Visits JUDGE J. M. Cherry of the Wayne county court, introduced himself to the city of Lincoln last week for the first time in four years.

He-Whyne it is the judge's custom to take an early-morning walk, starting at 6 and following the middle of the street. It happens to meet anyone at that hour he speaks to him and calls him by the first name if he knows him.

The judge thinks Lincoln is above the average as a metropolitan center even before daylight, because he didn't meet any gangsters and no one tried to rob him.

Bill Board Decision The decision of the Massachusetts supreme court that the view from public highways may be regulated by the state, will, if upheld by the United States supreme court, furnish sound basis for states to rid the scenery along highways of unsightly and obstructive bill boards.

For New Order MARK SULLIVAN gives special attention to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace as an example of a man drawn into a vortex which he did not expect, but which he could not escape.

While the depression has probably checked some hurtful excesses, it has also succeeded in damaging—it is hoped not irreparably—some precious human values. Trying to spend more than one can earn has often led to trumping up poor excuses and practicing ruinous duplicity.

One of the reasons Roy Cochran is governor of Nebraska today is that he attended strictly to his own business when he was state engineer, and before that when he was an employe in the state engineer's department.

of our own efforts and our own judgment, not surrendering to an unfriendly fate or blaming others for our own delinquencies.

Roger W. Babson, economy expert, has started a personal investigation of different parts of the country to find out actual conditions and be able to report on progress out of the depression.

If we recognized Russia to restore trade relations with that country, the expectation has been defeated. "Many of our pink communists appear to be grieved over the fact that the plans for resuming extensive trade relations with soviet Russia have fallen through," says the Omaha Journal-Stockman.

John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, is now angered at Donald R. Richberg, captain of the NRA. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, generally endorses Lewis' position, all of which leads us to suspect that the labor leaders wish to substitute hours and wage scales that would not cause any easing up on producers and consumers.

Huey Long's blatant dictatorship in Louisiana is bolstered up by at least superficial sympathy for the under fellow. His demagoguery is camouflaged by bellowings designed to capture support of the unfortunate and capitalize on elements of discontent.

Synthetic Lumber. Omaha Journal-Stockman: The Iowa State college has perfected a process for making synthetic lumber from corn stalks. The stalks are cooked in steam under high pressure. In due time they are separated into fibre, after which the pulpy mass is allowed to harden in forms.

Clinging To The Dead. (Lincoln Journal) The president hates to let the NRA drop. It was the most ballyhooed of his experiments. His assistants worked the country into a lather over this plan for recovery. There was much oratory over the plan and propaganda flooded the country.

"Do No Lobbying." Omaha World-Herald: Governor Cochran issued a sensible and wise order Saturday, one which should be a guide to everyone on the public pay roll, whether of state, county, city or school district.

This is the first time any Nebraska governor has ever issued such an order, yet it will instantly appeal to all citizens as a sound decree making for good government. It is mischievous and pernicious for those on public pay rolls to be striving constantly to influence either public opinion or legislation. They should remember that they are the hired servants of the people, should be ready to give facts or advice on matters affecting their departments or jobs when they are called upon, but should scrupulously refrain from lobbying and propagandizing activities in general.

AGAINST WALK

Beverly Nichols, English writer, has been showing up the futility and folly of war, and pointing out the effective force women could exercise against it. He would have mothers begin in the nursery to teach their children the horrors of war.

Curing Injustices. This week's edition of Time reveals a fearful example of the terrible injustice that may be done by impassioned mass revenge. Often a frenzy of hatred seeks an outlet. Often in a small way ugliness, bred by one's own shortcomings or caused by a bad liver, fixes its fangs into an innocent and unsuspecting victim.

Occupy Schrumpf House. Mrs. A. L. Kellogg and daughter, Miss Helen Kellogg, have rented the Mrs. Jemie Schrumpf house on Pearl street and will move next week.

CHILD LABOR

The Nebraska legislature is asked to ratify a proposed amendment to the federal constitution empowering congress to regulate or prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age. Twenty of fortyeight states have given their approval.

Division Of Bank Deposits Subject Of Recent Article

Dr. Myrick Shlette, associate professor of Commerce at Wayne State Teachers college, is author of an article entitled "The Segregation of Borrowed Deposits" which appeared in January number of "The Banker's Magazine." A resume follows:

This article inquires into the possibility of separating the primary from the borrowed deposits. Primary bank deposits are explained as the original cash deposits, representing savings.

1. The primary deposits may be protected by a pledge of government securities. This plan has worked successfully to guarantee national bank notes since the year 1865. It is this kind of security which is usually required to protect public deposits.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Kopp had dinner with Mrs. Anna Kopp last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Willard Witte and Rowan were in Sioux City Tuesday visiting R. J. Reisters.

New Ruling Made In Corn-Hog Program

The corn-hog section met one of the first problems of the 1935 corn hog producer when they issued ruling 134 removing restrictions regarding the purchase of feeder pigs. The previous provision of the 1935 corn-hog contract and rulings seemed to work a hardship upon both sellers and buyers of feeder pigs in the drought territory.

dent figures that will be instructive to the pleasure motorist as well. When the statisticians adjusted their slide rules, here is the statement they gave.

"If you cut out of line of traffic, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 50. "If you drive over 40 miles an hour your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 25. "If you pass another car on a curve, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 20. "If you pass another car going up hill, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 10. "If you fail to signal a turn or stop, your chances of having an accident are multiplied by 5. The driver who cuts out of line and drives over forty miles an hour usually explains afterward that he "was in a hurry." He got a late start and had to make up time, thus endangering his own life and property and those of others. With a ton of motorcar and a 75-horsepower motor, he tries to defeat the team of time and the law of averages. "Casey Jones" tried it and won fame. But he survives only in song.

HONOR STUDENTS ARE MADE PUBLIC

Wakefield Students Hold Pep Rally On Friday Before Cage Game.

Twentythree students are on the honor roll of Wakefield high school for the first semester of the school year. To achieve this distinction a pupil must have at least one "A" grade and no grade below a "B".

The juniors head the list with eight students, Dale Buhrman, Adah Ekeroth, Clarice Ekeroth, Tone Ekman, Marion Erlandson, Vivian Felt, Lena Dean Johnson and Donald Mier.

The seniors because they have a higher percentage of their group on the honor roll, come next with five honor roll students. These are Robert Keagle, Delores Korth, Honrietta Pallas, Donald Peterson and Lorenz Peterson.

The freshmen and sophomores each have five on the merit list. Patricia Kiernan, Eldon Nuernberger, Ruth Rubick, Marjorie Soderberg and Jean Sundell represent the tenth grade, while Linnea Bloomquist, Marian Carr, Ruth Johnson, Gwendolyn Lund and Marjorie Lund won high honors among the freshmen.

A pep rally was held Friday afternoon in high school assembly, preceding Plainview basketball game. Yells were led by Douglas Nordstrom and Jeanne Cornell, cheer leaders. Coach R. L. Fredstrom and Supt. J. R. Johnson talked.

About 25 eighth grade students from over Dixon county came to Wakefield high school for eighth grade examinations.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby whom he names "Penelope." But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in divorce. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose and Mrs. Gatlin removes her from a hospital, and spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin returns to business, with Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a young psychiatrist. Dan McNamara, a Nance Belden, brings him a patient named Penelope, a girl with a dual personality, for which her condition is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and Gatlin's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over to Nance's cause. Nance, having a criminal record, is sent to the penitentiary. Lanny visits her and Nance persuades her to smuggle out a letter from her handbag. Nance escapes and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment. Nance escaped to Burt's office, where McNamara finds them. One by one he orders the nurse to take her to his home, ordering the untrained one to care for Nance and his pal.

was Flynn, one of the detective sergeants on watch at your house. He found two drops of blood you overlooked, so he thinks you and Nance are in the house but refuse to answer the bell and he wants permission to break in. In the name of the law. He says he can slide the latch on your front door lock like nobody's business. I told him to wait another hour and then try it, but to be careful."

Lanny's independent and belligerent nature was instantly aroused. "If I couldn't give a snooper like that cards and spades, the four aces, big and little casino, and beat him to death on the sweeps, I'd kiss a cow," she declared. "Guess I'll go home and make those big boots feel ashamed of themselves for disturbing a lady."

"Whatever you do, be nice to them, Lanny, they'll just wait you down to central station and slow you away for the night—with the excuse that the chief wants to see you. And I've decided I don't know you. If I did I'd go home with you."

As Lanny entered the driveway and paused in front of her garage,

"Don't Know Anything About Her, Chief."

there were no detectives in sight, although there might have been had she deemed it the part of wisdom to glance carefully about her. She unlocked the garage door, climbed the motor and switched off the lights. Then she got out, closed and locked the garage door and turned on an electric light switch on the doorstep to light her way upstairs to her kitchen.

Then she almost screamed. Two big fellows wearing soft hats were standing behind her chair, gazing at her owlishly. Instantly Lanny switched off the light, got her little pistol out of her bag and switched the light on again.

"Now what do you two handsome devils want?" she demanded.

Like automatons the pair threw back their lapels and disclosed their shields. "Cops or no cops," Lanny announced, "my garage is my castle, and you can't come into it uninvited without a search warrant."

The two detectives looked at each other and Lanny realized that they appreciated her very much indeed. "She's a lawyer," said one of them. "Not a very good one, though," the other replied. "However, Pat let her have her own way. A woman—

"How about me?"

"You've been a soldier, so I suppose you can carry out orders."

"Yes, sir."

"Well, your orders are to come out to my house, too, and take care of your friends. The doctor will call every day and tell you what to do. And you'll have to do the cooking."

"I can do that, too. Not fancy, but they can eat it."

"All right, you've got a job and a boiling-up place as well. I'll go home now and get my car and come back for you and your friend. Meanwhile don't you get cold feet and disappear. I want to talk to you some more. I want to find out all about Nance Belden, and you and your friend might be able to give a line on her."

"I don't know anything about her, Chief, except that her real name is Penelope Gatlin."

Dan McNamara clasped his corrugated brow in both hands and pondered. "Gatlin! Gatlin! Penelope Gatlin! Now, where have I run across that name in my business? I don't usually forget names, and I seem to remember it in a call once for somebody by that name called on somebody by that name called on me. It was a long time ago. I'll have to look that up—I wonder if there's anything in the files at headquarters."

It was midnight before Nance Belden's two friends were installed with her in Dan McNamara's house. Lanny looked both men over carefully and confided in the chief that she wouldn't trust either of them as far as she could throw a bear by his tail, to which Mr. McNamara replied that one of them couldn't raise any devilry if he wanted to, while the other dared not. Moreover, this latter was the only practical nurse he could secure. A trained nurse might talk; on the other hand, this friend of Nance's had been educated to keep his mouth shut. "And a very great virtue," McNamara added. "His freedom is in his keeping and my house is in his, so we have to trust each other. Besides, it's high time you got home."

"The phone rang and Dan answered it. When he rejoined Lanny he was smiling broadly. "You're a bum mopper-up," he accused. "That —the outrageous fellow bowed low—and particularly a young and beautiful woman—with a pistol—always makes me nervous. If you will be good enough to open your garage door, Miss Lanning, we will go out, come up your front stairs, ring the bell like gentlemen, and ask if we can't come in and have a little chat with you. Is that satisfactory?"

"Eminently so," Lanny was as polite as the speaker now. She felt for the butt in back of her, slid it back and kicked the door open without taking her eyes or her pistol off the pair. They went out, closed both doors behind her and held them closed until she had shot the bolt home again. Then she went upstairs and let herself in just as her doorbell rang; so she switched on the lights, removed her hat and coat, went to the door and opened it. Instantly two large hands thrust two cards at her; whereupon she was aware that she was about to entertain Detective Sergeant P. Flynn and Detective Sergeant A. Angelotti.

"Good evening, gentlemen," Lanny hailed them cordially. "Come in and rest your big fat feet."

Lanny led them down the hall to her tiny drawing room. Angelotti, like a hound, followed close behind her, but Flynn was in no hurry. He swept the runner in the hall with a flashlight first, then followed his partner into the drawing room.

"Is this to be a long interview?" Lanny asked cheerfully.

"P. Flynn shook his head. "A minute or two."

"Then I'll not bother giving you anything to drink."

"Well, it might take ten minutes, at that," Flynn countered.

Lanny mixed her guests each a highball. P. Flynn drank half of his at a gulp, set down his glass and said:

"Well, where's Nance Belden?"

"I see by the papers she escaped from San Quentin about six hours ago."

"She came here," Flynn charged.

"Prove it," Lanny challenged tartly; whereupon Flynn went out into the entrance hall and returned, dragging the end of the hall runner with him. He turned it over and revealed a large dark red spot.

"Blood!" he announced.

Angelotti touched the spot. "Fresh blood!"

"Human blood," Flynn went on. "Quite a clot of it. She must have fainted after Miss Lanning let her in. Undoubtedly she lay several minutes in the hall bleeding while Miss Lanning was fixing a bed for her."

"We know she came here," Angelotti charged. "We found two spots of blood on the sidewalk."

"That settles it," Flynn declared, with ponderous finality. "Miss Lanning, you have this female convict sequestered in your house, and I advise you to give her up."

"Search my house," Lanny offered in a queer, choked voice. She laughed herself for having overlooked that large blood stain on her hall runner.

Flynn and Angelotti needed no second invitation. They searched the house thoroughly and returned to the little drawing room to finish their drinks.

"You've taken her away," Flynn charged. "Where did you take her?"

"If you're such good detectives, go find her," Lanny was getting her courage back again. "She did come here, but I wasn't fool enough to receive her. She came in a car with two men and she did faint in my hallway and lie there for a little while. Of course she expected—why, I can't imagine—that I'd hide her and nurse her. But she's neither a friend nor a relative of mine; she met me once in Doctor Burt's office where I am employed and took a liking to me—in her funny way. She's a psycho-neurotic personality. She wrote me, asking me to call upon her, and I did—like a fool—because I felt sorry for her. She should be in a sanitarium, not a jail."

Public Invited To Most Foolish Virgin

An invitation to the public, and particularly to religious groups, is extended by dramatics department at the college to attend production of "The Most Foolish Virgin" in college auditorium Tuesday evening, February 12, at 6:45 o'clock. This symbolic fantasy in one act was presented here during summer

Gene Brockmeier, Mgr. Agency Stores at Waterford, Laurel, Randolph. 217 Main St.

Prof. Albert G. Carlson presented Dewayne Gramley, piano student, in solo last Thursday for Wayne Herald radio program. Feature of the program was "Aladdin's Lamp," a suite of six numbers of Mr. Gramley's own composition.

Dedications Thursday were for Gust Trest of Wakefield on his birthday of January 30, and for Mrs. Henry Tarnow of Wakefield for her birthday of Friday.

Songs of every time and every clime were presented by Prof. Clifford Blair who sang favorite serenades as solos. He presented a 15th century troubadour number by Branhms, "Passing By," by Purcell, "Awake My Nina," by Pergolesi, "Flow Gently Sweet Aton," by Burns-Spitman, "Rispianto," by Toselli, modern serenade by Gilberte, and "My Sweetheart Has a Rosy Mouth" arranged by Branhms. Franklin Philleo played his accompaniments.

Dedications Friday were for Eleanor Martin and Dale Sehested at

Stripping Wells
Is Greatest Crime
Mitchells Shown

Stripping natural gas wells in the Panhandle region is called Texas' greatest crime. Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Mitchell were informed on their recent visit to that state. The Mitchells were guests of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce on a 200-mile drive through the gas and oil wells of the Panhandle.

This wastage is the result of a law passed by Texas legislature permitting natural gas to be blown into the air after the gasoline content is extracted. Prior to the enactment of the stripping law, natural gas could not be used for this purpose unless the gas was used for commercial lighting, heating or power purposes.

In the production of oil the energy in the gas under pressure is utilized to move the oil through the formation to the well bore where it may be lifted to the surface either by the formation pressure or by other means. The gas also has another very important function in oil production in that its solution in the oil lowers the viscosity of the oil and causes it to move more freely through the porous strata to the well bore.

In the Panhandle field, as well as in other oil fields, the oil production is limited by proprietary market demand, while at the same time gas energy is being dissipated without regulation.

The question, is whether companies should be allowed to waste natural gas resources of the fields in order to use this pressure in producing oil. More than 50 natural gas plants are operating in the Panhandle alone. The quantity of gas wasted in a month would furnish the entire state of Texas with gas for domestic needs for a whole year. The gas supply is enormous and will last for years, but opponents feel that the stripping process is wasting an important natural resource just to make production of oil easier and that such wastes are a crime.

The chief cost of government is the support of necessary institutions that our fathers never heard about.—Atlanta Constitution.

Einar Berntson
Is Prize Winner

Wayne Student's Art Work
Places First Over Five Thousand Entries.

From a deluge of more than 5,000 answers to the Omaha World-Herald "Pick the Place" advertising contest, first place is awarded to Einar Berntson of Wayne and he receives a prize of $20. Einar's entry was a scene, a perspective in a cardboard box, showing a vista through a plum orchard, with Omaha's skyline in the background. A sign along the road which would indicate the trees announced "To Omaha's big dollar sale."

A plum pie entry by Elizabeth Grant of Omaha, took second, Helen Tell of Omaha third, Ramona Olson of Norfolk, fourth and Mrs. Frances Blackman of Tilden, fifth. Five Omaha men were judges.

College High Plays
In Games At Wisn

Wayne college high basketball team lost to Wisn at Wisn, scored 14 to 16. Wayne scored 14 to 16, but not scored in the second half.

To Omaha, Mr. and Mrs. McCheaney who had visited a few weeks here in the J. E. Hufford home, went to Omaha Monday to spend a few days before leaving for Buffalo, N. Y., where their sons, Stanley and Edward, are located.

We are inclined to agree with the Connecticut newspaper which affirms that Barnum never said of suckers, "One is born every minute." The great showman seldom was guilty of understatement.—Detroit Free Press.

HUNGRY I met a boy who was hungry He was gaunt and long and lean; There was something wrong with his liver And something wrong with his spleen. I met a lass who was hungry She looked weary and ill and worn; Her coat was a mass of rags And even her dress was torn. I met a dog that was hungry His eyes were festered and sore; I bought him a bone at the butcher's But he simply cried for more. Such sights as these have terror For even the strongest heart; Save them from such a future In home or busy mart. Such sights as these have terror But I saw far worse today; I saw some well-dressed people — Listeried to things they would say. I found they, too, were hungry For they jacked the bread of life; Hungry to hear a story That would save them from sin and strife. Franklin Lee Stevenson

COLLEGE STUDENT HAS INTERESTING CHINESE HERITAGE

A modern daughter of old China is little Beth Quey, Wayne college coed, with her trim sweater suits and shining black hair ending in curls at nape of neck. In her olive skin and slanting dark eyes one glimpses Oriental ancestry, but there is little of the Oriental in her crisp, excellent English for Beth is American-born, a product of American schools. Second term she came to Wayne college to enroll for her sophomore year, learning of this institution from friends. Beth calls Omaha her birthplace, but most of her life has been spent in Sioux City where her family, the Leo C. Queys, are the only genuine Chinese... the others are of mixed blood. But, in Omaha there were many Chinese and most of them lived together in a section called "Chinatown." Here her father was in the restaurant business, being part-owner of the renowned "King Fong's" at one time. Leo is really his family name and Quey his given name but Mr. Quey decided that Quey made a better last name and arranged it thusly. Beth's mother was born in southern China, at Canton—it has been about 17 years since she saw her homeland. Mr. Quey, American-born, went back to the land of bamboo trees, of intricately-lovely temples, of flooded rice fields, of a crumbling Great Wall and crowded, noisy cities. Here he married and brought his bride back to the western world... on to Omaha's Chinatown. With them the Queys brought some Chinese customs, a rice, for instance, makes up at least one meal every day in the Quey household. It's served plain, not even salted or buttered, and takes the place of mashed potatoes and bread. Usually a vegetable, meat and fruit are also eaten. The elman, Clarabell Bergman, Gust Jaeger and Harry Eickhoff. For Alverna Test. Miss Alverna Test whose marriage to Clarence Baker takes place early this month, was guest of honor Sunday afternoon when Miss Irene and Miss Viola Test entertained at a miscellaneous shower at the Will Test home. Games were enjoyed and the hostesses served luncheon. Miss Test received many gifts. Guests were Miss Beulah, Miss Opal and Miss Mildred Thompson, Miss Mildred and Miss Ruth Wert, Miss Joy Granquist, Miss Ella Bruns, Miss Amelia Reeg, Miss Elmore Holst, Miss Rachel Hansen, Miss Florence Baker, Miss Florence Montgomery, Miss Myrtle Suhr, Miss Edna, Miss Alice and Miss Irene Baker, Mrs. Raymond Nickols and Mrs. Herbert Barelman. The Old Hen Brooder. It Hovers The Baby Chicks Like a Mother Hen - It Is The Most Sanitary Brooder Made - It Is "Nature's Way" With Every Hazard And Discardant Element Removed. $29.50 UP. THE Old Hen Brooder gives the baby chicks better care than a mother hen. It never gets weary, never gets excited. It never exposes the brood to disease or danger. It hovers the brood with uniform, even temperature. It applies warmth to the backs of the baby chicks, where warmth is needed. It permits them to avoid the heat when heat is not needed. It constantly supplies the brood with feed and water which the chicks cannot contaminate with germs. It's better than the hen and does it nature's way. It raises a greater percentage of poultry at a lower cost than any other brooder known. Whether under the hovers, the (Old Hen Hooper) or in the feeding spaces of the brooder, the chickens are always on a fine wire mesh, known as hardware cloth, through which their droppings go and fall on to a pan beneath. This "dropping pan" is beyond reach of the chickens, so that they cannot pick up their droppings. H. H. HACHMEIER Home of the Maytag Wayne, Neb. Phone 62

The 1935 FORD V-8 TRUCK. NOW ON DISPLAY AND READY FOR DELIVERY. For 1935, Ford has added many important improvements to the Ford V-8 Truck. Chief among these is better balanced load distribution. The load-center has been moved farther forward, resulting in less body overhang, better braking and more uniform tire and brake wear. The brakes have been newly designed for quicker, smoother stops with heavy loads. They will not "fade" even when making quick stops in rapid succession. The castiron brake drums have integral cooling ribs which dissipate heat faster and minimize distortion. The new clutch has a diameter of 11 inches and a larger frictional area. Pedal pressure is lower at idling speeds. Plate pressure increases by centrifugal force as the speed of the engine increases. This is a new type of clutch developed by Ford engineers. Crankcase ventilation has been added to the engine. No other change has been made in this engine, which has proved so economical and reliable in the hands of owners. The cooling system has been improved; the radiator is wider and water pump impellers are larger. Appearance has been materially improved. Fenders are skinned and finished in baked enamel colors that match the hood and cab. The new cab has a sloping windshield. Passenger-car comfort has been provided for the driver. The seat is adjustable, and its width has been increased to 49 inches. Safety Glass is standard equipment throughout. Triple ventilation includes (1) Clear-View Ventilation in door windows; (2) Easy-opening windshield; (3) Large screened cowl ventilator. The interior of the cab is completely lined. The roof and dash are insulated. Ask your Ford dealer to arrange an "on-the-job" test with your own loads, over your own routes, with your own driver at the wheel. Prove to yourself how V-8 Performance and Economy will save time and money for you. Priced as $500 for 131 1/2-INCH CHASSIS. F. O. B. DETROIT. ASK YOUR FORD DEALER FOR AN "ON-THE-JOB" TEST WITHOUT COST OR OBLIGATION.

Third and fourth graders are learning a new yell to give for the other grades: "Here come grades three and four, you are from another floor, watch us soar, watch us roar, grades three and four, rah! rah! rah!" Charles Scribner is yell leader. In studying about the Egyptian pyramids the children learned that the great mounds are the tombs of kings, that it took 100,000 men about 20 years to build the Great Pyramid, that they originated about 3,400 years before Christ.

Third and fourth graders have entered into a spelling contest which will close on Valentine's day. Each time a pupil gets 100, he receives a heart. The sandtable is being converted into a post office and each child will have a box in this to contain his Valentines.

The children have completed study of Arabia in geography class and are dressing Arabian dolls this week. For the first time this year, the two grades are separated in geography study, the fourth graders going to Norway, and third graders to Japan.

First graders are looking forward to Valentine's day, and have cut out red paper hearts to make a border at rear of room. In language period last Thursday and Friday, each second grader chose the name of one of the three children who had withdrawn from the room during the year and wrote a letter to this former pupil. These were grouped together and mailed by Miss Margaret Leffer.

Commercial Club Is New Organization

Last week Tuesday marked passing of Winside Lions club, when the members voted to withdraw from the international organization, and become a commercial club. It was pointed out that the group had paid out over $100 for initiation fees and regular dues last year, also special assessments for state, national and international conventions. Members felt that the club could accomplish more for Winside community if this money was kept at home. Initiation fees will be $2, and annual dues including meals, $10 yearly. All business men and farmers are eligible to membership.

Nineteen attended the special meeting at Baha cafe during which the change was voted. Regular dinner meeting was held at Trinity Lutheran church on Tuesday evening, in charge of Gurney Benschhof and Fritz Dimmel.

Return Home From Scenic Trip Into Southern Country

Mr. and Mrs. Iver Anderson arrived home in Hoskins vicinity last Saturday after a most interesting trip through the southern and back through Chicago, having left their son, Irving, down in the racing country to train as jockey.

Since early childhood Irving has had a fondness for horses and has lately developed into a good little rider, competing in county fairs during the past four years. Sixteen years of age he weighs a scant 94 pounds and will probably take off a part of this. At the Calumet farm near Lexington where he will train, there are a head trainer and eight other "galloping" boys whose business it is to gallop the horses in anticipation of work on the track. Irving is under four-year contract to the Calumet people. While Nebraska has contributed many great sports figures, there are no great jockeys at present who call this state their home.

The Andersons accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Anderson of Hoskins vicinity, down to Miami, Fla., visiting such historic points as St. Augustine. Six days were taken for a 2,000-mile leisurely trip southward, taking time to enjoy the scenery en route. The Emmett Andersons remained at St. Cloud, Fla., where Mr. Anderson plays the piano accordion on radio programs. The Iver Andersons returned by train.

Mr. Anderson reports that the southland is very dependent on tourist trade, having little else for revenue. In mountain sections the settlers live in rude shacks. Kentucky, however, has rich blue-grass fields. Florida, land of white

SYNOPSIS.

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby whom he names "Penelope." But their affairs end in divorce. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose and Mrs. Gatlin removes her from a hospital, and spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, writes Penelope all the money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a young psychiatrist. Dan McNamara, chief of police, brings him a patient—"Nance" Helden, a girl with a dual personality. Lanny, which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over to Nance's cause. Nance, having a criminal record, is sent to the penitentiary. Lanny, which her "saddle nose" persuades her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate steals from her handbag. Nance escapes and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment.

"Come on, Doc. I'll go to your home with you and pick these birds up."

"No, you shall not. I wouldn't turn those two men over to you for ten thousand dollars. They're too..."

"Yes, they have guts. They can be trusted on a particular job I want to put through. Word of honor, Steve, I'll not pinch them. I just want to talk with them."

A block from Stephen's home Dan McNamara got out of the doctor's car. He had already received from Stephen Burt a description of the ground-floor plan of his house. And Stephen had agreed to leave his latchkey under the mat at the front door.

The chief watched Stephen put up his car and enter his house. A light was shining in the entrance hall, and this light Stephen, in accordance with the chief's instructions, switched off.

In about five minutes the chief saw this light switched on and off twice. That meant the doctor had received another telephone message. Then the light was switched on and off ten times. That meant the patient would arrive in about ten minutes, so Dan McNamara hid himself in the deep shadow of a tradesman's entrance at the side of a house across the street, and waited.

In ten minutes almost to the second, a car, with drawn curtains, drove up to the house and two men got out. The chief could see that one of them had to have assistance, so the driver got out and helped the other man half drag, half carry, the wounded man up the steps. Stephen opened the door and the three men entered; immediately McNamara ran across the street and up the front steps behind them, found the latchkey under the mat, opened the door and stepped inside. He could hear voices in Stephen's reception room, so he drew his pistol and stepped silently up to the entrance of it.

"Put 'em up, boys," he ordered cheerfully. He drew back his left lapel and revealed his blue and gold shield. "No necessity to argue in the smoke. This isn't a hanging matter."

He forced the two unwounded men to stand with their backs toward him while he ran his facile hands over their persons and relieved each of a pistol. He "broke" both guns and placed the cartridges in his pocket.

"I beg your pardon, Doctor, for entering your house unannounced, but you left your front door un-latched and I couldn't resist. I had a notion these men might call upon you. Just a hunch, because the warden tipped us off to watch the home of your office nurse, Miss Lanning. So, while watching the home of the servant I concluded to watch that of the master, also. Sit down, boys. Never mind us, Doc. The man on the table needs all of your attention. Fix him up nicely and let him be there until I come back. He can't run away and if he tries, don't you let him. You other men come with me down to the central office till I see if we have anything on you. I don't appear to have the honor of your acquaintance, but we'll look the rogues' gallery over and compare fingerprints. While there's life, there's hope. You got an open fireplace in your house, Doctor?"

Stephen said that McNamara was preceding they had not previously met. "Yes, Chief. In the drawing room. It's all set."

"I want to warm these boys up and dry them out. They did good work this afternoon and they deserve good treatment. Drop that wounded man long enough to dig up a couple of stiff joints of spiritus frumentum for my lads, will you, Doc? I always warm a cold man from the outside in and from the inside out."

"Thank you, Chief," both men muttered.

The three retired to the drawing room and the chief tossed one of the men a box of matches. "Fire up," he commanded. "Then draw yourself up to the blaze and drink the grog the doctor will give you. Where's your pal hit?"

"Top of the right shoulder, calf of the left leg and blisters of the left arm."

"So he's the chap that dragged Nance out of the water, eh? He was in the rear cockpit, but you were up front driving the boat. There are forty bullet holes in the rear of that boat." He sighed. "These machine guns certainly spray things. You didn't drop your own machine gun overboard, either. They're too valuable and hard to get. A Thompson, I suppose. A Tommy gun and a Tommy man! Visiting brethren—from Chicago, I suppose. That's why we haven't met before. Pardon me a minute while I look for the Tommy gun in your car. And if you want to die in a hurry just try beating it out the back way while I'm gone."

He returned in less than a minute with the one-man machine gun in his hands. "We've got Nance Helden where you dropped her," he announced. "So while you're lapping up that whiskey, tell me all about it."

"So Nance told you where to look for us, eh? The man who had handled the motor boat spoke with withering contempt and hatred. Instantly Dan McNamara cuffed him viciously on the side of the head. "Apologize for that," he roared. "You're so old a crooked you think everybody else is, too."

The man mumbled an apology. "No, Nance didn't tell me, you rat," McNamara went on. "I didn't ask her, because I knew she wouldn't tell. But I did think she'd call on this doctor."

You dropped her at the home of his office nurse, didn't you and two boys, gather and do as I instruct you, all by myself. And here you are. Got any idea why I came here?"

"No."

"Because I wanted to save you from the consequences of the job you pulled off this afternoon. I'm in sympathy with that, and as far as I'm concerned Nance Helden isn't going back to San Quentin and she isn't going back to your gang, either. Now, you play the game with me and I'll play it with you. Double-cross me and I'll hang something hot on you, and you and your friends will be heard of in public for a long time to come. You other men, come with me down to the central office till I see if we have anything on you. I don't appear to have the honor of your acquaintance, but we'll look the rogues' gallery over and compare fingerprints. While there's life, there's hope. You got an open fireplace in your house, Doctor?"

Stephen said that McNamara was preceding they had not previously met. "Yes, Chief. In the drawing room. It's all set."

"I want to warm these boys up and dry them out. They did good

"You've figured her right. She's queer. And that's your wounded friend being doing since he got out of stir. What did he get in for?"

"He got in for bootlegging and he's been bootlegged for a boss boot legger since he got out."

"H-m-m-m! And what's your specialty?"

"I don't know what line I'll take up, Chief. I'm only been out of the United States army disciplinary barracks on Alcatraz Island a month. I was a soldier—and I poked an officer."

"Oh, you're the machine-gunner eh? Learned to shoot in the army, I suppose?"

"If I hadn't, I'd have killed that guard. I could have gotten him if I cared to. But instead, I scared him with one's and shorts. Did I sweep the roof of that lookout tower?"

"You certainly did—and rattled the man at the Browning gun here. Well, you're quite a fellow. What does your friend, the chauffeur do?"

"Delivers bottles. He took a chance for a friend."

"You may go," said Dan McNamara to the chauffeur. "Take your car and beat it. But I'll remember you and if you pull any rough stuff in this city I'll land you out in the grass. On your way."

The man fled promptly and Dan turned to the ex-soldier. "I've got Nance out of my house," he explained. "Doctor Burt has fixed her up and I'm not going to turn her in. Neither am I going to turn her in because she's picked up. The saddle-nose of hers is a deal-give-away."

The man nodded lubriciously. "We've got to find a quiet way for your friend, too? The chief was on meditative. 'A man with three bullet holes in him is in an embarrassing fix—when he's wanted. We'll take him out to my house. That's the only safe place I can think of.'"

Four Billion Bill For Nation Budget

Congressman Carl Stefan Explains Appropriation Measure Plans.

(By Carl Stefan)

In his budget message to the congress on January 7, 1935, the president, among other things, said: "I recommend that $4,000,000,000 be appropriated by the congress in one sum, subject to allocation by the executive, principally for giving work to those unemployed on the relief rolls."

On January 21, 1935, House Joint Resolution 117 was introduced by Congressman Buchanan of Texas, chairman of the house committee on appropriations. The joint resolution was referred to as one making appropriations for relief purposes, and contained in it the provision that if and when enacted, it may be cited as the "Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935."

This house joint resolution is the measure which during the last few days has claimed the attention of the country by reason of the fact that it undertakes to appropriate four billions of dollars in one sum for emergency relief purposes. The measure has been and is important, not only because of the magnitude of the appropriation that it carries but because it again projected into the scene the much mooted question of the delegation of legislative power in other words, the collective powers of Congress to the chief executive. The resolution in its original form provides that the sum of $4,000,000,000 shall be made immediately available and shall remain available until June 30, 1937. In addition to the direct appropriation of the principal sum, the resolution makes available from unobligated balances of previous appropriations and funds, a total of $880,000,000. Therefore, for all practical purposes this measure when presented to the house, was a measure authorizing the expenditure of $4,880,000,000.

The preamble of the resolution stated that the purpose of the appropriation was in order to protect and promote the general welfare. First, provide relief from the hardships attributable to widespread unemployment and conditions resulting therefrom; second, to relieve economic maladjustments; third, to alleviate distress; and fourth, to improve living and working conditions. The statement of policy went on further to say that the money appropriated was to be used in the discretion and under the direction of the president, in such a manner and for such purposes, and such projects, including but not limited to slum clearance, rural reforestation, soil erosion, land reclamation, improvement of existing roads and construction of national highways, grade crossing elimination, Civilian Conservation Corps work, and other useful federal or non-federal work. Further than indicated by these notations, no specific program of projects to which funds may be allotted is established, at least by the action of the congress, and no definite amounts out of the $4,880,000,000 are set aside for any specific purpose.

A subcommittee of the appropriations committee of the house, in charge of deficiency appropriations, conducted a hearing on this measure on Monday, January 21, and three witnesses appeared before this subcommittee. They were the secretary of the treasury, the acting director of the bureau of the budget, and the director of the procurement division in the treasury department. The entire hearing has been reproduced in approximately forty-five pages of printing on ordinary book-size paper.

Under date of Wednesday, January 23, the resolution was reported to the house by the committee on appropriations, and in its report the committee said: "The purpose of the joint resolution is to give effect to the recommendations of the president of the United States, with respect to providing work relief for the unemployed as a substitute for the dole plan."

Prior to the time that the measure could then be taken up for consideration on the floor of the house, a rule had to be obtained which would establish the parliamentary limitations under which the consideration of the measure would proceed. Let it be said here that a rule is a resolution proposed by the house committee on rules which fixes and limits the time during which general debate on the measure will proceed; which provides for the division of time on the two sides of the house and which either makes all amendments from the floor out of order or specifically provides that certain amendments or all amendments should be in order, as the case may be. Such a rule is the tool, and the house committee on rules is the creator of the tool, which fashions the groove through which legislation must pass.

The proposed rule which the committee on rules submitted to the house on January 22, provided that general debate on the resolution should continue not to exceed three hours; should be equally divided between the majority and the minority; and that no amendments should be in order except such amendments as were offered by direction of the committee on appropriations. That proposed rule, forthwith, brought a storm of protest, not only from republicans, but likewise, from a number of democrats. The protest came from members who independently felt, or who had committed themselves in campaign pledges to the proposition that any emergency works appropriation should be broken down and earmarked by legislative action, so that they would procure assurance that at least certain amounts would be allocated to their respective districts, and then, too, there was the idea heretofore alluded to, which has been greatly accentuated by the recent decision of the supreme court of the United States in the so-called "Hot Oil" cases, to-wit, that congress had already gone far beyond the safety zone in delegating its legislative power, and was now in danger of going still further. Before there was further consideration of the proposed rule on the floor of the house, the democrats met in caucus and the general action of the caucus was to bind at least a majority of the democrats—a sufficient majority to constitute a majority of the house—to the general proposition set out in the rule, but some thirty or forty democrats have no idea that they would not be bound by the caucus, and another eight or ten not in attendance at the caucus, explained that they could not subscribe to the conditions of the proposed rule.

On the day following, which was Wednesday, January 23, the rule was taken up on the floor and, at the outset, the chairman of the rules committee proposed an amendment to the original rule which provided that while no amendments to sections 1, 2 and 3 of the house joint resolution should be in order, except such amendments as were offered by the direction of the committee on appropriations, that sections 4, 5 and 6 would be subject to amendment from the floor. Of course, as the chairman of the rules committee conceded, the meat of the resolution was in sections 1, 2 and 3, and as the minority leader pointed out, amendments were to be permitted with respect to the trimmings rather than affecting the heart of the matter. In other words, such amendments as were to be permitted were amendments with respect to certain administrative details, and were not amendments with respect to the amount carried in the appropriation, or which further defined how the money should be expended. That was still reserved to executive decision and discretion. The rule, then, following approximately an hour's discussion, adopted by a vote of 250 to 146. Thereupon, followed the general debate upon house joint resolution 117. That proceeded for the balance of the afternoon, January 23, and on through the afternoon of January 24, until shortly following six o'clock, when the final vote on the resolution was taken. Certain committee amendments to Sections 1, 2 and 3 of the resolution were offered and accepted. They, however, altered the resolution only in slight matters of form rather than going substantially into its substance. The debate was spirited and sincere, and amendments were offered which in the opinions of their sponsors were necessary to properly safeguard the appropriation or to preserve the independence of congressional action. Those amendments, however, raised their heads merely to be bowled over.

During the course of the debate, a supplemental message was received from the white house which acted as a tonic to the solidarity of the democratic ranks, with the net result that just before seven o'clock the house having been in session eight continuous hours, the vote on the resolution was recorded as 328 for and 78 against. During the course of the debate in the afternoon, I received a telegram from the governor of Nebraska in which he asked me to undertake to see to it that a definite sum of money was set aside for highway projects. He pointed out that state highway departments know definitely what projects can be accomplished in the immediate future and have the organizations necessary to facilitate their construction. The eventual action on the measure then before the house was at that time so obvious that I could only reply to the governor by telegram that in view of the parliamentary rule under which the measure was being considered, coupled with the attitude of the majority toward any amendments which might be proposed within the restricted latitude for amendments, any practical prospect that the house would amend the bill to set aside any definite amount for any purpose was precluded.

By this action, yesterday, the house has contributed to the eventual certainty that this gigantic sum for relief purposes will be provided. By this same action, however, the house has not made clear just how and in what respects the program is to be effectuated. The president has said that he desired the appropriation to be in one sum, wholly without earmarking, for the reason that that would facilitate orderly breaking down of the appropriation, and for that reason would enable him to put something in excess of three million men to work within a thirty-day period. It is only fair to the membership of the house to say that while opposition to the resolution at times and in places was rather violent, there was not any serious opinion that disputed the advisability of making the appropriation, even in that huge amount, for emergency relief purposes. The reasons that members found it difficult to go along at many points were traceable mainly, if not solely, to the proposed method of handling the unprecedented relief fund. For my own part, says Congressman Karl Stefan, I supported the proposed amendments which would have curbed extreme delegation of legislative power and which would have written some program for the making of these expenditures, but when those efforts failed and we had the alternatives simply of voting for or against the resolution, I voted for it. I voted for it because there was no other bill to vote for. I voted for it because I realized that there are 3,500,000 men and women who need jobs. I voted for it because I believe we must give unemployed men back their self-respect. I do not, however, like the idea of congress so completely abdication its responsibility and surrendering that responsibility to the executive arm of the government.

It is not altogether without reason to say that the rumblings already heard in the house against this surrender of legislative power are exceedingly mild when compared to what is likely to issue from the Senate, and even before the house had completed its action yesterday, certain senators had touched off very violent blasts. Insofar as the house was permitted to speak, it has spoken. What will the senate say?

Who Fixes Hog Prices? Omaha Journal-Stockman: Popular impressions as to who fixes the price of hogs are rather hazy. In the first place, a good many people seem to believe that prices are actually fixed by some power, the packers being usually charged with doing the fixing. Of course, the packers deny the charge and they can do this truthfully.

In the published denial, however, Armour and Company do not tell the whole story and hence leave the public still in the dark. According to the Armour version of the matter, it is the consumer who determines the price of meat and the packer buys the hogs at levels to suit the pocketbooks of the consumers. Here is the statement: "To the packer a hog is so much ham, bacon, lard, pork chops, etc., on the hoof. Before he can set a price on the hog he has to know what these products will sell for on the wholesale market. He must then buy the hog at a price that will allow for his processing costs, distributing costs and taxes. What the packer can pay for live stock is determined largely by just one thing—what the housewife will pay for meat."

There is one very serious mistake in this statement. It assumes that the producer has nothing to say in the matter. That the hog raiser is not entitled to any consideration and that the man who breeds and feeds the hogs should have no voice in saying what price they shall bring on the market. And this is largely true so far as country buying or buying at packer concentration points is concerned, but it is certainly not true of the open, competitive, public markets.

On the public markets there is always more than one packer buying and there are always several order buyers for outside packers. There is keen competition for the hogs and the seller has a good deal to say as to the price. No single packing firm can say, "This is the price of hogs today, take it or leave it." The packer can and does say this at his concentration point, but he cannot say this on the open, public market where other packers are buying. All will admit that the consumers constitute the most important and vital factor in determining the price of hogs. Of almost equal importance, however, is the influence of the hog producers. Normally it is the weighing of the demand for pork against the supply of hogs that determines the price of hogs. The packers simply register this price in competing for the hogs. Where there is no competition, the packer merely registers his own price. Producers must see the point. If they should lose the open, competitive public market, then indeed the packer would determine the price on "just one thing, what the housewife will pay for meat." Where there is competition, however, he will take that price or sell to some other packer at a better price. The open, competitive, public market offers the fairest and most satisfactory method of determining the price of hogs.

Cardinals Hold Conference Lead

Kearney And Hastings Are Wildcats Openings This Week-End.

Omaha University Cardinals successfully defended the NIAA title here Friday evening by defeating Wayne college Wildcats by a 41-37 score. It was a clean and hard-fought game throughout, the Omahans showing better floor work than the home lads but failing to cash in upon the set-ups. Wayne's squad resorted mostly to long shots. Score at end of the half was 16-15 favoring the visitors. Immediately after opening of second half, Omaha jumped to a 11-point lead which Wayne soon closed up to within four points. The Omahans were able to retain their lead through remainder of the half, however, and finished with seven points over the Wildcats.

Curtis, Omaha guard, was outstanding with his 18 points, followed closely by Wilkinson, forward, with 13. Patterson contributed nine points, and his floor work stood out. His passes aided Wilkerson and Curtis in their scoring. For Wayne, Weidum and Morris with eight, were leading scorers, Gregson following closely with seven.

The line-up and summary: Wayne (37) fg ft p Weidum, f 4 0 4 Manning, f 1 0 0 Dickey, f 2 1 1 Retzlaff, f 0 1 1 Ling'nitter, c 1 2 0 Gast, n 1 0 1 Morris, g 3 2 1 Gragson, g 3 1 1 Total 15 7 9

Omaha "U" (44) fg ft p Wilkerson, f 6 1 2 Patterson, f 4 1 0 Johnk, c 0 2 4 Brown, c 0 0 1 Curtis, g 6 6 2 Perry, g 0 0 0 Baade, g 1 0 1 Nelson, g 0 0 0 Kocak, g 0 0 0 Total 17 10 10 Referee—Joe Beha (Creighton). In a preliminary game Pilger town team won from Wayne reserves.

The Wildcats played Hastings tossers here Wednesday evening, and will travel to Kearney Friday for a game, and play at Hastings next day.

To enact a state NRA would still further retard business. There is no excuse for it at all. It has the support of perhaps one-hundredth part of the people, principally labor agitators and lobbyists whose salaries depend on getting their such restrictive laws intended for a special class and not all the people; and by a few paid secretaries of business and professional organizations whose eyes are seeking the same end. The great mass of the people would never have thought of such a scheme and are hindered and not benefited by any law which restricts their free and American right to mind their own business and make a living unrestricted.

Proposed Nebraska Law To Uphold NRA

W. F. Cramb, Jeffersonian democrat, has this to say in his Fairbury Journal in regard to a proposed law in Nebraska upholding the NRA: "A bill has been introduced in the Nebraska senate to provide a state NRA. We have had no opportunity to see what the bill provides, only brief newspaper reports, from which we judge the bill is even more vicious than the federal NRA. As we understand it, this law would practically wipe out the sovereign state of Nebraska so far as labor matters are concerned. State courts would be given the power to try case under the federal NRA law. Thus people of the state of Nebraska could be penalized in the state courts for violation of a federal law, of which they know but little in any event.

"This is surrendering the rights of the states with a vengeance and that it comes from the democratic party, ancient and honored defender of state rights for the past 100 more years, is still more appalling. As the democratic no longer defend states right, home rule, decentralized government, who will? "We cannot believe that any true democrat can support this bill. The NRA, as enacted as a federal measure, was an experiment, is vicious and un-American. Furthermore, its creator, Gen. Hugh Johnson says it is now as dead as the dodo. Why then should the legislature of Nebraska try to revive this dead and vicious thing?"

"The federal NRA has been a complete failure as a means of reviving business and starting prosperity on its return to America.

Announce Change In Wayne Store Name Officials of the Brown-McDonald Co., owners of the Golden Rule Store in Wayne, announce that the firm name has been changed to Brown-McDonald Co., through legal procedure. As was made public at previous date, the financial interests of H. W. Ekberg, who was associated with the company since its beginning, were purchased by J. M. McDonald of New York and D. G. and J. C. McDonald of California. With Mr. Ekberg's retirement the change in name was necessary. E. E. Brown continues as president, J. T. Johnson is secretary-treasurer and D. G. McDonald, vice president. Headquarters of the firm are located in Holtsville and stores are maintained in many points in Nebraska, Colorado and Kansas. The Golden Rule store in Wayne will continue to operate under this name with the Brown-McDonald Co. identification. Victor H. Green is manager of the local store.
