DISTRICT MUSIC CONTEST BRINGS TWELVE HUNDRED PUPILS HERE

District High School Event In Wayne Is Nearly Double.

JOHN R. KEITH DIRECTS

Seventh annual music contest for District three of the Nebraska High School Music association, which will be held at Wayne Teachers college Friday and Saturday will bring to Wayne 1,200 students from 39 schools, presenting 308 separate appearances. This is nearly double last year's contest which brought about 700 students.

Employing the Bible. Though the bible is a wonderful book, a source of comfort and assurance to countless millions through the ages everyone has noticed how conveniently it has been turned to use or misuse in upholding every side of every question.

Let NRA Perish. If congress were to permit the NRA to cut up and die it would remove a barrier hindering success of the administration and save itself the humiliating experience of seeing separate states refuse to pass cooperative laws.

Machines No Drawback. The Norfolk Daily News comments on William Allen White's experience in developing the Emporia Gazette, and the revelation is so much like that experienced by other publishers and other business investors that we have reproduced it on another page of today's Herald.

Way To Find Illness. As to employment, we sometimes wonder how many out of work really want jobs. We have known that some persons who have employment, are thinking more of how they can put in fewer hours and accomplish less with the same wages than of how they can show by results that they are needed and are not overpaid.

REVIVAL MEETING OF REPUBLICANS TO BE HELD HERE

When a thousand republicans met in Lincoln March 1 to stimulate the organization along sound and progressive lines, it was decided to hold a meeting with the same purpose in mind in each of the five congressional districts of the state, and those in general charge at Lincoln have expressed a wish to hold the meeting for the Third district in Wayne. This suggestion will assuredly meet favorable response and deserved cooperation here, the plan to meet and exchange ideas with representative men and women from twenty-two counties being considered a privilege.

Boys Are Killed In Truck Accident

Wayne Youth Driving Truck Was Unaware Lads Had Ridden Machine.

Philip Beebe, 6, and Glen Johnson, 7, Gotenburgh boys, were instantly killed Tuesday when accidentally run over by wheels of a heavily laden truck driven by Luther Einung of Wayne. Mr. Einung was unaware the boys had jumped onto the trailer but he stopped immediately after hearing cries of spectators.

The truck was pulling a large engine and sand pump, weighing three to four tons. The boys jumped onto the back of the motor truck when going home from school. As the truck approached the city it turned a corner, the boys jumped off and were killed. Einung was absolved of all blame in the accident at an informal inquest.

INVESTIGATION IS CONCLUDED BY LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

COMMITTEE ENDS TAKING EVIDENCE AT WAYNE SCHOOL

The legislative committee's hearing at the State Teachers College in Wayne has been finished, and a stenographic report of the testimony has been taken to Lincoln to be used as a basis for recommendations. Members of the committee entered vigorously and earnestly into the work of gathering testimony, and did not seem in the least disposed to soft-pedal duty or dodge responsibility. They were alert and fair, and bent on uncovering and nailing the truth. The proceedings were dignified, though sometimes flaming above currents of bitterness. Were it not for the ugly rift in the faculty atmosphere the row would doubtless be considered too trivial to break out of the temporary-teapot class. It is a major disturbance because of the hard feelings engendered, not because of the facts involved. Freedom to hear the evidence was turned to advantage by many students and townspeople, and the result can only be the quieting of wild rumors and the forming of clearly defined judgment. We are glad the hearing is over, and as nothing seems likely to have been omitted from the record, there is nothing left to expect or suspect—nothing left for the imagination. It is hoped the committee will find a speedy settlement of differences and that a united faculty and a united community will get behind the college and push it to still greater heights as the leading institution of the kind in the state.

STUDENT POLL IS OF INTEREST

These elections will be used in the school annual this spring.

Legislative Group Will Make Recommendation For Action.

After second and concluding day of legislative committee's investigation of faculty discord at Wayne State Teachers College, Senators Cloyd Stewart of Clay Center and John S. Callan of Odell, and Representatives J. F. Ratcliff of Trenton, L. C. Nuernberger of Wakefield, and S. J. Finegan of Lincoln returned Monday evening to Lincoln where they will present testimony and recommend action. The men were here last week Tuesday also to hear evidence presented by Dr. U. S. Conn and Dr. J. G. W. Lewis, also a number of other faculty members, a few students and townspeople.

MANY GIVE TESTIMONY

Dr. Conn made the following statement on Wednesday: "Apprehension in regard to the legislative investigation at the college is unfounded as everything is now settled down and working smoothly. The committee came here wanting to know the facts, when people don't know facts they imagine things that are untrue. This investigation is just what was needed and now the public can be informed on what occurred and what was the real basis of the trouble. Gossip never thrives on truth."

In charges brought before the committee last week, Dr. Lewis named Mrs. Verna Elefson, Dr. Amy Chateaufort, Dr. Kathryn Hagan, Miss Ruth Paden, Dean H. H. Hahn and Prof. H. H. Hanson as faculty members who have been coerced or discriminated against by Dr. Conn. These were led to testify first in Monday's hearing.

Miss Verna Elefson stated that some students go to Dr. Conn with petty grievances and also that some come to her to express sympathy for Dr. Lewis, wishing to do something but fearing to because of possibility of losing grades and positions. Miss Elefson mentioned an editorial unfriendly to student council appearing in the Goldenrod and this she thinks was written by Dr. Conn. Miss Elefson stated that she has been accused by faculty members of being unfriendly to Dr. Conn. After five years of residence in the Dr. Lewis home, Miss Elefson said she had never been treated better. She expressed belief that Dr. Lewis would get along all right with a new president if other faculty members would cooperate. Miss Elefson named Mrs. Maude Joseph Smith, Prof. C. W. Costerian, Mrs. Conn and Prof. C. E. Wilson as those who would discriminate against students who oppose the administration.

Merciless Russia
 WILLIAM Henry Chamberlin who spent twelve years in the Soviet Union, writes of that country's iron rule and its forbidding policy to put material production above human values. He says: "The 4,000,000 lives deliberately lost in the famine, to me, outweigh the 10,000,000 tons of pig iron which Russia produced, for the first time in its history, in 1934."

Read these two concluding paragraphs in a recent description of conditions under soviet Russia by Mr. Chamberlin: "My own feeling is that democracy and civilization are almost synonymous terms. Even if the method of dictatorship should produce a higher material standard of living (and Russia's experience up to the present time would emphatically suggest that this is not likely to be the case) I cannot conceive that it would be desirable to live in a society where every printed and spoken word was controlled, where one feared to talk freely, even to close friends, for fear that they might be government spies; where social contact with a foreigner was positively physically dangerous, where some prying snooper was likely to read any incoming or outgoing letter, where one was never secure against arbitrary arrest and exile.

"The foregoing description would apply to life in the soviet union as I have known it. It also applies, in greater or less degree, to every country that has thrown over democracy for dictatorship. My own feeling, in looking back at Russia, is that, if we want to prevent western civilization from breaking down, either in the bolshevik way or in some other, possibly milder, but still unpleasant way, there is a very strong obligation to do two things: to work for peace and to work for social justice. Russia on the basis of its present-day record, is not a challenge to any western country. But it is a very strong warning of what might happen to any country under an irresistible double stress of war and of acute poverty and insecurity among large masses of the people."

Sound Advice
 WE cannot pass over lightly the logic of economists who warn against extravagant spending by the administration at Washington and against the wild sophistries of trailing dreamers who would stir farther to the left and who would invite still greater confusion and peril. While Huey Long, Father Coughlin, Upton Sinclair and Dr. Townsend appeal for different forms of Utopia far in excess of already unwise experiments, the masses wonder whether they are drifting and what will happen next.

No one advises against necessary relief, but many look with apprehension on the ultimate outcome of spending huge sums on unnecessary public projects that mean comparatively little employment. One is not a devoting financial ogre merely because he wants to see sound finance, freedom from dangerous inflation and a balanced budget. He is not unsympathetic simply because he wants to see less government waste and greater safeguards against future calamities.

Touching a wild spending spree the

Launch Drive To Aid Small Children
 Culminating on Easter Sunday, a drive to raise funds for care of Nebraska's crippled children is being carried on in Wayne this month under direction of Mrs. R. W. Casper, Miss Margaret Mines and Miss Norma Carpenter. Stamps and literature have been distributed to various clubs and fraternal groups, with request that the stamps be sold to members. Wayne was sent 20,000 stamps to be sold locally.
 These "Opportunity Stamps" will be sold over the entire state Easter month, this being part of a big national movement to aid unfortunate children. Stamps may be bought at one cent each; or annual memberships bought for one dollar. Coterie club was first Wayne organization to support the drive, but first sale was made to a South Dakota stamp collector who read of the coming drive in Wayne county and wrote to Mrs. Casper for a block of the stamps.

Many Boys Take Part In Program

This will be Beverly and Lowell Anderson, Billy Burnham, Beverly and Douglas Canning, Norman Caspey, Roy Coryell, Dick Ellis, Wilmer Ellis, Frank Gaudin, Duane Gilford, Arthur Gultiver, and Harrington, Ray

Saturday Evening Post quotes this from Mr. Douglas, former director of the budget: "Which is the more cruel, which is more inhuman, which entails the greatest destruction to individual self-respect—to continue a policy which must inevitably, just as sure as night follows day, plunge the people into the destructive effects of a collapsed currency, or to pursue a policy, difficult to be sure—but there is no easy way out of trouble—a policy predicated upon hard work and sacrifice, which prevents destitution and yet which saves the people from a ghastly social and economic calamity?"

What One Has Said
 THE cross-firing developed in the course of the legislative hearing at the college showed that what a fellow has said from one to twenty years back is liable to turn up and cause a lot of annoyance. We wouldn't like to have the things we have fired at others resurrected and put under the limelight long after we had forgotten the cause or the circumstances. Perhaps the person we dislike one day, we may like the next day. Very little things influence likes and dislikes. Last year or ten years ago there may have been a fancied—even real—grievance that stirred ire to the point of planting an ugly remark in another's cerebrum. It is amazing how well the cerebrum retains an acid thought and is able to reproduce it intact to the humiliation of its producer after a considerable lapse of time. As we understand, an individual is entirely remade in the course of seven years, so that he starts with a completely new outfit. Thus, at worst, he should be held accountable for what he says during only a seven-year period. But one ought to be careful to keep his remarks free from anything derogatory before turning them over to another's memory, because it is powerfully disturbing to have trotted out for exhibition a barbed recollection that is now out of date and should remain forever under cover. The cerebrum does not seem so deeply impressed by kind and helpful thoughts, which, however, never do any harm and often do some good.

We are glad to see hemp production introduced around Carrpill. Success which is promising, would develop new revenues from farm land. We are also informed of the prospect of an organized Heinz market here for tomatoes, cucumbers and onions. Of the Heinz fifty-seven varieties, a good many could be grown successfully in Wayne county and marketed profitably. Diversified agriculture with dairying an important auxiliary, gives increased certainty to rewards in farm sections.

While we are inclined to mix women's judgment with that of men on the school board, we think the two fellows elected in the late election measure up well in capacity for wise public service. Next year two women should be named early and pitted against two men. Then we would have an interesting contest between the sexes, and influenced by predilection and environment, our sympathies would probably be with the women.

March was too dry to keep down suspicions, but warm enough to permit outdoor work and enable farmers to put their fields in shape for planting. Getting spring preliminaries out of the way early, plenty of moisture in April will offer no handicap to moist and ample advantage to growth.

Tobacco chewers have become so rare in contrast with cigar consumers that when one chews in a crowd is discovered, he stands out like a comet at perihelion. He is especially distinguished and noteworthy if his marksmanship is good and he can hit the target with unerring accuracy.

No one who dislikes snow dares to say so, because moisture in any shape, any time, is a welcome contribution to future security.

compelled to join the army of the unemployed. Often a person wants work until he gets it, and then he is so afraid he will do more than he is paid for doing that before long he finds himself on the waiting list. Paying more than industry or private employers can pay, with shorter hours than production can stand, the government's policy has operated against employment, encouraging habits of idleness—encouraging ambition to get much for little. Proposed change of government wage scales to a level below those of private industry should tend to correct one of the administration's errors of the past few years. Whether one is managing a business or is employed by a business, he should be alive to the responsibility of doing what he can do to make himself worth what he is receiving in compensation. Also looking for employment in a way suggesting fear of finding it rather than fear of not finding it is the spirit that recruits the ranks of the idle and helps keep the country in the dumps.

AT THE BOTTOM.
 Columnist B. C. Forbes who has stressed the utter fallacy of the proposed Townsend old-age pension plan and Long's equally impractical wealth-sharing scheme, has been made the victim of a lot of denunciations lately. Not one tries to show him how any of the extravagant schemes could be made to work, but instead ask him if he is ever hungry or homeless. Like many others who have surmounted obstacles and who have seemed to become safely prosperous, Forbes takes his critics back to his boyhood days and pictures his unvarying diet of oatmeal and the luxury of meat only on Sundays, his ill-fitting garments and shoes handed down from child to child, his first money ever earned by getting up at 5 a.m. mornings and walking through snow for nearly a mile to his school, his polka silvershades before walking another mile to school. Of many, Forbes is just one who was forced to practice all kinds of self-denial, and who looked about and ahead hopefully, but not enviously, finally overpowering handicaps and winning a share of the world's comforts. Many old-timers remember the long hours of toil and the meagre rations, the poorly constructed and poorly heated and lighted homes. Like Forbes, many who were able later to enjoy some of the pleasures of life recall hanging hunger and cold—the many hardships, the few pleasures. And life performs queer tricks. The fellow down today, may be up tomorrow. The person up today, may be flat tomorrow. There is no ground for envy—no reason to wish for the other fellow's shoes—no reason to droop and give up, but every reason to make one's own cane and battle courageously and resolutely for success.

Music And Talk On Club Program

Wayne Students And Omaha Speaker Entertain Men Here On Monday.

 Mr. Parmalee and R. L. Harrison of Omaha, officials with the Natural Gas company, were introduced by J. R. Reynolds. Mr. Parmalee spoke on the history of natural gas and showed pictures. He stated that the gas is produced in the Appalachian mountains, Pacific coast, mid-continent and Rocky mountain regions. Pictures illustrated the method of drilling and forcing gas into gathering pipes. Laying of a pipe from Chicago to Texas, 1,000 miles, cost 75 million dollars, Mr. Parmalee said. Compression stations along the route keep up gas pressure.
 Use of gas dates back many years, Mr. Parmalee stated. A large deposit was found in 1918 and in 1930 the Northern Gas company promoted the idea of developing the middlewestern distribution system. Production has increased from 288 to 1,941 billion cubic feet in a few years and is still increasing. An additional million and a half people have been served in these four years.

Investigation Is Concluded Here (Continued from Page One) was head of modern language department at a time when there was no head. When questioned as to who names heads, she stated that Dr. Conn has this power. She also charged Dr. Conn with using influence against State Supt. Charles Taylor in the recent election. Miss Lenore Ramsey, replying to charges that she asked Dr. Chateaufort to write for Dr. Conn, stated she talked to her and Miss Edith Stocking suggested that if they did not feel like signing the endorsement of Dr. Conn's administration that they write a letter to the board expressing their kind feelings which they said they have for Dr. Conn. Miss Ramsey told them they would not need to say anything against Dr. Lewis. No Coercion To Sign. Prof. Costerisan refused the charge that his graduates are fleeing from the school because they are given for student endeavor, he stated. He was asked to circulate the petition for Dr. Conn and stated that he was silent in doing so, letting those sign who wished. He also stated he favored constructive student effort but that the council proposed was fanciful and impractical. Dr. Lewis expressed favor of student forums, councils and other modern trends in education. As students had asked her a council and Goldenrod editorial seemed disrespectful to the student group he thought it was well to encourage citizenship, the right of petition, the right to hold meetings and the right to discuss questions and theories in invitation to speak. He said he was embarrassed when his own children were found to be leaders. His address he said, was good American advice though some of it, he admitted, was directed at Wayne faculty. He stated that Mrs. Smith's version differed from what was given to the state normal board. Dr. Lewis said John Rhon of the board had asked for points of his talk to use in one by himself. If conditions were right in the school the speech would not have offended. Dr. Lewis contends. Dr. Lewis said student efforts in reading, hearing rules should not be taken seriously. That he had peddled insinuating falsehoods about waste of money and inefficiency. Dr. Lewis denied, as not founded on fact, Dr. Lewis said he had not done this, but that the town is filled with gossip. In previous testimony Miss Pierce stated that Dr. Lewis asked her to give an art lecture to one of his classes which she did before holiday vacation. Dr. Conn had asked all instructors not to leave early. Miss Pierce stated that Dr. Lewis did leave before the time designated. Dr. Lewis later complained to Miss Pierce that his wife had cut for the half day of the year. Dr. Lewis then had an extra class session the day before vacation as they had gone to hear Miss Pierce a few days earlier. He therefore stated that he had met class requirements and should not have had the cut. Served as Chairman. Dr. Lewis stated that when serving on the council he was chairman of the faculty and stood for fairness toward the city and college. He stated that there is no record to prove that he asked to interview the state board about electric rates for the college. He said he did draft a letter in which the council expressed grievance over violation of the contract between the city and the board and that the council used this and it must, therefore, have expressed their views. Investigation Is Concluded Here

(Continued from Page One) was head of modern language department at a time when there was no head. When questioned as to who names heads, she stated that Dr. Conn has this power. She also charged Dr. Conn with using influence against State Supt. Charles Taylor in the recent election. Miss Lenore Ramsey, replying to charges that she asked Dr. Chateaufort to write for Dr. Conn, stated she talked to her and Miss Edith Stocking suggested that if they did not feel like signing the endorsement of Dr. Conn's administration that they write a letter to the board expressing their kind feelings which they said they have for Dr. Conn. Miss Ramsey told them they would not need to say anything against Dr. Lewis. No Coercion To Sign. Prof. Costerisan refused the charge that his graduates are fleeing from the school because they are given for student endeavor, he stated. He was asked to circulate the petition for Dr. Conn and stated that he was silent in doing so, letting those sign who wished. He also stated he favored constructive student effort but that the council proposed was fanciful and impractical. Dr. Lewis expressed favor of student forums, councils and other modern trends in education. As students had asked her a council and Goldenrod editorial seemed disrespectful to the student group he thought it was well to encourage citizenship, the right of petition, the right to hold meetings and the right to discuss questions and theories in invitation to speak. He said he was embarrassed when his own children were found to be leaders. His address he said, was good American advice though some of it, he admitted, was directed at Wayne faculty. He stated that Mrs. Smith's version differed from what was given to the state normal board. Dr. Lewis said John Rhon of the board had asked for points of his talk to use in one by himself. If conditions were right in the school the speech would not have offended. Dr. Lewis contends. Dr. Lewis said student efforts in reading, hearing rules should not be taken seriously. That he had peddled insinuating falsehoods about waste of money and inefficiency. Dr. Lewis denied, as not founded on fact, Dr. Lewis said he had not done this, but that the town is filled with gossip. In previous testimony Miss Pierce stated that Dr. Lewis asked her to give an art lecture to one of his classes which she did before holiday vacation. Dr. Conn had asked all instructors not to leave early. Miss Pierce stated that Dr. Lewis did leave before the time designated. Dr. Lewis later complained to Miss Pierce that his wife had cut for the half day of the year. Dr. Lewis then had an extra class session the day before vacation as they had gone to hear Miss Pierce a few days earlier. He therefore stated that he had met class requirements and should not have had the cut. Served as Chairman. Dr. Lewis stated that when serving on the council he was chairman of the faculty and stood for fairness toward the city and college. He stated that there is no record to prove that he asked to interview the state board about electric rates for the college. He said he did draft a letter in which the council expressed grievance over violation of the contract between the city and the board and that the council used this and it must, therefore, have expressed their views. To Prof. O. R. Bowen's charge that Dr. Lewis said that loyalty demands that he sign every petition and vote "yes" always. He said he had performed all duties and his greatest complaint is that he does not have more duties to perform. That there is control and reputation unworthy of an institution of higher education is Dr. Lewis' contention. This "machine" has distributed favor, rewarded "tattlers" and spread propaganda for 10 or 12 years, Dr. Lewis charges. Faculty members talk privately, he said, for they have no free discussion meetings. Not Higher Morals. Dr. Lewis contended that degrees should be granted by faculty action. They should consider the morals of applicants. "Neither the morals or the morale are high enough for a teacher training institution," Dr. Lewis stated. That Miss Ardath Conn was responsible for resignation dismissal and demotion of several of the faculty was Dr. Lewis' contention. Prof. John R. Keith of the music department testified to Miss Ardath Conn's helpful efforts for which she was "never paid by the state." Cannot Be Contended. One cannot be contended here with the standards and ideals after attending a higher institution, Dr. Lewis stated in answer to a statement that he had been discontented since getting his Ph. D. degree 10 years ago. He charged that few instructors attend higher schools—there is intellectual isolation and lack of an alumni of the school. The college alumni association was abolished and a college association substituted. Dr. Lewis charges this was illegal and feels that Dr. Conn had influence in this for the association designated a celebration each year about March 16, which is Dr. Conn's birthday. Board is Superior. Dr. Lewis said he and Dr. Conn agreed in December to abide by decision of the state board and that appealing to the board was the only way to proceed. Dr. Lewis stated that W. D. Richmond of Mason City, Neb., early registrar here, said Dr. Conn had not been loyal to the state board when he was here. Dr. Lewis said the board is the superior and he chooses to obey the board. He presented letters from former students to testify to his character. The alumni association, Miss Margaret Schemel testified, was a movement of graduates only and was not inspired by Dr. Conn. She asserted that her own advice was admitted and all action taken was this legal. Designating president's day on Dr. Conn's birthday was a thought of the alumni as a way to show appreciation to one who had headed the school for so many years. Mr. Nuernberger secured Dr. Lewis' sanction to the legislature's right to investigate any institution. Mr. Nuernberger stated that parents have a right to know condition of the school to which they send children. The investigation is designed for this purpose. Questioned as to his charge of immorality, Dr. Lewis said he has heard of drinking and gambling and that there is no surveillance over men in the school. Asked why he stayed in the school during 10 years of disconnection, Dr. Lewis stated that he owes a duty to Nebraska and wants to benefit humanity. J. W. Souders testified that he had done carpentry work for the school and for Dr. Conn at his farm and that on such occasions he received two checks in payment from the school and one from Dr. Conn. He stated that the school truck had been used in an emergency. Criticized Faculty. Miss Jessie Boyce stated that soon after coming here 10 years ago she went with others of the faculty to Kearney to attend a meeting and that Dr. Lewis criticized Prof. Bowen for not attending. After that Miss Boyce said she did not feel free to talk with Dr. Lewis. On another occasion she took a program change to Dr. Conn and while waiting to see him Dr. Conn asked her the trouble and said, "That's right, raised me." Miss Boyce said she has no reason to feel that Dr. Lewis will cooperate with Dr. Conn's successor, Miss Boyce stated that she considers students' moral standing in giving grades. She also said she has not heard of any students who have attended school in the past 10 years which Dr. Lewis has not done. Sees Inconsistency. Miss Marie Howe stated that she cannot see Dr. Lewis' attitude. She sees inconsistency in Dr. Lewis' statement of high standards and his insistence last summer on issuing certificate to a young woman who had not met requirements. Miss Howe resents the charge of coercion and feels that harm is being done to the school. Dr. Lewis is likely to have checked in the school and is not allowed, Coach Hickman stated. Resents Accusation. Dr. Lewis has not kept the spirit of his agreement to cooperate, Prof. F. G. Dale stated. He resents accusation of immorality. Prof. Dale says he was on the housing committee, has dealt with students

Building Is Good.

Miss Scott, who teaches in training school, was questioned as to the building which Dr. Lewis earlier charged was not well built. After 10 years Miss Scott stated there are no cracks and no leaks, and that the floors and staircases are of substantial, fireproof material, that doors swing out and that the building has always been most satisfactory. Miss Scott deprecates the discovery that denies any coercion. Moral standards are equally as high here as at Midland, a denominational college, in which Miss Scott formerly taught. Not Weak to Agree. It is not weak-minded to agree and independent to disagree, stated Miss Lenore Ramsey. She feels that instructors are responsible to the president who in turn is responsible to the state board. She resents the statement that instructors have not improved themselves intellectually, for they have, she asserted. Rules of morality stated, forced, Miss Ramsey stated. Dr. Conn is a good counselor and he has helped many and has suspended students when necessary. Miss Stocking further testified that Dr. Conn deemed teachers specialists in their lines and had not told them how to teach. There is no laxness in enforcing moral rules, Miss Stocking states from her experience of 25 years. No coercion was used in signing the endorsement of Dr. Conn's resignation. Beulah Randle stated. Prof. Costerisan laid the statement before her without comment. The school ranks well with Michigan in morality, Miss Randle says. Dr. Conn's action reflects the upright man he is, she added. Mrs. Mildred Wilson testified that she was granted freedom when teaching in biology department a few years ago. She said she is afraid Dr. Lewis would not cooperate with Dr. Conn's successor. Freedom in academic work and lack of coercion were statements of Dr. Isabel Rust of the Latin department. She said the school must have a head who is responsible and others are subordinate. Unusual academic freedom is allowed in Wayne college, Dr. H. D. Griffin testified. Dr. Griffin stated that he resigned a position in Missouri because he did not agree with the president's policies and this he feels an instructor should do. Dr. Griffin doubts if Dr. Lewis would cooperate with another head. He thinks Dr. Conn efficient in dealing with morality problems. Miss Ruth Pearson testified that she resents the type of morals here and she has had occasion to observe for she has been on the housing committee and Y. W. C. A. cabinet. She finds no coercion and reports academic freedom. Follow North Central. Natives Of Old Ireland Numbered Among Early Settlers of Brenna

(By Norma Carpenter)

When James Baird and his wife-to-be took leave of the Emerald Isle and set sail for a promising America, they brought with them a bit of the joy of living and the good humor which characterizes Irish folks and which makes them such delightful companions. Thirty-three years of strenuous Wayne county farming, starting with that era of prairie-breaking and extending through the years when modern science came to the aid of agriculture, have not dimmed Mr. Baird's sense of humor nor his warm interest in his friends. Just recently he celebrated his 80th birthday at his home in Wayne.

Tyrone county, Ireland, was his birthplace in March of 1855. His wife, whom he didn't meet until coming to America, lived in the adjoining county of Fermanagh, also close to Belfast, the ship-building city of northern Ireland, and an important manufacturing and weaving center.

Mr. Baird's family lived on a farm in this highly-productive country—corn, cabbage, beets, wheat, hogs and cattle were raised and one must not forget Ireland's gift to the world—the potato. Farms usually small, 10 to 20 acres, but very rich soil—a rolling country much like this section of Nebraska. One traveled about on horseback or afoot in those days. The peat bogs supplied the people with fuel—these developed from forests of pine trees which had become decomposed in swamp. When the peat was dried it burned well and was inexpensive.

The country houses were built of white rock and usually had thatched roofs, sometimes slate. Picturesque and homely and ancient as a rule. The climate was mild and pleasant. Schools operated full 10 months because of the comfortable summer months. The Gaelic language had died out and English was generally spoken. English with a pronounced Irish touch, to be sure.

The Irish housewives did all their own baking. They dried fruits, hanging up the strips of apples to dry. Much small fruit, and berries in great abundance growing wild in the pastures. The cherry trees were hardy and lived to a 100 years.

This was the Ireland that James Baird left in 1873, the 19-year-old youth coming directly to Oakland, Iowa, to join his uncle. The "City of Washington" took 13 days to cross the "big pond," and on its very next trip sank to the ocean depths of the treacherous Irish coast. (When he made a return trip to Ireland in 1887 upon death of his father, six days were spent Ireland-bound, and only five on the return trip.)

Mr. Baird remained at Oakland with his uncle a couple of years and spent several in Minnesota. He had intended to take up a homestead here but the grasshoppers had come and destroyed everything, eating green things as soon as they appeared above ground.

It didn't look very promising. Good fishing, but that was all.

It was here that the young man bound wheat by hand—remember that, you early-timers? Two men mounted the harvester and down along the field on a platform, binding the grain into sheaves and letting these drop to the ground in its wake. Ten acres a day via the harvester, and wages $3 daily which was pretty good for those days. Before the harvester era, Mr. Baird had helped bind grain by hand... that's practically a lost art nowadays. The binder walked along, pulling out a few stalks from one bundle as he dropped it, and twisting these into a strong band as he proceeded... this twisted band was ingeniously looped around the sheaf of grain and the ends tucked in. It was strong there was no expense, it was speedy. It takes a practiced hand to manipulate the straw band and make it hold.

When Mr. Baird came to Wayne county in 1883 he bought 80 acres of unbroken land in Brenna precinct, the farm now operated by the Harry Bairds. Brenna had been so named for Judge Halsey H. Moses' daughter, Brenna. Here the Irish newcomer found a hard prairie, the only trees in that locality being on the Moses property. He bought a team and started prairie-breaking, working for other settlers for $2.50 per acre. That sounds pretty hard work when one considers the hard-packed, dry soil but one didn't break deeply, only turned the soil over about two inches. Then the ground was ploughed deeper in the fall and sowed with spring wheat. The soil was rich and productive... not worn out with continuous cultivation as in many localities now. Grass grew about a foot high on the high land but fully to one's waist in the low, damp places. This blue stem was a natural grass which made excellent stock feed... it has practically disappeared now, choked out by the blue grass which replaced it. Blue grass is good all-winter feed, in Mr. Baird's opinion, as it doesn't kill with the first frost as does blue stem.

Mr. Baird built a house on his Brenna farm... in 1886 he married Miss Jennie Reed who had come over from Ireland a few years before, in company with her father, aunt, twin sister, another sister, and Mr. and Mrs. George Rennick and Ed. and Jim. The party had come directly to Pilger. Rev. C. M. Lodge read the marriage lines at the Presbyterian parsonage in Wayne. The Bairds farmed in Brenna fully 33 years, retiring to Wayne about 1918.

Three sons are farming in Brenna—Fred, Harry and Charles. One daughter, Mrs. John Brisben, lives in Wayne city. Another, Elmer who was Mrs. Guy Auler, died after the war during the flu epidemic. Numbered in the family group are 19 grandchildren, one now attending Wayne college. To them the James Bairds have given the glorious heritage of Irish humor and joy of living.

Kansas Editor Wonders.
Norfolk Daily News: William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, reviewed at a meeting of newspaper men, a few weeks ago, the business history of his newspaper. When he bought the paper, in 1895, he said they were paying six or seven girls $4 and $5 a week as typesetters. The payroll was $45 a week. A few years later, with the payroll about $75 a week, salesman induced the proprietors to put in a linotype machine, as a labor saving device, and in a few years the payroll went to $100 a week. Then another salesman, sold him another linotype and the payroll went to about $150 a week, "and before I knew it," Mr. White added, "in the course of ten years I had three or four linotypes and my payroll was along about $500 or $600."

To shorten his story he bought a perfecting press, and other labor-saving equipment, and by 1923 the weekly payroll had run up to about $1,500 a week.

The largest advertiser forty years ago paid Mr. White's paper, about $200 a year for advertising. In 1923 its account had gone up to about $4,000 a year. The circulation of the "Gazette" and its opposition paper forty years ago, was about 2,000. When the drop came in 1923 it was about 7,000, though the population of the county was within 1,000 of what it was in 1895.

"What happened?" Mr. White asked his newspaper friends. "What mysterious thing, what change of change came into the minds and hearts and habits of the American people in those years? Where did all the money come from? What happened to the world to make that multiplying of wealth? Where the devil has it gone to and why has it gone? Why can't we consume as much as we did five years ago?"

Mr. White says he doesn't know and it would take an expert in economy to give the answer and then some other expert in economy would disagree with him, so why guess?

In 1919 a Norfolk man bought a Ford two-door sedan, one of the first with a self starter. The self starter didn't work very often, the car when pushed hard could get up to 30 or 35 miles an hour, it shook the teeth out of the occupants, and while it usually got one back from a trip, it was only by dint of a good deal of unkering by the driver and a good deal of knocking and boiling by the engine. But it was a good car as cheap cars went in 1919. With a few needed accessories, this car cost a few dollars less than $1,000. Today the same make and model can be bought for about $250 less, and it will operate as easily at 75 miles an hour as the 1919 model did at 30, and it is more comfortable and dependable than the best car John D. Rockefeller could have bought in 1919.

We may not be able to answer Mr. White's question about the increase in spending power, but just as interesting to think about as the question, "Who has received the benefit of the economies of labor-saving machinery?" "What effect has labor-saving machinery had on unemployment?" Mr. White saw his payroll go up from $75 to $1,500 a week. He was probably employing ten times as many persons in 1923, in an office completely equipped with every labor-saving device known to the printing business, as he was in 1895. In that office where everything was done by hand. An executive of the Ford company said the other day, that although his company had been putting in labor saving machines as fast as they were available, it takes eight hours more of labor to make a car today than it did ten or fifteen years ago. What has happened?

Labor-saving machinery did not decrease employment between 1895 and 1923, that is evident from the statistics of the Gazette and the Ford companies. Allowing for the difference in the purchasing power of the dollar, Mr. White's payroll went up tenfold in thirty-four years. Machinery didn't reduce employment, nor did it reduce wages. Quite the opposite. The wage index per hour on a base of 100 in 1913, stood on 262.1 in 1920 and the wage per week rose from a base of 100 in 1913 to 240.7 in 1923. Real wages, that is wages converted into commodities, rose from a base of 100 in 1913 to 153.6 in 1923. Labor was victor over labor-saving machinery than it was before, because the laborer could produce more with the aid of machinery.

Capital probably benefited though federal income tax reports show that in 1919 the percentage of net earnings to gross earnings of all corporations in the United States was 6.25, while in 1923 it was 4.70, and for the average of fourteen years including 1922 it was 4.24 percent.

It is not fair to compare the 1935 Emporia Gazette with the paper he used in 1895, and will contrast the 1935 automobile with the similar model and make of car in 1919. He will see where most of the benefit has gone. "For virtually the same price, the subscriber to the Gazette gets a newspaper 1,000 percent better than he could have gotten in the hand-set days forty years ago. The buyer of a cheap car can get a machine 1,000 percent better than he could have gotten in 1919. He can get it from $200 to $250 cheaper."

There are those who say we should go back to the days of hand labor to cure unemployment. We could do this, if we were willing to go back to the standards of living of forty years ago. This would mean that the man of ordinary income would have to give up automobiles, modern conveniences, the home, electric lights, gas, refrigerators, furnace heat, and other products of the machine age. A modern automobile made by hand labor would be too expensive for the average man to buy, even at present incomes, but hand labor would force a reduction of wages as labor can not receive as wages more than it can produce. Present standards of wages and living are based on production by labor-saving machinery.

Return to hand labor would mean the loss of the standards that have been built up through many years of effort and discovery. It would be a high price to pay and in the long run it would mean fewer instead of more jobs.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby whom he names "Penelope." But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in divorce. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spins the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when an accident ends his life. Ten years later, in a San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a young psychiatrist. Dan McNamara, chief of police, brings him Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara, sympathizing with Nance, obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over to Nance's cause. Nance having a criminal record is sent to the penitentiary. She escapes and goes to Lanny's apartment. Detectives Flynn and Angelotti, seeking the reward for Nance's apprehension, go to Lanny's apartment in search of the girl, but she has gone. From a banker, McNamara learns that Nance Belden is Penelope Gatlin, heiress to $750,000. Mrs. Gatlin, Penelope's foster mother, is now the wife of a man named Merton. Lanny finds Nance in her apartment. Dr. Burt plans an operation to restore the girl's nose to normality.

"No."
"Here's two hundred."
"I'll send you my check. Thanks." And she took the money. "Immediately after tossing the last of the bombs, close the window and beat it downstairs and out the front door. I'll leave a coupe, with the motor running, parked at the curb across the street. Can you drive?"
"I can drive, Dan."
"Very well, then. Climb into the car and beat it."
"Beat it anywhere?"
"Los Angeles, San Diego, anywhere. Keep on going, and when you get there, send me a wire to the central station merely giving your address. Then lay low until somebody comes after you. Keep off the street. Lanny, you must disguise her nose. Clamp a wadding of cotton and a neat dressing over it to hide the dish in it. Art lady is liable to have an injury to her nose and wear a dressing on it. Now, is everything understood?"
Nance nodded, and Lanny's silence gave consent. "You'll probably get a whiff of what's good for Flynn and Angelotti," McNamara advised Lanny, "but you'll get over it. This plan of mine is fool-proof if followed absolutely, but it's your son, Quentin again if it isn't, my brave lassie, and all the chiefs of police in town cannot help you then."

CHAPTER VIII

"Thank you, sir," said Nance politely and with quiet dignity. "You are most kind to take this trouble for a stranger, and I shall never forget it." And she held out her hand.

McNamara looked in puzzlement at Lanny. "What's happened to her?" he demanded.

"You're a brilliant chief of police and you've figured everything out to a gnat's eyebrow for Penelope, but what's going to happen to me?"

"The concoction of the plan I've just outlined has given me brain fog, Lanny. It's cost me a night's sleep. I don't know what's going to happen to you and I don't care much. You're a smart woman, and if you can't figure a way out of your end of the mess don't call on me for help."

"I wish I could relish that compliment," Lanny retorted dryly. "However, if you think I'm not going to laugh myself sick over this you're a poor judge of women. Goodbye, you old crook, and God bless you. Kiss him, Penelope."

A becoming modesty caused the girl to hesitate just a little, then she came to the chief and implanted a most lady-like kiss on his blue jaw. "You're very kind, Mr. McNamara," she assured him again.

"Cripes," he muttered and went off. Dan McNamara's estimate of the ability of Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angelotti did them no injustice; indeed, they proved even smarter than their chief credited them with being. After watching Doctor Burt enter and leave the chief's house on Thursday night, when they knew the chief would not be home until midnight, they decided to investigate. The unlocked cellar door gave them pause; Lanny whispered that he was always suspicious of things that came too easy. They crept tip-toe and found Dan McNamara's ex-convict guest reading in bed. Both detectives recognized him so while Angelotti guarded him, Flynn made a hurried but thorough search of the premises. They were not in the house more than five minutes.

"We've been like two pups, chasing our tails," Angelotti complained when they met at their car. "The chief's up to his old tricks, babying a convict with the con, and that's the bird Doctor Burt is calling to treat."

"The girl's been there, just the same, Amadeo, my boy. There was a hipstick on the bureau and that's something old lady McNamara don't use. And I found a roll of adhesive tape, the best of a roll of bandage and a soiled sheet with some bloodstains on it in the dirty clothes basket in the bathroom."

Angelotti was convinced. "Where did she go?"

"She might have doubled back to that old nurse's house again, but I doubt that, because she knows that's risky."

"Well, let's give Miss Lanning's house a prow, anyhow."

Flynn was one of those hearty fellows who will try anything twice, so they went immediately to Lanny's house. The lights in front were out when they arrived, so Flynn pussy-footed around to the rear of the cottage to see if any lights were lighted there. Finding none he listened for possible voices. Hearing none he cautiously lifted the lid on Lanny's garbage can and bent his flashlight on it. He was rewarded for his courage by finding a stained bandage with clipped adhesive tape clinging to it. This teltale evidence he carried around to Angelotti; they entered their car, drove a block and inspected the clue in the light of the dash lamp. Then they silently shook heads.

"Nothing is ever lost if you know where it is," Flynn rejoiced. "We'll bone the district attorney for a search warrant tomorrow, and tomorrow night when the old lady gets home, we'll make the pinch."

"Shall we pinch her as an accessory?"

"Amadeo, my boy, unless you're looking hard for something, it's a mistake to see too much or know too much. This Lanning woman is a friend of the chief's. As far as the public ever need to know we picked the girl up on the street."

Angelotti nodded his acquiescence; they got the search warrant on the strength of that soiled bandage and at nine o'clock that night arrived in their car. Flynn went to the back door and posted himself there, and Angelotti rang the front doorbell. A light was switched on in the hall presently, and Lanny, dressed for the street, opened the door six inches. Angelotti had his foot in it in a flash.

Lanny closed the door, and he could see her faintly through the curtained glass, reading.

"Come in," she invited—and at that moment the electric light bulb tumbled out of the upper window by Nance exploded with a loud report.

"What's That?" Angelotti cried, instantly alert.

"What's that?" Angelotti cried, instantly alert. A still louder explosion reverberated in the back yard, then the voice of Flynn crying: "Hey, stop, or I'll shoot."

"Tried slipping her out the back door, eh?" Angelotti exclaimed, and dashed through the house, with Lanny at his heels. As he went out the kitchen door, Lanny slammed and bolted it behind him and then even as Dan McNamara had predicted, nature took her course. Nance dropped the remainder of the bombs and came dashing down the stairs. "Good-by, Lanny, darling," she cried happily. "We'll meet again," Lanny switched off the hall light, and Nance was through the front door and gone. Across the street two couples stood at the curb, the motors of both turning over slowly.

Alternately the girl's finger was pointed at each car. "My mother told me to take this," she murmured, and when, through the aid of this childhood formula, she had made her decision, she leaped into the coupe of Messrs. Flynn and Angelotti and went rapidly away. Lanny, watching her from the darkened doorway, saw that she had taken the wrong car, but was afraid to cry out and warn her. So she did the next best thing. She locked the front door behind her, climbed into the other car and drove down town to a late motion picture show. She parried the search warrant with her and while enjoying the show tore it into little bits.
