

Draws Crowd to Fremont Land Values in Tanager Vegetation - Idea of Work Gives Offense - Dress Fifty Years Ago.

Wayne county contributed its share to the crowd that gathered in Fremont Saturday to see and hear the president. The weather was ideal, roads were good and an opportunity to get a close-up view of the chief executive was turned to advantage by many. The president's talk was broadcast over a national network, and therefore those who did not go to Fremont, were able to listen in and hear what he had to say.

One Wayne man who motored to Fremont for the occasion, expresses the belief that Mrs. Roosevelt lends strength to the Roosevelt expansion. In many minds, the president's wife has been regarded more of a liability than an asset to the administration, but this Wayne man says her vivacity creates a happy surprise for those whose impressions have been restricted to her published photographs which would not get far in a beauty contest.

In his talk, the president was careful to emphasize that he would please farm communities. He mentioned the voluntary triple A plan without touching the mandatory potato control amendment which slipped through the last session of congress and of course without mentioning previous foiled attempts to make the entire agricultural plan compulsory. His talk in behalf of the constitution and in support of individualism would have scored higher if one could forget his advice to congress to pass bills even if they seemed to be unconstitutional. Also his re-emphasized determination to abandon experiments that proved inefficient and unworkable would make a most favorable impression.

High Prices for Land. The record shows that one man paid $550 per acre for a farm near Carroll in 1919. Many farms were sold at that time for above $300 an acre. Manifestly such prices could not continue. There was certain to be a slump, and when it came those who still clung to inflated values, proved heavy losers. We are not likely ever to get back to the abnormal farm values of 1919, but it would now seem that we had struck bottom and that there would be a steady upturn. Probability is that we will have to experience the terrors of another major depression before seeing land prices down to present low levels.

Frost Frosts tender vegetation Thursday night, but did no damage to maturing corn. On the contrary, whatever effect it had on the corn would be beneficial. October will bring additional frosts, and all exposed vegetation will perish. Then naked trees and bushes and vines will remind us of approaching winter and the anxiety that will be felt for spring-time's renewal of growth.

Professional Idiots. The Newman Grove Reporter calls attention to the migration of "knights of the road" from metropolitan cities to small towns. It appears that "transient camps" are to be supplanted by "work camps" November 1 in larger centers, and that is the reason chronic idlers are disposed to find new fields. The Reporter explains a late experience as follows: "One called at the office last Saturday and asked for a ticket. As a test he was asked if he were willing to work for it. 'Work for it!' he replied, 'You don't mean that I have to work to do you? They all told me to come to this office.' And as an aside he mumbled: 'I thought there was some catch to it.'"

Old Time Hope Realized. The Auburn Herald editor has been digging into a book written fifty years ago and treating of social etiquette, and among other things he found this criticism of women's mode of dress: "If we were allowed to say anything to the ladies concerning dress in dictatorial way, and were sure of being obeyed, we should order them generally to dress less. How often do we see the female littered in the height of fashion, perfectly gorgeous in costume, sweeping along in the dusty street, perspiring under the weight of her heavy-dressed fact in a manner fit only for the baggage. This is a very mistaken idea of a decent fashion and such people would be astonished to see the simplicity of real aristocracy as regards dress."

FIFTY-FIFTH YEAR

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS ADDRESS

Dr. C. F. Dienst Appeals For Interest in Young Folks Who Need Guides.

An appeal to take time with children and also to help the teachers in the problem of directing young folks into worthwhile activities was made by Dr. C. F. Dienst, Wayne school superintendent, who addressed Kiwanians Monday following noonday luncheon at Hotel Stratton.

"Welfare of children is of supreme importance and therefore you should know the man whom the school board has chosen to guide your children," began Dr. Dienst. "I appreciate the excellent community background. This is a distinct frontier as the court house inscription, written by James Brittain, states, 'Dedicated to all early frontiersmen of early days.' In 1881 the peopling of the continent was a problem. This proud frontiersmanship. Today school men try to look to the future to determine what frontiers the young people will be required to meet and what equipment they will need."

"The depression period will be six years old on October 8. It has not been so bad and not so dangerous a period as that before the depression. School is not just earning a diploma, which is merely a sheet of paper, nor does school training guarantee success. These young folks must get judgment, endurance and integrity which are demanded of mature people. These qualities cannot be developed alone in the school. The home must cooperate. There was a time when education was left entirely to the home but it was too busy making a living to help in this matter. School is a real job and pupils must be impressed with this. But," added Dr. Dienst, "the finest institution is the home. Next in importance comes the church, third the government and fourth the school. Give time to these young folks. It is not enough to provide them with all good literature and training. You must take an interest in them. Boys idolize men of the community. You are their heroes. Let them know you are interested in them and watching them make a success of their job. The children are of far more concern than the government for the latter depends on the character of the citizens. Environment has influence. If you can't make a success of your community life here, it can't be successful any place." Dr. Dienst stated in complimenting Wayne.

"The frontier of tomorrow is not a place but a situation. Surely the American spirit that carried the people through the awful World War and through the depression will continue to live and will enable future citizens to master the frontiers that will develop. Great things have happened in the depression period and greater things will happen in the future. Give your children time—help them to develop to meet these new conditions."

Dr. Dienst visited Kiwanians and others to the school. An interest in these young folks will serve as a "forward pass to success of tomorrow."

HOUSING MEASURE IS THOUGHT BOON FOR IMPROVEMENTS

THE housing act which provides for easy credit, is accepted by local dealers as a way to help persons without sufficient cash to make needed improvements. After the years of depression and suspended buying—necessarily restricted credit—the government has figured out a plan to lighten the burden of obligations and enable persons to satisfy long delayed demands. Citizens have often pined along without keeping up improvements for making adjustable replacements in the postponed hope for better times and easier credit. To speed up realization, the government has made the provision suggested, and the opportunity is now presented to do some of the things needed and desired, but hitherto necessarily deferred on account of the economic paralysis.

RURAL STUDENTS DRIVE TO SCHOOL

City Institution Is Proud Of 61 Pupils Coming Long Distances.

There are 61 students from rural schools enrolled in the Wayne high school this year. Some of these students live as far as 14 miles from town and go back and forth each day. These youngsters arrive at school at 8:30, many of them having tasks to accomplish before leaving home, necessitating early rising. The effort put forth by this group of young folks is commendable.

FINE FELLOWSHIP MARKS COURSE OF YOUTH'S TRAINING

A recent news-reel at the local theatre showed how policemen were gaining the cooperation of young boys in the observance and enforcement of laws. The police to appreciate youthful minds to shape rules of order is found an effective way to keep them free from crime seeds. Fellowship beats grim force as a salutary influence. At the Wayne Teachers college the president is engaged as much in fashioning fine character and orderly lives and creating mutual understandings as in developing high scholarship. The superintendent of the city schools gets so close to the heart-beats of the children—interacting with them in their work as well as in their play—that they respect and are glad to follow his leadership. Modern methods of youth to understand the minds of young and endeavoring to direct them kindly rather than drive them violently offer amazing proof of progress when contrasted with Dickens' Dotheboys' Hall presided over by the tyrant, Squeers. The plan to take youth into partnership in solving life's small as well as big problems, sharing responsibilities as early as possible, will increasingly mark up the score of good citizenship.

RURAL INSTITUTE GREAT SUCCESS

Instruction And Features Mark Annual Program For Teachers.

So interesting and worthwhile was the Wayne county teachers institute program, held at the court house Monday and Tuesday under direction of Miss Pearl Sewell, that all of the 82 rural teachers of the county were present for each session. Prof. H. E. Bradford of Lincoln, chairman of the department of vocational education at the college of agriculture, and Miss Zelma Wonderly of Red Cloud, Webster county superintendent, were instructors. Several local groups took part. Following invocation by Rev. Fay Mills, the rhythm band from district 20, trained last year by Miss Evelyn Erickson, and this year by Miss Bernice Hoyer, gave a demonstration. These 12 little folks were in white suits with red and blue caps and capes. In the group were Betty and Margaret Awiszus, Alfred, Daniel and Eddie Bauer, Jackie Beale, Betty, John and Richard Finn, Lorraine and Merlin Meyer and Marie Post. Another feature was a health play, "The Pig Brother," presented by pupils of district 13 under direction of Miss Alice Larson. In the play were Clayton Anderson, Alan, Dean, Lillian and Lorraine Bachman, Paul Borg, Eldon, Lavonne and Maynard Erickson, LeRoy Lundquist, Alice Mae and Darwin Nimrod, Patty Lou Oak, Dean and Glendora Pierson, Dorothy Sundell. A 100% demonstration was given by Glendon Anderson and Dorothy Sundell, and a recitation by Glendora Fae Pierson. Health examination was also presented.

Missionary To Liberia Gives Talk At Wayne Church Sunday Evening

Nineteen years as missionary to the little country of Liberia is the record of Miss Bertha Koenig, who lectured at Our Redeemer's Evangelical church in Wayne Sunday evening. Liberia is located on the west coast of Africa, six degrees north of the equator.

The name of Liberia will strike a familiar chord in the minds of many and send them delving into half-forgotten history. It will be remembered that after the Civil war in the United States, many slaves were taken back to Africa to the land of their forebears. People of Liberia today are descendants of the negroes who were freed from bondage by Abraham Lincoln.

Though the period of bondage in America was short for many and has become no more than a legend, people of the little country have lost their warlike tendencies and have settled down to contented farming in the primitive ways—to weaving and fishing and hunting for game.

Climate in Liberia is of course tropical, with a long rainy season. The rains begin in March and last until the latter part of October or first of November. At the beginning of the season, the first rain comes up with a high wind. Rain-fall will be heavy but with intermittent showers for several days; showers begin to come more frequently until they last through the night. Usually when rains are heavy during the night, the mornings will be clear with clouds beginning to overcast the sky about noon. At the beginning and end of the rainy season there is much lightning and heavy rolling of thunder, but "fireworks" in the middle of the season are very unusual. The steady rains begin in June and last through August, these two months being quite cool.

In the latter part of August showers become misty and much lighter. When the rains stop, October and November are two very hot months, owing to the great amount of moisture in the air. March and April are the two hottest and most uncomfortable months of the year—just before the beginning of the rains. Nights during January and February, or in the middle of the dry season, are the coolest of any time of year, though temperature during the day mounts higher than at any other time.

The head station of the American Lutheran Mission where Miss Koenig has her headquarters is about 30 miles from the coast. Here is located the main station. Trips into the hinterland are about eight days from the coast, all travel being by native carriers. Negroes carry the loads of the safari and also the white people by hammock. The St. Paul river divides the two mission posts with a girls' school on one side and boys' school on the other. The mission plan to have four white people at each post but occasionally it is necessary for one person to go alone into the bush, accompanied only by natives. At one time Miss Koenig was stationed alone for eight months in one of the bush outposts.

Climatic conditions are such that vegetation grows luxuriantly, much of the country jungle. Wild beasts prow through the forests and one is a long time getting accustomed to the eerie cry of the bush cast and the chatter of monkeys from the tree-tops. Of the Liberian wild life, the leopard is the most vicious. Elephants and hippopotamuses are by no means rare, pythons are often seen coiling their huge bodies about the tree branches. Boa constrictors are not found in the Liberian jungle but a huge snake of like species is sometimes brought in by native hunters.

Natives live in mud huts with thatched roofs and always in villages, driven there by fear of wild animals and the more warlike tribes. Floors in the huts are of earth with grass matting rugs which are woven by women from bamboo. Some of the mats are woven of soft grasses. The missions are on a raised frame but in the outskirts the white people live in native dwellings. Buildings of the girls' school at the main headquarters are of concrete, the post being located closer to the coast where transportation is easier.

Rice is the main article of diet in Liberia. Palm oil is consumed in great quantities and takes the place of milk and butter; there are no milk cows in the country. The casah! sweet potatoes, beans, native tomato, okra, bitter-balls and a variety of greens are eaten; the mango plum, pineapple, banana, avocado and papaw are plentiful. Missionaries eat the same foods as the native with the addition of milk, butter, flour and sugar which are shipped from the United States and England. When ordering foods it is always necessary to signify the use of tin containers in shipping as food packed otherwise will readily spoil in the tropics. Some of the extra foods needed can be bought in Monrovia but most of them are shipped by boat.

The native Liberians are Negroes, the more civilized being descendants of the one-time American Negro. They are a primitive people, banded together in clans, with a chief at the head of each village. Polygamy is practiced, the chief having the pick of all the village women. A chief selects the wives for his sons; the sons must remain in the clan with their wives and families. The women are governed by a head wife, usually the first wife of the old chief. Mothers are fond of their children and carry them about on their backs until they are 2 years old or more. Parents are indulgent with their offspring, yet exact obedience from them. Death rate is high among young children, dysentery carrying off a great many also add to the high rate of death among infants. Much country pepper is used in cooking and children are given the same foods as the grown people.

The Liberians are fairly intelligent and learn readily one grasps the fact that he is acquiring something new. It is difficult to hold the native to any one thing for long. When children attend the mission schools they come of their own free will, there being no organization to force them to attend.

Farming of the country is slow, tedious work with primitive implements. Women do most of the farming although the men assist until the crop is in the ground. Rice is planted just prior to the beginning of the rainy season. Women are busy all rice season, "scratching" the soil as the primitive hoeing is called. When the rice plants are about a foot high, it is necessary to weed the fields; weeding is done only once during a season, after which the women begin preparing for "rice season"—making grass bags to hold the grain and fish nets. After harvest is the play time, when they rest and the men hunt game.

The Liberians are an emotional race, the women singing and laughing while at work together. They are hospitable and friendly to the white race.

Men of the villages hunt deer and monkey for food. Some of the natives do not eat monkey but the majority consider it an excellent food. There are some chickens in the country, similar to domestic breeds in civilized countries, though much smaller.

The government of Liberia is patterned after the constitution of the United States with English as the official language. The country is divided into three districts, the whole republic about the size of the state of Ohio. Each district has a commissioner who visits the chief of each village and collects taxes. The commissioners are civilized negroes. The Negro who is educated, wears clothing similar to American dress but the uneducated native is garbed in home-spun robes.

Climate of Liberia is unhealthy but white people adapt themselves more easily than the Negro who is not native to the country.

Miss Koenig will return to her field in Liberia the latter part of November when her year's furlough expires. She has been with her mother at Hanover, Kan., for her first visit in a number of years.

Children of the first grade will finish their pre-primer work the last of the week and are looking forward to getting new primer books.

The following children of the second grade were taken to the court house Monday morning to put on a demonstration for teacher's institute: Leland Asay, Elizabeth Bonawitz, Jack Fitch, Floyd Kingston, Norman Rockwell and Lynelle Shuck. booklets were illustrated by free-hand sketches and original verses. Miss Reeve mimeographed health sheets for the children's booklet, on which will be registered weights by months.

Fourth grade made butterfly nets for catching specimens for their nature study project. The children brought leaves for their study charts and are using them in studying types of trees. They are making crayola tapestries showing the events studied in history. Last week tapestries were of Marco Polo, Kathryn Sue Lerner brought fish bowls for the room and children will begin collecting for an aquarium. Tadpoles were brought last week for the bowls. Fire prevention booklets are almost completed and the children will begin on their play in connection with the same work. Third and fourth grade nature study club had a picnic at the fairgrounds Friday and collected specimens.

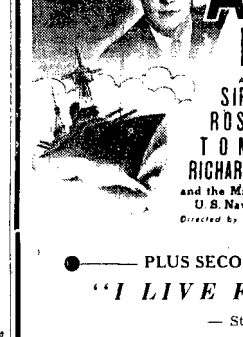

Children of the fifth grade are keeping daily records, with rows competing for tidiness, quickness in taking positions in change of work and least noise. The second row is ahead. Last week lantern slides were used and the map of the United States thrown on the board and outline made from this. The children put in the various states. This week they are working on outline maps which they made themselves, attempting more accuracy than they achieved on the last map. They are making booklets on good health habits. Harold

The Works Program

DIFFERENCES between Secretary Ickes and Administrator Hopkins have arisen over a question as to whether the works program should major in doing useful things as advocated by Ickes, or major in doing ornamental and often foolish things, as supported by Hopkins, and so far Hopkins seems to predominate. The Lincoln Journal quotes from Missouri's list of proposed projects, as announced by its WPA administrator, to show the quaintness of Administrator Hopkins' idea of getting rid of public funds without leaving any lasting reminders of what had been done with them. The fact that a desirable service is sometimes found for the use of government money is perhaps accounted for by the difficulty in discovering enough useless things to absorb all available funds.

The Journal mentions that the sum of $25,493 has been allotted to St. Louis for the purpose of cleaning street names and signs, and then lists these from among proposed doings:

- "Compiling valuable data," St. Louis county, $61,920.
- "Manufacturing toys," St. Louis county, $74,821.
- "For prevention of juvenile delinquency," St. Louis city, $33,532.
- "Execute 300 mural paintings," St. Louis city, under sponsorship of department of public welfare, $17,105.
- "Shoe repair for relief clients," $13,995, St. Louis city.
- "Publicity campaign on articles made by unemployed women," St. Louis city and county, $14,895.
- "Investigate wife and child abandonment, prosecutor's office, St. Louis city, $12,160.
- "Nursing instructions and general housework," St. Louis city, $455,117.
- "Make crayola boxes," St. Louis board of education, $3,758.
- "Check missing home numbers," St. Louis department of streets and sewers, $35,926.
- "Project to develop musical talent," $37,164, district No. 9, Sikeston.
- "Manufacture chairs for relief clients," Agency, Mo., $5,942.
- "Make dolls for relief children," district No. 4, headquarters at Sedalia, $27,948.

Pork SKYROCKETING pork prices have caused increased demand for other meat products. Touching this subject, the Omaha Journal-Stockman comments as follows:

"Some illuminating statistics of retail meat prices, compiled and published by the department of labor, disclose the tremendous advance that has taken place during the past two years. These figures explain why the public complains of the high cost of living and account for the anti-meat strikes in many eastern cities.

"According to the department of labor, the following average increases in meat prices have been reported as compared with August, 1933: Sliced bacon, 94.9 per cent; pork chops, 86.3; sliced ham, 59.5; chuck roast, 51.3; plate beef, 60; rib roast, 42; round steak, 39.6; sirloin steak, 36.9; hams, 42.4; leg of lamb, 18.2; lard, 122.4 per cent.

"Other food stuffs have also advanced but meat is the article around which the family bill of fare is built and so the advance in the cost of meat gives the family pocketbook the hardest jolt, pork, at one time our cheapest meat, being now about the highest.

"It would seem to be about time to adopt some sort of a national program of production that would bring back pork to the poor man's table and bring back the mortgage lifting hog to the farms of the country."

Hindrance to Wayne county in acquiring its due share of the state's hard-surfaced roads is explained on the ground of lack of material for ample man power use. Our lands are so uniformly cultivable that we have no gravel, but we have an abundant investment in muscular energy. Thus, we could loan man power in exchange for the materials we need to hard-surface more roads, thus to facilitate marketing from our fertile acres. There should be some way to adjust public expenditures of money and energy to the satisfaction of actual road needs. Wayne county is not asking for an appropriation to find out the genealogy of the lightning bug, but it does want more hard-surfaced roads, so that during wet seasons when its citizens start they will feel certain that they will arrive.

The World-Herald observed the fiftieth anniversary of its founding by issuing a hundred-page edition last Sunday. The late Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock is the original name, the Hoover dam. He may make some mistakes but not that kind.

tributing to the growth and greatness of the World-Herald. To Mr. Hitchcock's foresight and courage during the trying period when the newspaper was in the formative and doubtful stage belong largest credit. He had a genius for winning and holding outstanding talent—an increasing army of loyal and tireless workers. The World-Herald will always bear Mr. Hitchcock's valuable impress. He fashioned something that projects far into the future. It is a wonderful institution of which all Nebraskans are proud.

In bidding for the state corn husking contest Wayne county is rather handicapped in range of farm choice by lack of graded roads. More hard-surfaced highways would bring into the field for selection many farms which otherwise meet all requirements. But we have adjacent to gravel some farms that fully meet the test, and to any one of these the state contest is earnestly invited. We have the corn, the lay of the ground, the necessary accessibility and the essential of enthusiasm, and if Wayne county is fortunate enough to capture the contest, its citizens may be depended on to shoulder the responsibility and leave nothing undone to score highest success.

The religious bigot—the fellow who thinks all religious beliefs excepting his own are wrong—is just an illogical specimen in the hodgepodge of creation. Any earnestly followed religion is so useful that none should impair practice by trying to tear down another. Jews or Gentiles, Catholics or Protestants are all aiming at the same destination and none will ultimately benefit by raising barriers of intolerance. No religion is perfect, and none is all wrong. The religion with which one least agrees, fills an important place if its devotees find in it inspiration for better living and for eternal hope.

September trade activities were doubtless dulled by warm weather that stretched through the month. Many persons are not sufficiently forehanded to buy cold weather garments until a sharp twist in the elements invites them to do so. So, while the use of fans and demand for ice-cooled drinks kept up, little attention was paid to overcoats and heavy underwear. However, late cold nights have given stimulus to thoughts of winter and stimulated buying such things as will soon be required to defend the human anatomy against Arctic attack.

We join Roger W. Babson, economist, in predicting a lively pre-Christmas season, though we are restricting our prognostication to the middle west where crops are abundant. Last year's drought compelled everybody to express the spirit of Christmas in generous words, postponing substantial gifts until a later and more auspicious date. This year's harvest will enable inhabitants of this fortunate area to include with thoughts of good cheer and well-wishing such useful articles as may be deemed appropriate.

Publisher Hearst has gone so far against the administration at Washington that we doubt now if even an invitation to dine at the White House would persuade him to modify his course.

Trouble Ahead.

Nebraska Farmer: "This from the Oakdale (Nebr.) Sentinel: 'First they pay the farmers not to raise hogs and now they won't pay them for not raising them unless they raise some.'

The editor who made that timely observation was forced to the conclusion by a letter received by a corn-hog contract signer advising him: 'At the time of the first supervision the report indicated that up to that time you had farrowed 0 hogs while 25 per cent of your hog base is 12 hogs. We recommend that you farrow at least 25 per cent of your hog base before December 1, if at all possible. If not, explanations which will be acceptable to Washington will have to be made before compliance on the contract can be certified as complete. The sole statement 'drouth,' 'crop failure,' or 'lack of finance' will not be enough to serve as an explanation.'

This is just one of the little details that have bobbed up to plague and disturb a lot of farmers who took the government more or less seriously when they were given the impression they would be paid for not raising hogs. Though the contract said that each farmer must raise 25 per cent of his hog base the local agents and farmers were given to believe that this need not be taken too seriously and they passed that word along. The result is that at least one-half of the contract signers have not qualified under the 25 per cent clause and there is trouble ahead—plenty of it.

A rather amazing feature of the letter quoted above is the statement that "drouth, crop failure, or lack of finance" will not be enough to serve as an explanation. From what the Secretary of Agriculture has been saying publicly we have been led to believe that these were the principal reasons for the hog shortage.

The subject is a very pressing one with the large number of farmers who have been caught. It is now too late or wholly impractical to undertake to farrow out enough more pigs within the contract year and it is almost impossible to buy bred sows. Many farmers find that in order to qualify at this late date, it would cost them more to buy sows than to give up their contract.

Exercises Care.

Sioux City Journal: In his address at Boulder dam President Roosevelt was extremely careful never to refer to it by its original name, the Hoover dam. He may make some mistakes but not that kind.

COURAGE

The young fellow who gets up late in the morning and whose legs reluctantly carry him a block to be at school on time contrasts sharply with the country lads who shuck off their nighties long before dawn and embark in overalls to do chores before breakfast and then retrace and drive hurriedly a dozen miles, more or less, to capture an education. A news story in today's Herald tells of such pluck on the part of sixty rural students enrolled in the Wayne high school. When these young persons get through high school, they will have laid a solid foundation of endurance as well as learning to carry them to greater heights, and these are the individuals who will take active part in shaping the future of the country. These are the ones who will see through fallacies and insure progress without ruin. They will strengthen citizenship and safeguard democratic institutions. The courage of these young persons deserves the support of their elders.

SHOCKING.

How we can account for the similarity of ideas and wording between the national administration and the state administration of Wisconsin in their appeals to the clergy without suggesting plagiarism or telepathy we are unable to say. It seems last March Governor Phil LaFollette of Wisconsin, was possessed by the happy thought to ask preachers of the state for counsel and help, and he had copies of a tactfully prepared letter dispatched accordingly. What response he got from the men of cloth, we have not heard. But the preachers must have been impressed with the responsibility of lending wisdom to the solution of state problems, and doubtless results were encouraging if not conclusively enlightening. Anyway, just recently the national administration conceived the same idea and turned to the ministry of the nation for advice. Perhaps unknown to the higher-ups, some overworked literary clerk in Washington saved mental energy by reaching over into Wisconsin and borrowing the phrasing of the Wisconsin letter. As great and powerfully sympathetic minds often occupy the same intellectual atmosphere, similarity of ideas might reasonably be expected, though the almost exact wording is disturbing—suggests a reprehensible breach of the writers' code even if full responsibility falls on an obscure attaché.

for three years. She will begin her work as vice president of the third district of the Women's club.

See Mitchell Corn Palace.

Enroute to Aberdeen, S. D., Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beckenbauer stopped at Mitchell, S. D., to see the corn palace. The building is about 100 by 150 feet and made entirely of South Dakota farm produce. Pillars are made of millet, and draperies of grain are used at the windows. At the entrance is a huge sign "Welcome" made entirely of different colored corn. For the week of the corn festival at Mitchell, the Main street is given over entirely to concessions. The palace is divided off into booths for displays from various counties.

Similarity And Contrast Seen In Thirty-Year Time

"Roosevelt nominated at republican national convention in Chicago." Thus reads a headline in The Daily Siphon of Paragould, Ark. The date is not of the present but of June 24, 1904, when Theodore Roosevelt was the unanimous choice of the republican party at an enthusiastic convention. This and other papers belonging to E. H. Jacques present an interesting sketch of happenings in the world about and also in the bustling, quaint southern city of 30 years ago.

A city of 26,000; railroad shops, lumber yards in a region of timber, brick plants among clay and gravel deposits, large shipping of farm products from a rich agricultural section. Thus one pictures Paragould, the city 70 miles northeast of Memphis, where Mr. Jacques was "one of the head salesmen at Bertig's mercantile establishment and one of the foremost young business men of Paragould."

"The life of the Arkansas farmer and the Arkansas farmer's wife and children are pictured at the world's fair in St. Louis. Heretofore exhibits have sought to show farm life by sacks of corn or plates of apples. Farm life is more. It includes school and church and society, means of transportation, facilities of communication by telephone and postal service—in short, the life which wheat and corn and material yield of the farm make possible. The real product of the Arkansas farm is farm life."

The W. C. T. U. plans a flower mission. This meeting commemorates the life of Jennie Casseday who, under the inspiration of Francis Willard, devoted her afflicted life to care of the unfortunate. Though a shut-in for years, she provided flowers and delicacies for those who could not have these with joy and comparative forgetfulness of her own misfortune.

Of nearly equal prominence with Roosevelt's nomination news on the front page of the Paragould daily is notice that the singing association will meet to practice for the July celebration. And another item mentions meeting of the girls mandolin club.

In another edition of the daily is mention that Mr. Jacques was in charge of the July 4 celebration parade. All were invited to participate with any sort of vehicle or decorations they chose. "Even the small boy and his billy goat and cart may take part in it if he wants to." This was to be a "blowout" to do credit to the city and county.

Still another form of diversion in the early part of this century was the hay ride. The Paragould paper describes one of these as most enjoyable for a group of young people.

With celebrations of summer past, the masquerade ball took first place in popularity of winter pastimes. "Disagreeably cold weather, accompanied by sleet and snow, had little or no effect on the success of the masquerade ball which greatly surpassed the expectations of those in charge. The grand march with music furnished by Pitter's brass band took place shortly after 10 o'clock and was participated in by all who were arrayed in appropriate costumes. Most every conceivable style and make-up was displayed, from the most ridiculous to the very refined. There was fun galore, a merry laugh from the beginning to the close, and it was fully 3 o'clock in the morning before all departed for home."

Only 30 years ago the airplane was a novelty with doubtful success. A resident of Butte, Mont., has, so the paper chronicled, invented a flying machine which is propelled by five-horse power gasoline engine. The machine promises to make all with aerial aspirations look straight up.

This sounds like a year ago. Experiments are being made in Texas to produce rain. Large quantities of dynamite have been exploded without bringing the desired results. Another attempt will be made on a much larger scale.

And this might apply to the news of the present. "Report comes that Virginia coal mines plan to strike."

It was 30 years ago also that Japanese and Russians were engaged in a severe battle. Italy and Ethiopia were not in the limelight then.

The United States geological survey has investigated the Arkansas deposits of asphalt and says they are the greatest of any state in the union. It is proposed to make practical test of the product by laying a half block of street with asphalt. It hardly seems possible that asphalt was discovered for use only 30 years ago.

A huge rock weighing 15 tons broke loose from a hillside along the railroad track and struck a caboose of a work train, killing seven men and injuring 15.

Note Improvements Your Own Home Needs

Most developments which call for home repairs are like the proverbial "rotten apple" which may quickly pollute the whole barrel. A small leak in a roof, for instance, may mean little so far as the roofing material itself is concerned, but its consequences inside of the house may require hundreds of dollars worth of repairs.

The only sure way to guard against major troubles is to catch the little defects before they become major repair bills—check your home regularly—use the chart above and our service in keeping the house fit.

Home repair, improvement, and alteration has always been a profitable investment when wisely handled.

Today the ease with which home improvement loans may be secured under the NATIONAL HOUSING ACT and the generosity of the terms make it an actual monetary loss to leave old homes which might earn more money unrepaid.

Investigate our complete repair service which works hand in hand with the new modernizing loans—ask us about the loans—we have full information on loans and repair costs—you will be under no obligation.

Federal Housing Committee Meets

Secure Dealers' Names For Material Contracts Under New Plan.

Members of the Federal Housing committee, T. S. Hook chairman, met Thursday evening at the State Bank with V. A. Hall of Omaha, state director. Mr. Hall explained phases of the housing plan. The committee voted to secure signatures of firms in Wayne who desire to sell materials for building, repairs, painting and mechanical devices through the Federal Housing administration.

The government guarantees 20 per cent of the loans made to those who request funds for building and repairing homes. Firms wishing to sell materials may take contracts, draw up their own notes and present them to banks. If cash, when notes have been properly approved. Through this arrangement, firms receiving contracts guaranteed the second 20 per cent, while the bank guarantees the remaining 60 per cent.

J. J. Gallagher, official representative of the Federal Housing Administration, will be stationed at Stratton Hotel, Monday, October 7, and will remain in Wayne until the following Friday to assist home owners and explain advantages offered by the government in refinancing dwelling mortgages and the long-time easy payment plan for those desiring to construct new homes. Under this plan new homes are in reach of the average individual. The monthly charge per $1,000 over a period of 20 years is $7.43, to which is added one-twelfth of annual taxes and fire insurance. Making payment of taxes and fire insurance on this basis has proved a practical and popular method. Home owners can refinance their present mortgages on the same terms, thus giving added assurance and freedom from worry in making payments.

Under Title I of the Federal Housing Act the government guarantees 20 per cent to the applicant for remodeling or redecorating, and under Title 2, applicant must have the first 20 per cent, and the government will loan the remaining 80 per cent for building.

The Federal Housing act furnishes loans up to $2,000 and in a few special cases, up to $5,000, for a period of one to five years. This loan becomes due in monthly installments at a discount of five per cent per annum.

The Wayne Federal housing committee has five projects on books which are being financed through the plan. Anyone may secure a loan whose income will enable him to play it back within a reasonable length of time. Banks, building and loan associations, finance companies and other financial institutions approved by the Federal Housing administration may loan money. Borrower may apply for loans to any of the above named institutions, or if he prefers, to the contractor, dealer or company from whom he buys his supplies, equipment or machinery.

College Lads, Undaunted By Lack Of Funds, Are Housed In Unique Abodes

Where there is a will, there is a way, seems to be the motto adopted by several energetic lads attending the Wayne State Teachers College. Housing has ceased to be a worry to these boys, two of them have taken up their abode in a former hamburger hut, two more are doing light-housekeeping in a hut on the lot belonging to Mrs. Mary Doring; three have joined forces in a tiny three-room cottage behind the residence of the R. L. Schroeders.

In the last named cottage David Miller of Randolph, Ray Link and Lester Link of Carroll, have settled for nine months of study and outside work. David will receive his A. B. degree from the college this spring. Ray is a junior and Lester a sophomore. His first two years in school, David worked for his room and board, having saved up $50 for tuition fees and incidentals before enrolling at the college. In October of 1934 he decided to build the cottage in which he has lived since. The shop was a project in connection with work in Prof. E. J. Hunter's manual arts classes. The land where the cottage stands is rent-free, the owner giving the land for the rental of yard work. Lights are about the only expense of the cottage, outside of food.

The Link boys pay 75 cents a week rent each to Mulhender and furnish part of the food. David has been working the past summer for E. M. Hart, assisting in putting a simple room in the basement, and a spare time does odd jobs for faculty members and townspeople. "I came down here," said David earnestly, "determined to get an education and I wouldn't give up. The kind of work I do doesn't matter—I'll do anything. I don't mind pulling weeds or moving things and when I get through here I'll really feel that I have something."

From Wayne Herald for October 2, 1902: A large number of feeders had been shipped in because of much rough stuff in fields and a huge corn crop. Mr. and Mrs. David Cunningham went to Pennsylvania to attend the funeral of the former's sister. Miss Ella Beckenkauer who completed business course in Sioux City, is employed in the Whitbur & Berry office. J. G. W. Allbee opened a real estate office. A. B. Everett sold a half section of land to D. H. Toughter for $80 an acre. Richard Davies, brother of M. S. Davies and Mrs. A. A. Welch, died in Sioux City September 25, 1902.

Rev. A. N. Davidson of Omaha, was appointed Wayne Methodist minister. A pioneer and army reunion was held at the Robert Sneath home near Wisner.
From Ponca Journal for October 7, 1880: John Smith's dray team made a rattling among the dry bones by running away, starting at the depot and closing the performance at Ford's store. A private schooner of most stylish and comfortable arrangement went through town. The proprietor was going west to get rich quick. When Mr. McDonald and Mr. Skinner were in Fort Pierre they witnessed true frontier life. A man, named Arkansas, was called the tiger and ran the whole town with terror. He who goes there now should have a coat of armor, pistol proof, for he stands good chance of being perforated.
