Broadcast Anniversary.
Last week marked conclusion of two years' broadcasting by remote control over WJAG by the Wayne Herald, and while we haven't been able to declare any dividends from advertising revenues, we have been highly satisfied with the service to the community. We ventured into this new field as a side line early in that memorable year, 1933. We began with an hour each day and the novelty of the plan brought enough business to keep us from sinking. September 1 of that year we cut the time to a half hour per day, and the following January to a half hour three days each week. That is the program now, and this service, supplemental to the Herald, answers all present demands.
By a canvass we have found an increased number of regular listeners. Also we have found advertisers who use the radio to spread brief and definite buying information, have been abundantly rewarded. The radio does not take the place of a newspaper, but it is an important auxiliary. It adds materially to a newspaper's community service. What the future holds we may only guess. With growing interest in the Herald's broadcast and with a swing back to normal crops and better economic conditions we look for an increased demand for advertising time, and this would necessitate longer broadcasting periods.
Besides service to the community generally, the broadcasts have afforded opportunities for ambitious talent and have encouraged the development of such talent. The Wayne Herald was the first outside anchorage for regular broadcasting over WJAG, and the Herald is still the only weekly newspaper in the state providing this service. Since we began broadcasting two years ago, two other regular outside connections have been made with WJAG — one at West Point and another at Columbus.
Progressing carefully and biting off only what can be comfortably masticated, trimming suits according to the economic winds, undoubtedly insure the steady mounting success of these air performances and more deeply and firmly interweave WJAG in the hearts and needs of the north Nebraska populace. Like having a tooth extracted, the pains of the incipient experience are over, and we are looking ahead with confidence — only to the past for guidance.

MORE DWELLINGS NEEDED IN WAYNE TO MEET DEMANDS
WAYNE is growing, and the demand for houses far exceeds the supply. Every week families wishing to locate here find difficulty in securing places to live. More dwellings — modern but of medium size, and not extensively constructed — are needed to permit the town to accommodate persons who wish to come here. Wayne is desirable as a home town, because, among other things, of its school and trade advantages. Building in a live, growing community like Wayne is not a doubtful investment. The town is sure to keep on growing as an attractive home and business center, and nothing is more certain of adequate returns than ownership of property here. Idle capital put into houses to rent could not be more wisely invested. We hope Wayne's tendency to expand and develop will not be retarded by continued lack of housing quarters.

WILL COOPERATE IN CELEBRATION
Garden Theatre Proposal Decision To Be Made Early In March.

A huge old-fashioned picnic on the college campus is scheduled for Saturday noon with graduates and students of the N. N. C. and college, also all other visitors in one big family. It is planned to give prizes for largest representation, longest distance, etc.
Wayne citizens can be of great help in this celebration and their cooperation will be appreciated, Miss Schmel stated. As suggestions of what the city can do Miss Schmel spoke of decoration of the streets and business houses. Prof. A. V. Tied brought Dr. Conn's message of appreciation for the council's desire to assist in the school's anniversary.
Supt. H. R. Best suggested that local people could help by going to other towns in northeast Nebraska to create interest in the observance. He also suggested that committees from the college and community council be named to confer and map out activities which the town could undertake to promote the observance. T. S. Hook added that local people could write friends in other cities inviting them to hospitality of Wayne (Continued on Page Two)

TO ECONOMIZE BY GREATER COUNTY BOUNDARY LINES
WITH modern means of transportation and hard-surfaced highways, county consolidation becomes more feasible. The extreme of dividing Nebraska into only six counties, as suggested by the Omaha Bee-News some time ago, would appear quite as impractical as the present small county units handed down by our early days. Edward B. Schmidt of the University of Nebraska department of economics, has figured that governmental costs could be reduced by uniting counties having populations of less than 8,000. One-third of the counties of the state would be thus affected, but Wayne county would not be included. Mr. Schmidt is convinced that sparsely settled counties could serve economy by consolidations, but he is not certain of savings in the more populous centers. An early start in county consolidations would furnish experience for subsequent action in extending county units. Some figuring would determine the extent to which county consolidations could take place in northeast Nebraska with decreased expense. We feel that Wayne county could handle more territory to the advantage of all concerned.

MAKE SHIFT TO NEW QUARTERS
Ceremony Marks Switching Of Telephone Service To New Building.
With befitting ceremony and clock-like precision, Wayne's telephone unit severed connections with the old office at 210 1-2 Main street and put through first call in the new exchange at 215 Pearl at just 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. So smooth was the switch-over, so carefully timed, that service was practically uninterrupted during the period.
Upon invitation of C. E. Pickett, local manager, Mayor Martin Ringer put through the first local call, talking to Mrs. Ringer. E. W. Huse called Sterling McCaw of the Norfolk Daily News, and John Davidson talked to Roy S. Brookman, editor of the Springview Herald. Mr. Ringer pulled the ribbon which removed the plug and connected his own telephone line with the new unit, and Mr. Davidson and Mr. Huse were invited to do likewise. Telephone officials attending included C. E. Spring, G. O. Holmer and R. Y. Hyde, all of Omaha, E. Hiebsenthal, J. Gibbs and E. M. Shaw of Norfolk, W. W. Frisell, manager of Wakefield exchange, Joe Artrman vice chief at South Sioux City, and A. S. Alexander, manager at West Point.
Just prior to the cut-over, every telephone in town and each county line had been tested out to assure the proper connection with the new switchboard. Promptly at 2:30 those on duty at the old exchange cut off connection and the group at the new exchange pulled out dummy plugs which blocked the new unit, and the switch-over was (Continued on Page Two)

TO ECONOMIZE BY GREATER COUNTY BOUNDARY LINES
WITH modern means of transportation and hard-surfaced highways, county consolidation becomes more feasible. The extreme of dividing Nebraska into only six counties, as suggested by the Omaha Bee-News some time ago, would appear quite as impractical as the present small county units handed down by our early days. Edward B. Schmidt of the University of Nebraska department of economics, has figured that governmental costs could be reduced by uniting counties having populations of less than 8,000. One-third of the counties of the state would be thus affected, but Wayne county would not be included. Mr. Schmidt is convinced that sparsely settled counties could serve economy by consolidations, but he is not certain of savings in the more populous centers. An early start in county consolidations would furnish experience for subsequent action in extending county units. Some figuring would determine the extent to which county consolidations could take place in northeast Nebraska with decreased expense. We feel that Wayne county could handle more territory to the advantage of all concerned.

MAKE SHIFT TO NEW QUARTERS
Ceremony Marks Switching Of Telephone Service To New Building.
With befitting ceremony and clock-like precision, Wayne's telephone unit severed connections with the old office at 210 1-2 Main street and put through first call in the new exchange at 215 Pearl at just 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. So smooth was the switch-over, so carefully timed, that service was practically uninterrupted during the period.
Upon invitation of C. E. Pickett, local manager, Mayor Martin Ringer put through the first local call, talking to Mrs. Ringer. E. W. Huse called Sterling McCaw of the Norfolk Daily News, and John Davidson talked to Roy S. Brookman, editor of the Springview Herald. Mr. Ringer pulled the ribbon which removed the plug and connected his own telephone line with the new unit, and Mr. Davidson and Mr. Huse were invited to do likewise. Telephone officials attending included C. E. Spring, G. O. Holmer and R. Y. Hyde, all of Omaha, E. Hiebsenthal, J. Gibbs and E. M. Shaw of Norfolk, W. W. Frisell, manager of Wakefield exchange, Joe Artrman vice chief at South Sioux City, and A. S. Alexander, manager at West Point.
Just prior to the cut-over, every telephone in town and each county line had been tested out to assure the proper connection with the new switchboard. Promptly at 2:30 those on duty at the old exchange cut off connection and the group at the new exchange pulled out dummy plugs which blocked the new unit, and the switch-over was (Continued on Page Two)

Future Hopeful F. S. Berry Says

endured hardships to realize dreams. But the Declaration of Independence did not make us a free people and the Revolutionary war did not make us a nation. Problems followed.

"At the Constitutional convention in Philadelphia 55 men from all walks of life worked four months in secret to frame a constitution which would serve this country always. They knew that we won liberty only to lose it because we did not know how to handle it. They could have chosen an easy way, solving just the problems of that time, but they were determined to build a government that would endure, not one that would benefit one class or group at expense of another or that would benefit at that time and harm coming generations. This ideal guiding the framers was spiritual progress. Watt's steam engine with following inventions was material progress.

"Conditions have been in a mess for several years. No one likes suffering and all approve relief in an emergency. But the attitude of the American people is important in determining what the future holds. If we are willing to enact legislation to build for ourselves only and neglect the future, we will fall. Even giving of self is not enough. We need the spirit of the Athenian youth who took the oath. 'I promise to leave to posterity not a diminished but an increased heritage.' Compared with other nations and other times the United States has suffered only little. Depressions are the rule of history and with the Athenian's spirit we are bound to have opportunity again and we will go ahead.

"Time of stress and unrest bring some needed social change. The difficulty and weakness of democracy," stated Mr. Berry, "is that at such times agitators, some with best intentions, submit new schemes that will if care is not taken lead us to dangerous ways. These schemes, unless founded on essentials of life and government, either die for want of steam or wreck something. It is important that the solid foundation not be wrecked. We have to look to the heavens for guidance but keep our feet on solid ground. Idealism and realism must both have part. Soil is now fertile for the demagogue and it is easy to grasp at saving straws but these are dangerous.

"The radical has more influence at times of stress than the sane thinker. This country has been through the greatest transition of all time. Evils have crept into industry, finance and government. Yet today the United States, with one-sixth of the world's population, has half of the world's wealth and produces half of the world's food and minerals. Millions have freedoms. There is more liberty and freedom than any people ever had and yet radicals are trying to tell us our government is a failure and we must start over.

"American people have the spirit to make them want to do right and protect their government." Mr. Berry believes, and this spirit will prevail and lead us again to progress. Democracy will carry on in an enlightened country. The United States will have what the people are morally worthy of and intellectually capable of and Mr. Berry believes the type of manhood of Washington and Lincoln will guide.

Make Shift To New Quarters

made. Telephone history in Wayne had passed another milestone!

Members of the Northwestern Telephone company staff from Wayne, Norfolk and Omaha, also several Wayne men, about 25 in all, were guests of the company Friday evening at a banquet at Hotel Stratton. Following dinner, Manager C. L. Pickett presided and introduced J. E. Britain, F. S. Berry, Dr. U. S. Conn, G. A. Renard, John Davidson and E. W. Huse who spoke on advancement made in communication and expressed appreciation for the company's progress in installing the new, modern equipment in Wayne.

Mr. Hisebenthal of Norfolk expressed appreciation for local cooperation in making the improvement. He explained the new type of service and expressed the company's confidence in Wayne as a progressive city justifying such a forward step.

Visitors at the exchange this Friday and Saturday will be shown through the building by guides between hours of 9 a. m. and 9 p. m. They will be shown how local and long distance calls are put through on the new switchboard, and how the other new central office equipment functions.

They will find a compact red brick building with graceful sloping roof and attractive entrance at right front. It's 32x38 feet and plans were drawn up especially to serve Wayne's needs. One enters into a small vestibule which has a toll telephone on the wall. This is for use after office hours and will be available up till 10 o'clock. The main section of the building consists of switchboard unit, in north part of the public space and power plant in northwest corner. This plant furnishes various currents needed to operate the switchboard. Patrons have reported increased efficiency in transmission of calls through the new unit. One reason, says Manager Pickett, is that the equipment is entirely new, and another that 48 volt battery is used in place of 24. The switchboard has places for four operators with toll board at extreme north end. There's a telephone booth off the public space, offering privacy to patrons. The business office with officials' desks is in an alcove at rear right. All walls are finished with rough white plaster and ceiling is gracefully arched.

In the center of the building are wash rooms, and the operators' cloak room. Interesting feature of the wash rooms is the use of solid glass bricks which are used as windows, in the manner of the glass houses featured at Chicago fair. The bricks are four inches thick and admit light but are not quite transparent. A garage with spaces for telephone supplies is attached to the building at rear.

In small closet off the public space is room for storing supplies, and one space contains a folding bed which wheels into the room for the night operator's use in the wee morning hours. There is a time after midnight when calls are few and few interruptions being warned of these by the night alarm.

This spring the building will be landscaped and ornamental fence added at rear.

Consider Garden Theatre. The building of a garden theatre in southeast corner of Bressler park was presented by Miss Norma Carpenter, Mrs. Lutgen and W. S. Conant. Plans drawn by Prof. E. J. Hunter were shown.

The cost was investigated and it found to be so great that the idea was converted into a garden theatre for which FERA labor is available. Shrubbery, trees, stones and cement for the work are estimated to cost $200 to $250. J. T. Bressler, honor of the park and Wayne city council approved the improvement. The matter is now before the community council. E. & P. W. club has pledged $25 to the project. ### Mrs. H. R. Best Gives Address On Radio

The importance of literature in the club program was subject of the radio talk given Tuesday by Mrs. H. R. Best, Third district chairman of literature in the four-eract clubs, from station WJAG, Norfolk. Literature brings great return than any other study, Mrs. Best, for besides informing the reader, it develops culture. Books are the basis for culture and all who read, comprehend and evaluate literature carefully have opportunity to acquire culture. Reading material is available to all so that everyone who wishes may become cultured.

"The Great Tradition" by Granville Hicks, Mrs. Best recommended for club study. Experience is the basis for "Judging Literature," states the writer. At periods of the Civil and World war, also at times of great economic change, literature must change to fit experience, the writer believes.

Mrs. Hicks' book describes the early traditional period, sectionalism, disturbed times of Civil War, period of industrialism, recent war and more recent economic and social changes each requiring adjustment in literature.

Wild Plans DR. F. E. TOWNSEND of Long Beach, Calif., who is down in Washington explaining to senate and house committees the merits of his proposed pension plan, is simply going stronger than the administration in trying to launch impossible theories. Townsend has captured the imagination and support of thousands who are charmed by the dream and would like to have it come true.

When the president's numerous bureaus set about nearly two years ago the task of reform and recovery, people had faith in results. Protests of hard-headed democrats and republicans were swept aside as too conservative. Rebirth of the nation with the birth of bureaucracy which would increase employment, decrease production to the level of consumption, raise wages and commodity prices at the same time, while ladeling billions out of the public treasury to quicken economic respiration, was accompanied by a lot of promising noise, and was acclaimed as a boon to a sick world. The administration's blueprints made a favorable impression, but so many things worked in conflict that expectations so far have been largely disappointing. But the administration takes a new hold, plans to spend additional billions and courageously acts confident.

Along comes Dr. Townsend with what he thinks is a feasible scheme, proposing to make the past two years' experiments look like an ox cart as compared with a stream-lined train. Congress readily swallowed the Roosevelt line of thought and string of proposals, but it balks when an interloper appears to undo the program and try to steal the show. Threats of the Townsend vagary with Huey Long and Upton Sinclair just around the corner, with other visionary schemes, should shock people into calling a halt on attempts to blow up tried policies and snatch Utopia out of wild dreams. The extravagant demands of left-wingers may jolt people into getting their feet on the ground and starting to build solidly on a sound foundation. And extraordinarily crazy demands may encourage the administration to move somewhat to the right, giving industry and business the concessions they need to yield the most strength to the recovery movement.

To Be Free Of A hundred per cent Partisanship New Deal newspaper asks non-partisan consideration of public questions in behalf of recovery. One may feel non-partisan without shouting me-too to all administration policies which as a matter of fact, are not in accord with the platform of either major political party and which have done violence to the pre-election professions of presidential candidates on both sides. Whatever criticism is offered to the administration's program does not conflict with the principles of either old party as expressed in the latest national conventions. Manifestly, narrow partisan politics should not influence judgment touching public policies. We felt that way when Hoover was besieged by partisan fire while trying to lead the country out of trouble, and if conditions are better now than they were then, there was as much reason then as now to relieve the executive of unnecessary burdens. However, criticism aimed at administration policies is not the result of partisan bias, but distrust bred by an ominous swing away from the fundamental and avowed principles of both parties.

Suspense over decision of the supreme court on the gold clause was ended Monday when the court held by a vote of four to five that gold-clause obligations outside of government bonds could be paid in deflated money, but that congress had no constitutional right to wipe out the gold clause in government bonds, though as the country cannot be sued, there is no way to collect more than the face value in deflated currency. The minority opinion was sharply critical of the government's position. The decision is accepted as a relief to the administration's monetary policy, though the suggestion to congress that it had exceeded its powers is accepted in some circles as likely to have a deterring influence on that body.

Touching the advisability of a government engaging in business, some one has dug up and launched this quotation from the noted American genius, Thomas A. Edison: "There is far more danger in public monopoly than there is in private monopoly. For when the government goes into business, it can always shift its losses to the taxpayers. If it goes into the power business it can pretend to sell cheap power and then cover up its losses. The government never really goes into business for it never makes ends meet, and that is the first requisite of business. It just mixes a little business with a lot of politics and no one

A local speaker may have hit the nail on the head when, after analysis of economic conditions, he drew the conclusion that we are successful first as "investigators" and last as "administrators," but fall down between the two as "interpreters." He seems to mean that we invent things and have ample resources, and that we have plenty of efficiency in distribution, but in-between the two lines of activity we lack creation of uses and markets for products of the farm and factory. This lameness in our development the speaker called "interpretation," and in his opinion it is the thing needing stimulus to coordinate forces and bring back demand and prosperity.

If the NRA is a good thing for private industry we do not know why it should not be consistently followed in printing for state institutions. How can an individual be expected to follow rules of fair prices if he is encouraged not to do so by governing bodies? If a printer increases prices to individuals and decreases prices to the state, he is likely to receive no business from the former and work at a loss for the latter. Then which way is he going and when will he arrive? If the NRA is worth anything, different units of government should be the least free from enforcement.

Political prophets see in Huey Long's presidential candidacy and crazy program a force for sound conservatism in the next presidential election. It is predicted that a third party looking for the rawest left-inger will pick flamboyant Huey. New Dealers will necessarily pull back from the Long extremity, and division of the radical and near radical vote will give the majority to the republicans if they have the sense to unite on a middle course.

Nebraska republicans are planning a big meeting in Lincoln March 1 to stimulate interest in their organization as a means of helping New Dealers modify and rationalize their course in harmony with the country's constitution and traditions.

Washington's birthday reminds us that we need to imbibe more of the spirit of the first president.

Omaha Journal-Stockman: It appears from Washington dispatches that the AAA is now greatly perturbed over consumer protest against the higher cost of living. For two or three years all efforts have been directed toward advancing prices of farm products. When the public protests against the cost of food, even bureaucracy takes notice.

Gold Cases Decisions. Lincoln Journal: The supreme court's action on the gold clause cases cannot be regarded as a complete victory for the government. In part it is a decision in avoidance, holding that the suits were improperly brought and that the court of claims was without jurisdiction.

The court holds that congress went too far in eliminating the gold clause from government bonds, and that gold clause bonds must be paid in gold or its equivalent in devalued currency.

In the case involving gold certificates, the court held that the court of claims did not have jurisdiction.

The press dispatches tell us the effect of the decision is to validate the act of congress suspending gold payments of private obligations which contain that provision.

Before the decision's effects will be known a careful study of what the court's decision was must be made. Some hold that its effect will be, regardless of its criticism of the act of congress, to leave holders of government bonds and securities no recourse, no method of collection. The government cannot be sued, without congressional permission, in any court excepting the court of claims.

Intruding Government. York Republican: The disposition of state and federal governments to intrude into the affairs of private citizens has in late years been very marked. The Nebraska legislature has a number of bills that would transfer the regulation of private affairs to the government.

The child labor amendment, which would give the federal government power to regulate or prohibit working hours for persons under 18; compulsory health insurance that would fasten a certain kind of medical treatment on people who would enjoy the benefits of the insurance; and proposed enactments of various kinds, which would give the government power over the individual greater than it has ever before had—these are gathering signs that we are heading toward regulated citizenship.

There are a good many old-fashioned people who think the government should intrude as little as possible into individual affairs; that its main functions are to preserve order and prevent transgression of common rights under the law. That was the view of the founders of the nation, and many of the present day think the doctrine sound. This newspaper cannot support those measures that take from individuals rights they have heretofore enjoyed at no expense to their neighbors. A nation, in our judgment, founded on rugged individualism is a stronger and better one than that founded on government regulation and regimentation. We have made amazing progress in this nation because we have encouraged the individual to strive to the utmost; we shall halt progress and stifle individual aspiration and effort whenever the government takes over the functions that belong to its individual citizens.

A PLEA.

To the kids—boys and girls of Wayne: An elderly woman who takes pride in her lawn and flowers every year, asks us to ask you not to run across yards—now soft—and make tracks that will prevent grass from growing. At this time inconspicuous little bushes and plants that will mean much future beauty, are stunted and often killed by being knocked down and trampled upon. Tiny grass roots are more tender at this season when they are trying to get started than at any other time of year. These little vegetation shoots want to grow and amount to something. They are planted carefully and watched hopefully, and when you come along and break them—whether ambitious shrubs or struggling blades of grass—you set them back if you do not destroy precious vegetable life and blow up a lot of ardent expectations. We have been asked to ask you to cooperate with the lovers and patrons of flowers and foliage and grassy plots by helping preserve the work of those bent on making home premises more attractive.

Progress

Reform and Recovery. It seems in the start the president proposed to carry on a program of "reform" and "recovery" simultaneously, stressing the former in the belief that the latter would lag close behind. But recovery loafed too far in the rear for safety, and so the president turned to giving business increased encouragement. In considering the president's notions, Time, weekly magazine, makes this observation: "The first two years of the New Deal were, from an economic point of view, no smashing success. NRA, AAA, $4,000,000,000 a year in emergency expenditures, dollar devaluation, all had been tried but some 5,000,000 families still remained on relief. The government's financial credit could not stand such a strain indefinitely. No could the Administration's political credit. A new economic order might be set up by a five-year or a ten-year plan, but certainly not by an 18-month plan. And the campaign of 1936 is not more than 18 months ahead if there is not recovery in 18 months then radicals will storm at the ivory gates of the Capitol. The Huey Longs, the Upton Sinclairs, the Father Coughlins, the D. Townsends—their successors, their deputies, their proselytes, or their social kin—will be the strong men of politics. Only recovery can ward them off, can save Franklin Roosevelt from having his left flank turned. Therefore a helping hand to Business and Recovery, more leisurely advancement for Reform. Thus, last week, the pundits."

ETHICS.

As regularly as a state legislature gets together once in two years, so exactly that often groups with the status quo to preserve are placed on the quiver. Watchful interest is not more concerned over passing favorable legislation than over preventing unfavorable legislation—legislation aimed at trimming rights at present prevailing. Now we are told persons engaged in dentistry are in conflict over a bill in the Nebraska legislature proposing to prevent members of the profession from advertising. A dentist who doesn't advertise, often depends on a violent tooth to bring business. A dentist who goes advertise, makes people think about dental requirements—often arouses them to take care of their teeth before they become irreconcilably rebellious. Non-advertising dentists are restricted by their association's interpretation of so-called "professional ethics." The "professional ethics" idea has been a source of worry to dentists for a long time—worry to some who are kept from doing what they would like to do, and worry to others who look out from restraint and see others capturing business which they might share under rules of greater freedom. So, among other things put up to the legislature, is one proposing to tell a dentist how far he may go in inviting persons to come in and have their masticating equipment re-conditioned.

Need Interpreters

Scientist Thinks

Dr. James Brock and Prof. Clifford Bair are on Chapter Program.

The ill adjustment between investigators and administrators is due to lack of interpreters, stated Dr. James Brock, head of Wayne college science department, in addressing Wayne chapter of A. A. U. W. and guests last Thursday evening following dinner at the Methodist church parlors. If this adjustment were made, much of the present disorder in social conditions would be solved, Dr. Brock believes.

Scientists are delving deeper than ever into underlying principles. The lack of interpreters to interpret the findings into everyday language so they may be of practical use, for instance, stated Dr. Brock, corn was formerly used only for food for stock. Scientific research has made it possible to use corn for many human foods, starch, paste, syrup and oil, and the husks and stocks for paper and insulating material. Oat hulls are used for making phonograph records. Soy beans are raised for oils for paints as well as for foods. About 100 uses are made of sweet potatoes, and alcohol is extracted from muskmellons. Cotton is not only used for cloth but for rayons, plastic work, explosives, oils, soap, glycerine, medicine and varnishes.

Senate Favors Probe At Wayne College

Lincoln, Feb. 20.—By a unanimous vote the Nebraska senate today ordered an investigation of the Wayne State Teachers' college of Wayne.

A resolution, introduced by Sen. J. C. McGowan (R) of Norfolk, also must be approved by the house before the inquiry can be made.

It would authorize the appointment of a joint legislative committee composed of two members of the senate and three members of the house to investigate teaching staff conditions at the college.

Senator McGowan said the investigation was asked to settle difficulties which he said had almost "wrecked the college." The resolution was born, McGowan said, out of charges made by Prof. J. G. W. Lewis of Wayne, against President U. S. Conn of Wayne, which were dismissed by the state normal board after a hearing last fall.

Dr. Conn then resigned as president of the college but his resignation does not take effect until next September.

The subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches for Sunday, February 24, is "Mind."

The Golden Test is from Job 28:28: "Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding."
A passage from the Bible in the lesson-sermon is from Psalms 40:5: "Many, O Lord my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I should declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "Divine metaphysics, as revealed to spiritual understanding, shows clearly that all is Mind, and that Mind is God, omnipotence, omnipresence, omniscience,—that is, all power, all presence, all Science. Hence all is in reality the manifestation of Mind." (page 273)

World Link Seen Through Scouting

Seeing the world neighborhood in the correct perspective is a matter of vital importance to young people today.

Scoutmaster Ruth Bryan Owen, United States minister to Denmark, in an interview recently granted in connection with the celebration of girl scout international month, February.

"The old concepts of time and space have altered," Mrs. Owen declared, "largely due to our modern methods of transportation and communication. Our thinking and, through us, that of our children must adjust itself to the new dimensions."

An important and valuable factor in such adjustment is an organization like the American girl scouts. Mrs. Owen said. This is one of a world association of thirty-two nations, all having branches of the same movement known by various names, and all subscribing to the same code and sharing the same ideals.

"The object of this association as I understand it," Mrs. Owen explained, "is to eliminate the fear, misunderstanding and competitive spirit which are at the root of the worst confusions in the modern world, and incidentally to promote world-mindedness. There could be nothing more desirable or necessary from a diplomatic point of view than such an objective today."

The methods by which the girl scouts work toward their objective are numerous. They have a world home at Adelboden, Switzerland, which any member of the world association can visit and which many girls from different countries are enabled to visit each year through a system of American scholarships. There are international gatherings of the leaders every two years, arranged in different parts of the world, and of which the director is Dame Katherine Furse, of England.

As a matter of practical though seemingly minor importance, Mrs. Owen went on, "I am interested in the girl scout international post-box, which enables girls to correspond regularly. An average of sixty requests a year come from American girl scouts who want to correspond with members of Det. Danske Pigeskor, interested in the girl scout. So far the Danish girls have not been so eager to initiate these correspondences as the American girls, but I hope that from now on they will be as interested in my country as I am in theirs."

"Girl scouting," Mrs. Owen concluded, "does excellent work in training the minds and bodies of its members, wherever they may be. But almost of equal importance today is the contact it supplies with young people of other nations. Through this are forged the ties of lasting friendship, and a contribution is made to international understanding and peace."

Not a Day of Miracles. Omaha Journal Stockman: Every now and then some genius or near-genius breaks into publicity with a scheme to take all the drudgery out of agriculture and make the farmer independent for life. Such plans look good to many and serve to arouse hopes in the breasts of the more credulous sons of the soil, but up to the present none of the inventions have panned out. Furthermore, the probability is that none of them ever will.

TO NEED TEMPORARY PASTURES THIS YEAR

As Nebraska farmers will have to depend more than ever before on temporary pastures, many are showing interest in early pastures, states Agent G. H. Liggott.

Agricultural college recommends sweet clover as especially adapted for eastern Nebraska. Planted on light soil or about spring grain planting time makes some pastures in July. In eastern sections where a nurse crop is often planted, careful pasturing of the nurse crop and clover can be practiced from middle of May on. Sudan grass is an outstanding mid-summer drouth pasture.

Farmers Warned Of Smut Damage

With large supplies of seed for spring planting being imported from other sections, Wayne county farmers face a grave danger of smut infestation among small grains this summer if necessary precautions are not taken, Agent G. H. Liggott warned this week.

With the prospects that Nebraska farmers will buy more than a million bushels of seed grain, most of which is a mixture of different lots and handled through elevators or seed houses, the necessity for treating is more important than ever.

As a result of increased smut danger this year, farmers should treat all spring grains planted. Amos Gramlich, Sarpy county farmer, has been placed in charge of the immediate smut-treating campaign and demonstrations which are planned for every section of the state.

Use of formaldehyde is still a common and satisfactory method of treating oats, Gramlich has informed Mr. Liggott. A mercury compound, the new improved cerasol, is preferred for barley as it not only controls covered smut in barley but also seedling blight and barley stripe. Wheat may be treated with either copper, carbamate or the mercury compound.

Debate Squad At Wayne High Embarks Upon Heavy Schedule.

The toy symphony made up of third graders plus a few second graders at Wayne public school, has had quite a heavy itinerary this week playing for various civic organizations. Monday noon the band, resplendent in new red, white and blue uniforms, entertained Kiwanians with marching and music, and that evening they presented program before Wayne Business and Professional Women's club, also at the hotel. Wednesday they played for Presbyterian aid society. Miss Hazel Reeve originated and directs the orchestra.

High School Events.
Entrants in the Morningside invitation debate tournament, on February 22 and 23 will be Lindley Keeley, Durward Sevy and Gerald Wright, composing one team, and Margaret Jones, Joe Sloski and Bud Bornhoff on another. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mortenson will accompany the group, and some of the freshmen debaters, may-go also.

Debates have been scheduled with Walthill on February 28, and at West Point on March 12. Class in oratory is busy working on orations, preparing for the local eliminating contest last of March.

Ruth and Thelma Titus, junior and senior, entered high school on Friday, coming from Sturgis, S. D. They are living with an aunt, Mrs. Edna B. Howard, at the Boyd hotel.

Durward Sevy and Lindley Keeley won decision at West Point Tuesday evening last week when they argued the affirmative in decision debate with the local high school squad. Miss Florence Drake of Wayne college, was critic judge.

The mid-season program given by music students at Gay theatre Thursday evening, was well received although bad weather cut down attendance.

Boys' quartet sang at P. E. O. meeting Tuesday evening at the Paul Harrington home.

From Junior High.
Valentine day parties were the rule Thursday in junior high as well as lower grades. Eighth graders had a party as usual. In arithmetic the pupils are learning about installment buying and its advantages and disadvantages.

C. C. Petersen visited seventh and eighth grades on Tuesday last week and Mrs. L. W. Vath, Mrs. Paul Mines and Mrs. Martin Rieger came to eighth grade Wednesday following.

Seventh graders had a jolly Valentine party in charge of these committees: Refreshments, Billy Burman, Margaret Larson, Marguerite Emung and Darrell Johnson; entertainment, Patricia Brown, Delbert Ahlstrom, James Pile and Lovell Anderson; box, Patricia Brown, Beverly Strahan, Patricia Dunn and Catherine Cavanaugh. In literature class biographies of famous Americans who came to this country as emigrant boys are being studied.

Sixth graders are studying about development of the telegraph and life of Morse in science class. They had a Valentine party Thursday. Banking is arithmetic subject and the class will organize a bank and learn all about checking accounts.

The Lower Grades.
Fifth graders drew slips to see which would make the Valentine box, and which distribute the Valentines. Dorothy Thompson, Dorothy Beck, Myriam Young and Mary Clare Morris won in the first, and fashioned a pretty red box with white hearts and flying cupids. John Emung, Donald McPherran, Stacey Myers and Violet Reibold distributed. Original Valentines were made for art class, and Valentine stories written in language. Several children brought poems they found about the holiday. In geography, study of the East, South Central states has been taken up.

Losers in the fourth grade spelling contest gave a party for winners on Thursday. Little red hearts were cut out and hidden about the room, a prize going to the one finding most. Refreshments were white cakes in heart shape with red frosting. Valentines were distributed from the box which was made by Dorothy Nelson, Elaine Benthack, Ida Mae Evans assisted by Dorothy Jean Casper, Rodney Love and Harold Maricle. Those chosen from each row to distribute Valentines were Merton Anderson, Agnes Mattingly, Robert Emung, Marsaline Longe and Raymond Murray. Dorothy Jean Casper has won her gold star in penmanship, having completed the 55 drills.

When third graders had the Valentine party on Thursday, Mrs. L. B. McClure brought each child a favor of china doll set in candy cup and wrapped in cellophane.

The grocery store has been built of crates and brown paper and boasts a toy cash register and telephone, also real order books. Signs reading "No Credit" and "Terms Strictly Cash" have been posted. Friday each child made out a grocery slip and figured out the total cost, then took a toy dollar and went to market.

Second graders opened their Valentine box Thursday. First graders had their Valentine box and then Miss Colia Potras presented her Valentines for the children in a "Valentine pie." Ivan Becks brought all-day sucklers for his birthday, and Floyd Kingston treated "kinder to candy bars. Joe Lynch, kindergarten, brought in his big train for the first graders to enjoy. Wilma Steinmetz brought the Herald feature story on first graders' trip to Wakefield and Miss Potras read it to the children.

Both morning and afternoon kindergarten classes had Valentine boxes made by Barbara Heine and Wilma Heidenreich. The bird's lunch table is now ready for us. It has a cream-enameled board with tightly-fastened jar covers to hold water, seeds and bread crumbs. The children will keep it filled for their well feathered friends.

Journal Article Is By W. S. Ickler
Two prime ingredients of good discipline, according to Supt. Willis S. Ickler of Sholes, in an article appearing in February issue of Nebraska Educational Journal are common sense and strict adherence to the Golden Rule.

"Common sense is largely a product of training and environment; therefore it can be cultivated. It involves many things, among them common sense in dress, speech, reactions and so on. Common sense in dress, for instance, demands that you be neither too gaudy nor too shabby. In your speech do not be either too Bostonian or too slangy. Keep your emotions busy at something he or she likes to do and you won't have many discipline problems." With very little room for non and recess' play, Supt. Ickler and other Sholes teachers have provided desk games for pupils during these out-of-class periods and they find the games which children like solve the discipline problem.

"As for the Golden rule," Supt. Ickler continues, "I prefer the version which says, 'Do not unto others what you would that they would not do unto you.' For instance, you don't like a grouch, do you? Neither does anyone else. Smile, even if you don't exactly like it. You don't like to be bossed. Don't boss others. Suggest, recommend. Be firm but be flexible. If you demand something of your pupils, don't try to evade that rule yourself. Don't demand the impossible. Remember that there are many ways to do some things. Don't insist that they be done in just a certain way. Be progressive."

Supt. Ickler has written another article which will appear in a later issue of the Journal.

Accident on Trip.
When going from Peru to Lincoln Thursday night after the game a Wayne car of players met with an accident that resulted in a gash on Louis Hayes' head and considerable damage to the car.

Miss Alice Hanson Fatally Injured When Car Turns On Wet Pavement.

The accident in which Miss Alice Hanson, 29, Las Vegas, Nev., school nurse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Hanson of Wakefield, was killed Friday, February 8, about 4:30 occurred on the Los Angeles highway about four miles west of Jean.

Miss Hanson, Miss Evelyn McMahon, also of Las Vegas school faculty, and Miss Frances Bjwell of Boulder City school faculty, were on their way to San Bernardino for the week-end.

According to Bud Bobell, chief investigator for Six Companies at Boulder City, who happened along immediately after the crash, rain was falling in a steady drizzle and Miss Hanson evidently drove onto the soft shoulder at right of the pavement. Tracks showed where the right wheels continued in the mud until the front one hit a small ditch cut in the road by water draining into the borrow pit alongside. This threw the machine temporarily out of control, and tracks on the wet pavement bore silent witness to the desperate struggle of the driver to swing the car back onto the straightaway without a wreck. Tracks continued along the pavement from one side to the other for nearly 100 yards when Miss Hanson must have completely lost control of the car and the machine started to roll. Miss Hanson's companions said the car rolled over several times.

Mr. Bobell helped Miss McMahon and Miss Elwell from the car, the former having a bad cut on one leg and the other only shocked. Mr. Bobell, with assistance of a telephone employee, took Miss Hanson from the machine. Her head was fractured by the car door. She was still breathing when the men arrived but she died about 20 minutes later, before an ambulance could reach the scene.

The car, belonging to Miss Hanson, was only slightly broken. With so little damage to the car it is thought the only way Miss Hanson could have been fatally injured was that her arm struck the door lever and opened it and her head was caught as the door closed when the car rolled over.

Miss Hanson's body arrived in Wakefield last week and funeral services were held at Presbyterian church there last Thursday.

"We Are Builders"

And We're Creating a Finer, Bigger Wayne City

If you don't believe this is a memorable year in Wayne history perhaps to be known as the year of greatest progress, just hop in your gasoline buggy and chug around town. Listen to the ching-ching-ching of hammers connecting with nail-heads, the dull scraping of trowels on liquid mortar, the "gee-up" as teamsters urge their horses on in the laborious task of hollowing out a foundation shell for a new structure, or note the freshness of a newly-smoothed ground, ready for the landscape artist. But better still, anticipate the surprise of an ex-Wayneite who would return next August after a year's round-the-world trip, and call upon you to show him "what's-new" since he took leave. If you met him at the station, chances are you'd amble automatically up Main street, just to be sure that practically the same folks were doing business in practically the same places as last fall. You'd point out the new Wayne Mercantile company's store opened in the Miller building. Making a left-hand turn you'd most likely switch over to Pearl street and then slow down for your sightseer to get full benefit of the transformation. "Sapristi!" he will most likely exclaim, "What the heck," or, if he'd been reading the classics recently, "what hath man's magic wrought?" (The majority of returning around-the-worlders will affect the former.) Then he will most likely exclaim with proper gestures, "Can this be the city of my boyhood?" You must hastily assure him that it is, and then again it isn't, for, like his boyhood, many of the old landmarks are gone forever. Having approached the "avenue of great-est progress," draw to a stop before that civic center, the new city auditorium at Third and Pearl streets. It's a dandy, isn't it? Rich, dark-colored brick giving a substantial yet pleasing front on Pearl street. Note the white stone trim and the large, graceful letters, "Auditorium," cut in white stone across the middle front. Tell your friend, who for convenience we might call M. A. Gellan (because he had just circled the globe), that this represents plenty of hard work and plenty of optimism on the part of Wayne's mayor and councilmen. . . . that Wayne Woman's club made it possible by an initial gift of $8,000. . . . that Uncle Sam helped out by grant and loan through his monstrous P. W. A. financing. . . . that its going to make Wayne a popular center for conventions, group meetings and get-togethers. Tell him their room for basketball games in there, a good stage for plays and pageants, and a fine, smooth floor for dancing.

ing with slanting roof, the blue and white sign to the front telling its mission and service. Here stay the conceivers, is a building which will serve Wayne's needs for 20 or 25 years to come. It's designed especially for Wayne city, and allowance has been made for growth. (For further data for your personally conducted tour, note the news story on the opening of this week.)

Back to the curb and the old "hug-boag" again. Mr. Gellan has already sighted "Improvement Number 13." Also, he knows it for its true nature—a post office—for it has a certain something which one associates with government buildings. A look of permanence, for one thing, for the government builds to last. It's a pretty good-sized, too—extends well across two lots. (Mr. Gellan will want to know what happened to the two Griffith and Savidge houses that used to occupy the corner so help him out on that.) Take time on the corner to get a good view of the red brick exterior with the white Bedford limestone trim and the two eagles, beloved of Americans, which perch on each front corner of the building. Then conduct your friend up the wide cement stairways with their sentinel dactylometers at each side. One of the assistant postmaster generals laid the cornerstone for the building—came way out from Washington for it—and we had a big ceremony with everybody gathering around. (Better check up on that—we're dealing in futures, you know.)

Well, you'll find yourselves in a main room about 47x68 feet but don't expect upholstered settees and writing desks and chairs for that simply isn't done in post-office-dom. The white plastered walls will have been a temptation to Wayne's youth (and probably to those of more mature years as well) but perhaps they will have escaped endorsements, etc. If you want to point them you'll find there are 440 postal boxes to the right—but it'd be easier to take our word for it. Each has a lock which responds only to its own particular key. The general delivery window is in center, stamp window next and parcel post window adjoining. To the left end you'll find the finance office where postal saving stamps, money orders, registered mail and C. O. D. transactions are carried on. A big, roomy building, isn't it? Mr. Gellan will be interested to know the main part is 47x68 feet. If you present Mr. Gellan as a visitor perhaps he'll be shown through the back-office part and you want to tag along too, because that's mighty interesting. The ceiling is fully 15 feet, 4 inches high and it has four skylights to admit the sunshine. Only in one place is there a second story and that's to extreme left where the "swing room" provides lounging space for postmen off duty. Here are shower baths, etc. Underneath this is the big cement vault with six-inch walls. Then way at the back the enclosed mailing platform which opens out under a paved driveway. The full basement has boiler room, rear center and coal room at northwest corner. Opposite, in southeast corner, is the inspector's room. Remainder of the large basement is devoted to storage space. Pretty nice building, what? That landscaping with trees and the barberry hedge which extends around the building surely do add to it, too.

Now here's something Mr. Gellan probably hasn't suspected—nestled between the first story and the slanting rows of seats is a complete apartment where the caretaker lives. If the caretaker's wife is at home, she'll probably show you through. The dining room and kitchenette combined, also the living room make up one group and there's a narrow hallway connecting these with the bedroom and bath. The apartment extends right across front of the building and isn't it cozy? Picture projection booth is on the third floor at center, way at the top of the tiered seats. As you and Mr. Gellan reach the sidewalk, turn back and have another look at the graceful front and marquis awning which protects the townspeople as they gather at the entrance. You won't need to tell him—Mr. Gellan will notice the next "improvement extraordinary"—it's the new telephone building. By the time you serve as conductor, the telephone building will be nicely landscaped, quite a part of its setting. A good-looking red brick build-what? This, then, is the gathering place of Wayne citizens as well as Wayne countians during the hot summer evenings—a gift not without sacrifices and effort on the part of the clubs and societies which made it possible. This, then, Mr. Gellan, is what happens in Wayne during just one year! Isn't that good old American spirit for you, and isn't it a triumph over circumstances in this year of enduring depression, that four public projects should be carried out and the city thus enriched?

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin wanted a baby whom he named "Penelope." But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in divorce. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gattlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gattlin spirits the child to Europe. Gattlin visits Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when an accident ends his life. Ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a vulgar newspaperman. McNamara, chief of police, brings him Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "Saidis nose" is in part responsible. McNamara obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's nurse in charge, who is about to be named, having a criminal record, is sent to the penitentiary. She persuades Lanny to smuggle out a letter which a confederate steals from her. Nance escapes and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment. McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angelolo, seeking the reward for Nance's apprehension, go to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. McNamara finds in the cell Nance had occupied a blank check on a San Jose bank.

"I'll do what I can for you, Chief. I'll ask Bender. He's assistant to the file clerk."

"See him in the mess-hall at noon. Good-by, Benny and thanks a lot."

From San Quentin Dan McNamara motored down to San Jose and called upon I. Abrahams, ladies' tailor.

"Mr. Abrahams, have you ever made a tailored suit for a girl with a nose that something has smashed flat in the middle?"

"Sure I have," Abrahams replied. "You mean Miss Penelope Gatlin, don't you?"

Abrahams looked in his card index cabinet, then opened a large book in which he kept his customers' measurements recorded, together with a sample of the cloth from which each order has been cut. Dan McNamara unhesitatingly placed his finger on one of these samples. "That was the cloth."

"Sure, that was the suit I made for Miss Gatlin two years ago."

"Did Miss Gatlin live in this city? If so, I'd like to have her address."

A few minutes later, McNamara was pressing the bell at the door of a house in South Mariposa street.

"Does Miss Gatlin live here?" he queried.

"Not any more. She used to live here with her mother, but she disappeared about two years ago, and her mother sold this house to the lady I work for."

"Where is Mrs. Gatlin now?"

"We don't know."

"Thank you," and McNamara directed his driver to go to the Security Trust company, where he sent his card in to the president. He was received promptly.

CHAPTER VI

"DO YOU happen to have an account in the name of Penelope Gatlin?" Chief McNamara asked the banker.

"Both a trust account and a checking account, Chief. We had her father's account for years before he was unfortunately killed in an automobile accident some eight years ago. We had the account of his divorced wife for quite a while, too, but she has closed that."

"Do you know where she lives at present?"

"I do not." He was interested.

"Not very. She draws checks sporadically. Her checking account has interested me considerably for the past two years because the monthly statements, and dead checks have all been returned by the post office. With the exception of about a dozen checks made out to local merchants and probably in payment of her bills, Miss Gatlin's checks have all been in favor of one Ella Cates, of San Francisco. We traced the Cates woman down through the indentments on the checks, but she stated she didn't know Miss Gatlin's address. That Miss Gatlin visited her occasionally, wrote out checks and asked her to cash them for her at the local grocery store or drug store. These people stated that Ella Cates never received the money at once, but that they collected the checks for her and then gave her the money. I don't like the looks of this Chief."

"I'll soon find out all about it," McNamara promised. "And I know where Penelope Gatlin is—only I'm not going to tell you now. Would you mind letting me look over her old bank statements and the dead checks?"

"The banker readily granted me the privilege, and McNamara went through the checks carefully."

"I have all the information I want, with this exception," he drew forth one of the rogue's gallery photographs made at the central station by the police photographer. "Is that Penelope Gatlin?"

"That's the girl, Chief. Is she in trouble with the police?"

"Dan McNamara laughed. 'Not at all. She's the sweetest little thing on earth. The only trouble she's been in is that she's been lost. America. Can't remember who she is or anything about her past life. Has several aliases she used a will.'"

"How interesting—and how sad," McNamara murmured. "Neither interesting nor sad to me. We handle lots of cases like this. They're curable. You'll be good enough to regard this interview as strictly confidential, of course. It would be very embarrassing for the girl if news of her unfortunate predicament should leak out, for of course, after her mind has been restored to its normal functions, she will have no memory of the period in which she has been lost. I know a doctor that will fix her up in a jiffy."

"And after he's done that," the banker suggested, "have a plastic surgeon fix her nose. She used to be as lovely as a hotel."

"Sorry about the nose," McNamara said. "But I've had the best plastic surgeons in town examine it, and there's no hope."

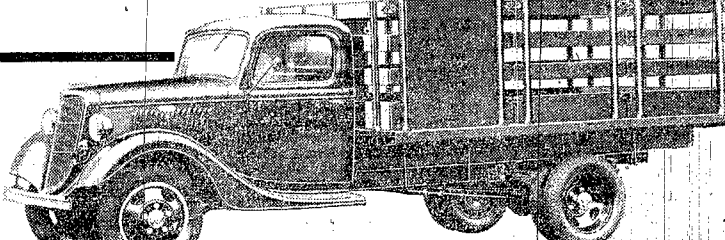

Back in San Francisco, McNamara went directly to the city prison and looked over the blottin to see what strange fish his men had brought in during his absence.

He found a woman, an old offender, booked for drunkenness and ordered her sent to his office. When she arrived he locked the door, and fingerprinted her on the appropriate card, after which he lectured her on the error of her ways. Then he went upstairs to the identification bureau and asked the filing clerk to help point out to him the filing cabinets containing criminal records for the year 1914-15 and 1916-17.

He was searching for a face that was photographed on his remarkable memory, and at last he found it. It was that of a young woman, black haired and with a "saddle" nose, but not quite so badly deformed as Nance Belden's nor did the contour of the face resemble Nance Belden's. However, since the original of that photograph had, to the chief's knowledge, been dead six months, he decided it would do. He slipped this record into his breast pocket and went back to his office. Here he carefully removed the three photographs from the card to which they were fastened in a row across the top. Below the row of photographs appeared the typewritten criminal history of the subject and in checking spaces on the reverse of the card appeared the subject's fingerprints.
