Potato Control THE potato amendment to the AAA shows the public the excess to which regimentation might go, and shows the administration the storm of sharp disapproval that would follow attempts at forcible control.

"The potato control law has created many rather unusual and amusing situations and the matter is not settled yet. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace declared in effect that the AAA proposed to decide for itself what laws should be enforced and what laws ignored.

"Then came the storm. Proponents of the law, largely from South Carolina and Virginia, assailed the secretary from every angle. They ridiculed his arguments in opposition to the measure passed by congress and approved by the president and pointed out that the business of his bureau was to enforce the law, not to criticize or ignore it.

"Now it is announced that the nebulous potato program, headed by B. D. Ayres, Accomack, Va., had requested Secretary Wallace to ask congress in January for these five amendments to the control law: Increase of automatic allotment exemption from five to 50 bushels; provision for a referendum with approval of two-thirds of producers entitled to an allotment necessary for continuance of control after first year; provision to exempt specifically the consumer from penalties with reference to stamping and packaging potatoes; provision for growers who sell direct to the consumer to file returns on sales to eliminate attaching stamps to potatoes; provision for regulation of shipments of potatoes in interstate commerce in excess of grower allotments.

"Such action would render the law practically harmless but would continue the jobs and the supervisory control so dear to the hearts of the bureaucrats. It is said that the secretary is still unconvinced and still opposed to the law on the ground that it is impractical and cannot be enforced. The situation is certainly interesting but it looks as if pitiless publicity had killed this latest attempt at regimenting producers."

Overlooking Advantages Globe is plainly nettled by the talk about a "more abundant life." The overlooking of advantages possessed and the striving for things unattainable. Says the Globe: "The clamor emanating from some quarters for 'the more abundant life' sickness us. The American who has a job has the abundant life now. He has wonderful educational facilities. He has entertainment and amusements galore. If he feels in need of spiritual food, he finds churches in every community. If he would travel, transportation is easily available. The one thing the American needs is a reasonable amount of money. If he has money, all other things are added to him. All he needs is a job that pays money; or, if a farmer, decent prices for his products. "The abundant life." It's here for every man who has some money to spend."

Anticipating threatened hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia, the American congress took action before adjournment to prevent this country from being involved in foreign conflict. Since the war started in Africa, President Roosevelt has made plain the determination of the United States to hold aloof, warning shippers and travelers to exercise precaution and venture only at their own risk. Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, calls attention to the critical situation and emphasizes the need of powerful resistance in case the war spreads over Europe, in which event the most subtle propaganda will be employed to involve the United States.

As we understand, socialism is a harmless dream of high-minded persons who visualize a sort of Utopian condition in which people will live together in blissful equality. When socialism becomes practical, it changes its identity and becomes communism. Then the comparatively mild theory of socialism is crushed under the iron rule of tyrants after the fashion of Russia. The gentle socialist is supplanted by the cruel communist who overrides reason with force. Socialism is impractical and communism is intolerable, and it is the latter that would wreck our democracy.

Variety of weather in this mid-western climate keeps inhabitants from being pampered and losing resistance. October's cold following September's unusual heat, reminds old-timers of the winter of 1880-1881. Snow fell in October of 1880 and did not finally disappear until the next May. Like the blizzard of January 12, 1888, the winter of 1880-1881 remains an example of what can be done by the weather in this country.

While Herbert Hoover has not of late proved an overly popular candidate for the presidency, he has proved a sound thinker. His speech at Oakland was a masterpiece of clearly expressed logic. He warned the nation against a steadily mounting burden of public debt, and said a sound fiscal policy is the most constructive program that a political party could adopt.

Mark Sullivan points out that the strength of Senator Borah of Idaho as a republican presidential candidate lies in the fact that he is firm for preservation of the constitution and of the independence of the supreme court. If a question of maintaining our form of government becomes an issue, it is believed the combative Idaho senator would be a valuable force.

There must be rewards for merit, goals for initiative to insure sturdy citizenship and national progress, and the man who pays for success by exercise of energy and self-denial cannot with safety to the future be compelled to surrender earned advantages to those who are indifferent and careless.

Since the war clouds began to threaten Europe, gold has been pouring into this country at an increasing rate. We now have nearly half the world's supply. When we get the other half, the Lincoln Journal suggests that other nations may refuse to accept gold as money.

Morris of Milford. After reports were made for the year plans were made for programs. The president will appoint committees for activities.

VACATION OVER. The vacation season is about over, and travelers have mostly returned and settled down for the winter. Vacation periods have varied from a few days to a few months, and vacationists have usually come back refreshed and ready to take hold of accustomed routine with renewed vigor. Some persons took long trips and inspected new scenes, seeing many strange faces and often human oddities. A fellow is odd if he is greatly different from the regular mill run with whom one is used to mingling. Then through coming months, as the cold wind whistles and sings its dreary notes and warm fires are needed to keep the marrow from freezing and then melting and dropping down into ice cavities, vacationists will tell about the places and people they saw, desirable and undesirable points revealed, the fish they caught or nearly caught, the mountain peaks they scaled, the narrow escapes from automobile accidents and the car wrecks to which they were eye witnesses. Many things will be detailed when two or more are gathered together, and the benefits of experience will thus be passed around. These vacation travelers promote the acquaintance of even widely separated sections of the country. Many objects of interest not common in the middle west have been seen in different parts of the country, but we have failed to hear anyone mention a better agricultural area than this.

speech. Words worth speaking are being articulated clearly and in a proper tone of voice, always remembering that a great many people are slightly defective in hearing.

Advice Every Week. Editor Cramb, Jeffersonian democrat of the Fairbury Journal, who strews his editorial path with numerous barbed criticisms of the trend of the national administration, suggests this after considering the advice sought from the clergy by the president: "It might not be out of place to present the president with a year's subscription to the Journal. He will then get advice every week."

FOR JUSTICE. The October edition of Nation's Business contains an article by Judge George W. Maxey who shows the injustices that may be done without the protection of an adequate constitution. What was called "constructive treason" caused the sacrifice of many innocent lives in Europe a few centuries ago. Entirely harmless words or acts displeasing to a ruling chief often brought summary death under the "constructive treason" excuse. One among many examples given was that of a man in England who ran a tavern called "The Sign of the Crown." He had told his young son that he would make him "heir to the Crown," meaning the tavern. This was sufficient offense to bring a charge of "constructive treason"—threatening the life of the king—and execution followed. Under modern dictatorships in Europe many worthy citizens who have expressed ideas in conflict with the prevailing power, have been ruthlessly slaughtered. Times of unusual stress with sharp disagreements over public policies, cause greatest need of constitutional safeguards. Only the constitution saved innocent lives during Civil War years when feeling often escaped the bounds of reason. The temptation to abuse power is curbed by the constitution. Says the author in closing: "Fortunate is our nation with its constitutional safeguards of individual rights and an independent supreme court to maintain them."

Christian Science Services.
The subject of the lesson sermon in all Christian Science churches for Sunday, October 13, is: "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?"
The Golden Text is from James 5:15: "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."
A passage from the Bible in the lesson-sermon is from Lamentations 3:25, 26: "The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord."
A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "In the Science of Genesis we read that He saw everything which he had made, and behold, it was very good. . . . Sin, sickness, and death must be deemed as devoid of reality as they are of good." (page 525).

Many Attend Football Game

Omaha U. Defeats Local College In Fast Game Here Friday.

About 2,000 spectators attended the football game between Wayne State Teachers College and Omaha University played here Friday evening on the college field. The Wayne boys were defeated by a score of 19 to 6 in a fast game.

Omaha's first touchdown was made by Leo Pearey in the first few minutes of play. The point was converted by Frank Crawford. A second touchdown for Omaha was made by Tippy Tyler, who carried the ball over the goal line standing up. Wayne's only score in the game was made in the first quarter by Roland Coffey. The kick was not converted.

Play in the second quarter resulted in no scores for either side with action slow. At the end of the first half, score was 13 to 6 in favor of Omaha. Pearey again carried the ball over the goal line for Omaha in the third quarter; the kick was not good and score was then 19 to 6 for the visitors.

Action in the last quarter of the Friday game was fast, several passes completed, the crowd in a fever of excitement. Both teams were penalized throughout the game.
 Kicks were returned well for Wayne by Retzlaff; Manning did some good work in passing and punting; Coffey's tackling was also good.

Line-up for the game is as follows:

Wayne	Omaha
Jonas	Baldenow
Walden	Gardener
James	Crawford
Edsal	Johnk
Henderson	H. Sorenson
Granger	T. N. Sorenson
Maning	T. Tyler
Borden	Brown
Herre	Loder
Retzlaff	Pearey
Ernie Adams of Omaha, was referee; Dr. John Cucklik of Lin- coln, umpire; Joe Weir, headlines man. Substitutions for Wayne in- cluded: Goodell for Smoyer; Rooney for Jonas; McDermitt for Borden; Lundak for McDermitt; Lingenfeller for Bornhoff; Fisher for Retzlaff. Among the Omaha substitutions were: Niemann for N. Sorenson, Frank for H. Soren- son; Anderson for Tyler.

Notes More Relief Work In Eastern States Than Here

"There are more people on relief in the east than in Nebraska," states Mrs. Severn Miller of Caldwell, N. J., who with her two sons, Michael and Haskell, are spending a month with Mrs. Miller's mother, D. D. Haskell, at Wakefield,
 "although conditions there are not so distressing as farther west. The east has more money for aid and relief work is handled expertly." Mrs. Miller thinks that business conditions in the east are picking up. Caldwell is really a suburb of New York and the Millers often have opportunity to go into the city. One sees little of poverty in the main business section of that city.

Relief in New Jersey has been supplied mostly through road work, the conditions concentrating on the main highways, which are four-lane concrete. From Caldwell into New York, the country is all built up into residence and business sections. There are no factories in this section of the country.

Grover Cleveland park at Caldwell has provided many jobs for the needy. The park was re-turfed and much landscaping done the past few years. Caldwell is the birthplace of Cleveland and the city has a memorial to the one time president of the United States.

Hopewell, N. J., home of the Lindberghs is located about 35 miles from Caldwell, in north Jersey.

Wayne High Is Loser In Game

Laurel Takes Honors In Football Friday On Home Field.

Hoping for their first victory of the current season the Wayne high boys journeyed to Laurel last Friday, but came home on the short end of a 13-0 score. The Laurel team was just too much and walked out to score two touchdowns in the second half and win without too much trouble.

The first half was played on fairly even terms with the Laurel team making two scoring attempts only to be held by the hard fighting line of the Wayne team. In the first half the Wayne team got to the Laurel 8-yard line, but was unable to push the ball across.

The third quarter was the undoing for the Wayne team, as the Laurel outfit, paced by Felber and Nielson, went across for two concers in this canto. The first was on a nice punt return by Felber for 50 yards and a touchdown, and the second on a drive and cutback by Nielson which went for 15 yards and the second touchdown.
 That was all the scoring of the game, but was more than the Wayne boys could make out, thus they were trying desperately to score via the "pass route" as the game ended.

The whole Wayne team played better ball than they did against Lyons last week but were unable to combat the speed and size of the Laurel team, as they were outweighed at least 15 pounds to the man.

The outstanding boys in the Wayne lineup were Dale Alderson, Elwayne Fleetwood, Alan Nielson and Fred Gildersleeve.
 Those who looked the best for the Laurel team were Harrington, Nielson, Embeck and Felber.

Wayne's starting lineup was:
 Don Baker, left end; Delbert Alderson, left tackle; Buford Johnson, left guard; Alan Nielson, center; Ray Bonawitz, right guard; Elwayne Fleetwood, right tackle;
 game captain; Dale Alderson, right end; Fred Gildersleeve, quarterback; Harold Barnett, half back;
 Murray Penhollow, half back;
 Harry Robinson, full back. Substitutions: Sev, Ahern, Dienst, Wallace, E. Johnson, Manicle, McPheran, Graham.

Harold Barnett was injured in the game, but not seriously, and he will be back in the game before long.

Visits Old Home In Custer County

Visiting one's childhood home after a period of years is an experience which brings to mind the early scenes as contrasted with the modern farm homes of today. Mrs.
 Anna Kopp who arrived home
 Thursday from a visit in Custer county, noted the many changes in the once familiar country.

Mrs. Kopp went to Custer county with her parents from Illinois by covered wagon, in 1888. There were six oxen-drawn wagons in the train and the trip took six weeks. Mrs. Kopp was 9 years old at the time and remembers many details of the trip and the sod houses in which the settlers lived.
 Mrs. Kopp visited the farm which her father, M. M. Parkhurst, homesteaded almost 50 years ago.
 She enjoyed visits with many of the same people who came in the wagon train from Illinois. Mrs.
 Kopp made the trip to Custer county with her daughter, Mrs. Lee James, and Mr. James.

A picture of an early Custer county scene, shows the old sod buildings and a team of oxen in the foreground.

Wayne People In Enjoyable Trip Through Ozarks

Small factories located on farms for tomato canning are no novelty in the Ozarks, discovered Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Bennett and Mr. and Mrs. Abram Gildersleeve who arrived home last Wednesday evening from a week's trip through Arkansas and Missouri. Soil in the Ozarks is so rocky that little can be grown except tomatoes. Corn fields were covered with rocks. Mr. Bennett stating that in one field where he expected to see dirt through rows, there was nothing but rock, piled up against the spindly stalks of half-grown corn. The Ozark country is a fine district for raising pears, the fruit growing to large sizes. The past season was a good one for pears with an abundant crop and selling for only 50¢ a bushel. The Wayne people traveled a distance of 1600 miles and enjoyed seeing the southern country which was new to them. They were much interested in the Bagnell dam which has 1,300 miles of water frontage and supplies power for electricity. At Branson, Mo., they stopped at the home of John G. Nelhardt, Nebraska poet laureate. They were shown through the grounds of the Nelhardt home and were interested in pieces of statuary which had been made by Mrs. Nelhardt. One of the lovely pieces was a statue of a child, ornamenting the lily pool. Mrs. Nelhardt showed them one on which she was at work—a likeness of small Branson child, the piece when completed to be presented to the baby's mother. The party visited Fairy cave in the Ozarks, descending into the cavern by cement steps which have been built into the mouth. The cave is about 100 feet down into the earth and back 600 feet. Formations in the cavern were beautiful, crystals giving off rays of rainbow light. The cave is lighted by electricity. Eureka Springs is a lovely little town tucked on a mountain side. A bandstand platform in rustic style is built at the top of a small hill, and shaded over by natural foliage. They visited the mountain in the Ozarks where Harold Bell Wright wrote "The Shepherd of the Hills" and were in the cabin which is the scene for many settings in the book. The mountain is now part of the Wright estate. The Gildersleeves and Bennetts visited a number of fish hatcheries located in the hills. Most of the streams and lakes in the hills are stocked with rainbow trout. To catch a fish, one must pay 45 cents per pound for any caught and 40 cents per pound for fish caught by natives. Cabin camps in the Ozarks are very comfortable and artistic. The cabins are made of native rock, the stones fitted together with smooth, colored cement. All have fireplaces, showers and cooking conveniences. The Ozarks are thickly wooded with oak trees more plentiful than other types. There are hickory and pine and red cedar, the last named used a great deal in making furniture, souvenirs and jewelry by the mountain people. Display seen in the Wayne Herald window the past few days includes articles brought from Arkansas by the Bennetts and Gildersleeves. The pawpaw, wild persimmon, buckeye and chinquapin were in the display. The pawpaw is a fruit, rather like the banana in shape, edible when ripe. Persimmons are eaten after frost; chinquapin is the edible nut of the dwarf chestnut tree. The buckeye or horse chestnut is not edible. The chinquapin grows much as the common chestnut, protected by burrs until after frost.

Soil Conservation Service Program Is Proposed For Wayne County Farms

Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., is included in the list of projects proposed in Wayne county. Work is well under way at the state headquarters at Alton, under supervision of R. L. Van Trebra, regional director. Ralph Gemmill of Wayne, who worked on the project in Nebraska under Mr. Van Trebra, making soil erosion maps, was recently transferred to Park River, N. D.

An enormous toll is taken each year from the productivity and value of agricultural land in the United States by erosion. Fertile soil lost each year in this country is sufficient to make 1,250 farms of 160 acres each; having a depth twice that of the average upland soil. When the surface soil is gone, serious damage is done to agricultural land. "We have preached crop diversification for years, but little has been said of doing about the proper use of the soil, and the conservation of it for future generations. Slopes have been denuded of all forest coverings, broken up for cultivation and millions of acres of pasture land over-grazed. Such procedure has resulted in countless acres washing down to mere geological skeletons of agricultural land."

Forty different states have demonstrated areas working on methods by which soil erosion may be prevented. The Emergency Conservation Works program now has 543 camps in the United States engaged in soil conservation work. The Plum Creek drainage area in Nance and Boone counties includes 70,000 acres in which erosion and runoff control programs are under way. Two new areas have just opened up—one in Douglas and one in Otter counties. Work in the Plum Creek area was begun in May, 1934, and since that time about 2,500 brush and wire check-dams have been installed on farms of cooperators, for the purpose of stabilizing erosion taking place in gulches. Terracing to slow up runoff has been done on 13,000 acres of farmland.

Contour cultivation is being worked out on 11,665 acres for the purpose of holding back excessive rainfall and preventing runoff. Strip cropping is being practiced on 40 farms in this area. All of this work is on land that is under cooperative agreement with the Soil Conservation Service, wherein the farmer agrees to follow an erosion control program for a period of five years. Over a quarter million trees were planted in the spring of 1935 in addition to work on soil and crops. These trees were planted for the purpose of stabilizing erosion which had been taking place on steep, eroded hillsides and

Wakefield High School Pleased With Results In Vocational Agriculture

The interest shown by boys of Wakefield high school in courses of vocational agriculture, has proved its worth to people of the community and to the instructor, Harold Vance. The course was given for the first time last year, and this year has 52 boys enrolled. Out of the total enrollment 45 are farm boys, and, with the exception of one, the remainder are sons of retired farmers. There are only five farm boys attending the Wakefield school this year who are not enrolled for the courses in vocational agriculture.

Mr. Vance taught the course for 10 years previous to his coming to Wakefield a year ago, with four years at Bassett and six years at Ponca. Enrollment in the Wakefield school from rural districts this year shows 16 farm boys over the number attending the past year.

Beginning classes are studying the fundamentals of shop work making chicken feeders, saw horses, hog troughs, learning soldering, saw sharpening and tool repairing. Boys in the advanced classes learn making of hay racks, cages on boxes, hog houses, hog chutes and all repair work on farm machinery. The boys figure lumber needs and are taught to draw their own plans. A few plans for difficult jobs are furnished by the instructor, and some by the college of agriculture extension service.

Courses in agriculture include the identification of seeds, study of varieties, study of weeds harmful to plants and animals, soil types as crop sources, fertilization of soil, and moisture needs of various crops. In husbandry study the boys learn to judge animals, feeding, diseases, breeds and breeding of livestock. They do intensive work on all farm problems relating to crops, livestock, housing and repairs.

The boys are taken to farms and practice livestock judging, later entering county and state contests with other competitive groups. The Wakefield team last year ranked 15th place out of 35 entered in the state judging, the boys then being only beginners in the work. Some cabinet work is taught in third-year work, but for the most part instruction is concentrated on the problems the boys will meet when they take their places as the farmers of the community. The steel square for rafter work is one of the major uses of tools which the boys are required to learn well. All material used in the boys' work is furnished by farmers of the community.

Hanging on the inside wall of the shop where the boys work, is a doubletree made by one of Mr. Vance's pupils at Ponca. All wood work and iron work were made by the lad.

The shop presents an air of industry even to the most casual observer. The clang of metal on metal, the roar of the forge, the thump of hammers and the shouts of the boys as they work busily over their separate tasks show a high degree of interest and application.

The instructor is kept busy with inquiries and requests for assistance. "Mr. Vance, do you think this axe has a good enough edge?" and the answer, "No, I believe it will take a little more work." To a lad who is trying to get the right slant on filing a saw, "Here, son, take it like this—don't hold it straight, get this angle." Making corrections on mechanical drawings, inspection of soldering and forge work, directing repair work keeps Mr. Vance moving from group to group.

In response to the question, "Do you like the work?" boys respond eagerly with "Sure do!" and "You bet!" The atmosphere of the shop was certainly that of a bee-hive, yet the boys were obviously enjoying themselves.

The tenth and twelfth grade boys are entered in one class and number 20. There are 12 eleventh graders in another class and 20 ninth-year students make up the beginning class. The work is divided into a three-year course. The boys have a nicely appointed classroom in the main school building.

Olive M. Huse MEMORIAL tribute read by Prof. J. Q. Owen at Wayne State Teachers College chapel October 16, followed by "A Perfect Day" sung by Miss Jeanne Smith.

The calm, orderly, mastered life of the one we here commemorate will not soon be forgotten. Quietness, helpfulness, consideration for others, judgment, taste, idealism, these were as much a part of her as sunrise is of a new day.

Those of us who knew her will long remember her devotion to duty, her thorough-going dependability, her unassuming manners and quiet charm.

No man has yet fathomed the twin mysteries of life and death. We are silent, reverent, awed but unafraid before them. We do not understand, but we believe in life. The stream is mighty, and we flow along with it, confidently through the bright days and through the dark ones.

In the midst of our sense of bereavement we try to remember these things. It is an old, old belief that to the sons and daughters of men, nothing better than death with honor can ever come.

She won us by her gracious womanliness, by her personal worth and character. She enriched our lives. Among us her memory and her influence will live.

J. Q. Owen.

HUSKING CONTEST OF HIGHER VALUE THAN PRIZE RING

THE state corn husking contest on the Oscar Reinhardt farm in Wayne county November 4 may not attract the crowd and excitement of a prize fight or wrestling match, but it will be far more constructive than either. Gathering the year's major crop is a part of agriculture, and agriculture is the world's chief industry.

EARLY RESIDENT OF WAYNE DIES

Mrs. John Binning's Funeral Will Be This Afternoon At St. Paul Church.

Mrs. Binning, whose maiden name was Miss Milvina Miller, was married to John Binning in 1877 and the couple came to a farm near Wayne soon afterward. They were honest and industrious pioneers who did their share in building the community. They moved into Wayne in December, 1911.

Mrs. Binning died February 15, 1931. Mrs. Binning is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Hefti of Russell, Minn., aged two sons, Wm. Binning of Randolph, and George Binning of Pipestone, Minn. There are several grandchildren and great grandchildren.

PREPARATION IS MADE FOR MEET

Cornfield Athletes Will Compete In State Event South Of Wayne.

While Cornhusker football fever is at a white heat, another typical Nebraska sport is again in the limelight. It is the annual state cornhusking contest, to be waged on the Oscar Reinhardt farm seven miles south of Wayne in Wayne county on November 4, between the champions of 25 to 30 county husking bees, previously held.

These cornfield athletes will battle for one hour and 20 minutes in a field of 40 bushel corn for $200 in cash prizes and the right to represent Nebraska in the national husking marathon held this year in Fountain county, Indiana, on November 8. The winner's husking crown and a share of another $200 in cash prizes will await the winner of this great world's husking derby, which attracted 50 to 60 thousand people when held in Nebraska two years ago. Attendance predictions for this year's national are 100,000 people, making it equal in popularity to the biggest athletic event in the country, and it's a free game.

The Nebraska state cornhusking contest is sponsored by The Nebraska Farmer of Lincoln, which puts up the cash prizes and directs the operation of the event. The contest will be held with the cooperation of Wayne county farm, town and civic interests, being headed up in the town of Wayne by the Young Business Men's club, the Kiwanis club, the American Legion, the county agricultural agent's office, and the Farmers' Union. Neighboring towns and counties are also being asked to cooperate.

In addition to the husking contest, which is scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock in the morning, the Wayne county groups are planning a big entertainment program following the close of the field husking. Farm equipment companies are also cooperating in staging an up-to-date, modern farm equipment show, exhibiting their latest models of farm and automotive equipment.

The winner of a cornhusking contest is not necessarily the one who is the farthest down the corn rows when the final whistle is blown or who has the most corn in his wagon. Deductions are made for gleanings (corn left in the field) and for excessive husks. The penalty for gleanings is 3 pounds deduction for every pound left by the husker. Five ounces of husks per hundred pounds of ear corn are permitted without penalty, but for every ounce more than five, up to and including 9 ounces per 100 pounds of corn, one percent of the total weight of corn husked shall be deducted, and for every ounce of husks more than 9 ounces, per 100 pounds, 3 percent is deducted. The husk penalty is unusually severe for the dirty husker.

Twenty-four counties are definitely planning to hold a county husking contest in Nebraska, and the number will probably increase to 30 or more by the time the state contest is run off. Considering Nebraska's spotted corn crop, this is an unusually fine number of local contests. In 1933 with a good corn crop throughout most of the state, the state contest held that year at Cozad broke all records with 48 contestants. That was the year when Sherman Henriksen and Fred Brown won first and second places, respectively, and a few days later at the national held at West Point, carried off the world's husking honors in the same relative positions. Both Henriksen and Brown are planning to compete in.

DEVOTES FARM TO LARGE MELON AND CANE PRODUCTION

IN Bart county, near the Missouri river, is a farmer, who, according to the Tokamah Herald, has turned from usual Nebraska crop production to raising sorghum cane and melons, and he has done well. The Herald reports the farmer's experience in this way: "It isn't the size of the farm, it's what you raise on it that counts," said L. E. Colson, pioneer farmer one day last week to the Herald, and after hearing him tell what he raised on his farm east of Tokamah, near the Missouri, we fully agree with him. Mr. Colson had 20 acres of sugar cane from which he made 3,900 gallons of sorghum this fall. He sold one thousand gallons in one order and he knows where he can sell the remainder. Besides his sugar cane, Mr. Colson raised two and one-half acres of watermelons and cantaloupes from which he realized $600. For many years Mr. Colson has been producing sorghum and raising melons and his business increases each year.
