

Finds Wealth of Promise—A Wise Old Bird—For Improved Looks—All Signs of Business Boom—Looking Ahead—Kansans Imbued New Spirit.

Though damaging floods have followed in some parts of the middle west, rainfall generally has not been too much. It has soaked the soil to a great depth, however, in all the vast area that was made at once hopeless a year ago by drought and ruined crops.

This rhyme is said to have been kept hanging over President Coolidge's mantelpiece, and he seems to have observed the idea suggested whether it was the controlling influence or not.

With an abundance of moisture and sunshine the task of beautifying home premises is greatly relieved. Grass and foliage and flowers need coaxing to grow, and with due attention to training and trimming, they will work wonders in improving the appearance of the lawn.

Roger W. Babson, economist, expresses the belief that we are approaching one of the biggest booms ever experienced in America, notwithstanding the present delay in business revival due to the uncertainty of government action.

Forty years ago, favorable crops followed the drought of 1894, nearly to a crop failure, until 1934. In 1895 we were still in the clutches of one of the country's major depressions.

Sunday's Bee-News contained a powerfully suggestive cartoon on the importance of building a surplus during productive years to take care of needs when conditions slump or health breaks or old age is indifferent to an approaching calamity.

At Winslow school board meeting Monday evening, Frank Lee of Hastings, was elected to coach athletics and teach English and history in the high school the coming year.

OLD AMBITION IS REALIZED AS NEW STRUCTURE OPENS

COMPLETION of the new post office building in Wayne fulfills a long-nurtured desire. Among the first ambitions of a growing community is a federal building. It may or may not be needed. But it lends metropolitan style and towns like to add style to service. Other communities no larger than Wayne with less business volume, in the Third congressional district, had been awarded federal buildings. Wayne has long felt entitled to one. Many years ago a site was authorized for a building here, but it only stimulated hope and never materialized. The spending program of the present Washington regime has enabled communities like Wayne to realize long-deferred improvements. The building here is not so large as some, but it has all the conveniences provided in metropolitan centers and will prove adequate to all future requirements. The opening this week is the signal for public inspection. Visitors will see a high standard of equipment, with corresponding elegance within due proportions. Wayne deserved to be included in the distribution of post office buildings. Realization is a source of profound satisfaction.

Constitutional Safeguards

It was so startling for the supreme court to uphold the constitution that the president and his professor group have been thrown into a good deal of confusion over what to do next. If the constitution could be changed or abolished, New Dealers would feel free to go ahead with their dizzy and doubtful experiments. An attempt to change the constitution to suit the New Deal program has been talked. But President Roosevelt is inclined to wait until he hears from the people, the while dropping code prosecutions and perhaps putting on a few "fireside" talks to gather popular reactions.

The supreme court's decision will doubtless put a crimp in pending amendments to the agricultural adjustment act to which it was proposed to add licensing power. The proposed licensing plan would extend to all handlers of agricultural products and would virtually give the secretary of agriculture dictatorial powers. A similar plan was defeated by the senate a year ago, but it has bobbed up again in aggravated form. The high court's action will probably put a quietus on this proposed imposition, which, if accomplished, would be a major blow to American independence.

Even those who swallow the New Deal in its entirety must feel like frowning on attempts to override the constitution. The most pronounced radical may yet be thankful that our fundamental safeguard is still intact and still able to protect individual rights. We are reminded that it was this constitution which President Roosevelt pledged himself to uphold when he took his oath of office as president of the United States.

Line-Up For Next Year

WITH nearly five billions of dollars to spend and many thousands employed in connection with different government bureaus, the administration is likely to be able to overcome growing inefficiency of its policies and win in next year's presidential election unless the conservatives of both the republican and democratic parties unite forces for one platform and one ticket. This is the opinion of Mark Sullivan, student of politics and well known syndicate writer.

Sullivan thinks escape from the dangers of future radicalism is more important than clinging to party name. Both republican and democratic platforms of 1932 were generally sound, but democratic middle-of-the-roads were set aside and the democratic platform was displaced by a lot of wild theories. If either the republican or democratic platform had been followed with soundly constructive counsel from either party's statesmen the depression would undoubtedly be farther in the background with fewer depression nostrums to overcome.

If Sullivan's speculations are correct next year's presidential campaign will be a contest between the right and left wingers.

A. E. Anderson, state and federal crop statistician, says wheat prospects are generally good in the state. Enforced idleness of the soil last year stimulated powers of production, and accordingly Mr. Anderson looks to increased yields. Outside of the flood area, the state is reasonably certain to raise crops fully up to normal. However, he points out some likely dangers in the way of black-stem rust, lodging and difficulty in harvesting if wet weather continues. But there promise to be no extraordinary menaces to big small grain crops which will be harvested and out of the way before long. As to corn, it should have a favorable start, and without overpowering armies of cut worms to contend against, it should be able to move on to triumphant maturity.

The Kansas City Star advises business not to accept release from NRA restrictions as a signal for abandonment of fair practices. "In the paralyzing bureaucratic restrictions it sought to impose upon industry, in its theory of limiting production, in its sanction of price-fixing and in its whole tendency to freeze industrial operations at a given level, the NRA was a genuine detriment to business as well as the public, and it served to retard rather than accelerate recovery," says the Star. But now relieved from unwise restrictions, business must assume its increased responsibility and not abuse its freedom.

To insure healthy reconstruction and permanent recovery, issuing from and following the depression, a course well removed from the greed of hard-fisted employes on the one hand and the greed of labor organizations, demanding a thirty-hour week, on the other, must be followed.

The supreme court's decision on the NRA seemed to surprise New Deal attorneys, and with this in mind some suggest that the next step for the administration to take is to establish a school for New Deal lawyers with the constitution as required reading.

That statistics cannot always be relied on is suggested by the number of adherents claimed by the two major political parties and by Dr. Townsend, Father Coughlin and Senator Long whose groups are ten times larger than the aggregate of our electorate.

Columbia university has just bestowed the degree of doctor of laws on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. This little formality makes Columbia more largely representative in the administrative counsels of the nation.

Last year, devastated by drought and now, devastated by floods, inhabitants of southwest sections of the state will wonder what can happen next.

The supreme court's complete defense of the constitution was almost as much of a relief to fearful society as a cessation of war.

NO CURES.

Dr. Neil Carothers, professor of economics and director of college business administration of Lehigh University, is quoted as saying that "the first and most outstanding principle is that you cannot cure a depression before its time by a mere act of congress." He adds that "depression brings its own cure inevitably, regardless of governmental policies." He thinks raising wages, shortening hours, limiting production and fixing prices do not aid recovery, but retard it. This policy "raises costs, increases government deficits, reduces production and decreases employment." He believes reducing agricultural production does not help, and that a "nation cannot squander its way out of a depression." In conclusion he points out the economic principle that "debasement of the currency is not permanently beneficial as a recovery measure." Dr. Carothers would seem to leave little to commend in the general recovery policies of Washington bureaucrats.

THE PROFESSOR.

Lane W. Lancaster, professor of political science in the University of Nebraska, contributed an article to the current National's Business in which he discusses the role of a college professor in government service. He finds the professor as a man of thought, but not of action, a man of ideas, but not of expedients. He is long on research—valuable as a contributor of facts—a plausible theorist—but is unable to make a pattern that practical society can follow. He can fashion a policy that a long period of trial might work into practical use, but needs cannot be postponed, and society must have successful administration, not textbook theories, and in administration, which is a man of action and mastery of immediate circumstances, the professor falls down. Successful statesmanship requires more of the tact of a politician than the lore of a political economist. "Taking the world as we find it," says the writer, "the most valuable equipment of a successful ruler is not the wisdom of the study, but an intuition in sensing the practical realities of a situation."

President Roosevelt delivered his own veto message to Congress on the Patman bonus Bill, and the scenes in the House and outside were similar to the day he delivered his message to the 74th Congress, with the exception that the applause during his speaking was not so pronounced. The president looked in good health; but his usual good humor seemed to be lacking. Those who sat close to him and looked at him seemed to sense that he felt a majority of the House was not with him. One man who voted to override the veto had this to say, "I have been against the payment of the bonus, but I am voting to over-ride the veto because I think that if the Government can spend $300 a month for somebody to teach young men and young women toe-dancing, they can spend this money which the soldiers need so badly." Other Congressmen had a lot to say about the spending of five billion dollars, and millions for experimenting with tideswarters on the coast of Maine.

Art Brewer of Norfolk, who is on his way to New York to visit his son, had the experience of brushing elbows with Mrs. Roosevelt, who sat next to Josephus Daniels who is the American envoy in Mexico. Josephus Daniels and Mrs. Roosevelt apparently had a whole lot to talk about to each other, and many people watched them closely while the president was talking.

Mrs. M. Kundl of Newman Grove, was in today with Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Buhman of Genoa, and Miss Anne Buhman of Lincoln. Mrs. Kundl was overwhelmed at the number of new buildings going up in Washington.

Chairman Jones of the agriculture committee who had the AAA bill all ready for action today told his friends that his committee is going back in a huddle. The bill may have to be rewritten for the fifth time because of the court decision. That decision may affect the AAA. Farmer congressmen who have read the bill believe the court decision affects both the licensing feature of the new AAA bill, and also may affect the processing tax features. For that reason so much excitement among the grassmen interested in farming districts and also the reason for so much anxiety by the members of the agriculture committee which has been working day and night on the many agriculture bills to which hundreds of amendments have been offered and in which hundreds of changes have been made almost daily.

About the most anxious man in congress today was Bill Lemke, who is the author of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill. When asked what he thought about the court decision on his bankruptcy bill, he said he was not entirely told, he said he was to be appointed. His advice was to tell the farmers who have debts to pay to have faith and to try to hold on to their farms until his latest bill is passed. He told this to a Nebraska congressman this morning: "The decision of the court will help us. The decision suggests some measure to refinance farm mortgages. I interpret the decision as a suggestion for a

CONGRESS

As Seen by a Nebraskan

A Bloomfield farmer asks this question, "Would it not be a good thing for the government to seal small grain as it did in 1933?" We took the matter up with Chester Davis, Administrator of the AAA, and this is what he had to say in reply to that question: "Careful consideration is being given to the possibility of extending the principle of the over normal granary to other basic commodities. During the past two years, however, prices of wheat have been above the world basis, owing to the short crops of 1933 and 1934 and to the effects of the adjustment program. In view of the short crops, together with the uncertain world market conditions, the need for impounding of surplus wheat has not been as apparent as it was the need for storing surplus corn in 1933; hence, no definite plans have been formulated for making loans on wheat in the near future.

H. B. Ware of Wakefield, Nebraska, was among the visitors in Washington this week. He is attending the annual convention of the Presbyterians and came here to visit a lot of old friends and relatives in Virginia.

Ambassador Ronald Lindsay and Lady Lindsay gave a garden party last Friday and nearly everybody went, including the congressmen. General John C. Bingham was there all "dolled up" and he seemed to be a sort of guest of honor, and it was noticed that Lady Lindsay shook hands with the folks as they came in and had a lighted cigarette in the other hand. It was just like all of these parties that they have here, free sandwiches and free cookies and free lemonade under one tent and free wine at another tent. The wine tent had the most customers. It was a regular parade of good clothes and small talk.

A new bonus move has started in congress. This time by republican leaders, who are quietly circulating a petition among congressmen asking for a big meeting to discuss a new bill to pay the war veterans their adjusted service compensation out of the five billion dollar fund which is in the hands of the president. They want this meeting to take quick action to get such a bill passed. Some of them say the government is having trouble finding places to spend four billion dollars and that paying part of it to the war veterans for what they really have coming would do what the money is intended to do, take a lot of people off the unemployed forces of the nation. This move is seriously planned and is backed by a lot of strong men in congress. Hamilton Fish, jr., was the first man to sign this petition.

The New OLIVER "CLIP-CUT" MOWER

The First Really New Mower in 75 Years!

Easy Cutting — Easy Running — All Purpose

Only an Oliver can give you these 8 advantages:

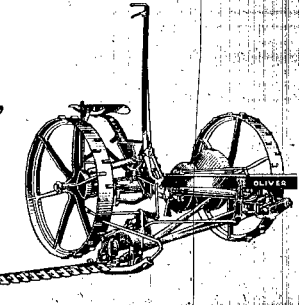

- 1—The Oliver "Clip-Cut" is an All-Purpose mower. Universal cutter bar is really universal. Handles all mowed crops without change of guards.
- 2—Exceptionally light running, due to a combination of new "Clip-Cut" action and the fact that all gears are fully enclosed, running in oil.
- 3—Long, one-piece axle from wheel to wheel. No added load because of split axles and extra gears.
- 4—Adjusted crank pin bearing with grease chamber and Zerf fitting. Works all day on one greasing.
- 5—Extra long crank shaft eases load on bearings and prolongs their service.
- 6—Extra long pitman reduces thrust wear and noise.
- 7—Adjusted step collar in yoke maintains register between knife and guards and another adjustment keeps sickle and pitman in proper alignment.
- 8—Two types of mowers—heavy and light—with plain or vertical lift.

Oliver "Clip-Cut" is the New Running-in-Oil Mower with the Universal Cutter Bar.

"God the Only Cause and Creator" is the subject of the lesson- sermon in all Christian Science churches for Sunday, June 9. The Golden Text is from Acts 15:18: "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world."

A passage from the Bible used in the lesson-sermon is from Acts 17:24, 25: "God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed anything, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "Everything in God's universe expresses Him. He is divine Principle, Love, the universal cause, the only creator, and there is no other self-existence. He is all-inclusive, and is reflected by all that is real and eternal and by nothing else." Simpler Design--Easier Operation Make Chase The Outstanding Two-row Cultivator

The Chase two-row cultivator is famed for its ability to do more perfect cultivating job. Its ease of operation, the simple, durable construction and the shorter hitch which permits cultivation nearer to the end of the rows make the Chase a favorite among farmers. Hard field service for 23 years has proved that the design of the Chase two-row cultivator is in advance of the ordinary—and its performance is unequalled. As a result practically every farm in the corn country is using the Chase.

The Chase cultivator has earned an enviable reputation for its quick and easy operation. There is very little weight on the front truck, merely enough to make the cultivator carry steadily. This throws nearly all weight onto the rear wheels, giving them an unusually firm grip on the ground. As a result, when the pivot-hitch guiding levers are operated, the cultivator shifts quickly and easily without slipping. Other levers operate easily because of perfect balancing of parts.

Let us demonstrate the Chase Cultivator for You.

PAY HOMAGE TO SOLDIER DEAD

Memorial Day Services Dedicated To The Late Rev. H. C. Capsey.

"No veteran believes we can attain peace by turning the other cheek," stated Fred W. Winter of Grand Island, department commander of the Nebraska State Legion, in Memorial day address in the Gay theatre Thursday morning.

"That's why we foster two important proposed laws: the National Defense act which we would have to have that no other nation would dare step on our toes, and the Universal Service act which would conscript both capital and supplies in time of war.

To veterans, the World war was a tremendous reemphasis of Washington's advice to 'avoid all entangling alliances.' That is why the Legion and all allied organizations are so strongly national in purpose.

"This is the 68th annual Memorial day observance," said the state officer. "Sixtyseven years ago General John A. Logan of Illinois, national commander of the G. A. R., by personal proclamation set aside a day to pay homage to veterans of the Civil war and to dedicate their graves. Later, scope of the day was widened to include the dead of all wars. In the south, Memorial day is celebrated on several dates ranging from April 26 until today. This holiday is rooted deep in American life and in American institutions. Any talk on this occasion must be founded on service and sacrifice.

"Memorial day has two separate phases of observance... first, the strewing of flowers of our memory over the green mounds of departed comrades and the recalling of days when they were a living part of us, this being the ritual and ceremony, and second, the pledging of ourselves to carry on the work for which these comrades made the supreme sacrifice. Memorial day belongs to the living more than to the dead, for in us is vested the task of carrying the torch taken from dying hands. Common bond between the living and the dead is unity of purpose."

Paying tribute to the Civil war veterans, Mr. Winter stated that work of these heroes was important following the war as well as during the war period... these men served in peace as well as war. The younger veterans feel these Civil war survivors have in the fullest sense carried on the work of their fallen comrades, and have fulfilled this trust during the past 70 years.

A. J. Hyatt, Civil war veteran, was on the platform, but R. P. Williams attended only the services at the cemetery. G. A. Renard presided over this program: "America," by all; invocation, Rev. M. C. Powers; band number, directed by Prof. F. C. Reed; Gettysburg address by Miss Fern Van Allen; number by band; introduction of guest speaker by Mr. Renard; main address by Commander Winter; "Star Spangled Banner" by all; Legionnaires and boy scouts were seated in extreme front of the theatre, and the band, wearing new blue uniforms, was on the stage.

These services were dedicated to the late Rev. H. C. Capsey, former army chaplain, first Nebraska state chaplain of the Legion, senior state chaplain of the Nebraska National Guard, and chaplain of Irwin Sears post of Wayne.

Led by the colors, veterans, band and car bearing Mr. Hyatt, the procession proceeded slowly to the cemetery where further services were held at the soldiers' and sailors' plot.

Flower girls, numbering 34, were in charge of Mrs. L. W. McNatt and Mrs. A. L. Johnson. Led by Miss Delores McNatt and Miss Betty Wright, they marched in twos, each carrying a wreath, and each couple bearing a basket of blossoms. At the cemetery the girls placed their wreaths on the little crosses marking soldiers' graves.

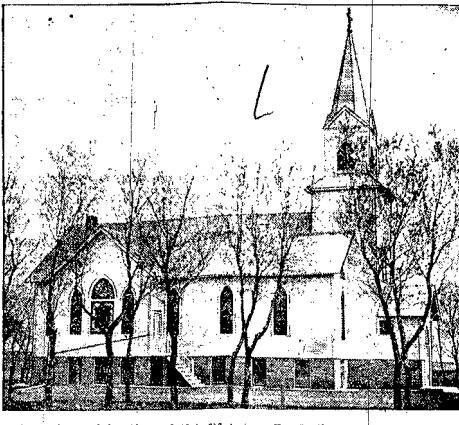

After a number by Wayne Municipal band, Mr. Renard gave brief address, and Prof. K. N. Parke, post chaplain, the prayer. Then the chaplain read off the roll of war dead—35 Civil war veterans and six Spanish American, and 20 World war, each followed by a roll of drums.

Special tribute was paid to Rev. Capsey by Mr. Renard as the flower girls placed blossoms and a poppy wreath in his memory. Said Mr. Renard:

"In special memory of our honored and beloved comrade and chaplain, Rev. Harold C. Capsey, and in honor of all departed veterans, we strew these memorial flowers upon this grave which represents the graves of all who died in the sacred cause of our country. Our floral tribute will wither. Let the tender fraternal love for which it stands endure until the touch of death shall chill the warm pulse beats of our hearts!"

Western States Are Called Garden Spots

In contrast to the desert-like dryness of a year ago, Wyoming and Montana are now beautiful and green, reports H. L. Carpenter of Lincoln, who visited here last week. Mr. Carpenter attended the "Montana Stockgrowers' convention" at Great Falls, Mont., on May 23 to 25, making the trip by motor. A note of optimism pervaded the meeting, the cattlemen being cheered by generous rains, and encouraged that their cattle had come through the winter so well. The Gallatin, Madison and Jefferson valleys, whose rivers meet the Missouri at Three Forks, Mont., were veritable garden spots to the cattlemen who had found them dry and unproductive "at the time of the annual meeting last year."

The Montana convention strongly opposed processing taxes on cattle or higher freight rates. The stockmen recommended changes in the Taylor grazing act and supported legislation placing an effective tariff on the importation of foreign fats and oils.

NEW BUILDING ALLOWS FOR A GROWING WAYNE

Interior Is Thoughtfully Planned For Beauty And Efficiency.

LOBBY IS ATTRACTIVE

Visitors to Wayne's beautiful new post office building at the Friday dedication will find the structure quite as complete and well-arranged in interior, as it is imposing from the street. This substantial-looking, graceful building is well situated at southwest corner of Second and Pearl streets, the large shade trees giving it an appropriate frame of greenery. It measures 68 x 58 feet.

At first glance one is reminded of the town halls of eastern United States with their weathered bricks and formal entrances, but the new Wayne building has a more business-like air, and the squared, solid lines which make up modern efficiency in architecture. One has an impression of many windows gleaming in the sun... the deep red brick and green doors are restful and pleasing. Over the front extend letters, "United States Post Office," and flanking this on each side, curved American eagles. No mistaking the ownership.

It is of "Old Virginia" brick which is made to resemble antique brick. The steel sash windows are gilded in cream... the doors in later are green and have glass panels and antique bronze trim.

One enters by climbing two short flights of steps... while steps giving easy access. Tall, dark green lamp posts give formal note to the front. Inside is a small vestibule of dark wood; this opens into a public lobby size 38x13 feet which has unglazed quarry tile on floor giving attractive blending of warm browns, tans, oranges and reds. Wallcovering is in lighter tones, and walls and ceiling of neutral white plaster. Lighting comes from three graceful ceiling lights of antique bronze suspended on chains. Woodwork is of dark oak, also the tall writing desks at either side of lobby, and the bulletin boards. Postmaster's office opens off to right... money order and registry windows are at left. At back of lobby one finds the stamp and parcel post windows at extreme left, slits for Wayne and outgoing mail and for paper and packages in center, and 342 boxes band at extreme right.

The postmaster's office is large and well-lighted. It has dark oak trim and white plaster walls. A washroom opens off at right rear. Also at rear is door leading into the main work room. Near the doorway of this main room is a janitor's room with ladder leading to the roof. (This to give access to the flagpole.)

The work room is about 35x55 feet... spacious, high ceilinged, well lighted by two sky-lights and suspended white globes. Floor is in natural finish. A row of 14 green-shaded lights illuminates the front of work room to facilitate mail distribution, etc. Here the wood-work is fir stained a dark oak. Wash room for women employees opens off at southwest corner. The finance room which balances the postmaster's office on south side, has green window grill guards. The concrete vault is about 6x12 feet and has heavy steel door.

Leading off the work room to south is the stairway to mezzanine floor. Here are found the "swing room" or lounging room for postal employees, and adjoining wash rooms. A sky-light admits light over-head.

To rear of the work room is the mailing vestibule which opens out upon the mailing platform. The generous paved driveway at rear allows ample parking and loading space.

Under the mezzanine stairs is a stairway descending to the many-roomed basement. At rear of building, the long narrow boiler room which houses water softener and water heater... at north end of this, fuel room. To south center, the inspector's room which this dignitary enters through private door and can climb up noticed up his narrow look-out shaft, and look out upon all post office activities through narrow slits in the walls. Inspections are without warning, and are part of the postal department's program to safeguard against inefficiency and theft.

In this southeast corner are a washroom and the janitor's supply room. The narrow central corridor has a windowless store room for custodian's supplies on one side, and another for files, etc., on opposite side. At northeast corner is a large unassigned room. All basement windows are to have wire guards... only the corridors and inspector's room are plastered.

C. P. Powers has been appointed temporary janitor of the new building.

Here from Omaha... Mrs. C. J. Ringer, mother of Mayor M. L. Ringer, moved here from Omaha Tuesday last week and has an apartment at Hotel Stratton.

Prof. and Mrs. A. V. Teed were in Ponca Memorial day.

Teacher In County Marries In Wisner

Miss Margaret Bruce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bruce of Wisner, and Mr. Harold Pierce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Pierce of Wisner, were married May 29 at 9 a. m. at Wisner Methodist church. Rev. H. C. Sandall performing the ceremony. Mrs. L. J. Jensen played Lohengrin's march as the bridal party entered the church.

The bride wore ensemble of yellow crepe with matching accessories. She carried calla lilies. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Livinghouse of Wayne, the latter a sister of the bride, were attendants. Mrs. Livinghouse wore green with white accessories and had a corsage of rosebuds. The men wore grey.

The bride taught school southeast of Wayne since completing high school in 1930 in Wisner and attending Wayne college. Mr. Pierce has been at the Hudson Miller implement shop in Wisner for eight years since attending Misner high school.

The Pires went to Schuyler where Mr. and Mrs. Harry McNamara served dinner in their honor. Yellow candles in brown holders on Spanish lace cloth and yellow tulips and roses carried out the bride's colors. A five-tier wedding cake was made by Mrs. McNamara, sister of Mr. Pierce.

From Schuyler the couple went to Columbus and Duncan, Omaha and Council Bluffs, returning to the John Bruce home next day for wedding dinner in their honor. Lilies and tulips, also a large cake decorated the table.

The couple will live in the Bruce house where Rudy Kays formerly lived.

Drowns In Tank.
Donald, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Good of Chapel, Neb., and nephew of L. F. Good of Wayne, was drowned last week when he fell into a water tank while playing in the yard at his home. L. F. Good went to the funeral and returned Tuesday last week. Deceased was an only child.

Is Given Sentence.
Thomas Limerick, thought to be copartner in a dangerous gang operating through middle states, was sentenced to life imprisonment at Leavenworth, Kan., last Friday in trial at Sioux Falls, S. D. It is thought the Limerick-Denning gang stole E. E. Gailey's car in Wayne some days ago. Denning is still being sought.

Leaves On World Trip.
Alfred Thomsen resigned his position in the First National Bank at Randolph, effective May 31, and after a visit with home folks at Wakefield he will leave for Oakland, Calif., where he will embark on a trip around the world. He will sail June 14 from Oakland to Portland, Ore., and then leave for the world cruise.

Signs Biermann Bill.
One of the bills signed last week by Governor R. L. Cochran was that introduced by Rep. August Biermann of Wayne county, this providing state department of agriculture authority over seed tags

Wayne's new post office is a structure of beauty and utility—a building that will create pride as well as serve a much needed function in the postal department.

To furnish some of the material for the building was our privilege and we appreciate having had a part in the new structure.

We hope all who can will attend the post office opening Friday to see this attractive structure and be shown the modern service which the building provides.

For Quality and Economy

In building materials, paints and coal we provide the very best.

Let us figure your building or remodeling plans. Estimates furnished without obligation on your part.

On the same day you inspect the post office—come to our paint demonstration and receive a quarter pint of Duco FREE.

Postal Service Keeps Apace With Wayne's Growth.

By a town's postal service shall you judge its worth.

Uncle Sam, just assured, is a pretty canny judge of the hamlets, villages, towns, cities and metropolises which make up his domain, and isn't to be fooled by the over-enthusiasm of the chamber of commerce secretary's statistics, nor the glowing pictures painted by optimistic realtors. No indeed... Uncle Sam builds up his postal service to keep pace with each community's growth... as it shows healthy progress and business vitality, he adds to postal equipment... as it shows business inertia and loss of population, he takes away.

All of which makes us "point with pride" to Wayne's latest post office development—a beautiful new red brick building which will cause strangers to put on their brakes, crane their necks and say, "Hm, quite a town."

Looking back into postal history hereabouts, one finds that the post office unit has been ever-growing. Some of you very early settlers will remember when you waded through black mud and scraped your feet off an sidewalk before entering a little frame building south of the Boyd hotel to collect your mail. Once a day a mail train chugged in from Sioux City, and once a day from the other direction. Frank Fuller officiated behind the counter around mid-time... otherwise you could find him pursuing legal practice, such as was to be found in a new prairie town. The little 16x16 building is now gone. Mr. Fuller is also.

Next the post office was housed in west half of its present location in the Bressler building. After a period in the Bressler building now occupied by the Wayne Book store it was returned to the newly-remodeled and enlarged building adjoining the First National bank to remain the past seven and one-half years.

What of the postmasters? Well, you'll remember most of them. First to officiate in the newly-established Wayne was Mr. Fuller. Then Marcellus Dearborn. He was an older man who had come here to join his sons, Luther and Eugene. Luther was the druggist in LaPorte. Before the county had any equipment and records, did a disappearing act and were discovered next morning comfortably established in that upstart of a new town down on the railroad. Marcellus Dearborn's nephew, Frank Dearborn, was partner of John T. Bressler. The postmaster lived upstairs over the bank which was on site of the present First National bank... the building was later moved back and now houses the Fairmont Cream Station. O. D. Brown, civil engineer who laid out the railroad, had reserved this corner for a bank, and put in his brother, C. C. Brown, as president. When Mr. Bressler and D. C. Patterson moved their bank here from LaPorte, they bought the Brown bank and merged it with their Logan Valley bank. Marcellus Dearborn and his wife went from here to Florida, and both died there.

Next in line was Harry C. Light, carpenter, clerical work, etc., who had stood on site of the Dr. T. T. Jones house.

A. P. Childs, early LaPorte settler, came here when the county seat moved over, and was an important figure in early Wayne life. He was an editor of the old school, putting out the "Wayne County Review."

Longest term of all was W. H. McNeal who bore the title of postmaster for 16 years. C. A. Berry, next in office, served 12 years. During this time F. L. Neely was appointed postmaster but died on the very day he received the commission, so Mr. Berry was reappointed. Grant Mears followed, serving four years and dying in office. J. M. Pile followed, serving a year, and J. M. Strahan's term began June 15, 1933.

Not only the postmasters but the clerks and carriers as well have unusually long records of association with the post office. Paul Pawelbly, for instance, is the dem of clerks—he's been there 23 years. Oscar Lietke ranks second with over 16 years, John Brisben is third with about 16, and Claire Meyers is the "office infant" with only six.

As to the men who brave Wayne county roads the year around—some of them ought to know every bump, every fence-post and every jutting mail-box's special peculiarities. Harry Perdue's been carrying the mail some 18 years. Albert Eastman started one year later, and William Theiman 16 years ago. Fritz Milner is proportionately a newcomer, making his first trip nine years ago.

Other long-time rural carriers include Frank Weber, William Wright, Harold Gildersleeve and Roy Thorpe.

It was nine years ago that city carrier service was added, and folks no longer had to hunt the post office around mail time, but could dart out on the front porch at click of the mailbox lid, and find their letters and packages and papers jutting out of the box. With carrier service came two new recruits for the post office staff—George Berres, jr., and Richard Baunister, whose tramping of Wayne city side-walks, and places where side-walks might be, covers the entire nine years of carrier service. O. T. Conger came two years later to "tote" a mail bag.

Wayne's New Post Office

Justly arouses pride of the community. We sincerely appreciate having provided plumbing and heating for the new structure, and we feel certain the new post office will provide a long-felt need in Wayne.

Kohler of Kohler ware is guaranteed of highest quality. Make improvements now. You CAN afford it. Let us figure the cost of your plans.

For Summer Comfort how about a new shower, water tank heater or new laundry equipment. These can be installed in your home at little cost.

Years of experience enable us to offer best work always.

"Well, McNamara admitted humorously, "It wasn't much of a honeycomb, I'll admit. However, we'll set out words to the job and we couldn't turn back God help us."

"Well, you have this consolation, my friend. Your job is over, and mine will commence when Lanny returns with the girl."

"Do you think you can pull her through, lad?" "I'm sure I can, Dan. A psychoneurosis generally is impossible to cure unless you know its causative factors and can remove them."

"The attorney that handled Gatlin's affairs ought to be a good man to start with, Stephen. I'll motor to St. Jose tomorrow and look him up. The bank will know who he is."

"The bank president did know the name of the attorney, but added the disconcerting information that McNamara had been dead six years."

"McNamara, therefore, called the man's widow to ask if she still retained her late husband's files. He had a faint hope that if she would permit him to look into the Gatlin file he might find a clue."

"There was but one club in the city the Elks and McNamara wondered if Theodore Gatlin had belonged to that. He discovered Gatlin had, and from the dining table, Theodore, who remembered Theodore's name very well, he ascertained the names and addresses of three men with whom Gatlin had according to the steward, seemed very friendly."

"Of these three men, one was dead and the others were unable to shed any light upon the parentage of Gatlin's adopted daughter, although one man had a hazy recollection that the child's father had been an army officer and had been killed in the Philippines. The chief questioning, however, elicited the names two women who had been friendly with Mrs. Gatlin, so McNamara called upon both. They could furnish him no information beyond the fact that Mrs. Gatlin despised the child Penelope, that she had never been enthusiastic about the adoption; that she had never been kind to the girl; that Gatlin and Penelope had been inseparable pals. They had a feeling that Mrs. Gatlin, while apparently delighting in persecuting her husband was, nevertheless, insanely jealous of his love for his adopted daughter; that up to the day of her accident, Penelope had been a bright, healthy, normal child, fun-loving and affectionate and humorous, and the delight of her foster father."

"What are you going to do?" McNamara asked. "Hypnotize her again, of course. I've got to release her from the mental inhibition I set upon her in the case of her adopted daughter. Otherwise she'll not talk."

"A minute later Miss Ordway entered the room. Mrs. Merton said she would be down for her interview in half an hour, Doctor."

"When she arrives, Dan, you step into the nurse's office until I have her under control; then I'll admit you. I want you to take copious notes."

"Mrs. Merton fluttered into Stephen's consultation room forty minutes later. "Oh, Doctor Burt," she whined, "I'm so glad you've sent me here. My insomnia is worse than ever," she wailed. "Oh, Doctor, do you think I'm going crazy?"

"Not at all, not at all," he soothed her. "You are excited over nothing. But you are in a highly nervous condition, of course, and until you have settled down it would be useless for me to attempt to examine you. If you could have a little nap, for say half an hour on the couch in the next room, I'm sure you would awaken much refreshed."

"Oh, if I could only sleep half an hour, Doctor, if I only could. What a relief it would be!" "Nonsense, my dear lady. We doctors have ways of inducing sleep even in the most obstinate cases of insomnia."

"At his command she lay down on the couch and Stephen placed a cushion under her head. Employing the appropriate method of inducing hypnotic sleep, Stephen had her drowsy within three minutes; in ten minutes she had passed into a profound state and Stephen summoned McNamara, gave him a pad and pencil and silently indicated a chair."

"Mrs. Merton, however, was aware of his presence. "Who's there?" she demanded in a drowsy tone. "Doctor McNamara. Mrs. Merton. I have called him in to confer with me on your case."

"You are so kind, Doctor Burt," she said. "He resumed his passive stroking of her forehead and cheeks; in a low, monotonous tone he commanded her to answer all his questions. Then suddenly: "Have you thought of your daughter, Penelope, of late?"

"Grimace of distress flitted across the beautiful face. "No distress or bad luck will attend the thinking while you are with me, understand? I command you to think about her—to remember her and to answer truthfully all my questions regarding her."

"Yes, Doctor." "Why did you and Mr. Gatlin adopt her?" "He'd wanted a baby, and I couldn't give him one."

"Could you, if you had cured to?" "Yes, Doctor." Her tone was very peevish. "How old was she when you adopted her?" "About a month."

"Where did you find her?" "In the infant's Shelter in San Francisco."

screamed and attacked me. She said she hated me. Finally she fainted, and I had the maid put her to bed and lock her in her room."

"Did you give Penelope any information at all, at any time, regarding her parentage?" "There was a slight hesitation. "I lied to her. I wanted to hurt her because she wouldn't recognize my moral right to half of Theodore's estate. So I told her she had negro blood in her veins."

"What made you invent such a horrible tale?" "I thought she is a decided brunette. I thought even if she did not believe me, my statement would create in her mind a doubt and a fear that would drive her crazy."

"What happened after that, Mrs. Merton?" "In the morning she was gone. "How did she go?" "She made a rope of sheets and blankets."

"Have you seen her since?" "No." "Is she dead?" "I do not know. I hope so."

Stephen turned to Dan. "Any questions?" McNamara shook his head owlishly. "I can revive most of the record—perhaps all of it. The captain's record is in the army files; when he married, a notice of it appeared in the Army and Navy Journal; with that and what I can get out of the officers who soldiered with the captain, I'll get a pretty complete picture."

Stephen resumed his cross examination. "Did you ever beat Penelope? Did you ever pinch her and slap her and lock her up?" "Yes, Doctor."

"What did she do up and send her home?" McNamara raised his head. "I will—as soon as I look up her memory of Penelope," Stephen replied. He impressed upon her the fact that she was not ill at all. He commanded her very earnestly to forget that she had ever heard of him."

Then he awakened her, as McNamara departed, gave her a long look, felt her pulse, told her she was much improved and handed her some soda-mint tablets. She departed in a somewhat happier mood."

"Well," McNamara demanded, when he and Stephen found themselves alone again, "what do you think of that one—or a hell-cat?" "I do not think, Dan. We merely accept such people, as we accept sunlight and rain."

"Do you think you'll see any more of this woman, Stephen?" "I hope not. I hope the hypnotic suggestion I gave her is strong enough to overcome her acquired instinct for illness."

"Were the things she told you illuminating?" "Very. I suspected most of them and she confirmed my suspicion. We know now that Penelope is of sound ancestry. Her father was not a neurotic. If he hadn't been a normal, gallant fellow and physically fit he would never have become a captain of cavalry. He was killed in action. But we have arrived at a starting point, Dan—the reason for the mental shock that gave Penelope a dissociated personality."

"I didn't get that—at least not quite, Stephen."

"For some reason best known to themselves, the Gatlins kept from Penelope the fact that she was not their own flesh and blood. However, while we have definitely established the date of the mental shock and the character of the shock, we have also established the causative factors leading up to the shock. Penelope had a most unhappy childhood. From earliest childhood that was the victim of bitter, rebellious thoughts. Then that baseball wrecked her nose. This was a mental and physical shock. The separation and divorce of the Gatlins was another terrible shock because she lost Gatlin and there was nobody to protect her. And Gatlin's death was a severe shock. Then, as she emerged from childhood into maidenhood, the knowledge that her nose made her hideous naturally became an obsession with her."

"Now, Dan, by this time there was no further necessity for concealing the facts of the child's birth. Gatlin, dead, had left his entire estate in trust to Penelope, and on her eighteenth birthday she was free to do as she pleased. She could leave her hell-cat of an adopted mother now. She carried her own check-book. The knowledge that she was not flesh and blood of the beloved Gatlin came as a terrible shock and with it, of course, came other terrifying speculations."
