

Invites Accidents — Sharp Bargaining — As To Taxes — Above Party Influence — Ideal Easter Weather — Enumerating The Idle — Appeal in Growing Crops — Founders' Meeting — Pioneer's Experience.

The jaywalker invites unnecessary perils—imposes an extra burden on the most careful motorists. The jaywalker thinks he is saving steps and time, whereas he increases risks and may be arranging for a premature funeral or funerals. A person has the right to jaywalk or walk on his hands, if he can, while scooting cars try to miss him, but in doing so he is liable to fall into the hands of an undertaker for such a reason as "is necessary to enable what" left to be a lily and otherwise appear presentable. The pedestrian must share with motorists the responsibility of exercising care and avoiding accidents.

Economy Versus Parsimony.

Some persons figure they cannot be wisely economical without being painfully penurious. A fellow thinks he must beat a salesman down in his prices and compel him to lose living profit in order to show that he is toting around a phenomenal business brain. As a matter of fact, we wonder how anyone who haggles over every trivial purchase, is careful that the other fellow is going to make a margin of profit, could complete any considerable deal in the course of a natural lifetime. Admiration for wholesome economy—care in buying services or commodities or in making large investments—turns to sickening aversion when pinching niggardliness whipsaws for trifling advantage.

An Unquestioned Truth.

When Emil VonSeggern, publisher and legislator, of West Point, said in the course of discussing taxes, that "in fact, the whole tax system is an economic question," he left no ground for dispute. Like saying ice is cold.

Suggests Precedent.

The president is quoted as saying the relief fund of nearly five billions of dollars lately entrusted to him by congress, will be spent without regard to politics. But of course Postmaster-General Farley, or some one else might persuade him to change his mind. Some very marked switching around in policies took place from the time the president campaigned for election and the time he took office, and so, following such precedent, it is not certain he will not be convinced to lean in the direction of party convenience in handling the huge trust.

For Good Friday and Easter.

The weather was ideal for Good Friday and Easter, the elements smiling a benediction and lifting people's souls more nearly in tune with the occasion. The story of the Resurrection, retold and reemphasized, should be a source of inspiration and confidence—a source of kindlier thinking and nobler living.

To Enumerate Unemployed.

One hundred thousand unemployed are to be set to work enumerating and finding everything about the balance of the unemployed. Another hundred thousand could be employed trying to find jobs for some twenty-two millions who are out of work. This last mentioned hundred thousand could cooperate with private industry, and encourage—not hamstring—private industry into creating jobs.

Grandeur of Growing Corn.

We notice that $2,200 will soon be spent in beautifying the roadside between Homer and Dakota City. Improved landscape will inspire travelers, but we would suggest that nothing can inspire them like rich fields of growing corn. Miles of luxuriant corn and small grain thrill the soul as nothing else can thrill it.

Not a Plutocratic Move.

Tomorrow, April 26, the Founders' day meeting at the banquet for the Third congressional district of Nebraska will be held in Wayne, and the interest manifested here and elsewhere gives assurance of a large and enthusiastic attendance. The meeting is not held by plutocrats nor for plutocrats. The idea, prompted by cherished American principles, is to analyze the administration's policies and to offer resistance, to what are believed to be unwise experiments. Ambitious politicians are limited in caliber would not have to give up down everything offered without question and without thought of the future. But that is not the American way, and thus the meeting of representative men and women of the Third congressional district in Wayne tomorrow.

Sixty-five Years Ago.

Lon Hunter, Wayne county old-timer says sixty-five years ago (this week) he "grazed" the Little Sioux river in Iowa with a herd of cattle. The water was high with floating ice, and he had great difficulty in saving himself and the animals. That was in 1870. Not only were roads mostly unimproved trails in that day, but bridges were provided only where absolutely

HISTORY HEAD RESIGNS POST

Dr. J. G. W. Lewis Presents Message To State Board This Monday.

Resignation of Dr. J. G. W. Lewis as head of history department at Wayne State Teachers College was announced Monday by John F. Robb of Fremont, president of the state normal board. According to Dr. Lewis' request, the resignation will take effect on date of the resignation of Dr. U. S. Chm. The latter some months ago filed his resignation with the board effective September 1, 1935, at conclusion of 25 years as head of the institution. Dr. Lewis' resignation will be presented to the state normal board for action May 13 at Lincoln.

Dr. Lewis' action follows investigation of dissection in the Wayne school by a legislative committee whose recommendation was that the state normal board ask Dr. Lewis to resign. The committee completely exonerated Dr. Conn of all charges filed against him by Dr. Lewis.

In his message to the board Dr. Lewis expressed hope that his resignation would end the unseemly and frequently distorted reports and publicity accorded to our school and myself. He commended the board for "reforms they have introduced into the normal school system of Nebraska in recent years" and thanked them for "the sustaining votes of confidence."

"I feel that during my 25 years of service in the Wayne institution I have stood for the highest ideals of education and citizenship and my greatest hope for the future is that I may yet find a place where I can render the best possible service to my fellow men," stated Dr. Lewis in conclusion.

FOUNDER'S DAY IN WAYNE TOMORROW DRAWS ATTENTION

WE THINK the Founders' day meeting and banquet in Wayne Friday will be a success in attendance and interest. Though there is some tardiness in making reservations for the night performance. Reports from over the district forecast a generous representation, and it is hoped the present lack of definiteness will be cleared in ample time to enable the hotel management to make its plans. The dance arranged to follow the after-dinner program does not increase nor decrease the dollar charge for the banquet, but is added as a free incidental for those who resist tepid church exercises. The Gay theatre where the afternoon meeting will be held, should be crowded. Some interesting discussions are promised. The task of leading arrangements for a function of this kind is no joy ride, and we shall be everlastingly grateful to those who lend assistance.

THINKS EUROPE THREATENS WAR

J. E. Brittain Addresses Wayne Kiwanians On World Situation.

That this generation of Europeans, knows the horrors of war and will avoid conflict if possible knowing that another war would be a step toward civilization, is the opinion of James Brittain, who addressed Kiwanians on the European political situation at Monday's luncheon meeting.

"We live in two worlds," said the speaker, "one materialistic, believing only what we see, feel and touch, and the other a world created in our own minds through inference and piecing together."

"Through the daily press, the 20th century man has had privileges of information never enjoyed by any other generation. From reading, one concludes that the

NEBRASKA STILL BETTER OFF THAN OTHER SECTIONS

ROGER W. BABSON, economist, reports business over the United States two per cent below a year ago. We do not believe that is true in Wayne, and we doubt if it is true generally over Nebraska. This state has shared the hard luck of its neighbors in the way of drought the past year, but it has the nerve and endurance to combat adversity not elsewhere surpassed, if equalled. Promise of a normal crop year has stimulated courage and revived the old spirit that is undaunted by a disheartening experience. Stories of last year's dry spell have hurt the state more than the facts warrant. People who hear and believe the worst, may be thus decided into shying from investments that could be no more certain of safety or profit anywhere. Conditions have done this state an injustice, and time will be required to bring back a reputation which the foundation deserves—which resources and promises amply justify.

Thinks Europe Threatens War (Continued from Page One) time of Alexander or of Napoleon was a great time to be living, but was it? The average man of Alexander's day was probably a slave, probably couldn't read or write, and had no knowledge of what was going on in the world. Those were exciting, interesting times, no doubt, but what of events during our own time? The great world war, the attempt at readjustment which followed, the economic historical was made over-night? And on April 11 we held a conference of as great importance as any conference of nations ever held. On the surface it seemed uneventful, but what went on behind the scenes was most important. A German scholar, Spengler, wrote his doctor's dissertation about 1912 and it was not published until after the World war. He tried to find some interpretation or thread of unity running through all history. Said he: 'We don't have a continuous civilization running from earliest time to the present, but a series of civilizations which were born, had their youth, attained full growth and power, then went into old age and decline. Western civilization is in its fall of existence... we are approaching the age of the Caesars, a great period of world empire.' And Spengler looks for a struggle in the near future for determination of power in Europe... he believes we're ready to roll the dice once more in the great international game, and that the stakes are very high.

Going back 100 years to the Peace of Paris which followed the Napoleonic wars, Mr. Brittain traced European history through the Congress of Vienna, at which English, Russian, French and English statesmen took the lead in attempting eternally and forever to fix the frontiers by peace pact. The nineteenth century in Europe is particularly interesting, he states. Through the old international game of striving for balance of power, another war was brought on... at its close, statesmen again met at Versailles to settle European affairs. The treaty adopted at that time has been much revised since 1918, and its principal effects were to settle war built upon Germany, to set indemnities on the loser, to take away German armaments, army and navy, and to take her European, South African and other territories. And the intervening years since the treaty was signed, Germany has been doing all in her power to get out from under these obligations, and other nations have been working equally hard to stop her.

What about German war guilt? One school of historians has gone into documents in Austrian, Russian and German foreign offices and concluded that 'Germany' is not primarily responsible for waging the war, that Russia is most guilty, Austria next, and Germany third. Another school of history which includes some Americans, clings to the theory that Germany is primarily the guilty nation. Who did will the war? The Germans deny it... because they feel they are not responsible, they demand revision of the peace treaty and cancellation of indemnities. When they said they couldn't make payments, the Dawes and Young plans were adopted, fixing a moratorium and allowing Germany to pay what she was able.

What of the colonies she lost? Poland received territory as did Lithuania, Italy gained Austrian territory, Alsace-Lorraine went to France... the Saar basin, about size of Pierce county but numbering about a million inhabitants, was declared a neutral zone but just recently voted to return to Germany. Her South African holdings were gone. Hitler is truly the Messiah of the German people! He promises to revise the war treaties. He controls Germany through armed forces, just as Mussolini does Italy, and Stalin the Soviet republic. Germany wants her territory returned and France, Italy and Russia live in fear that she will fight for them. Germany plans to increase her army and France worries over another war. England wants to preserve the balance of power in Europe... more than once she has gone to war for this purpose.

Early settlers on these plains found nary a tree or a bush on their homesteads... they realized the importance of trees and planted at every opportunity. Our state Legion has this slogan: 'A tree for every stump'. Many trees have been cut during recent years to provide fuel and wood... we could well re-dedicate ourselves today to replace these trees! Prof. Clifford Bair was given instruction as new member by T. S.

A noted American professor has predicted that world war may come within a year, and at the time, within not less than 10 years. But last year we were worried by threats of a Russo-Japanese war, we expected war when Chancellor Dollfus was killed and when King Alexander of Yugoslavia was assassinated. We have heard the cry of 'Wolf!' so often that one doubts if war is really coming. Italy has been a secondary power, dependent on Britain for sea power, but Mussolini is rapidly forging to the front as leader of European statesmen, and is building up a good navy. He urges cracking down on Germany. Perhaps in Mussolini another Caesar is emerging, and maybe another Caesar will develop in Germany in form of Hitler. 'We of United States cannot help but suffer from another war... it will be hard for us to keep

Relief Problems

PROBLEMS of administering work relief exist everywhere. There is a temptation to stick to relief for fear of losing private employment after securing it, and then the fear of not being able to get back on relief rolls. The Lincoln Journal explains the vexing experience with relief in the capital city.

"The state emergency relief committee, the policy determining body in handling federal relief in Nebraska, has resolved that if a person is offered a job and refuses to take it, though able to work, he is not eligible for relief during the time he could have supported himself and family by the job that is offered."

Unknown Critic

WE have received an anonymous letter advising us to continue the discussion of college degrees by writing an editorial on "fake degrees" and "honorary degrees."

We would advise our querulous and hooded critic that we are heartily in favor of earned degrees—degrees that do not have to be carried on a banner to be made known.

Trying to make our position plain to our unknown correspondent, if he is really interested in it we would say we are ready to applaud the earning of college degrees; also equally ready to acknowledge superior service scored without college degrees.

Echoing and applauding satellites of the New Deal should not wish to suppress analysis of or resistance to prevailing and proposed administration policies.

Legion Entertains Scouts and Athletes

Wakefield School Places in Judging

the army of unemployed and get the country back on a sound and prosperous basis. Majoring in dishing out billions from the public treasury as a way out of the depression, is a new wrinkle in economics which the foresighted are disposed to question and resist.

Sam McKelvie's father who is 85 years old, and who has been sojourning at Long Beach, Calif., reports that Argentine corn that has arrived on the western coast is poor stuff compared with the American product. The Argentine variety is said to be weevily and appears like a cross between pop-corn and yellow dent.

From last year's drought we learned that short crops are an insuperable barrier to farm prosperity. With little or nothing to feed or sell, the live stock industry was pushed to the brink of ruin and agriculture found small reward to exchange for needed commodities.

We cannot see that NRA benefits agriculture, and Nebraska is an agricultural state. It may have operated as a basis for raising prices for manufactured goods, but such increased costs only heap extra burdens on the farmer for whom the matter of adequate returns is still based on the hope of future production.

April's reputation as a moisture producer has been returned in earnest, and this week ought to find farm areas in the best possible condition to give crops a healthy and vigorous start.

The North Dakota state penitentiary has begun the manufacture of caskets, and the man in charge proposes to increase the output to three thousand per year at an average cost of $23.

Schools and colleges will soon complete another year and launch new groups in the world's activities. As the year unfolds, we hope new opportunities will open and afford pieces of use for many young persons who will be looking for favorite niches.

Decentralizing the Population. Omaha Journal-Stockman: There are many who believe that the solution of our social and economic difficulties lies in a better distribution of population.

"We met the crisis of this long depression," declared Mr. Biart, "by giving direct federal relief, only to precipitate a second crisis—the creation of millions of dependents, and entirely too many are depending on government handouts.

This is both a challenge and a warning. Both city and country are vitally interested in seeing that people are in a position to become self-supporting and self-respecting but primarily this is up to the individual himself.

It may be that the day of the rugged individual has passed but no code of laws has ever yet been devised that relieved the individual of responsibility for his actions.

April 17 netted Wakefield high debaters a profit of $16.10. To improve the appearance of the school lawn, hedges have been set out and grass seed sown.

SHORT HOURS

Not skimping time or energy in trying to realize ambition—if one has any—was stressed by an old-timer as related recently by his son, Fred W. Battle Of Manila Is Recorded By Elmer Lundberg, Former Wayneite

It seems only yesterday, but in 1897 37 tempestuous years have elapsed since the S. S. Maine was sent to the floor of Havana harbor, thereby precipitating the Spanish-American war with its colorful Rough Riders following Col. Theodore Roosevelt, and its speedily victory at Manila Bay. Within Abram Gildersleeve's possession is a copy of a letter written by Elmer Lundberg after the Manila affair. Mr.
Lundberg was a Wayneite and served as county superintendent of schools after his discharge.

He describes the battle: "As you evidently know the Spaniards were intrenched about the city to keep out the insurgents. Not much of a quarter of a mile from them, and parallel, the Americans had thrown up intrenchments. On July 29, Company F was placed on outpost duty in front of the main intrenchment and to the right completing the circle about the city were the insurgents. They kept up an exchange of fire during the whole day and into the night, the high shots reaching us, rattling in the trees and hitting houses. There is a stone wall across the road from the house we used for headquarters and we took considerable comfort in "lining up" behind it. A native was struck by a stray bullet during the day, and killed.

"On our arrival in the morning to assume duty, another native was shot through both legs, through the carelessness of a passing insurgent. It was only by our interference that they didn't mob the fellow.

"In the morning when firing was heaviest almost the entire population fled from the village. It was my first experience under whistling bullets, but only a mild introduction to what was coming. On July 31 the Pennsylvania boys were on duty behind our breast-works. About noon the Spaniards opened fire upon them and this lasted an hour. The noise awoke us almost immediately. Call to arms was sounded and the whole camp lined up ready for a call for reinforcements. We stood in battalion formation for nearly two hours but no call came. Six Pen-sylvania boys were killed and 11 wounded.

LEISURELY CRUISE TO ARGENTINE REPUBLIC RECORDED BY HELEN SODEN

Some folks dream of romance and travel. . . others achieve it. Some folks travel via auto and travelogue, in the easy comfort of their favorite lounging chair. . . others cut loose from home ties and get their travel-knowledge first-hand.

Some folks quiet their longings to see far-off, exotic places, and to do unconventional, thrilling things by promising themselves in all sincerity that some day—a very indefinite some day—things will be different and then the dream-trip will come true.

And still others, like Miss Helen Soden of Wayne, simply pack up their wearables and needables and make hasty farewells to the home folks and pals, then sail off to a new world. A colorful, exciting new world for Miss Helen—lovely Buenos Aires, gay Rio de Janeiro. . . a warm, lazy country, this South America, with its rambling green and blue and yellow shops built around an open market place or park which serves as the common gathering place. A world inhabited by sun-browned people, mostly in lattered garb, whose natural inclinations are to doze on the benches in the parks during heat of the day, and whose only display of energy is brought forth by a good argument with another recliner or two. And the markets. . . these thickly-populated centers where strange vegetables of tropical fruits are piled on the ground, where native pottery tempts the visitors, and the odor of none-too-fresh meat and questionable fish, mingled with the nose wrinkling smells of decayed vegetables. . . ah, the markets, what could be more fascinating and more repugnant and more full of human interest? And where, in one's travels, a greater contrast than between the shaggy-headed, browned peon and the expensively-dressed grandee and his lady?

Helen was attending Wayne State Teachers college as a freshman last fall, living at Nebraska hall, when her brother, George Soden, was assigned to Buenos Aires as employee of Swift's. She withdrew from college and accompanied him and his family. The Sodens formerly lived northeast of Wayne, and later in Wayne city. Now the J. M. Sodens are at Wisner, and two of the children are way down in the very middle of South America.

Miss Helen writes interestingly of her trip southward:

"We sailed from New York about midnight. It was just a little rocky the first day. . . the third was really bad! Water splashed over our windows and the boat pitched about. Winifred (Mrs. Soden) and Shirley had been sea-sick the first day, but when it got rougher, they seemed to feel better. Shirley and Dale and one other little girl were the only children on the boat, and the captain ordered a birthday cake for Dale. It was beautifully decorated, and Dale blew out the four candles.

"All kinds of amusement on the boat. . . dancing, golf, shows, etc. About 40 people making a South American tour, quite a few English folks. We had initiation stunts when the Equator was crossed. The sea was lovely last night, and we saw the southern cross."

Of Rio de Janeiro Miss Soden writes: "It is the most beautiful city I ever saw. . . we wound around the mountains and came in to a port to see the city which is built on mountains. We took a taxi and a guide who spoke English took us around. . . we ate lunch on the beach and found the buildings there beautiful, colorful and very modernistic. The sidewalks are of hand-made tile laid in attractive designs. We saw a factory where ornaments and pictures are made out of butterflies, and sold in the United States."

Mr. Horton, a man who works for Swift's, met us at Buenos Aires and took us to the hotel. Most of the autos have steering wheels on the right side, and they drive on left side of the street. We had to wait until our furniture was inspected to move into the house we have taken here."

On Friday the two grades had an Easter treat given by Miss Theola Nuss, and were dismissed early to attend the Pilger-Winside ball game. Betty Launbaugh of Sioux City, visited the room Friday afternoon. Merlin Fleer brought a bouquet of flags for the room, and Merin Benschhof brought red tulips.

Myra June Sellen visited the third and fourth grade Friday afternoon. She was in third grade at beginning of the year. Both grades have constructed little flower boxes of heavy wall paper and are coloring flower plants for the boxes. In geography they are studying about Switzerland. Betty Lou Weible brought a book "Heide," and Miss Alice Garwood is reading it to the children. This year the children have visited Africa, Norway, France, Japan, China, Eskimo land, Arabia, Philippine Islands, Netherlands and Switzerland this year, and have voted the last to be their favorite because they'd like to play in the Swiss Alps. Holland was second choice.

Both first and second graders made colored drawings of dandelions and daffodils for art. Second graders are making bird booklets. They have studied the wren, robin and oriole so far, and written stories and drawn pictures of each.

Second grade has studied Roman funerals from 1 to 10. In a test on numbers over addition with carrying, and addition with borrowing, Lennie Mae Norris, Donna Graugquist and Boris Hansen scored 100 per cent.

C. P. Nelson Passes Away At Home Near Carroll On Saturday.

Funeral services were conducted at the home southeast of Carroll Tuesday noon and at the Friend church in Allen at 2:30 for C. P. Nelson, resident of Carroll for 25 years, who died Saturday at age of almost 79. Pastor of the Allen church had charge and interment followed in Allen cemetery.

Mr. Nelson had been failing in health for a couple of years and his condition had been critical the past few weeks.

Christian Peter Nelson was born May 2, 1856, in Denmark. He came to this country at the age of 18 years and lived first in Sac county, Iowa. There he married Miss Mary Ann Hignett on June 26, 1881, and the Nelsons celebrated their golden wedding anniversary four years ago. The family came to Nebraska and lived near Waterbury. They came to Carroll 25 years ago.

Mr. Nelson is survived by his wife, three daughters, Mrs. W. W. Roe of Wayne, Mrs. N. P. Christensen of Wakefield, and Mrs. A. N. Dixon of Olivet, S. D., and six sons, Orlin Nelson of Randolph, Frank Nelson of Waterloo, Albert Nelson of Wayne, Will Nelson and John Nelson of Columbus, and Ray Nelson at home. Two children died some years ago and are buried at Allen. There are 22 grandchildren. Mr. Nelson also leaves sisters in Denmark.

All children were here for the funeral, also Mrs. Emma Hignett and son, Bert, and Mr. and Mrs. John Loreure and daughter of Sac City, Iowa. Sons of deceased served as pallbearers.

Dick Hurlbert Likes Alaska Mining Town

"Now I've been in every country in North America," writes Dick Hurlbert to C. E. Hurlbert after arriving in Ketchikan, Alaska. "I arrived April 9 and have an apartment with two other boys. I go to work in the Alaskan Ketchikan gold mine in the morning at 7:00 per hour so I'm enjoying health and prosperity to the fullest extent.

"The weather is fine here, not much snow and the sun is shining nice today. My trip was more than enjoyed. All the coast from the states consists of a mountainous group of islands and it surely was beautiful. Through some of the channels we had a bunch of porpus following the boat. The porpus is a large black and white fish, about 5 to 8 feet long and weighing 200 to 300 pounds.

"The towns here have built mostly on piling and plank streets and the tide comes in under the houses so it is quite damp here most of the time. The cars make so much racket going by the house that it almost sounds like a good old Nebraska thunderstorm.

"You should see the boats in this harbor. I'd say there are at least 1,000 fishing boats besides the steamships. The cannery will open up in about two weeks. They bring several thousand men up from the south and employ about 1,000 Indians or Eskimos from here. There are some good looking Eskimos.

"This town has a population of about 7,000 in the summer and about 5,000 in the winter. It has 64 beer parlors and 47 liquor stores and they do a business with all these prospectors coming in with their gold.

SYNOPSIS
Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby whom he names "Penelope." But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in divorce. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin splits the child to Europe. Gatlin visits Penelope all his money, and he goes to begin a search for her. Years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a young psychiatrist. Dan McNamara, chief of police, brings him Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara sympathizing with Nance, obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over to Nance's cause. Nance having a criminal record is sent to the penitentiary. She escapes and goes to Lanny's apartment. Detectives Flynn and Angeliotti, seeking the reward for Nance's apprehension, go to Lanny's apartment in search of the girl, but she has gone. From a banker, McNamara learns that Nance Belden is Penelope Gatlin, heiress to $750,000. Mrs. Gatlin, Penelope's foster mother, is now the wife of a man named Merton. Lanny finds Nance in her apartment. Dr. Burt plans an operation to restore the girl's nose to normality. Through McNamara's connivance, Nance escapes the clutches of Flynn and Angeliotti. The girl draws a large sum from the bank, and the chief believes she intends to leave the country. He is satisfied.

Well, Nance Belden had stolen a dozen pairs of silk hose, but apparently Penelope Gatlin paid her debts. The chief wondered if he had loaned Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin two hundred dollars, for of course they were two separate and distinct personalities inhabiting the same body. If Nance Belden had accepted the loan, then McNamara could kiss the money good-bye. If, on the other hand, Penelope Gatlin had accepted it, then, some day, when Nance had changed places with Penelope, he would get it back. Well, he could trace her progress through the world by the drafts she would cash. Her bank in San Jose would give him that information.
He took down the telephone and called the bank. Yes, a draft had just come in. Drawn for four hundred and thirty-five dollars in favor of the French line, dated three days previously at New York. It had come across the continent by air mail. McNamara thanked the president of the bank and called up the French line's San Francisco office. After some difficulty he discovered that four hundred and thirty-five dollars was payment of one first cabin passage to Havre and that the Ile de France had sailed from New York during the past three days.
Instantly Dan McNamara shot a straight telegram to police headquarters in New York, requesting that the passenger list of the Ile de France be checked to see whether Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin had taken passage on her. Four hours later he received a reply to the effect that Nance Belden was not aboard but that Penelope Gatlin was.
"Nothing is lost if you know where it is," McNamara decided happily, and sent a cable to the prefect of police at Havre, requesting him to pick up Penelope Gatlin on her arrival at that port, shadow her and report by cable, collect, the girl's destination, the names and addresses of those who should meet her and any other information that would aid in keeping track of the girl.
The following day McNamara sent for Detectives Bergan and Angeliotti. As they ranged themselves, more or less at attention, in front of his desk, the chief leaned back in his chair and bent upon the pair a long severe, and penetrating look. They grew a little fidgety before he spoke.
"Well, boys, how are your private affairs prospering?"
Both shrugged, unwilling to be definite.
"They are unprosperous," the chief challenged, "so I have called you in to express the hope that you are now quite willing to abandon your private practice and return to work for the city and county of San Francisco. You draw salary from the taxpayers, you know. I may have been mistaken, Angeliotti, but I thought I saw you out in Mission recently when you were supposed to be working on that racketeer killing over in North Beach. However, I'll overlook that on the assumption that you permitted yourself to be led astray by Flynn. You may say off Sabbath. Susie man does something you can pin on her. Then bring her in."
"She's done something and I'll pin it on her yet," Flynn growled, "and you know what it is." Flynn, being Irish, was unwilling that his chief should regard him as deficient in intelligence and enterprise.
"We understand each other thoroughly, Flynn. You've been after that Belden girl and you've made a mess of it." He opened his desk drawer and drew out two envelopes. One was addressed to Flynn and the other to Angeliotti and both envelopes bore the return address of a prominent New York hotel, but were neither stamped nor postmarked. "These two envelopes came in a large envelope addressed to me," McNamara explained. "They're sealed!" He handed each detective his letter and watched as they opened them and drew forth typewritten letters and two hundred and fifty dollars in bills. Flynn's letter was, undoubtedly, a carbon copy of Angeliotti's.
Flynn perused his letter and handed it to the chief, who read:
"Dear Mr. Flynn:
"You poor dear, you have worked so hard and so intelligently and in such dreadfully hard luck that my heart goes out to you. You were working for the reward, of course—no doubt because you needed the money, you and Mr. Angeliotti would have had to divide two hundred and fifty dollars had you recaptured me, but just to prove I'm a sport and not holding any mean little grudge, I'm sending you each two hundred and fifty dollars. Please be good and try to forget all the unpleasant incidents. You will never get me now, so do give up your attempts, like good boys."
The letter was unsigned.
"He's much did you get, Angeliotti?" McNamara queried softly.
"Two fifty, Chief."
"Santa Claus has been good to you two kids? Well, are you both willing to go back to your regular jobs now?"
Flynn threw the money on the chief's desk. "We swore an oath," he began, but McNamara cut him short.
"So have I!" he reminded Flynn fiercely.
"We know every move you've made in this case," Flynn shouted.
"And I knew every move you were going to make before you made it."
Angeliotti tucked his present in his pocket. "Come on, Flynn," he urged.
"I can't be pulled off for money," Flynn persisted stubbornly.
Dan McNamara swept the money on his desk into the drawer. "The widows and orphans of the Policemen's Benevolent and Protective association will be glad to get this. On your way—you and your oath."
Flynn sighed deeply and went out. Fifteen minutes later he came back and said humbly: "Chief, I've changed my mind."
"She's got an apartment at twenty-seventh Rue St. Honoré, with a cook and a maid, and a chauffeur who drives a Citroën car. And she's having her picture painted."

"I'll get you for this, McNamara."
"I don't think so. My advice to you is, Flynn, would be to quit monkeying with TNT. I've known detective-sergeants to be taken for a ride."
"Threatening me, eh?"
"Not at all, I wouldn't harm a hair of your red head—and by the way, red hair in the Irish is a sign that they breed back to the Danes and Swedes. A pure-bred Irishman would know enough to lay off a girl with powerful and implicative friends. All you are offering is a hundred and twenty-five dollars—half the state reward for returning that girl—and when she sends you double that you're not sport enough to meet her half-way."
"I took an oath," Flynn promised.
"You should have taken a physician's."
"Well, I did take an emetic. Chief, I'll never forgive you those hair and stink bombs."
"Well, you shadowed my house and entered it unlawfully."
"Well, I found a lipstick."
"Belonged to the nurse I had looking after a sick friend of mine," the chief lied glibly.
But Flynn grinned ferociously. "I found stained bandages, too."
"Well, the pot can't get soverther by calling the kettle black," McNamara decided. "Clear out!"
"Give me the money and I'll lay off."
But Dan McNamara shook his head. "I know your kind, Pat. There's no sense wasting good money on you because you won't stay bought. Clear out, I tell you."
So Flynn cleared out, carrying with him infinitely more respect for his chief than he had heretofore entertained. Well, some day he'd collect heavy interest on that two hundred and fifty dollars.

The last patient had left Stephen Burt's office for the day and the ever watchful Lanny had locked the office door.
"Tired, Stevie?" she queried anxiously, as he headed his pipe.
"No, of course not," he replied absently. "What have I done to be tired?"
"Well, you had another session with that terrible Mrs. Merton."
She didn't weary me any more. She shrewdly excites my sympathy. Still sleepless, of course, and still bothered about her poor devil of a husband. She's had detectives on his trail for a month. They've cost her ten dollars a day each and they haven't discovered anything to Merton's discredit."
"What a poor, beaten devil Merton is! He hasn't the courage of a mouse."
"What can he do, Lanny? His wife is unbalanced, but if he swears out a warrant charging her with insanity she'll snap out of her lunacy. Merton couldn't get to first base on an insane warrant."
"Then why don't he divorce her on grounds of mental cruelty?"
"The man's chivalrous and profoundly sympathetic. Besides, he hasn't any witnesses to support a charge of mental cruelty, and he can't run away from her, because he has a thriving business he may not abandon. I told her again today not to come to my office any more; that I could do nothing for her; that she was a nuisance—and to try some other doctor. She went out in a rage."
Lanny jumped up. "Now who do you suppose that is knocking? Your office hours are plainly printed on the door."
"Oh, Lanny, don't be so hard-bodded. Let the patient in."
"Who's here?" Lanny shouted angrily.
"Oh! So it's you, is it? I knew you were there," the voice of Dan McNamara boomed.
Lanny unlocked the door and McNamara planted himself in the visitors' chair.
"You have news of Nance Belden," Stephen challenged.
"Gobs of it, Doctor."
Lanny entered with a highball. "I had a letter from Nance yesterday, Dan. She's in Paris. Can you beat that?"
"I can," McNamara replied coolly. "She's got an apartment at twenty-seventh Rue St. Honoré, with a cook and a maid, and a chauffeur who drives a Citroën car. And she's having her picture painted."
