HIGH WINDS AND SUBZERO WEATHER TAX RESISTANCE

WINTER showed its teeth over the week-end. High winds, biting cold and some flying snow fashioned Arctic touches that forced suspension of usual outdoor activities. Saturday night's temperature varied from ten to twelve below and Sunday's from fifteen to eighteen below. Relief came with Monday's calm and slowly rising temperature. Twenty-two below zero at Valentine was the coldest record reported. Monday's weather was the coldest January 21 since 1930 when the mercury slid down to eighteen. While no precedents were exceeded by this cold spell, people were reminded that Nebraska elements still know how to get hard and tough—the thing that prevents high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries—the thing that puts iron into backbone and grows rugged men and women. A Nebraska winter supplies an adequate stimulant without getting a prescription filled at the drug store.

TRIPLE PROGRAM HEARD BY CLUB

Kiwanis History, Purposes Are Outlined Monday By Two Members.

Kiwanians were treated to a varied program at Monday's luncheon meeting, opening with orchestra numbers by traipsing school children under direction of Prof. John R. Keith, including a brief history of the local club as recalled by C. M. Craven, charter member, and climaxing with Fred S. Berry's summary of Kiwanis purposes and ideals. Dr. U. S. Conn was in the chair, and Fred L. Blair led singing, accompanied by J. E. Brittain. J. R. Reynolds had as his guest, Jack Adams of Omaha.

"Minuet Pastorale" by John Blow opened the musical program, the string trio being composed of Joyce Miller, Dorothy Jean Casper and Lorraine Johnson. In the woodwind quintet which played Haydn's "Sarabande" were Margie Morgan, Frances Abern, Harold Johnson, Arthur Gulliver and Roland Hopmann.

"Of the 50 original members of Wayne club, 25 are still active," Mr. Craven pointed out in his talk. "The first meeting was held early in 1923 and charter night was April 10, 1923, at the old opera house. Charles Carhart was first president, and L. W. Vath, secretary. Of these original 50, nine have died, 11 have withdrawn from membership, and five left the city. Dr. Conn is the 13th president."

Mr. Berry stressed the fact that Kiwanis has never lived in normal times—that "the organization came into being 21 years ago in time of world conflict, when armies were pitted against each other on foreign battlefields, when the world had been turned into an inferno of greed and ambition and false philosophy, into which the United States was to be drawn (and be badly scorched). This war period was followed by one of unnatural prosperity in which we drifted on unknown seas, without rudder, without purpose, ignoring or else forgetting the fundamentals of economics. Then came the crash—instantly. But Kiwanis has lived on and grown in these abnormal times. In the past 21 years Kiwanis has branched out from one lone club at Detroit to about 80,000 members in United States and Canada.

"Were this merely a luncheon club it would not have survived today. Kiwanis has lived because it was born with high purpose and has rendered service throughout its years. It has not only had strong leadership but also strong membership. Professional, business and educational men have worked shoulder to shoulder and gone forward together, serving the same ideals. Kiwanis is quick to scent problems of the hour and difficult.

FISH ESCAPE SO FAR FROM HEAVY GOVERNMENT RULE

FISH are retailed at the same old price, so far uninfluenced by government regulation, and we are wondering if there are too many fish or not enough. In time some federal bureau may be set up to find out whether fish are underdoing or overdoing reproduction. Whichever way the fish are leaning, a government bureau would seem needed to find and establish a proper mean. Among ancient peoples fishing and hunting were not just sports. They were necessary. On success with rod or net or gun the satisfaction of hungry appetites largely depended. Primitive American settlements mainly looked to stream and forest for food. Whether fish have been overlooked by the professors in Washington of whether their turn has not been reached, we do not venture to guess. In the meantime those who like fish or who can stand a fish diet may do so at no serious variation in cost.

Gene Broekemeier Attends Convention

Gene Broekemeier, manager of Wayne Gamble store, returned on Thursday from the annual Gamble convention which was held in Omaha, at the Fontenelle hotel on Wednesday, January 16. This meeting was one of seven being held throughout the fifteen middle-western states where Gamble's operate stores. These meetings brought together over 1000 Gamble store and Gamble agency store men.

The following executives from the general office of Gamble stores addressed the meeting: Bert Gamble, president of the Gamble stores; Phil Skogmo, vice-president; Max Wibly, secretary of the company; Frank Dreblow, supervisor of agency store department; Clarence Gibson, personnel director; Alvin Mills, merchandising manager; Lyle Johnson, supervisor of tire and radio sales; Lloyd Jensen, display manager; and Ed McGovern, traffic manager.

In conjunction with the meeting, 18 of the largest manufacturers supplying Gamble merchandise held a merchandise exhibit at the Fontenelle hotel, where manufacturing processes were explained to the Gamble men, from the raw materials through to the finished product.

Progress of the company during 1934 was discussed and it was brought out at the meeting that 450 Gamble agency stores had been opened during the year bringing total number of outlets in operation at this time to 860 independently owned Gamble Agency stores and 229 Gamble and Tiger stores. These Gamble Agency stores have all of the advantages of the large chain stores, together with all the advantages of independent merchants. Plans for 1935 were thoughtfully discussed.

While Gamble stores have been consistent users of newspaper advertising ever since they started in business, it has been necessary, year after year, to increase their advertising budget to keep up with the increasing demand for their merchandise. It was announced at the meeting that their budget for 1935 calls for still more newspaper advertising. Gene Broekemeier was very enthusiastic about the new advertising and merchandising plans for the coming year. Newspaper advertising will form the backbone of the entire campaign.

Two special pullman cars and a baggage care were required to carry the Gamble executives and manufacturers' representatives around the territory to these seven sectional conventions. At a few points it will be necessary to hook a special engine onto the Gamble convention cars and run them through as a special train to some of the meetings, because of the difficulty in making the necessary connections at various points where the meetings are held. This year Gamble conventions are held at Huron, S. D., Omaha, Neb., Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Bismark, N. D., Minneapolis, Minn., Green Bay, Wis., and Lansing, Mich.

Pickup And Delivery Service Is Planned

Permissions to establish free pickup and delivery service on less than carload freight shipments, with no restrictions as to distance or to weights, has been asked of the Western Truck Line committee by the C. St. P. M. & O. and C. & N. W. railroads, according to word received Tuesday by Agent R. R. Larson. This service, when made effective, will be the first unrestricted pickup and delivery service of any railroad in the northwest. The new arrangement will affect more than 1,100 freight stations. Rates on the new proposed service will be the same as the present station to station rates. The costs of pickup and delivery will be absorbed by the Omaha and Northwestern.

In the proposal shippers and receivers are given option of two arrangements: First, the Omaha and Northwestern will take care of the pickup and delivery; or second, the railway will make allowance for trucking to the shipper, the receiver or trucking company doing the work. Local cartage companies at every station will do the work under contract with the roads.

This proposal is designed to give modern service, says A. M. Fenton, vice president of traffic.

A passage from the Bible used in the lesson-sermon is from Deuteronomy 32:3, 4: "Because I will publish the name of the Lord; ascribe ye greatness unto our God. He is the Rock, His work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: A God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "That God is a corporeal being, nobody can truly affirm. The Bible represents Him as saying: 'Thou canst not see My face; for there shall no man see Me, and live.' Not materially, but spiritually we know Him as divine Mind as Life, Truth and Love. We shall obey and adore in proportion as we apprehend the divine nature and love Him understandingly, yearning no more over the corporeality, but rejoicing in the affluence of our God." (page 140).

Firemen Gather For Annual Feed

Chief V. H. R. Hanson Has Membership Record With 27 Years.

Twentyseventh annual banquet of Wakefield volunteer firemen was held at the Logan hotel Friday evening, about 40 men attending. A most successful evening is reported.

E. C. Shelington, the toastmaster, was introduced by Iver Carlson. Speakers were Roy Lennart, O. L. J. Kilian, Mayor Henning Halin, Dr. G. W. Henton, O. W. Harman and Clifford Busby. Mr. Halin played accordion numbers, and George Kyl sang.

Fire Chief V. H. R. Hanson reviewed the department's record for the past year, reporting eight town and five country calls. Property involved was valued at total of $45,000, and damage by fire was only $205. County property involved totaled $20,000, and damage $1,500.

Vernon Fischer reported on membership, stating that average attendance at each meeting during the years was 21-1-3 out of 25 members. There were 44 excuses submitted and three absences. Average length of service per member is five and one-half years, Chief Hanson having the longest record of 27 years. Of these he has served as chief for 19.

Trojans Trounce Hartington Lads

Winnebago Indians To Play Town Team Here This Friday Evening.

Wakefield turned on the power last Friday evening to crush an out-classed Hartington team, 29 to 14. The game was played at Hartington. Blizzard weather reduced the size of the crowd, although the gym was nearly filled.

The Trojans started with a rush and ran up a 10-to-0 advantage before their opponents could score. Hartington's only scoring in the first half was two free throws, and the half ended 15-to-2 in favor of Wakefield.

The onslaught continued into the third quarter, the end of which found Wakefield with twenty-three points. The home team had not yet been able to toss a single fielder.

After Coach Fredstrom had sent four shock troopers into the game, however, conditions changed, and Hartington soon pushed the score to 23-to-12. At this point the regulars took command again and dropped three fielders while Hartington was scoring one to end the game 20-to-14 in favor of Wakefield.

The Trojan reserves easily won a preliminary tussle by a score of 10 to 5. Every man who made the trip to Hartington saw action in at least one of the two games.

Gold Clause THE gold clause in bonds and contracts, now under consideration by the United States supreme court, with decision soon to be handed down, is causing much uneasiness in administration circles. Comments by members of the high tribunal increase suspicion of the outcome. Court expressions indicate a determination to uphold the country's pledges, and that to do otherwise would be to violate the constitution. Chief Justice Hughes gave the professors in Washington something to think about when he said this: "Here you have a bond issued by the United States government, issued in a time of war and in the exercise of its war powers, a bond which the government promised to pay in a certain kind of money. Where do you find any power under the constitution to alter that bond, or the power of congress to change that power?"

Fearing results, talk in administration quarters suggests changing the constitution or enlarging the court so that new members favorable to the president's monetary policy may be appointed. Undoubtedly supreme court justices would like to avoid the disturbing consequences of an adverse decision, but they also feel deeply their duty to the laws and constitution of the country.

The supreme court's disposition to preserve fundamental safeguards at this time of threatening radicalism is reassuring. It will put a damper on wild tendencies promoted by Washington theocrats.

Helpful Contacts IN a conversation with a farmer recently we were reminded efforts may not be so effective as those of some smaller groups, farmers really have more informative and helpful contacts than any other class of individuals. The farmer is ever exchanging ideas with fellow farmers. What the farmer reads in regard to agriculture he discusses with his neighbors. In such ways the farmer learns the crops to curtail and the kind of production to increase. He learns successful methods, and is warned against unprofitable experiments. Other lines of endeavor may adopt rules, and sometimes try to follow them, but the farmer is governed too much by the weather and the law of supply and demand to pretend to take a fixed course. Circumstances which surround a farmer's business make impractical the use of inflexible rules. What he loses in lack of effective organization, he gains in freedom to initiate his own plans and to exercise his own judgment. By following his own blueprints, changed overnight if advisable to meet new requirements, he is able to live his own life more abundantly and more satisfactorily.

Mark Sullivan quotes Walter Lippman as saying that "since the balancing of the budget is made dependent upon the revival of business, it becomes the duty of the government to reject policies which obstruct revival and to adopt policies which promote it." Mr. Sullivan expresses the opinion that President Roosevelt cannot hold the votes of the discontented which he gathered to his support in 1932 and 1934, but that he must have the backing of the conservatives to win in 1936. The prediction is made that the theorists and radicals, disappointed in failure to realize Utopia, will turn to Huey Long or Upton Sinclair. The president is urged to swing to the right, be more friendly to business and speed prosperity ahead of the foothold threatened to be gained by the Long ascendancy.

Explaining the processing tax, Chester Davis, administrator of the AAA, is quoted as saying: "In my opinion, when supplies are heavy and it is a buyer's market, the tax is inclined to be reflected back in the price the seller obtains. When it is a demand market, with light supplies, the tax is largely covered by increasing prices. If the point is correct, it behooves farmers to keep their supplies closer to demand." The Omaha Journal-Stockman comments: "In other words, the producer has been paying the tax up to date and now it's the consumer's turn. At any rate we're hearing from the consumer. No mistake about that."

We are inconvenienced somewhat by the cold snap, but nothing like we were when we had poorly kept roads and no modern means of transportation. The old days of lashing storms or subzero weather often produced a bottling-up experience that knocked everybody and everything entirely out of plumb.

In his latest, Roger W. Babson discourses on Dr. Townsend's proposed old-age pension, and while he expresses a belief in the wisdom of moderate aid for the aged, he would not minimize the traditional responsibility of family life to care for the old and helpless. The economist says the Townsend plan would encourage shiftlessness and penalize industry and thrift. Mr. Babson thinks the demand for an old-age pension plan is irresistible, but that it cannot be the visionary and impossible Townsend idea.

If all men had the convictions of H. E. Sanden of Omaha, and the courage to assert them, there would be no sinecures and less waste. He was awarded without solicitation the job of mail carrier in the house of representatives at Lincoln at $4 per day, but he has resigned and asked the legislature to abolish the job as useless. Sanden is not looking for a soft berth, and he would reduce the number of snags in the public service.

What the Kansas City Times calls one of the anomalies of this depression era is the fact that while the number of depositors and amounts of deposits in New York banks have been increasing, millions in the city of New York are on government or other relief. To persuade deposits to move into circulation and provide employment is needed, and the quickest way to do it is through the establishment of confidence.

During the late political campaign we heard candidates tell about political policies being as impossible as trying to unscramble an egg. This reminds us that an adverse decision from the United States supreme court on the gold clause would present a problem for the administration quite as perplexing as trying to reconstruct an egg after it had been kicked around in a frying pan.

Remodeling the primary law for naming candidates is always an issue in the state legislature. Making a preliminary examination by a convention—a sorting over and out process—as proposed, would, many believe, bring into the primary finals the best by nature and training for places of public responsibility.

The Omaha-Journal-Stockman says the NRA is not so much alive as Director Richberg says it is nor so dead as Former Director Johnson claims, but that "it seems to be just fading away at popular request and with the sanction of the administration."

When the times impose heavy, inevitable loads on people, along come ambitious reformers—usually self-seeking—who want to pile on additional burdens.

Can This Be Sir Hugh?
 Chicago Tribune: He (Gen. Johnson) has some remedies for the depression, but he must be regarded by the New Dealers as heretical in his newer and presumably considered views, as for instance: "Men can't go back to work until money goes back to work, and money won't go back to work unless those who have or are responsible for money to invest know that, once it is out of their hands, no magic is going to frisk it away like fairy gold turning into crisp and colored autumn leaves. It is perfectly clear that recovery in a big, quick and powerful wave awaits only an impeccable assurance in deeds, and not words, that no such thing will happen. This is all there is to it. It could be done immediately. Unless it is done promptly there is no end in sight." He adds that no amount of belaboring business men by men who never conducted a business in their lives is going to change these essential responsibilities. There is much more of the old guard speaking in the general's discourse—for example, his exhibit of the man he knows who if he made a dollar would give up 83 cents of it in taxes; who if he risks and loses, loses all, and who, if he risks and makes anything, gets only 17 cents of what he makes. That man, says the general, would be a fool to risk anything except on a six to one chance of profit.

Beef And Pork In 1934.
 Omaha Journal-Stockman: Americans ate more beef in 1934 than in any previous year, according to meat packers, the average consumption per person being over 67 pounds per annum or the greatest in at least twenty years. During the same period the consumption of pork showed a decline.

It is important that the reasons for these changes in our meat eating habits of America should be understood as they may affect meat consumption for 1935. Of course, the very low prices of cattle and beef account for the greater use of beef last year. The public is quick to appreciate a bargain.

On the other hand, the decreased use of pork is just as easily explained. Pork is the "poor man's meat," and there was more unemployment last year than ever. Then, too, the processing tax on hogs raised prices of fresh and cured pork to prohibitive levels despite the comparative cheapness of the hogs. The public resents being gouged.

Both producers and consumers can study these figures with profit. A leading local packer declares that processors and distributors can move practically unlimited quantities of meat if prices are low enough to appeal to the public. It is largely a matter of price. More beef was consumed in 1934 because beef was cheap and less pork was consumed because pork was relatively expensive.

Talk about price fixing. It simply can't be done in the case of any particular food as the public will promptly turn to other and cheaper foods of which this country has always produced a plenty. The public sets the price.

PRACTICAL.
 If the editor of the Saturday Evening Post were not practical, he wouldn't be the editor of the Post. When he analyzes a subject, he does a thorough job, calling a spade a spade and engaging in no timid or befogging circumlocution. Recently in an editorial captioned "Ballyhoo," he pointed out how the former ballyhoo of business in New York had become the ballyhoo of government in Washington—each in turn making promises and raising hopes beyond rehabilitation. "Excessive hopes, excessive promises always whittle down and dwindle away," says the Post. "They did, under the aegis of business, in 1929, and they are bound to do the same, under the aegis of government, in 1935 and thereafter." Here is the Post editor's closing paragraph: "It is spoils-child psychology to expect the impossible, whether in 1929 or 1935, and to demand the simultaneous achievement of incompatible. Progress is made slowly in this world, and hurry is its enemy; although to this fact those people who date the beginnings of the republic from March, 1793, seem quite oblivious. In Washington today there is too much setting off of trial balloons, too much making of studies and plans, and too much starting of new projects, often duplicating or self-contradictory, and too frequently made for their own sake. We all want a more abundant life, we all want progress, but if we are sensible, whether in 1929 or 1935, we do not want either to be the kind that is too good to be true."

 tery of the latest model, and what we stubbornly resisted, now becomes a source of increasing facility and satisfaction.

Lowest in Relief Scale.
 Despite the drought and other calamities, Nebraska is reported by a qualified authority as having the fewest persons on public relief of any state in the union. Nebraskans have a right to be proud of this record. Also a report states that of Nebraska counties, Saunders county, of which Wahoo is the county seat, has the smallest relief load. Nebraska is the pluckiest in the United States, and Saunders is the pluckiest county. Let us shake hands with ourselves, and let us congratulate Saunders county. After smoke of the depression battle has cleared, won't Nebraska prove to have been the luckiest spot in which to pin one's faith and build one's hopes?

MASTER FARMERS.
 Annually the Nebraska Farmer selects for special distinction what it calls Master Farmers—six of them. There are many master farmers, but the number designated each year after careful investigation is confined to six. Success in agriculture and qualities of citizenship are requisites considered. Here are the points as explained by the Nebraska Farmer: "Proficiency in the operation and organization of their farms, sound business methods and ability as shown by the relation of income to expenses, financial progress, accounting, methods and high business standards, attractive, well-kept farm buildings, fences, fields, lots, yards and driveways, ideal home life exemplified by their character as husbands and fathers, the education of their children and their provision for recreation and entertainment for the entire family, and a high type of citizenship embracing neighborliness, active interest in schools, churches, government and worth-while community enterprises." One of the six, Joseph Dusek, of Buffalo county, interests us most. At the age of 19—fortyseven years ago—he arrived in Kearney from Bohemia with no money and no friends and unable to speak a word of English. He hired out as a farm hand at $16 per month. He now owns three farms totaling 800 acres with adequate equipment. He is the father of five boys and seven girls. The land he bought was originally nothing to brag about, but he leveled the hills and filled the low spots and in time built up acres of uniformly high fertility. The story of this Bohemian farmer is an inspiration.

 ties of the times... it has gone into boys' and girls' work, vocational training fields and affiliation between town and country... but of what use is work in this first field unless these boys and girls are left a better society in which to live, and a better government under which to go forward. And this," said the speaker "is the final objective of Kiwanis."
 "Last year Kiwanis had a material increase in memberships in spite of the times. In Iowa-Nebraska district, for instance, there was a gain of over 400 members, and this was about 10 percent of total increase last year... all of which speaks well for this district and this club."

Wayne Instructor Makes Study Of Teacher-Demand
 Prof. K. N. Parke has assembled some interesting material on teaching requirements in connection with the placement bureau at Wayne State Teachers college. After studying the majors and minors of students who plan to enter the field, and then the combinations of subjects as asked for by school boards the past year, his report will show the usual demands of teachers and just how Wayne graduates will be fitted to meet these.

Research showed that of all teaching combinations, English and Latin were most in demand last year. Science and athletics were next, mathematics and science third, English and history fourth, and mathematics and athletics fifth. Where there were 14 calls for English-Latin teachers, only seven had qualified for this combination.
 Most athletic coaches were teaching combinations of mathematics and science along with their sports. In this section, probably within a radius of 75 miles, 23 schools had full-time commercial teachers, showing a good demand in this field.

Amateur Stations Operate In Wayne
 (By W. C. Swanson)
 "C-Q, C-Q, calling C-Q, C-Q." When residents of Wayne tend to become provoked by what seems to be local interference with their favorite radio programs, and "cuss" the operators of all amateur short-wave stations in general, stop to think that perhaps there is more behind this interference than the unregulated experimenting of a group of school boys at play. Amateur radio has, in the past ten years, progressed to a well defined and regulated (by the government) system of stations.
 Wayne itself is no stranger to short-wave radio, but for some time there has not been an active station located here. Last fall, W. C. Swanson, now associated with the Farmers Grain, Feed & Seed Co., removed his transmitting station from Oakland and has since been operating "portable" at Wayne. Mr. Swanson is an amateur of long standing, member of the American Radio Relay League, U. S. Army amateur and his station, W9JED, was state controller station at Oakland. His outfit is equipped for "phone" transmission, as well as code.
 Roy Meyers, another amateur of standing, operates a key or "CW" station at his farm home one-half mile south of town.
 Another station will soon make its debut here when Melville Parke, employe of McNate, Hardward, begins operation. All three of these operators are experienced, and when it comes to amateur radio, "know their stuff."
 The purpose of this article is to point out that, if there is any interference with broadcast receivers, such interference cannot be avoided, except, perhaps, by the installation of a really selective set. The short-wave stations are licensed and supervised by the Federal Communications commission, and are checked for irregularities through the giant national "monitor" station located at Grand Island.
 These boys have spent years working at this "hobby." They have been required to pass rigid federal examinations in order to obtain and to hold their licenses. They have invested precious hours, and hundreds of dollars in equipment.
 Remember this, when, and if, your radio is not capable of "tuning out" their plaintive "C-Q, C-Q."

CORN-HOG PLAN IS EXPLAINED

Program For Production Control Is Voluntary Also This Year.

Corn-hog farmers are being offered a voluntary program of production control in 1935, Wayne County Agent G. H. Liggett and Dixon County Agent Greth M. Dunn are informed. This action was endorsed by two-thirds vote of producers in October.

A surplus of corn in the fall of 1935 followed in two years by heavy hog production is a certainty, the agents state, unless farmers agree this spring to hold plantings within limits.

There are four reasons for expecting excessive corn acreage in 1935 without a control program. The normal response to feed shortages and high feed prices occasioned by drought, is the planting of larger-than-ever acreage of corn the following year. At the same time, yields per acre usually return to normal or near normal. Even if farmers do not follow the usual tendency to increase corn acreage, say the agents, they may raise an excessive crop. The relative scarcity of some farm seeds, particularly pasture grasses, may stimulate planting of corn even though supplies of emergency forage-crop seeds, such as soybeans, will be ample, and will be productive of more feed at an earlier date in 1935 than corn. On account of drought damage to new pasture and meadow seedlings, a larger-than-average area of land might readily be available next spring for the planting of corn.

A moderate surplus of corn over actual requirements will be desirable in 1935 to permit rebuilding feed reserves now being used up on account of the drought shortage.

Control over hog production in 1935 is partly necessary, the agents state, to prevent undue increases where feed will be available for such expansion, partly to insure against excessive farrowing in all areas in the fall of 1935, and to further the purpose of the AAA in raising hog growers' income toward fair exchange levels.

The individual producer is being asked under the 1935 corn-hog contract to: First, plant to corn on the farming unit to be operated in 1935 not more than 90 percent of the average acreage planted during the base years, 1932 and 1933 (same base years as used in 1934 contract). This new maximum acreage figure represents an increase of about one-eighth over the 1934 maximum, which was 80 percent of the base acreage, and it will produce at average yields an adequate margin of about 250 million bushels beyond requirements for rebuilding feed reserves. As in 1934, the individual signer will have the option of holding out of corn production up to 30 percent of his base acreage and of receiving corn adjustment payments in proportion. Second, produce for market from littered under contract not more than 90 percent of the adjusted annual average number of hogs produced for market from litters owned by the producer when they were farrowed during the base period, December 1, 1931, to December 1, 1933 (same base period used in 1934 contract). This new allotment is one-fifth larger than the 1934 allotment, which was 75 percent of the 2-year average.

For maintaining corn acreage and hog production within the limits of the 1935 contract, the cooperating producer will receive benefits, the agents say, in the case of corn: An adjustment payment, unrestricted use of all land not in corn, including the acres shifted from corn production and eligibility to participate in any government corn loan program, similar to loans made available during the past two seasons by the Corn Credit Corporation, that may be available in the fall of 1935. The corn adjustment payment will be at the rate of 35c per bushel of yield estimated for the number of acres by which the 1935 corn land area is kept below the 1932-33 average. This yield for basing payments in 1935 will be the average estimated corn yield per acre for all crop land in the farm which has been in corn at least once during the last 5 years. In 1934, the rate of payment was 30c per bushel, and the basis was the average yield for the particular acres kept out of corn production and contracted to the Secretary.

In 1935 the corn acres may be located on any part of the farm; a definite tract of land equal to the adjustment in corn acreage will not have to be set aside for limited use and designated as "contracted acres"; no limitation is placed on total acreage of any commodity other than corn, and no limitation is placed on the total acreage planted to cash grain or feed crops.

The "contracted areas" designation has been dropped and unrestricted use of the noncorn land is being permitted and partly to simplify compliance and partly to permit the greater flexibility in farming operations that will be essential on account of the shortage of some farm seeds and the drought damage to many hay and pasture stands. These steps have been taken in recognition of the temporary drought conditions and do not represent an abandonment of the essential policy of shifting eventually to a more extensive type of farming, involving more grass-land and more soil-building and erosion-preventing crops.

In the case of hog benefits as follows: A hog adjustment payment at the rate of $15 per head on the number of hogs represented by the adjustment—that is, 10 percent of the hog base; and the privilege of making unlimited purchases of feeder pigs from other corn-hog contract signers. The 1935 contract also lifts all limitations on the numbers of other livestock kept for sale or for produce. The purchases of feeder pigs from nonsigners, however, remains limited to the average number bought during the base period.

In terms of the adjustment itself, the 1935 hog payment is the same as in 1934; the 1934 payment of $5 per head on 75 percent of the base average was the equivalent of $15 per head on each animal represented by the 25 percent of adjustment. With the smaller adjustment, the total hog payment per farm in 1935 will not average as high as in 1934, but the producer's total income, including return from the increased number of hogs which he may raise, should be larger. Producers who do not raise their full allotment of hogs will have equivalent of increased hog income in the form of a supply of corn for sale or future livestock feeding which otherwise would have been fed to hogs.

The first adjustment payments in 1935, consisting of 15c per bushel in the case of corn and $7.50 per head in the case of hogs, will be made as soon as practicable after the contract is accepted by the secretary of agriculture; the remainder, less the producer's pro rata share of the local administrative expenses, will be due on or about January 1, 1936. These payments again will serve as valuable crop insurance in cases where drought or diseases may prevent production up to the producer's contract allotment.

In general, all corn-hog farmers in the United States will be eligible to sign the 1935 contract, whether or not they took part in the 1934 program. In most cases of 1934 signers, the production figures established for the 1934 corn-hog reduction contract will serve as a basis for the 1935 contract. In the case of 1934 nonsigners or new producers, production allotments for 1935 will be determined by the county allotment committees in accordance with the instructions issued by the Agricultural Adjustment administration and subject to the approval of the secretary of agriculture. The determination of the application of the program with respect to any individual producer will be determined from the 1935 contract and the administrative rulings relating thereto.

As in 1934, the work of administering the corn-hog program again will be carried out largely by farmers themselves through their community committees and county control associations.

Miss Laura Lyons Writes From West

Miss Laura Lyons writes from Long Beach, Calif., January 15 as follows:
 "A year ago today I started caring for an elderly, sickly lady and am still on the job. She is able to be around the apartment most of the time now. My father has been on the jury since May. It seems to enjoy it and has excellent health.
 "We did not get to attend the page parade New Year's at Pasadena but saw the Long Beach float with my first prize for them—local representation.
 "The past few days we have been feeling vibrations from the Pacific 50 miles off shore.
 "I have met Mr. and Mrs. John L. and Mrs. June Conger at the open market twice. Mrs. Conger is especially interested in this kind of show-ers are.
 "The schools are practically all being held in temporary buildings. They are in contrast to the beautiful buildings before the quake.
 "I am always very much interested in the stories of childhood. The freshmen of Wayne schools for they are so realistic. I wonder if Genevieve Lyngen's mother ever told her about the time her grandchild, S. Okblom, soon after arrival from Sweden, went to town in a lumber wagon with his brother. From their farm 15 miles northeast of Wayne, the former saw several such pretty black and white kittens playing along the road that he decided to get one to take home for the children to play with. His brother dissuaded him by diving on. But on their return the same little 'kittens' were cavorting around so the temptation was too great and Mr. Okblom got out of the wagon and succeeded in catching one. Whew! The laughing brother had to help him into the back of the wagon where the poor, sick fellow had to lie down. Needless to say he had to bury his clothes for a few days. For many years the brother would refer to 'that pretty little' when he wanted to tease Mr. Okblom.

 "We have been very much interested in the Herald articles about early times, especially about those Mills county, Iowa, people settling in Wayne county. My mother, Lizzie Kearney, was born in a cabin in the woods a few miles northwest of Malvern on the Boston farm you referred to. My brother, Frank, and I saw the building in 1905 though abandoned many years before. Shortly before my mother's passing away I found that the house in which I was born was about 10 miles north of that, erected in the edge of the Mormon cemetery and one of the remaining slabs in the cemetery was only a few feet from the window. My nameake was Laura Vankirk, the lovely granddaughter of the Mormon elder, the leader of the flock settling there instead of going on to Salt Lake City as had been previously planned in Pennsylvania.
 "Alf Hegelin died a short time ago in his orange grove cottage near Riverside. He, with his parents and brothers, lived about two miles northwest of Wayne in the 80's so doubtless the older settlers remember him. He usually attended the Nebraska picnic at Bixby park and enjoyed visiting with old acquaintances.
 "Everything we have is taxed even our credulity and patience. Florence (Ala.) Herald.

W. F. Most officiating. Committal was in Winside cemetery. With Mrs. Bronzynski's passing, Winside loses one of its early settlers, for she had lived on the same farm the past 54 years.

The former Marie Julia, Anna Doran was born at Kreis, Schwetz, West Pruesen, Germany, on September 2, 1852. She was baptized at Zapal on December 20, 1852, and confirmed in the Lutheran faith on October 23, 1856. Her marriage to Carl Bronzynski took place in the old country on January 31, 1873, and the family crossed the ocean eight years later, seeking greater opportunities in a new, promising country. Landing on American shores on August 17, 1881, the Bronzynskis came on out to Nebraska and took up a homestead just west of Winside site. And here they remained, living first in a sod house, traces of which still remain in the orchard, then in a two-room house. The sod house and the frame building which followed it were made livable and homey by flowers for all ways Mrs. Bronzynski took deep delight in her flower garden and spent much time in its cultivation. She had a remarkable memory for dates and for early happenings, and enjoyed telling of pioneer experiences.

Mr. Bronzynski died on December 20, 1923, and since then Mr. and Mrs. August Bronzynski and family and Miss Anna Bronzynski have been with their mother on the home place.

Many years ago Mrs. Bronzynski was injured in an accident and had been in poor health since, although always active. She was confined to bed the two weeks before her death but conscious to the end. She was aged 82 years, 4 months and 16 days at death.

Mrs. Bronzynski was affiliated with the Trinity Lutheran church and a faithful member as long as her health permitted.

She leaves nine children, Miss Anna, Frank, Albert, Herman, August and Mrs. Emma Wittler of Winside, Mrs. Bertha Pohlman of Stanton, Emil of Denver, Colo., and Mrs. Martha Kesting of Pierce. She also leaves two sisters and a brother in Germany, and another sister, Mrs. Augusta Benzion of Wisner. There are 13 grandchildren and one great grandchild, besides a large number of friends.

Mittelstadt, Charles Unger, Fred Nicman, August Ulrich, Peter Ulrich, Carl Nurnberg, Herman Podoll and William Flier. Emil Bronzynski arrived from Denver Sunday to attend rites for his mother.

Wayne Student Tells Of Week's Detention On Ellis Island

Where Dolores Hoffman to write a theme entitled "My Introduction to America," the first chapter would have as its background Ellis Island, or "The Isle of Tears," for it was here that this young Wayne college student spent her first six days in the new land of promise. To many this might have been a depressing experience, a disheartening beginning to the new life. But the little German emigrant thoroughly enjoyed the colorfulness of this sort of house from which future citizens are picked and others turned backward, unwanted.

But let's let Dolores tell her story in her own words:

"A little over six years ago on a bitter cold December evening, my parents and I landed in New York harbor. All of the 200 or more immigrants were assembled in the spacious first-class parlor of the ship to have their affidavits and other required papers examined for the last time before they set foot on the soil of the new continent. Four very cross-looking immigration commissioners supervised the work. We could see that every now and then a stack of these troublesome papers disappeared in the sumptuous coat pockets of the officers while the sadly disappointed immigrants betook themselves to some remote corner of the room. The only words uttered were: 'We are sorry but you have to go to Ellis Island.' Most of them passed without difficulties.

"Soon our turn came and we too had to go to Ellis Island. Only 17 out of approximately 200 immigrants were detained, and as far as I know, none deported.

"Nothing was wrong with our papers except that they were too old from the date of issue. It was necessary to communicate with the friend at Crofton who had sent our affidavits. But I was very anxious to go to Ellis Island. We had arrived in the harbor on Saturday evening and by 10 o'clock every passenger had left the ship excepting the 17 rejected ones who had to remain. We went on deck, saw our baggage being taken to the custom-house, yet we could not leave. The steamboat traffic between New York and Ellis Island had stopped at this hour and we had to make ourselves at home for at least the following night on the almost deserted ship.

"Reluctantly we went back to our cabins which we found locked. Eventually a steward came and managed to open them. We were left with a lousy feeling, but nevertheless felt it was a rather unique experience to spend a night in New York harbor. Next day it was announced that we could not go to Ellis Island until Monday morning, so we 17, the crew which prepared our meals and a few officers had a most pleasant time together.

"Monday morning arrived much too soon and I assure you that it was with a most heavy heart that I left the ship. Slowly we all descended into the little steamer which was to take us to the 'Isle of Tears.' Most of the party seemed to know that meaning of this name for they were sullen and melancholy. Some were angry and bitter at America. Soon the boat was plowing its way through the yellow waters of Hudson bay and we could see the colossal Statue of Liberty. Surprisingly, she too looked sad and why shouldn't she? All immigrants going to Ellis Island curse her.

"Are Taken To Island.

"Another few minutes and we were anchored at the island. A group of stately brick buildings were before us, and several officers were waiting. Like prisoners we were conducted to our fate (only in my family's case, six days of ease and pleasure.) We passed through a long, low corridor and prison-like doors were locked behind us. We saw long rows of desks behind which were busy immigration officials. Everyone was speaking English which was confusing to the newcomers.

"Everyone went through an examination—told why he came to America, what he planned to do here, etc. The question I was asked most commonly was whether or not I planned on going to school in America. My answer was always 'yes' because mother had told me I must, but truly I shivered at the very thought of school. Our schools were so different in the old country. I went to a school in northeast Germany, just 20 miles from the Polish corridor. We spent too much time or religious instruction and on memorizing Bible quotations. Everything we studied must be memorized word for word, and if we could not repeat the lessons, we were sure to be whipped. In fact the children were whipped as often as two or three times a day, the girls being struck on the hand with a rod, and the boys being stretched across a bench.

"The big dining room accommodates 500 and looks neat and clean when one enters, but much wrecked when the multitude streams out. Everyone is told to sit close together to make work of the waiters easier. One certainly has to disregard all social standards at mealtimes for often one's next neighbor is a criminal, a Bolshevik, negro, movie star or anyone else imaginable. Large white sheets of white wrapping paper serve as table cloths. At breakfast the table is set with plates, cups, spoons, knives, ample stacks of fresh bread, big chunks of butter, bottles of milk and cans of steaming coffee. When everyone is seated, waiters in clean white uniforms wheel in large kettles of oatmeal or cream-of-wheat and pass down between the rows of tables, dipping out good-sized ladles to fill the empty plates. They work so fast and often so carelessly that one is apt to get a good share of the helping in the lap. Those with money to spend may buy special foods such as ham and eggs, fruits and sweets. . . . All other board is free of charge.

"There was a negro who always had plenty of money for extras and one morning he ordered ham and eggs. It was brought in and the negro turned around to talk to someone at the next table. . . . a hungry-eyed Pole or Russian next to him put away the food in two or three mouthfuls. The negro turned back to his breakfast, looked astounded at the empty plate, then at his neighbor. . . . then he said magnanimously, 'Poor old white trash—let him have it.'

"Breakfast over I witnessed the funniest sight—everyone began tearing off pieces of paper from the table paper and wrapped up bread or sandwiches to eat later, for the immigrants are allowed to carry away any food left after all have finished.

"By 9 o'clock we had returned to the assembly, the doors were flung open and everyone had to go out for a breath of air under escort of armed officers who watched closely. You'd see the Statue of Liberty with her back turned to the newcomers. . . . surrounding her was large expanse of water and farther on the spirals and skyscrapers of New York City piercing the sky. Occasionally a ship passed by there was little to do but wander about aimlessly or stand and gaze at the 'land of plenty' which was so near, and yet so far removed from many of us. There were merry-go-rounds and swings for the children to play with. After a half-hour an officer blew a whistle and we were conducted back to assembly for remainder of the day. Sewing, reading and visiting made up the day although many sat motionless and uncommunicative. Newspapers in nearly every language were distributed and books could be checked out from a small library. Representatives of the Red Cross and other organizations made daily visits to the island to look after the needy, visiting people and writing letters and telegrams for them, also distributing clothing. I visited the room where clothing supplies are kept—rows and rows of suits, coats and dresses and huge supplies of shoes, hose and underwear. Some folks were in there ragged and dirty, and came back dressed from head to foot.

"Dinner was served at 12 and again we found lots of plain but good food. Mountains of bread and coffee cake, bottles of milk, cans of coffee and tea, plates heaped with stewed meat, potatoes and a vegetable, individual dishes of pudding or occasionally of ice cream or pie.

"Very little to do during the long afternoon. . . . reading, gossiping and sewing filled the time. Sometimes it was very sad. . . . men and women lamenting because the next ship would carry them back to the homeland. Some had sold all their possessions and spent the money for the journey over, and now were to be deported at government expense. Nearly every day a few whose difficulties had been cleared, were taken to New York and admitted to the new land. Twice daily a lady brought basket of materials for sewing and fancywork and gave this out to all who wanted to work. The immigrants would then keep the finished pieces.

"Programs Twice Weekly.

"Every Wednesday and Saturday evenings a group of New York entertainers broke the monotony by bringing a program of short plays, vocal and instrumental numbers. Church services were held Sunday mornings and ministers of various faiths came often. So you see the immigrants had their spiritual as well as physical needs taken care of.

"Supper was served at 6 o'clock. . . . I don't remember the menu but I do know I never left the table hungry. Then at 8 o'clock crackers and milk were given all the women and children. Bedtime was 8:30 for women and children. . . . on our way upstairs a jolly negro woman handed each of us a little cake of soap and another gave us a towel and wash rag. With special permission one could have a bath, but these baths would not appeal to a fastidious person. One found a bucket of soft soap which was used for bathing as well as scrubbing out the tub afterwards. The room was inspected afterwards and if not left in satisfactory condition, the unfortunate bather had to crawl out of bed and do some more scrubwork."

After six days the Hoffmans' papers were approved and they boarded the little steamer for New York City, going on directly to Crofton. Dolores, with scarcely a word of English at her command, started in the seventh grade and went on through high school. This fall she came to Wayne to start college work. Perhaps the years in the new land have not been very kind to the Hoffmans. . . . perhaps the glittering promises made by friends who came ahead, have not materialized. . . . Dolores Hoffman likes the new life, she likes American people and she likes the schools. . . . smilingly and calmly she has met disappointments and is well along on the way to realizing her great ambition—to have a good education such as America offers.

ber Dan McNamara, the chief of police?"

"Of course. Old Daniel's my boy friend."

"Well, you're in his bed." The cops were on your trail, dearie. They suspected you might come to my house, so Dan tipped me off they were coming and to beat it with you out to his house."

Terror shone in the girl's dark eyes. "I'd never trust a cop that far," she wailed. "Oh, Lanny, you've let him make a sucker out of you." She began to weep hysterically.

"If you don't stop that," Lanny promised "I'll bat you over the head with this skillet," and she picked that homely utensil up and shook it at Dan. "Dan McNamara's your friend."

"Yes, and the chief of police too, Lanny. I'll die if they take me back. They'll put me in the dungeon—I'm afraid of the dark."

"Shut up. You're not afraid of anything. You've got your little red badge of courage, you scrawny mope! You afraid? My foot! Didn't you crash the gate and swing for that speedboat under fire?"

"Machine-gun fire, at that," Dan McNamara supplemented, from the doorway. "They opened on her and the boat from the lovers." He came to the side of the bed and grinned down at the terrified girl. "Don't you worry, Nance. You're safe. I'm a cop, but I'm not without some sporting blood—your getaway earns McNamara." His big hand strayed over her face.

"You're a good old hunk of cheese," she assured him. "She turned her head toward Lanny. "Am I going to die, Lanny?" she asked.

"Not unless I kill you—which I'm liable to do if you don't buck up and believe what I tell you. You've been shot, but it doesn't amount to much. You'll be all right in a week or two."

"Then I'll be good, Lanny." The tired eyes closed and while Lanny stood by, wondering what to say next, Nance sank into a sleep of profound exhaustion.

"Let her alone, until Stevie comes," Lanny suggested. "The wound has stopped bleeding. Come out into the living room and if you're as crooked a cop as you ought to be you've got liquor in the house, and I've got to have a drink of it." Her middle-aged face was very serious.

"Those cops at your house will stick around, Lanny, and when you return they'll want to know where you've been. What are you going to tell them?"

"Tell them nothing. Let those two cops sit in their car in front of my house all night and watch it. What do I care? At least they'll keep burglars away. And when finally they do round me up and walk me down to central station to be questioned, you'll do the questioning, will you not?"

"Lanny," said Dan McNamara. "If you were a man and on the force I'd make you a detective sergeant. You're a bear-cat, that's what you are. But you suggested that letter out of San Quentin for Nance and turned it over to Saphire Susie!"

"Maybe you didn't know it, but you gave Saphire Susie a lift in your car from the main gate at San Quentin down to Greenbrae. The guard remembered seeing her hanging around the main gate."

"And who, if you please, is Saphire Susie?"

"She did a stretch in San Quentin for blackmail. She was discharged a week before you visited Nance, and before Susie left the Big House, Nance fixed it with her to lead a helping hand. Apparently Nance didn't want to confide the minute details of her plan of escape to Susie. Susie's a swell looker, but a little bit dumb—she loved blackmail through the mail, understand, and signed her name, instead of hiring a smart lawyer. So Nance decided to send her written instructions out by you, and Susie agreed to pick you up, pinch the letter and deliver it."

Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over by Nance's cause, and writes a sensational outgrowth Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Lanny visits her and she persuades her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate steals from her handbag. Nance escapes, although shot, by climbing out to a speedboat manned by friends and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment and phone for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

"I've just heard a thump and a crash in my living room, Dan. I think she's fainted. Telephone Doctor Burt to come to your home—that he will have to probe a bullet wound and dress it. Tell him to bring some whisky and two or three hot-water bags, and be on hand yourself to let me in. I can't leave here until I've mopped up any bloodstains she may have left on the sidewalk and my front steps. Good-by."

Lanny was right. Nance Belden lay on the floor of the living room in a faint. She picked the girl up in her strong arms and carried her down a short flight of stairs that led from her kitchen to the garage below. She heaved her into the car, ran back upstairs, got a wet mop, and by the light of the electric lamp over the front entrance searched for drops of blood. She found a few and followed them to the sidewalk, eradicating them with vigorous sweeps of the mop, then dashed back into the house, jammed on her hat and coat, ran outside again, threw open the garage door and backed her car out. She paused again, to shut it, then swung up the street as the half-red lamps of a police cruising car turned the corner. She swung wide to give it a clear berth, turned the first corner and spurted. She followed a zig-zag course until she felt sure she had thrown the police car off her trail—provided they had become suspicious and started to follow her; she turned up a residence street that she felt reasonably certain would not be patrolled by traffic officers at that hour of the night and speeded up.

Dan McNamara was standing on the sidewalk in front of his house when she drew up. He reached into her car, lifted Nance Belden out and ran with her down an alley alongside the house to the back entrance, which he kicked open. Lanny followed him up the stairs to the kitchen and on to a rear bedroom. Lanny jerked a small rug off the floor and threw it on the bed. "Let her bleed on that for a while," she commanded. "No sense in messing this nice clean bed all up. There must be blood in my car, Dan. Take a wet towel and girl's shoulder and tucked her into bed.

"She found a comb and brush in Dan McNamara's bureau and combed and smoothed the dank, straggly black bob, and when that was done she unbent long enough to implant a kiss on the white brow. "Poor boob!" she murmured. "No-body's boob 'est darling!"

The girl's eyelids flickered.

"Is that you, Lanny?" the girl murmured faintly.

"Yes, dearie. And you're all right, so don't worry. Nobody's going to take you back to San Quentin."

"The cops chased us at the boat landing, Lanny. Are you sure we shook them off?"

"Of course you did—the big boob! Now, listen dearie, I'm going to tell you something, but don't let it disturb you. Take my word for it you're safe. Do you remem-
