program when realized to be worth the cost in extra dollars and extra patience. Another improvement that has been dragging along at a snail's pace is the Wayne-Pierce highway with connecting branches to Carroll and Winside. It is hoped the coming year will see this slowly developing road improvement completed with hard-surfacing that will keep travelers out of the mud in times of wet weather. We enter the New Year with high hopes for substantial progress.

Omaha Combines Crime Detection With Sports-Love

Lloyd W. Longnecker, Omaha detective and quail-defender, was in Wayne Saturday, and discoursed with local sportsmen on the need for providing corn for the birds during the winter. "Give the quail New Year's dinners of corn," he urged.

It seems that when Mr. Longnecker was a boy Bob-Whites were so plentiful that he killed hundreds of them with a broomstick. Now he wants to put back into the state what he so ruthlessly destroyed years ago. "The quail's a valuable bird to farmers, says the enthusiast. Half of its food is weed seeds, and from June to September 46 percent of what it eats is insects."

There are quite a few quail in this section but not enough for an open season such as in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Minnesota. It fact, it's been 16 years since there was open season on quail in the state. The present stock can be preserved if the birds are fed—proper method in this is to prop shock fodder up high leaving a four-way tunnel underneath for protection from hawks, etc. Settings of quail eggs were disposed of locally by Mr. Longnecker.

Revived Weaving Art Is Fascinating To The Hanscoms

When Prof. and Mrs. H. H. Hanscom's gift-wrapped packages went forth this season, they carried with them a tradition in the best American art form for these two have revived the old art and found it both fascinating and worthwhile.

Lost for many years, early American weaving was brought to life by Mary M. Atwater, Montana woman who is now an authority on patterns and history of the art. The Hanscoms became interested in weaving while visiting at McMinnville, Ore., last summer. They met there a Miss Pierce who had taken up weaving since retiring as art teacher, and who made lovely rugs, coverlets and draperies on her 36-inch loom.

The Hanscoms acquired a hand loom the first of October and have since completed about 18 pieces, including pillow tops in summer-and-winter pattern, men's silk-and-wool scarfs with border pattern and fringe, wee finger-tip towels with colored borders, and tuck-tight handbags with zipper tops and all hand-woven linings.

It's absorbing work, not too slow. For plain weaving, you can finish up about eight inches in an hour. The Hanscom's table loom is light, compact—much in contrast to the cumbersome wooden looms used by our early ancestors. Spools of thread are arranged across the beam, 600 threads wide. These threads are laced through wire heddles on the loom and sleyed through the reed and then tied to the cloth beam. The weaver forms the pattern by working the "harness," which raise certain threads above the others—the shuttle is passed through between these threads and another row is added to the pattern taking form.

Women who settled on New England's coast in the very early days of our colonization, had to weave all their own clothing and that for their menfolk and children, also the sheets, coverlets and drapes. They had big clumsy looms... hours and hours they labored to turn out a sturdy sheet or a coverlet. These coverlets, now much-prized possessions of antique lovers, are strictly American innovations.

The blue-and-white coverlet originated first, and was the last to succumb to modern machine. With coming of the power loom, weaving died out in this country, although in the south it is taught women in Berea and Crossmore schools.

That art of weaving is as old as history itself, is proven by fragments of cloth in possession of the Hanscoms, these being found in pre-Inca tombs in South America, and estimated from 3,000 to 5,000 years old. Indians had woven these, on crude looms and worked out interesting although not complicated patterns.

Most interesting of the revived patterns are summer-and-winter, which has no long threads in the pattern and has a third shade where the two threads intermingle, the double-woven which has two distinct colors and no others, and which made its appearance in time of the comfortable colonial home, not the log cabin, then the reverse twill and the jacquard. The old threading draughts were handed down from mother to daughter, and circulated among neighbors.

The Hanscoms are enjoying the working out of original weaving patterns, and later intend to take up Scandinavian weaving.

A Very Important Announcement. On July 31, Mr. H. W. Elkberg and Mr. W. F. Vestal sold their stocks in the Brown-Elkberg company to McDonald brothers of New York City and Oakland, California.

While ordinarily the transaction of sale of stock is of no interest to the buying public, we feel that we owe it to our friends and customers to state the exact status of the new set up. Mr. E. E. Brown, president and one of the founders, retains his entire interest, and will continue in his capacity as president of the firm. Mr. L. T. Johnson of Holdrege, Nebraska, who has closely identified in the various phases of the business retains his former interest and will serve as secretary and treasurer. All others who occupy positions as managers also retain their stock. Mr. D. G. McDonald serves as vice-president.

The successful policies of the company in the past will continue exactly the same in the future. No change in merchandising policies—the same high standard of quality, and the same complete stocks and assortments.

The men who have come into the company have spent their lives in the merchandising business. By actual experience through many years they know what is necessary to keep the patronage and the good will of its customers. They know that stocks must be complete—know that quality must be a high standard—they know that it must be sold rapidly so that constant supply of new merchandise and styles is flowing through the stores, and at moderate mark ups.

It was a great compliment to the stability and inward worth of our organization that these men cast their lot with us. In spite of the unfavorable crop conditions of the territory adjoining the towns where our stores are located, they have joined us and will add their efforts to ours in making our stores "The best place in town to trade."

Sound Ideas THE cry for a rejuvenated republican party with constructive and forward-looking principles, has been answered by the Saturday Evening Post whose editor reproduces as sound American doctrine excerpts from speeches delivered by President Roosevelt during the 1932 national campaign. The Post offers these excerpts as worthy of consideration by republican chieftains in shaping future policies. It seems a little strange to borrow inspiration from democracy's erstwhile thunderings, but in doing so there is no danger of trespassing on democracy's subsequent performances as enacted by the administration.

The Post quotes the democratic presidential candidate's reference to the unnecessary mounting cost of government, the multiplicity of offices and bureaus, the increasing tax loads under which he said "taxpayers literally groan." He is quoted as saying that "relief can come only through resolute, courageous cutting." Not only the national government, but state governments were warned against unnecessary machinery and unnecessary positions in government. He strongly advocated abolishing useless commissions, bureaus and functions. The high cost of government was denounced as a "brake on any return to normal business activity." He demanded sound currency and no deficits. He proposed a reduction of 25 per cent in federal government operations. Warning against governmental interference with private business, he said: "Every man has a right to his own property; which means a right to be assured to the fullest extent attainable in the safety of his savings."

Dangers to the gold standard or possible repayment of loans in depreciated currency were scorned as doing utter violence to the long established business integrity of the country. The democratic presidential candidate, brushing aside the fears of the opposition, quoted from the democratic platform which said: "We advocate a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards." The candidate added: "That is plain English." In fact, that and other things were made so plain in the democratic platform and in subsequent speeches that the inconsistency of performance following March 4, 1933, was mightily intensified.

The Post thinks the only sound and winning course for the republican party to pursue is to cut out fliriting with fallacies and reconstruct on a sound basis on which prosperity may be securely and permanently built. And it thinks a lot of sound ideas may be salvaged from the wrecked platform and abandoned speeches of the democratic organization in 1932.

Old-Age Bragging WE have been advised that as one merges into what is considered "old age," he is inclined to brag, even if there isn't much if anything to brag about. Blowing one's horn with employment of sufficient imagination to make a good showing, is pointed out as a weakness often manifested in the course of declining years. In extenuation, it may be said that nearly every fellow who is approaching the final curtain, has accomplished some useful and important things, and as he moves around, with pristine vigor gone and prospect shortened, he is disposed to do some reviewing within the hearing of those who are in the heyday of life, and who are in the thick of present-day activities. Much of real merit may be found in the record of one whose best days are over, and while the oldest may pay little attention to what happened yesterday, he has a clear recollection of what happened fifty years ago. So, he repeats his story of achievement, and he may brag a little, but after all his experience is worth considering as illumination and ballast for the ventures of youth. But to fellow-olders we would suggest that we resolve to dig forth reminiscences, involving self-attainment in homeopathic quantities, and then only as requested, cutting out everything that bears remotest semblance to bragging.

Passing Of Dr. Bixby THE death of Dr. A. L. Bixby at his home in Lincoln Christmas eve, without preliminary sickness, without a warning sign of the approaching end—following a day of usual activities—after returning from the Journal office where he had exchanged holiday greetings—is the quiet and peaceful way most persons would choose to pass through earthly portals into the eternal beyond. As the day drew to a close, he lay down to rest, and later his lifeless body was found. Like one who "wraps the draperies of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams," the great, humanity-loving Bixby slipped out of his long-used tenement into the vast forever.
 Dr. Bixby was born in New York, but came to the middle west as an infant with his parents and spent most of his life in Nebraska. He was a doctor as well as a writer, and he practiced medicine before giving full rein to his pronounced literary talent. After a few newspaper ventures of his own, he joined the staff of the Lincoln Journal in 1892, and his stimulating philosophy and sprightly good humor have enriched in prose and verse the editorial page of that newspaper every day through the long series of years. He was inherently kind and gentle. While caustic in criticism of evils—in uncovering life's incongruities—he never failed to see the silvery lining, or breathe hope and courage into uncertain footsteps. He made countless thousands pause and think, and his flashes of pleasing wit won and held a great army of admiring readers.

No one will ask how much worldly wealth Dr. Bixby possessed. No one will care. But none can fail to award high appraisal to the rich legacy he has left in helpful words and exemplary character. No millionaire, bent on philanthropy, could rear a more nearly imperishable monument. Multitudes will regret his going; the same multitudes will sense his rejoicing as he finds the partner of his soul—the "Moby" immortalized in many paragraphs—whose death occurred seven years ago—waiting just beyond the shadows.

The Sioux City Journal supports the conclusion of Charles P. Stewart, Washington newspaper correspondent, that no one—not even the president or his advisers—knows how far the New Deal is going nor where or when it will arrive. They just know it is going, and all are hoping for the best. Once a surveyor who didn't know anything about surveying, was asked by accident he located the line in his first attempt, and his reputation was made. The Journal thinks a New Deal for the American people is on the way, but the course and command are uncertain. Whether capitalism is to remain or socialization is to follow, it does not presume to predict.

It is pointed out by a fellow-traveler that dislike for what another does should not arouse hatred for the individual, but opposition to his actions. Hatred involves self-injury and cures nothing of which the victim is guilty. It is not the person but what he does that may rationally excite aversion. This may be corrected by persuasion or example, but nursed hatred is often prolonged with special damage to the one who does the hating.

Trade in Wayne last week, with emphasis on Saturday, towered considerably ahead of that of a year ago, according to reliable reports. People had been skimping needs for a long time, and they evidently decided to replenish wasted supplies as much as possible. The spirit of buying took on old-time life. Timely receipt of corn-hog checks furnished extra stimulus to trade.

The wonders of radio were again demonstrated Christmas morning by the hook-up made by the British empire with all its possessions and by the broadcast accomplished to all parts of the world. Special radio feasts on holidays but emphasize the rich treats conveyed daily to the most sequestered parts by this marvel of the invisible ether.

The smaller the human spud, the more he knows that isn't true.

Lessons From Europe.

Omaha Journal-Stockman: Europe is in a state of intellectual turmoil over the changing status of the state and of the individual. It began in Russia but there is no telling where it may end. Italy took it up and Mussolini today brazenly announces that "the state is everything, the individual nothing." Hitler says the same thing and so do half a dozen dictators, big and little. Napoleon said, "The state? I am the state" and every dictator has the same idea.
 Here in America the aspirations of these dictators are regarded with surprise. How can any sane man assume such superiority and how can the masses tamely submit to such assumption? The answer is easy. In Europe they have been subjected to autocratic royal authority for many generations. Their background fits them for such a regime. Their misfortunes have shaken their faith in self government and in their bewilderment they turn naturally toward a dictator.

And even in this country there are those who have come to doubt the ability of the people to manage the state and lean toward the belief that the state should manage the people. A few years of depression and disappointed hopes have weakened their fibre and made them willing listeners to the doctrines of communism, socialism and even absolutism. There are still plenty of well-informed students of history and clear thinkers, however, who see these dangers, and warn us of them.

Says Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, as part of his annual report to that institution's board of trustees: "The notion, now preached and taught with much vehemence in various parts of the world from Russia, Germany and Italy to Mexico, that there is somewhere a hypothetical, invisible, and all powerful state which is antecedent to, superior to, and in necessary control of, every individual life and all individual effort, is so far below the level of established human knowledge that it is not easy to describe it in language that would be deemed parliamentary. This doctrine carries us back to the middle ages.

"All straight thinking relative to the American form of government and to the social, economic, and political order which has grown up under it, must start from and be based upon the fundamental distinction between the sphere of liberty and the sphere of government."

RELIEF.
 No one with enough soul to be worth mentioning wishes to see another suffer hunger or lack of warm clothing. There are those who are trying desperately to earn their way and avoid asking for aid. In the economic upheaval they slipped out of gainful occupations, and since then they have been employing their wits and energies to the limit in an endeavor to recover a foothold—at least to supply life's necessities. They are practicing self-denial, and battling courageously for a livelihood. The fellow who conceals his struggle to exist is often overlooked in the distribution of relief, and the effort to find him out and tactfully bestow deserved help is a task for relief organizations. Individuals who accept charity as an agreeable substitute for work, do not require a drastic vetting process to discover their identities. Their receptive mood has for the present, at least displaced ambition to do things on their own initiative.

Utilizing Former Nuisance.

An eastern publication commends the way Nebraska and other mid-western farmers have turned hitherto objectionable Russian thistles to advantage for feed. For years farmers battled against what was considered the thistle enemy with only fair success. Even the drouth didn't hurt the weed, and having survived the drouth, it is now found, in the absence of usual forage, a good substitute for fodder. Necessity is not only the mother of invention. It makes people do what they had thought they couldn't do.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Hope springs eternal, and that is what makes one turn from the graveclothes of the dead past to the inspiration of the future. That is why one wants to chuck the old year into the graveyard of memories, and right-about face, with head up and shoulders back, for a new start. We do not wonder that people want to settle affairs of departing 1934 as soon as possible and look ahead with a newly opened set of books. It has been disheartening to keep the business record of the past few years, but, true to human courage, expectations are high for the future, and therefore the task ahead is undertaken with renewed determination. Mistakes that have been made for us warn against the same mistakes in the future. We will make mistakes, but they will be different ones and a year hence will be soon enough to adopt resolutions against them. We will have new problems to solve, and these will lend essential variety to life. The feeling of assurance with which people look to the future, will help bring what we all want—greater prosperity and greater content.

Son Is Christened.
Leroy Frederick Jurem, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Koch, was baptized Sunday by Rev. G. T. Kern in the Koch home. Dinner and supper guests were Frederick and Emma Koch, Rev. and Mrs. Kern and children, and Louis Averman of Ruyard, Montana.
Present Cantata.
Members of the Concordia choir were in Hartington Sunday afternoon and gave Stults' Christmas cantata, "The World's True Light" in the Emanuel Lutheran church. At the close of the sacred concert, the women of the church entertained the Concord people for luncheon.
Church Redecorated.
The Concordia Lutheran congregation worshipped in a beautiful sanctuary this Christmas. The interior of the church has been entirely re-decorated with beautiful design and masterly blend of color. The people of the church are well pleased and are grateful to R. C. Hahlbeck of Wayne, who planned and directed the work.
Plans For Holidays.
Supt. and Mrs. Rufus Caauwe are spending the Christmas holidays in Tilden with Mr. and Mrs. Gableman. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jeffrey went to Spencer to be with Mrs. Jeffrey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wood. Miss Ruby Schuler will be in her home at Belden. Miss Arlene Casteel went to Pierce to spend the week with her sister there, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ellis will be guests in the Ellis home in Allen.
Candle Light Songs.
About forty young people, members of the Concordia choir, sang waits through the village Friday evening. Lighted candles in the windows of many homes made a cheerful welcome and invitation to the carollers. After a couple hours' singing, the carollers returned to the parsonage where they were entertained for late supper after which the singing group gathered at the Christmas tree where Christmas gifts were given and received.
Erwin Reunion.
The Erwin family gathered for a Christmas day reunion in the home of Mrs. Nettie Maloney at Wayne. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pomeroy and daughter, Katherine, Mr. and Mrs. George Monk, and Miss Bessie Erwin, all of Allen; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Erwin and family, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Reynolds and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Erwin and family, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Erwin and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Erwin and family, Mrs. John Erwin and family, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Nelson and family, all of Concord; Mr. and Mrs. Thad Curley of Creighton, Mr. and Mrs. John Jenkinson of Sioux City, and Mr. and Mrs. Dick August of Dixon.

Twelve Confirmed.
Sunday was a great day for the Concordia Lutheran church. Twelve young people were confirmed at the morning services. In the professional, the choir sang Vogler's "Hosanna." The members of the class followed in the processional, each one wearing a red carnation. The church was filled to its capacity with an attentive congregation. The cleansing power of the word of God and the necessity of abiding in Christ thru the word of God, was the thought stressed by the pastor. Each member of the class was presented with a beautiful copy of the Bible and a certificate of confirmation. Special singing was furnished by the choir and by the class and by Lee Ellis.

Corn-Hog Program Plans Are Outlined

Washington, Dec. 14.—The farm administration today made public the 1935 corn-hog contract in its final form—billed into half the size of the 1934 agreement. The new contract changes the minimum reduction in corn acreage from 20 to 10 per cent below the average acreage in 1932 and 1933, but again limits the reduction to 30 per cent. The minimum reduction in hogs produced for market is fixed at 10 per cent compared with the minimum of 25 per cent below the 1932-33 base provided in the 1934 contract. Payments also are changed. Farmers will be allowed 35 cents a bushel on the estimated corn yield of the acres retired from production compared with 30 cents this year and the contracted acres may be used for any purposes except growing field corn. Under the 1934 contract, acres withdrawn from corn production could be used only in limited ways, but because of the drought the administration modified the limits. Under the new contract, $15 a head will be paid on 10 per cent of the hog base, that is, the average number of hogs produced for market from litters farrowed in 1932 and 1933. In the old contract, $5 a head was paid on 75 percent of the hog base. The contract again contains provisions barring the signers from assigning any of their rights to payments under the contract and requiring conformance to regulations and administrative rulings prescribed by the secretary of agriculture. One page of closely printed type outlines the agreements between farmers and the secretary of agriculture upon which next year's adjustment program will be based. Chief among the changes in the form of the contract, aside from its greater brevity, is the substitution of the word "adjustment" for "benefit" in reference to the benefit payments to be made. The new form will enable the administration to contract directly with both producers and landlords involved instead of requiring special landlords' agreement to participate. It also eliminates the system of requiring signatures of the contract signers, both before and after establishment of adjusted figures.

Planning Menu For Holidays Is Made Easier

True, some families have their own favorite menus for the different holidays, yet many more ways dread those "big" dinners because they have no set menu, and scarcely know where to begin with the planning. It is for those that Iez S. Wilson, home economist, suggests holiday foods, some of them old and some of them new, but all are favorites. In many families, the entire holiday week is one of intense excitement. The young folks are home from college, and are apt to bring friends in for a raid of the ice-box at any time of the day. For those housewives who are likely to be called upon to serve refreshments on short notice throughout the week, Miss Wilson suggests a whole baked ham. Of course, it should make its first appearance, dressed in all its glory for the holiday dinner. Then it can be used sliced cold for sandwiches, or hastily prepared in dozens of attractive ways. Baked Ham. A very special way of preparing the baked ham is to use brown sugar and honey or maple syrup. First, place the ham fat side up on a rack in an open roasting pan and let bake in a slow oven. For a ham weighing 10 pounds allow four hours, or twenty-five minutes per pound for baking; for a large ham allow twenty minutes per pound; for a smaller one, allow thirty minutes per pound. Forty-five minutes before the ham is done, remove it from the oven, take off the rind and score the fat to form diamonds. Spread this with a mixture of honey or maple syrup and brown sugar and return to the oven to finish cooking and brown the outside. It may be basted occasionally with honey or maple syrup. To serve, place it on a large platter; decorate with candied cherries and slip a paper frill over the shank bone. This paper frill may be made from a letter size piece of paper, doubled and cut partially through from the doubled side in parallel slits. Mashed sweet potatoes, buttered asparagus, cranberry salad, olives and minced pie complete the dinner. An old, old southern way of preparing sweet potatoes, and truly a favorite way, is mashing them and adding to each 3 cups of sweet potatoes, 1-4 cup hot cream, 1-2 cup walnut or pecan meats, and 1-4 cup peanut butter. These are then placed in a buttered casserole and heated in the oven until nicely browned on top. If You Choose Roast Beef. In many homes, roast beef is always served on holidays. If this is your choice, here is a hint or two for the roasting. Place it in the pan with the fat side up. This makes basting unnecessary for the fat melts during the roasting and trickles down over the meat, thus keeping it moist. The temperature for roasting should be very low, not higher than 350° F. At the temperature of 350° F., allow eighteen to twenty minutes to the pound for cooking a rare roast, twenty-two to twenty-five per pound for a medium, and twenty-seven to thirty minutes for a well-done roast. To serve, place on a hot platter and decorate with crisp parsley.

Other Nationalities Use More Cheeses

What does cheese mean to you as an item in your regular bill of fare? How much do you suppose you eat in the course of a year? Probably the answer to those queries will depend upon where you live, for one thing, and where you or your parents were born. The "average" American, whoever that may be, is said to eat only 4 1-2 pounds of cheese a year. But the "average" Swiss uses 16 pounds, the Hollander 14 1-4, the Dane 13, the Norwegian averages 10 3-4, the German 10 1-2, the Frenchman 10 1-2, the Italian 12, and the Britisher 8 1-2 pounds. In the United States, as well as in other countries, cheese gives good returns for your money, for the food value is very high. It has, in concentrated form, most of the constituents of the milk from which it is made (some are removed with the whey). Five ounces of cheddar cheese, for example, furnish most of the nutritive values of 1 quart of whole milk. Some other cheeses, of course, such as cottage cheese, are less concentrated. In other words, at current city prices of cheese and milk, a third of a pound of cheddar cheese, costing 5 or 6 cents, would give you most of the same food values you would get in a quart of milk at 12 or 13 cents. And you can use it in different ways for those in the family who do not drink milk, as the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture points out. According to the dairy authorities of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, there are probably 18 distinct varieties of cheese—differing in texture and flavor according to process of manufacture and the molds or other organisms used to "ripen" the cheese—and there are more than 400 names for those varieties. We make many varieties, and we make much more cheese than we import. Some kinds that we make are strictly American. But the principal one, our plain "American cheese" is really the English cheddar cheese, which gets its name from the village of Cheddar in Somersetshire, England, where it was first made long ago. More than 400,000 pounds were made in the United States last year, and that is less than usual. Cheddar cheese comes from the factory sometimes in a so-called "cheddar" size which is 14 to 16 inches in diameter and weighs 60 to 80 pounds. But more often it comes in "flats" of that same diameter weighing only 30 to 40 pounds. "Daisies," which are 13 inches in diameter and weigh 20 pounds, "Young Americans," 8 inches in diameter and weighing 8 to 12 pounds, "Long Horns," 5 inches in diameter and weighing 12 pounds, and "Squares," which are usually 3 or 4 inches thick and weigh 10 pounds. From these the grocer slices off the pound or half or quarter as desired. But this was never too convenient a method of merchandising, and nowadays, thanks to the Bureau of Dairy Industry of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, a new method has been found and cheddar cheese is on the market in cans—12 ounce and 5-pound cans. The green cheese is packed in the can to cure normally, without rind or waste. Cheddar cheese is made from sweet milk, usually whole milk, and if skimmed or partly skimmed milk is used the cheese must be so labeled. Cheeses of the kinds that are regularly made of skim milk, however, do not require such a label—cottage cheese, for instance. Swiss cheese, or Emmentaler, first made in the Swiss Canton of Emmenthal, is made in many factories in this country, especially in Wisconsin, New York and Ohio. Swiss cheeses are very large, weighing 150 to 220 pounds, usually in the shape of milstones 3 feet in diameter and 18 to 10 inches thick, which are shipped in tubs that may contain 800 or 900 pounds. Sometimes, however, they are in 25 to 28 pound blocks. The cheese is made with rennet, from whole or partly skimmed milk. We make and sell "Domestic Swiss," but until recently we have not been able to reproduce all the characteristics of the imported Swiss cheese. Ours lacked the holes, or "eyes," and the Swiss flavor, both of which are due to the activities of certain bacteria growing in the curd, on the press, and in the curing room. The Bureau of Dairy Industry developed a method of introducing these bacteria as pure culture starters into the kettle milk and controlling the manufacturing process to produce both the characteristic Swiss cheese flavor and the holes. Now, instead of importing half the Swiss cheese we use, we import only a fourth. We also make our own Limburger, a whole milk cheese made with rennet. The name comes from the Belgian town of Limburg, where this cheese was first made. And we now make cow's milk Roquefort in considerable quantities (the French is made of sheep's milk), also a Roquefort cream spread, which has a growing popularity. The Bureau of Dairy Industry has found a way to market Roquefort cheese in cans also. We import Camembert from France, and Parmesan, Gorgonzola and Roman cheeses from Italy. Strictly American cheeses are "brick," pineapple, which is similar to cheddar but molded in pineapple shape, and Liederkranz, which is rather like Camembert in flavor.

Recently a hunch of Hungarian miners stayed in a hole until their wages were raised. We shall have to do the same.—Thomaston (Ga.) Times. Seek Substitute For Holly Symbol Substitutes for the vanishing holly, long the Latin symbol of Christmas, are suggested by the girl scouts who see no reason why America should not have a symbol of its own. This one-time pagan festival of the winter solstice now devoted to the worship of the Christ-child is but an expression of human faith in all that is simple, happy and hopeful, the girl scouts believe, and where is that faith more deeply embedded than in America? The red-berried holly is becoming extinct here, thanks to the ravages of those who commercialize the Christmas spirit. The ground pine, once a substitute, the laurel, the Oregon grape and even the red toyon berry of California, are going, too. Girl scouts know how they could be saved with a little care, but the chances are that they will not be, and meantime they are precious and rare. There is still plenty of the fir one sacred to Odin and the mistletoe which the druids adored but the fir, it is pointed out, is not gay and while it will stand up under a load of presents if properly planted in a strong box, it lends itself but awkwardly to decoration. The mistletoe, to meet its modern purpose, must hang high and, when possible, unseen. What is to be done then to find a symbol that will at once be enduring as an evergreen and gay as the pagan holly berry? The girl scouts suggest that hemlock, when brightened up with the scarlet cranberry, makes a perfectly good American Christmas wreath. Bunches of bayberry or cranberry added to ordinary boxwood which anyone might have in a garden, is also American and good. As decoration for mirrors and picture frames there are the

- long-needed pine branches, the cones of which could be silvered, gilded or lacquered red. Then there is the ivy, once sacred to Bacchus, which may still be used by those whose conscience makes them avoid the handsome holly that is now so scarce. If cut so as not to hurt the parent vine, ivy can be used effectively with the orange seed pods called Japanese lanterns, or even with little red apples of tangerines. But the symbol of Christmas, as the girl scouts point out, does not have to be the evergreen of the pagan. For the Christian it is a child in a manger, come to redeem an unhappy world. For anyone it is beautiful and full of hope, which it can be if he has the spirit of the season which was first born apparently when the race itself began. Dixon County Farm News. By Greth M. Dunn, County Agricultural Agent, Ponca, Nebraska. Corn-Hog Payments. Dixon county has received a total of $208,120.40 in the first installment of corn-hog payments. Only six contracts yet remain unpaid for the first installment. No official notice has yet been received at this office in regard to the second payments. Individual signers will be notified immediately upon receipt of the checks in this office. Cost of 1934 Program. Dixon county has spent a total of approximately 2.4c on the dollar, or 3.4 per cent of the benefit payments due to Dixon county. Estimates for total expenses will probably run slightly over the 3 percent estimated some time ago. Abortion Test Meetings. Sixteen farmers from the north end of the county attended the abortion test meeting held in Ponca Friday night. Dr. Petermann, representative of the United States department of agriculture, bureau of animal industry, explained causes of contagious abortion in cattle. Several of the farmers signed up to have the abortion test done on their herds. Three more meetings will be held in the county at Newcastle, Allen and Wakefield. The exact dates of these meetings will be announced later to all farmers in Dixon county. Farmers interested in testing cattle for abortion should write to Ponca office. Blanks are not on hand and can be distributed to anyone requesting this information. Seed for 1935. Announcement has reached this office that the agricultural adjustment administration will sell through the seed stocks committee, the following seed: Spring wheat of the Narcus and Chryse varieties will sell for $1.35 per bushel, seed barley of the Trebi variety, for $1.10 per bushel, malting barley for $1.35 per bushel and oats for 75c per bushel. This seed is being distributed to Dixon county farmers at flat prices based on actual prices of seed as grain, plus the handling, cleaning and storage charges. Dixon county has turned in about 300 applications for this seed. Farmers wanting seed should place their wants through this office. The total amount of seed held by the Seed Stocks Committee is small in comparison with the total requirements. The purpose of this program is to protect superior varieties that have been developed over a period of years, from extension extinction through feeding, mixing or processing. Local elevators and seed houses approved by the county committee will distribute the government held seed to farmers in this county. The seed will be sold for cash to be paid on delivery of seed ordered. Later announcements will give exact information as to where and when this seed will be distributed. Atlas Sorgo. Dixon county farmers are apt to go "atlas" next spring as a result of successful farm demonstrations conducted during the past year with a comparatively new crop—atlas sorgo. They found that the variety of forage and grain sorgo has great possibilities as a producer of roughages for livestock. Greth Dunn, agricultural agent in Dixon county who has advocated the planting of some acreage of this crop as an "insurance" measure, says farmers who tried it this year for the first time reported fair results even though moisture conditions were highly adverse to the growing of crops. Atlas, originally developed in Kansas but which has gained popularity, usually produces an abundance of roughage for livestock and is drought resistant. The crop has been tested also at the Nebraska experiment station at Lincoln. A total of 9,000 pounds were distributed here last spring to farmers on relief. Jack Engle, who lives 11 miles west of Ponca, planted 20 acres of the new crop this year for the first time. Listed at the rate of 8 pounds to the acre, the crop produced an abundance of roughage which was fed to livestock. Oscar Becker had two acres which turned out fairly good. All House had 11 acres which was fair. As a result of the farm demonstrations, the new variety of sorgo is expected to gain in popularity here in the next few years. Seed, however, will be scarce next spring. Agricultural Agent Dunn is convinced that the crop has some advantages for livestock farmers who use a great deal of ensilage each year.

Trees Available For Wind Breaks

Extension department of the agricultural college has again announced the availability of trees for windbreak and woodlot plantings, says G. H. CHRISTMAS

'Tis Christmas morn—the air is cold and clear,
(The carols ring upon the drifting snow;
From o'er the bay a cheerful winter gale
Brings to the cheek of ev'ry one a glow.

And hearts are happy on this Christmas morn
For 'tis the birthday of the Son of God;
His praise shall ring wherever men shall live,
On frozen field or verdant tropic sod.

His praise shall ring throughout the entire earth—
All hail! all hail! to Christ our blessed King—
Let ev'ry soul sing carols to His name
And with our song let now the welkin ring.

For Christ, the Lord, is born this Christmas day;
The babe has come to save the world from sin
And may He in His ever loving grace
Find ev'ry heart susceptible to Him.

Northeast Counties Once Cultural Seat of Pre-Historic Nebraska Races

While River Route Was Main Artery for Mound Builders, Inland Points Also Afforded Colonization for Ancient Tribes. Find New Evidence Along Missouri River Exclusive: The Wayne Herald By Ray E. Colton, Archaeologist.

This special article has been written exclusively for the Wayne Herald by Captain Ray E. Colton, archaeologist and explorer who is now engaged in the study of prehistoric human cultures in northeastern Nebraska counties. Captain Colton has explored the ancient cities of the Mayans which dot the peninsula of the Yucatan...

Route of Mongoloid Races. "It is with a feeling of the reality of ancient history," states Captain Colton, "that we of today, must contemplate the practice of arts by the ancients, which has made it possible for us to view the relics and earthmounds of antiquity which dot the North American continent from Canada to northern Texas. It is hard to visualize what transpired here in the dim past, yet the evidence is so conclusive, that there remains little doubt but that a great cultural race at one time inhabited what is now eastern Nebraska. The ground holds many answers to the riddle of the ancient races, who thousands of years ago were engaged in agricultural pursuits in what are now Cedar and Dixon counties. Many great prehistoric battles were fought here between these ancient races, and the finds of battered human remains give us mute testimony of these ancient encounters.

Working painstakingly over a period of years, archaeologists and anthropologists have determined that this portion of Nebraska was at one time inhabited by a race of Asiatics, who in accordance with the peculiar earthmounds and other artificial earth tumuli which they constructed, have been dubbed the "Mound Builders." This race according to unearthed petroglyphs, or word pictures, migrated from Upper Mongolia about 2026 B. C. and crossed into what is now the territory of Alaska, by way of the Behring straits. This migration was one of the greatest of prehistoric times and it is believed it consisted of approximately one million men, women and children. The route taken by these ancient people is marked on the North American continent by colossal earth mounds, arrow heads, axes, pottery, etc., which even the hand of time has failed to damage or obliterate.

Migrating south and east in a fanshape movement, we find that the Mound Builders as they were called, established cultural seats in the western Canadian province of Manitoba, in North and South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, thence southward into Missouri and Arkansas. In the unearthen mounds at Lewistown, Ill., and at Wickliffe, Ky., we find the greatest of their cultural seats, and at these points we find that there are great cities of earth and fortification mounds, held many hundreds of thousands of people. They were agriculturalists inclined and the finds made recently of petrified corn, wheat, etc., show us that they raised crops in great amounts along the low lands of the river bottoms of such inland waterways as the Missouri, the Mississippi and the Ohio rivers.

Contrary to belief among laymen, these people were not Indians, neither is there anything in their unearthen artifacts or an examination of their skeletal remains to show that they had any connection with the Red Skin races of the later aboriginal types of humanity which occupied this continent at the time of the arrival of Columbus in 1492 A. D. They were of the Oriental racial strain and in all probability came from what are known as the Upper Plains of Mongolia in Asia. Finds at St. Helena, Ponca, Wynot. In the last three years, archaeologists working from the state university at Lincoln, Neb., have been making explorations in the vicinity of St. Helena, Wynot and Ponca in Dixon and Cedar counties. One of the best ancient cultural seats unearthed was on the farm of William Schulte, northwest of Wynot. This find consisted of several human skeletons which have a distinct Mongoloid appearance, especially in the skull formations. Other finds at this point consisted of portions of pottery ware, arrow heads, and stone axes of prismatic types. It is believed that the culture unearthed at this point overlaps another earlier culture and that some of the relics date back to the stone age of the earth. At Wynot on the J. C. Reifernath farm, there has been unearthed another ancient cultural seat, and many artifacts of the dim past have been taken from the ground at this point. The whole territory taking in the counties of Dixon, Cedar and Wayne, shows much promise of greater archaeological discoveries. It is believed that extensive trading operations were carried on along the Missouri river, and that the mound builders and other ancient races had trading operations with the Mayan and other races of the peninsula of the Yucatan in the present republic of Mexico. The finding of a stone smoking pipe, last year near Missouri Valley, Iowa, by Dr. Richard Gilder of Omaha, which bore the Plumed Serpent design of Quetzalcoatl, gives rise to the theory of trading operations with the southern races, as Quetzalcoatl was according to ancient Mexican mythology, the God of War of the Aztecs and the Mayans. Several pieces of pottery of distinct Central American design have also been found along the Missouri river in eastern Nebraska. A similarity in artifacts always gives rise to the theory of intermingling of cultures or of trading operations. The ancient races such as the Mound Builders were very proficient in agriculture. They erected a peculiar earth mound which is known as the fortification type. The use of this mound was two-fold in its scope. It acted as a defensive wall in case of attack by a rival tribe, and in case of floods in the spring, acted as a bulwark or dyke against the inundation of farm land which was under cultivation. In case of drought the mound builders could also impound water behind these dykes and thus take care of themselves during a dry season for water. These people were a fast thinking class, and there remains no reasonable doubt but that they were highly cultured and used engineering principles in the erection of their earth mounds and fortifications. Wayne County as Cultural Pivot. While the main cultural seats of the mound builders were invariably located along such inland waterways as the Missouri, it is believed that attempts at colonization were made and that owing to the finding of artifacts close to Wayne some years ago in the form of arrow heads, that this race inhabited this entire section and probably south as far as where Wisner, in Cumming county is located. In the spring of 1935, it is expected that extensive digging operations will be started in this area with a view in mind of determining just what may be unearthed. It is now believed that the ground holds many artifacts which have been unlocated, and many things may be brought to the surface which will give archaeologists a new light on this strange race of Asiatic peoples. The mound builders have been a mystery for years. Where they went, no one knows. The last trace of them is found near Rockwell, Texas, but from there on the trail is cold. Some think that they merged with other tribes of prehistoric Mexico, others that they degenerated into what are known as the Indians. All of these theories are plausible, yet not one shred of evidence has been brought forward to substantiate them. The mound builders were a cultured people. They understood farming and they understood engineering as is evidenced by their earthworks which have been unearthed at various points. The Indian after an association of over three hundred years with the culture of the white man has failed to improve. He has contributed nothing to science outside of a few tepees, some bows and arrows and some blankets. There is nothing in his cultural makeup to show that he was capable of erecting these great works of antiquity such as mounds. No connection between him and the mound builders, who it is now believed were the first cultural races of prehistoric Nebraska.

Selected From The Editor's Late Radio Talks

Since the handling of intoxicating liquor has become legal in most parts of the country, there is noted an alarming increase in number of automobile accidents. A report states that in one New York county, during one month, drunken drivers were responsible for increasing accidents to three times what they were in the same month last year. A drunken driver is a menace on any highway or on any city thoroughfare, endangering other motorists and imperiling the lives of pedestrians. As the social pendulum swings back from prohibition to lawful imbibing of fiery spirits, more drastic measures will be required to safeguard the traveling public. The soberest motorist at the wheel is none too certain of avoiding an accident, and if his mental equipment is thrown out of gear by an over-charge of artificial stimulant, he is more likely not to arrive after starting with the additional likelihood of bringing disaster to other travelers who thus become innocent victims. Legislation must fix more responsibility on motorists. Owners of cars must be made to feel greater responsibility in selecting drivers. A form of enforced insurance—something to increase liability—would seem to be in order. Anyway, with increase in consumption of that great physical and mental disorganizer—alcoholic chain-lightning—more effective protection must be given the motorist and perambulating public. Defining certain liquors, Irwin S. Cobb says on returning from his native Kentucky: "Cawn whiskey, sub, is nothing but the illegitimate orphan of the royal line (Bourbon), born out of wedlock in the shine of the moon, left as a foundling on the doorstep of some convenient bootlegger and abounding in fusel oil. It smells like gangrene starting in a mildewed suit, it tastes like the wrath of a devil, and when you absorb a swig of it you have all the sensations of having swallowed a lighted kerosene lamp. A sudden violent jolt of it has been known to stop the victim's watch, snap both his suspenders and crack his glass eye right across—all in the same motion."

Golden Dawn

by PETER B. KYNE SYNOPSIS Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby girl, whom he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in divorce. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. Gatlin and Penelope go to a baseball game. A ball strikes Penelope on the nose and Mrs. Gatlin removes her from the hospital, and spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, with a fortune of $100,000, and begins a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, a rising young psychiatrist, for which he "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a responsible person, and obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior. CHAPTER III—Continued "The first personality, which I should call A, is the result of acquired instincts, habit, education, and repression imposed on society by convention and the code of procedure which we call morals. This has been submerged wholly or in part by a second personality, which I shall call B, and when B personality rules her she has amnesia for what I have termed her acquired or normal instincts. Out of her unconscious mind then emerge, as definite impulses to action, the old and medical men term conflicts. "Let me illustrate. We will assume that at the moment she is possessed of her personality A, and that in this state she realizes she has run in her stockings—that she sees some stockings which she can readily steal. Normal people often have impulses to steal, your honor, and Nance Belden has an impulse to steal the stockings she needs. "But here a factor intervenes. She has been taught, from the day she manifested a thought, that it is wrong to steal, and this moral lesson has impressed itself upon her conscious mind. With repetition of the thought, becoming a habit, drops out of her conscious mind, to become conserved in her unconscious mind. Conserved there, it becomes a definite part of her personality—her soul, if you will. Thereafter it was not necessary to remind herself that it was wrong to steal. She knew it was, without having to think about it at all, and this unconscious knowledge was her protection in the fleeting moment of temptation, aroused by her definite need and the knowledge that, lacking money to buy the stockings, and faced with the absolute necessity of acquiring stockings, the sole alternative was to steal them. She got no further than that vague, conscious thought. Immediately the knowledge that it was immoral to steal—that nothing could possibly excuse theft—rose out of her unconscious mind and became a dominating conscious thought. Now, right there appeared the mental phenomenon known among psychiatrists as a complex or conflict. In all conflicts the stronger wins—and in this particular mental conflict, the will not to steal won instantly. It was an older habit of thought. "This defendant, your honor, is a healthy girl as far as I can judge from outward appearances. But she is what you often hear referred to as high-strung. And she is so unusually intelligent that I readily realized there must have been a and she is broad between the ears because, as she has brains, nature ordered that she should have room for them. She is neatly dressed and decidedly not a slattern. She gives no indication of a disposition to drugs or alcohol. It must be true, it is a grand wreck. A nose like that would cause a continuous mental conflict in any woman. "But for this lamentable facial defect this girl would be beautiful. Perhaps she remembers, or used to remember, herself as beautiful or attractive; then this accident occurred and lo, she became an ugly duckling. Doubtless the knowledge that she was an object of curiosity or derision to strangers and repugnance to her friends made of her a gloomy, depressed reclus. Who knows what wild, desperate and desolate thoughts she became a prey to? Mental conflicts undoubtedly were at work—an impulse to run away, to hide herself, countered by the natural impulse to make the best of the situation, to be brave, to pretend she was not different. "In the case of a girl whose mind and nerves had been thus harassed over a long period, a new sorrow, constituting a definite mental shock, even if of no great magnitude, might nevertheless be sufficient to bring about the condition of dissociation of personality which I have described. "Anything else, Doctor Burt?" "I have given a concise and general outline of the case as it presents itself to me, your honor. This defendant should have treatment. It is quite possible to cure her and I am morally certain I could do so. Her saddle nose can be repaired. I have a very good friend, a specialist in plastic surgery, and I know he would be willing to help, without charge, to make a swan of this ugly duckling. "And you think you would make her over into a responsible moral citizen?" "I think so, your honor." "How would she support herself during the period of treatment? By theft—or worse?" The judge glanced at Nance Belden. "How do you support yourself, young woman?" "I carry my own check-book," the girl replied. "You have a private income?" "Sure, old thing." "What is its source?" "I don't know. On the first of every month somebody puts some money in the bank for me and I check against it." "And that's all you know about it, eh?" "Sometimes I can remember, but I can't now. It's the time I can't remember that raises h— with me, Judge. I don't know what name to sign to my checks then or I forget I have a checking account. Then I get hard up and steal." "How truly remarkable, Miss Belden! Have you ever issued any checks that bounced back on you?" "Say, are you trying to kid me, Whiskers?" The judge ignored this obvious contempt of court. "I suppose you have had many sweethearts, Miss Belden?" Nance Belden's scornful laughter filled the courtroom. "Oh, Judge, you're precious. What sort of man would pick me for a sweetheart, I ask you? But, Judge, now you tell me, 'Why not?' the judge turned remorselessly. "Well, maybe because nobody ever asked me," the girl assured him with simple directness. "I don't mind admitting I'd like to have a nice sweetie if I could find one, but what the h— is the use trying? I'd only have him a little while; then he'd get ashamed of me. What's the use bothering myself? I know a blind fellow that's mad about me. I've often thought of taking the poor gazon on for my steady, sweetie, but he makes me so sad, I know it wouldn't last. He has that funny staring look, and when he walks with his arms held straight out, it just breaks my heart." "What does he look like?"
