The Old Gray Mill Flourished In Days of Wayne's Infancy

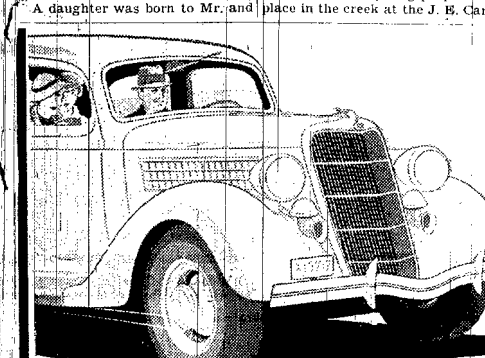

There was, good friends, when Wayne city gave promise of developing into a flourishing, smoky manufacturing city. No doubt those hardy chaps who built up the new town on banks of the Logan river...

You'd hardly notice the old mill now. So self-effacing has it become in the humiliation of being forgotten, discarded, so earth-colored has it turned under the exposure to 50 hard Nebraska winters...

The Weber brothers, Walter, Emil and Will, came in the year 1855 and founded the flour mill. And after helping to haul the materials for the mill, Anton Lermer began a period of service at the mill which was to last until the mill closed down over 40 years later.

Across the prairie in those early years of 1855, 1856 and 1857 would come farmers driving wagons filled with grain. They'd come from 10, 20 even 24 miles distant, for there were no other mills nearer than Wakefield and Norfolk.

Saha sought shelter in a straw stack and Otto Saha sought refuge in the threshing machine. The wind blew the threshing machine over. After the storm passed, check-up was made and Otto Saha was missing. Search began. After a time the men heard a pounding in the threshing machine and on investigation found Mr. Saha pinned inside. He was unharmed but was unable to get out. Crops at the Saha place were badly damaged, and small buildings and trees also suffered from the storm.

Gives Facts On Nebraska Road Situation

(By Congressman Karl Stefan)
Many inquiries are reaching the Congressional office relative to good roads in Nebraska, and calling attention to the fact that from time to time the legislature designate certain additional state highways and roads for improvement under the federal system. The last Nebraska legislature took such action. The new designations are scattered all over the state, and a report has been circulated in Nebraska to the effect that federal funds can only be used on what the government terms farm-to-market roads or feeder roads.

Week's Review of Herald Exchanges

Inquiries also come as to exactly how large a fund is available for highway, road, state, grade crossing elimination for Nebraska, and an exhaustive study has been made in order to give the following information to the people of the state. An investigation in the Bureau of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture, indicates that a total of $7,427,180 has been placed to the credit of Nebraska and will be available for expenditure as rapidly as the State Highway Department submits proposed projects and obtains approval of them. Of this amount, $8,700,730 has been available for highways, roads, and streets, and $3,566,441 for grade crossing elimination.

The rules and regulations approved by the president to govern the expenditure of these funds require that not less than 25 per cent of the sum apportioned to each state shall be applied to secondary or feeder road projects not included in the state or federal-aid highways. It is also required that not less than 25 per cent of the state's apportionment be applied to projects within municipalities or metropolitan areas located on the federal-aid highway system or extensions thereof or on secondary or feeder roads which are not included in that system. The remaining percentage of the state's apportionment may be applied to projects on the federal aid highway system, or to secondary or feeder projects located on the highway system but not included in the federal-aid highway system.

The requirement that definite percentage of the sum apportioned to the state shall be expended on secondary projects of the state highway system and federal highway system was included in these regulations to insure that provision would be made for the improvement of a reasonably extensive mileage of rural farm-to-market roads. It is apparent therefore that these regulations will permit the expenditure of 50 per cent of a state's apportionment for the improvement of roads on the federal-aid highway system in connection with the construction of the class of roads in which you are particularly interested, that is, roads on the state highway system and not included in the federal highway system.

The approved rules and regulations place a limitation of $1,400 per man year of employment for labor, materials and all incidentals properly chargeable to the work on the expenditure of these funds. This limitation will practically preclude undertaking high type improvements unless the funds are supplemented by state or local money. The state highway departments are required to initiate all projects and to expend proposals by that department to expend allotments from these funds for the improvement of any of the projects in Nebraska.

Does this mean that this is all the money Nebraska is going to get? The answer comes from Mr. MacDonald's office through Captain Curtis: "This gross sum of seven million plus is the extent of possible allocation to the state of Nebraska from the sum allocated by the president from the $1,380,000,000 appropriation, for highway improvement and grade crossing elimination."

Apparently the only means of getting additional highway money for Nebraska will be for the president to allocate additional funds from the emergency relief appropriation for further sub-division among the states, or for Congress to make additional general or specific appropriation.

This means that while all projects even to their minute details must be initiated in the state, it is still requisite for the formulated projects including blue prints to be submitted to the Bureau of Public Roads for approval, and all projects great or small must receive the approval of the Bureau in Washington prior to the time that the project will be set off against the credit of the state to the end that the expenditure of the money can actually be made. This takes away from the state officials in Nebraska any power to expend money for roads without first getting the approval of the Bureau in Washington.

Under the emergency relief appropriation no matching by states is necessary, but the state may supplement the funds to whatever extent it can or cares to. This, however, does not alter the ruling that all projects great or small must be first submitted to the Washington bureau.

At the present time there is to the credit of Nebraska $2,581,663 irregular federal aid highway improvement money. This is in addition to the sum allocated from the emergency relief funds and if available would have been available whether or not there had been any emergency relief appropriation. In other words, it accrues from regular revenues.

In order to avail itself of this money, the state of Nebraska must match dollar-for-dollar to the extent that it is able to or that it wishes to expend its federal credit in this category. This set up originally contemplated and still contemplates in principal degree the improvement of the so-called trunk line highways.

The farm-to-market road campaign which was initiated here by farm state congressmen has limited the securing of additional funds from the free billion-dollar fund to supplement what has already been allocated to the states. It is believed by the congressmen and also by the relief officials that this plan would result in more constructive relief work and also put more men to work in farm districts than any other project and eventually bring better roads to the grip of the farmer.

ELECTROLUX

the same Air-Cooled Refrigerator that is satisfactorily serving 350,000 city homes now operates on inexpensive

KEROSENE

This refrigerator is not a makeshift. It's the same nationally advertised Electrolux that is serving thousands of city homes so satisfactorily. It's the famous air-cooled refrigerator that has won the endorsement and backing of the great gas industry.

In the city Electrolux operates on gas. In the country it uses inexpensive kerosene. A wickless glow-type heater replaces the tiny gas flame used in cities.

In every important respect this rural Electrolux has the identical cabinet—sturdy and gleaming white—that's found in the finest city apartments.

Electrolux offers the same money- and time-saving conveniences, gives full protection for foods... speeds the preparation of crisp salads and delicious desserts. This means that it has nothing to wear and become noisy—nothing to need costly repairs. Electrolux uses no water.

It costs remarkably little to run... its five-gallon tank holds enough kerosene for more than a week, needing only occasional attention.

Omaha Journal Stockman: Faced with most people, the largest government already having its hands full with its five-point pension problem, seeks to halt rapidly rising food costs by ordering "maximum" prices throughout the nation for pigs. Prior to this government had ordered "standard" prices.

The powtr-mad Hitler administration will learn that "maximum" prices do not clear up a food shortage. Values of perishable foods depend on the abundance of the crop, the demand of the consumers and their ability to pay, as everyone knows. If merchants have to sell at a loss business will be impeded and the financial condition of a country affected.

In our own city of Detroit a food shortage is being displayed last week. Housewives stormed butcher shops, refusing to buy and refusing to let others buy until meat prices were brought down to a certain level. If there were no demand for a commodity its value would, of course, be lower, but there is always a demand for meat and with live stock receipts the lightest in years and packing house coolers almost empty there must be a higher price paid for meat.

What seems to be the solution, for the Hitler government or any other, is to create consumers and not hope to control food markets by rigid standardized food prices.

Omaha Journal Stockman: If the proposed banking measure now before congress is too rigid to be helpful in modern business, too hedged about with protective provisions for the public and too closely tied into the national treasury, it is because the experience of the last few years demonstrated the inherent weakness of our former banking system.

A fair illustration of the loose banking methods that were prevalent in the West is given by the Toledo Capitalist. It seems that a fine old cattleman had, through the financial rocks, there seemed to be no way out, according to the story, and the cowman decided that the best thing to do was give up, so he got on his cow pony one day and rode into town, much as a murderer giving himself up to the law.

"I guess you'd better take the outfit over," he said grimly. "I'm broke."

The news was no surprise to the banker. He reached in a drawer for a slip of paper, took off his glasses and leaned back in his chair.

"The trouble with you," he said, "is you're scared. You're not broke. You're just scared. There's money in cattle and you know that. Here's 10 thousand dollars. Go get some steers and don't come in here bothering me about them all the time."

The picture may be slightly overdrawn but not much and it carries its own moral. Such banking methods were certain to lead to disaster sooner or later. It was bad business for both the banker and his client and of course eventually brought ruin to all concerned.

There are certain fundamental economic laws that must be observed in the interest of the financial health and well being of the individual and the nation. Having gone too far in the way of loose banking methods we may be disposed to go too far in the direction of rigid regulation and supervised banking. It is usual, the best course lies between the two extremes.

May Act on August 20—The amendment today that the tax bill is coming up this week or for sure next week gives work of the old timers an inspiration to tell new members that they can begin to get ready to go home. The guess now is that congress will adjourn about August 20. The program as given to the leaders for this week includes the control of flood on Mississippi river; army promotion bill; annual sick leave bill; bus bill and the private and consent calendar bills. The army bill and the flood relief on Mississippi bills passed yesterday.

Storing Silver—There was some truth in the report that the activity around the Treasury Building here was for the purpose of making room for money. While it was true that they were digging to make plans for a new air-cooling system for the employees, it was also true that they were making space for one hundred million silver dollars which are starting to come to Washington from the mint at Philadelphia and which are stored in the new underground vaults at the Treasury Building.

Cooking—The famous White House kitchen, which has been a symbol of American cooking since the time of Thomas Jefferson, was closed beginning this morning. This famous kitchen is being modernized. It is too old fashioned, they say. The old open fireplace, where Andrew Jackson's "kitchen cabinet" watched a pig roast over glowing coals, while discussing the spoils system has not been used for a long time. They have been using stoves, which have supplied the beefsteak and fried potatoes to the visitors and ambassadors and powerful political bosses, and these two have been long out of date. The president is being fed from the small kitchen on the third floor, an emergency kitchen.

Imports Increase—The increase in imports of farm products within the last year is shocking. The following information indicates the seriousness of the situation:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Amount. 1934: 1,835; 1935: 21,000,000.

Table with 2 columns: Item, Amount. Butter, lbs. 698,000; Fresh beef, lbs. 233,000; Fidler, lbs. 113,800,000; Meats, lbs. 40,546,000; Wheat, bu. 10,596,000; Rice, lbs. 35,611,000; Beans, lbs. 12,500,000; Tomatoes, lbs. 46,000,000; Onions, lbs. 3,900,000.

Gag Rule Works—The Frazier-Lemke leaders on the House side have been over to the Senate and Saturday they came back very much disappointed at their reception there. They received word that the administration is working just as hard on the Senate side to stop the Frazier-Lemke Bill as they are working on the House side, but the Frazier-Lemke organization say they will fight to the last ditch to stop adjournment of this session of congress until their bill is given an opportunity to be heard on the floor of the House of Representatives. Administration leaders who have discussed this battle, and it is a battle which is given very little publicity, declare that the Frazier-Lemke bill is doomed for this session, because they have enough support to stop any more signing of that petition. This shows how effectively a gag rule works on any bill which the Administration does not favor.

Homestead Memorial—Nebraska congressmen are finding some opposition to their bill to spend about $25,000 for the erection of a monument to the nation's first homestead in Gage county, Nebraska. It is the bill in the government which spent hundreds of millions for other monuments it should not hesitered 10. Mrs. Dave Lueker and Mrs. Harry Tidrick were guests. Merna Rehnus and Viola Miller served. Evelyn Waldo gave a demonstration on buying canned goods. The club will meet in two weeks, August 16, with Evelyn Waldo and Ruth Rinder as hostesses.

Entertain Friday. Miss Bernice and Miss Elizabeth Johnson entertained Friday evening at a court whist party. Prizes went to Miss Florence Scribner and Miss Alice Nelson. The other guests were Miss Margaret Gaebler, Miss Margaret Nelson, Miss Evelyn Moeding, Mrs. John Collins, Mrs. N. Ditman, Miss Alma Laubach, Miss Leona Jurack, Mrs. Emmett Molgaard and Miss Helen Witt. The hostesses served a two-course lunch.

With Mrs. Mittelstadt. Nine members and two guests, Mrs. L. O. Brown and Mrs. W. F. Most, attended meeting of Methodist Foreign Missionary society at the G. A. Mittelstadt home Friday afternoon. Mrs. Walter J. Gaebler was program leader and Mrs. Mittelstadt served. Mrs. D. H. Clason entertained next meeting when money offering is planned. The money from this offering goes to support a girl, Sakambari, in India.

Play At Hoskins. Winside town team played at Hoskins Sunday afternoon as part of the Big Eight league competition. Hoskins winning 3-2. Winside protested the game on grounds that out-of-town players were used. Carroll won from Piger, 11-0, on Carroll diamond, and Wakefield took 17-4 victory over Laurel on Wakefield field.

Next Sunday's games: Cedaridge at Piler, Wakefield at Carroll, Winside at Wisner, Hoskins at Laurel.

Gag Rule Works—The Frazier-Lemke leaders on the House side have been over to the Senate and Saturday they came back very much disappointed at their reception there. They received word that the administration is working just as hard on the Senate side to stop the Frazier-Lemke Bill as they are working on the House side, but the Frazier-Lemke organization say they will fight to the last ditch to stop adjournment of this session of congress until their bill is given an opportunity to be heard on the floor of the House of Representatives. Administration leaders who have discussed this battle, and it is a battle which is given very little publicity, declare that the Frazier-Lemke bill is doomed for this session, because they have enough support to stop any more signing of that petition. This shows how effectively a gag rule works on any bill which the Administration does not favor.

Homestead Memorial—Nebraska congressmen are finding some opposition to their bill to spend about $25,000 for the erection of a monument to the nation's first homestead in Gage county, Nebraska. It is the bill in the government which spent hundreds of millions for other monuments it should not hesi-

Omaha Journal Stockman: Faced with most people, the largest government already having its hands full with its five-point pension problem, seeks to halt rapidly rising food costs by ordering "maximum" prices throughout the nation for pigs. Prior to this government had ordered "standard" prices.

The powtr-mad Hitler administration will learn that "maximum" prices do not clear up a food shortage. Values of perishable foods depend on the abundance of the crop, the demand of the consumers and their ability to pay, as everyone knows. If merchants have to sell at a loss business will be impeded and the financial condition of a country affected.

In our own city of Detroit a food shortage is being displayed last week. Housewives stormed butcher shops, refusing to buy and refusing to let others buy until meat prices were brought down to a certain level. If there were no demand for a commodity its value would, of course, be lower, but there is always a demand for meat and with live stock receipts the lightest in years and packing house coolers almost empty there must be a higher price paid for meat.

What seems to be the solution, for the Hitler government or any other, is to create consumers and not hope to control food markets by rigid standardized food prices.

Omaha Journal Stockman: If the proposed banking measure now before congress is too rigid to be helpful in modern business, too hedged about with protective provisions for the public and too closely tied into the national treasury, it is because the experience of the last few years demonstrated the inherent weakness of our former banking system.

A fair illustration of the loose banking methods that were prevalent in the West is given by the Toledo Capitalist. It seems that a fine old cattleman had, through the financial rocks, there seemed to be no way out, according to the story, and the cowman decided that the best thing to do was give up, so he got on his cow pony one day and rode into town, much as a murderer giving himself up to the law.

"I guess you'd better take the outfit over," he said grimly. "I'm broke."

The news was no surprise to the banker. He reached in a drawer for a slip of paper, took off his glasses and leaned back in his chair.

"The trouble with you," he said, "is you're scared. You're not broke. You're just scared. There's money in cattle and you know that. Here's 10 thousand dollars. Go get some steers and don't come in here bothering me about them all the time."

The picture may be slightly overdrawn but not much and it carries its own moral. Such banking methods were certain to lead to disaster sooner or later. It was bad business for both the banker and his client and of course eventually brought ruin to all concerned.

There are certain fundamental economic laws that must be observed in the interest of the financial health and well being of the individual and the nation. Having gone too far in the way of loose banking methods we may be disposed to go too far in the direction of rigid regulation and supervised banking. It is usual, the best course lies between the two extremes.

May Act on August 20—The amendment today that the tax bill is coming up this week or for sure next week gives work of the old timers an inspiration to tell new members that they can begin to get ready to go home. The guess now is that congress will adjourn about August 20. The program as given to the leaders for this week includes the control of flood on Mississippi river; army promotion bill; annual sick leave bill; bus bill and the private and consent calendar bills. The army bill and the flood relief on Mississippi bills passed yesterday.

Storing Silver—There was some truth in the report that the activity around the Treasury Building here was for the purpose of making room for money. While it was true that they were digging to make plans for a new air-cooling system for the employees, it was also true that they were making space for one hundred million silver dollars which are starting to come to Washington from the mint at Philadelphia and which are stored in the new underground vaults at the Treasury Building.

Cooking—The famous White House kitchen, which has been a symbol of American cooking since the time of Thomas Jefferson, was closed beginning this morning. This famous kitchen is being modernized. It is too old fashioned, they say. The old open fireplace, where Andrew Jackson's "kitchen cabinet" watched a pig roast over glowing coals, while discussing the spoils system has not been used for a long time. They have been using stoves, which have supplied the beefsteak and fried potatoes to the visitors and ambassadors and powerful political bosses, and these two have been long out of date. The president is being fed from the small kitchen on the third floor, an emergency kitchen.

Imports Increase—The increase in imports of farm products within the last year is shocking. The following information indicates the seriousness of the situation:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Amount. 1934: 1,835; 1935: 21,000,000.
